There are very few people who appreciate the delicacy and duty of the nervous system. Upon these sensitive transmitters of impression, sensation, voluntary and involuntary action depends the normal condition of life. The individual and the temperament constitute the balance wheel, and consequently are the basis of the mental and physical condition. The nerves are only the exponents of impression, and simple agents of more important matters than the various senses which they subserve. But in this capacity they are masters of the entire system. While they hold their sway they regulate life; when they degenerate or become abnormal then life is diverted from its natural current.

An Automatic Sensitive Paint.

A clever chemist has invented an automatic sensitive paint which is a bright yellow at the ordinary temperature, but upon being brought into a warmer atmosphere it changes color gradually until at 220 degrees it becomes a bright red. It returns to its original color upon cooling, and may be heated with the same effect over and over again. It is suggested that this paint may be used with advantage to detect a rise in the temperature of the frictional working parts of machinery.

To Make Glue Water Proof.

To make glue water proof, dissolve or gum sandarac and mastic each five and one-half drachms in one-half pint of alcohol, and add five and one-half drachms of turpentine. Place the solution in a glue boiler over the fire and gradually stir into it an equal quantity of a strong hot solution of glue and isinglass; strain while hot through a cloth. Or to plain glue solution add bichromate of potash; on exposure to the air it becomes waterproof.

A NEW PARACHUTE.

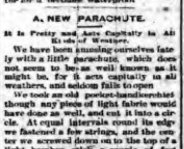
It Is Pretty and Acts Capitally in All Kinds of Weather.

We have been amusing ourselves lately with a little parachute, which does not seem to be as well known as it might be, for it acts capitally in all weathers, and seldom fails to open.

We took an old pocket-handkerchief though any piece of light fabric would have done as well, and cut it into a circle. At equal intervals round its edge we fastened a few strings, and the center we screwed down on to the top of a light bamboo stick a couple of feet long. We tied all the strings to a ring, making them just long enough to reach to the end of the stick when pulled tight, so that when the parachute opened the ring rose about six inches up the stick; in fact, we made a light umbrella without any ribs.

We then took some newspaper and rolled it round a broomstick, pasting it as we did so, and after rolling it round a dozen times, we left it to dry. In the morning, when we withdrew the broomstick, we had a good strong paper tube, similar in many respects to the strawboard rollers obtainable at the stationer's for sending prints and music by post. A tin tube would have done as well, perhaps better, but the paper one answered all our requirements.

In the end of the umbrella stick we filed a nick, and to the end of the tube we fixed a strong bit of elastic, so that we had a sort of gun and its projectile. Rolling up the parachute as if it were an umbrella, we rammed it lightly down the tube, fixed the nick in the elastic, and by drawing it down a little, obtained enough power to send it up a few yards, when it opened, and, balanced by the stick, floated slowly to the ground in proper parachute fashion.



A NEW PARACHUTE.

At first we only shot it upright; but after a time we found we could give it any inclination we pleased, and now we can shoot it from a window without fear of a failure, for the stick always assumes the vertical, owing probably to its being just the right weight for the size of the parachute, which is fifteen inches in diameter.

Our success made us ambitious, and we tried a much larger affair, but this was at first a failure, until we hit upon a plan of ballasting the stick at its lower end. Then it acted satisfactorily, as it acts now; and in the event of anyone being desirous of trying the experiment for himself, we hereto attach a cut that makes the matter clear.

There is no reason why these parachutes should not be shot like bolts from a crossbow, or from an ordinary gun, but it is as well to remember that the lighter they are and the smaller they are the higher they go and the better they look.

Of course parachutes have been made before of pocket-handkerchiefs, cut and uncut, with strings tied to weights; and they have been thrown up into the air, and slung up into the air, and dropped down into the air; but the strings alone seem to have nothing like the certainty of action that they have when helped by the central stick and sliding ring.—Household Monthly.

SOME WONDER WORKERS.

A CALIFORNIA genius has invented a new mechanical motion for converting reciprocating into rotary motion.

A VALVE whose movement is so delicate as to be under the control of a hygrometer is the invention of a Chicago man. Any change in the humidity of the atmosphere alters the opening of the valve.

A WATERPROOF incandescent lamp and socket have been invented for use in breweries, distilleries and other places where the lamp is exposed to [illegible]

A PAIR of novel shears for barbers is a recent invention. The pivot between the blades is extended to carry a comb, which is parallel with the shears. By means of a nut the distance between the shears and the comb can be varied at will and the hair cut at any desired length.

THE richness of some of the ores found in Tasmania is marvelous. Recently some Zeehan chloride was twice tested by private analysis, and found to assay nearly 30,000 ounces of silver to the ton. The accuracy of these tests being doubted, two specimens were submitted to the government analyst for trial in his laboratory, with the result that in both samples he found over 30,000 ounces to the ton.

THERE is now in process of construction for the French lighthouse service a powerful arc lamp arranged on a novel principle. Under ordinary circumstances it will give a light equal to that of two and one-half million gas jets. This is nearly three times the intensity of the arc lights of Barfleur and Belle Isle, the most powerful yet constructed. On fine nights the light, it is thought, will be visible fifty-two miles off, and in dull weather it is estimated that its rays will penetrate at least twenty-two miles.

Length of the Seasons.

Our summer is a few days longer than the astronomical winter, which arises from two causes. First, the earth during the winter is traveling over the smaller half of its orbit; and second, its motion in that period of its orbit is more rapid.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Some Call Them "the Crossroads" of the Pacific.

Something About the Country Which Has Just Applied for Annexation to the United States—Historical Matters.

The Hawaiian or Sandwich islands are in the Pacific ocean, about midway between North America and Asia. They are 2,100 miles from the American coast and are situated on the course of ships passing from San Francisco to China and Japan as well as to New Zealand and Australia.

The group is the most northerly cluster of the Polynesian archipelago and constitutes the kingdom of Hawaii. There are twelve islands in the cluster, four of which are barren rocks. The name and area of the eight principal islands are as follows:

Hawaii, 4,210 square miles; Maui, 760; Oahu, 600; Kauai, 590; Molokai, 270; Lanai, 150; Kahulaui, 63; Nihau, 97. The large islands are mountainous and contain some of the largest volcanoes in the world. Kilauea, the largest active volcano in the world, is in Hawaii. Mauna Loa, the scene of an eruption in 1877, is also on this island.

The islands are said to have been discovered in 1542 by Gaetano, but Capt. Cook, first lord of the British admiralty, rediscovered them in 1778 and named them the Sandwich islands.

The natives of the islands form one of the families of the Polynesian race, which also inhabits the Marquesas, Tonga, Society, Friendly and Samoan groups and New Zealand. Although separated by 5,000 miles of ocean the Hawaiian and the New Zealander can understand each other, the similarity of language being great. The productions of the lands are sugar, rice, coffee, cotton, sandalwood, tobacco, arrowroot, wheat, maize, tapioca, oranges, lemons, bananas, tamarinds, breadfruit, guava, potatoes, fungus, wool, hides and ornamental woods. The seat of government is Honolulu, located at Oahu. The islands all suffer from the want of good harbors. The best one is at Honolulu, and this is probably the reason why it is the principal town.

Prior to the time of Capt. Cook's discovery each island had a king of its own, but under Kamehameha I. they were consolidated into one kingdom. He died in 1819, and was succeeded by Liholiho, who adopted the name of Kamehameha II. It was during his reign that idolatry was abolished. The first missionaries to the islands came from America in 1820. King Kamehameha II. was ambitious to see the world, and with his queen visited England in 1824. Both were taken sick and died in London. The man who then took the throne called himself Kamehameha III., and it was during his reign that Judge William L. Lee, an American, got up a constitution for the Hawaiians. Up to 1839 the islands were governed as an absolute monarchy and upon feudal principles. Kamehameha III. signed a bill of rights in 1840 and in 1852 granted a constitution by which he surrendered the absolute rule in favor of a limited form of government by which three estates were recognized—king, nobles and people—with universal suffrage, a biennial parliament and paid representatives. This constitution and the civil and penal codes were mainly prepared by Chief Justice Lee. Judge Lee rendered great service to the nation in conferring on the common natives a third of the lands of the kingdom, which were formerly owned by the king and chiefs.

HAWAII, THE CROSSROADS OF THE PACIFIC.

In 1843 the independence of the Hawaiian government was formally guaranteed by the English and French governments. Kamehameha III. was succeeded by Kamehameha IV. in 1854. He was succeeded by his brother in 1863. When Kamehameha V. died in 1872 it ended the line of the Kamehamehas and a chief named Lunalilo was elected to the throne. He died in 1874 and another chief, Kalakaua, was elected. In 1886 the unsatisfactory state of the public finances demanded a change in the system, and a new constitution was adopted in the following year. Under it the members of both houses of parliament are elected by the vote of all adult male subjects, under the provisions of an educational qualification on suffrage, and, in the case of the house of nobles, a property qualification. The judiciary power is lodged in a supreme court, composed of a chief justice, who is also a chancellor, and at least two judges, district courts, police and other tribunals.

King Kalakaua died at the Palace hotel in San Francisco January 20, 1891, of Bright's disease. His visit to this country was on account of his health. King Kalakaua was a great traveler. He visited this country in 1876 and visited most of the principal cities. It was his travels and extravagance that caused the financial troubles that led to a change in the form of government. Princess Liliuokalani succeeded her brother and has since been the queen of the Hawaiians. Her husband is an Englishman. The population of the islands in 1890 was 89,990. Of this total 40,914 were natives. Of the foreigners 17,939 were Chinese.

The Outside of a Lemon.

Not many people stop to think about it, but the outside of a lemon is anything but clean. If you look at it you will see minute spots, like specks, all over it. These are the eggs of an insect, and if the lemon is not washed they are likely to become an ingredient in whatever dish the lemon is used for.

ATMOSPHERIC PRESSURE.

Illustrated by Means of Amusing Feats of Physical Science.

Our illustration has a strong resemblance to an advertisement of somebody or other's champion cement for mending glass and crockery, but in point of fact advantage is simply taken of the pressure of the atmosphere, and the various effects about to be described are no more than variations of the good old experiment known as the "hemispheres of Magdeburg." Without an air pump only a partial vacuum can be produced, but this is sufficient [illegible] downward from one opening, and directly beneath it burn a piece of paper.

The air will expand under the influence of the heat, producing as it cools again a partial vacuum within the glass. This partial vacuum will be sufficient to hold tight to the glass (by atmospheric pressure) a china plate, which, before the cooling of the air within the glass, you have pressed closely against its mouth. To prevent the external air from finding its way between glass and plate you should slightly grease with suet the edge of the former.

The mouth of the bottle, offering but a very small superficial area, makes the first of the bottle and plate experiments a matter of some difficulty. To insure success you must make the vacuum in the bottle as perfect as possible. To effect this hold the bottle mouth downward over the steam of a boiling kettle. When the bottle is thoroughly filled with steam you must press its mouth, after having duly greased the edges, against the plate, and when the condensation of the vapor has produced a sufficiently perfect vacuum you will find that on lifting the plate the bottle remains suspended from it.

THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

A Strange Plant Coaxed Into Growth in England.

The extraordinary palm tree, known as the Coco de Mer, or double cocoanut, and considered by the late Gen. Gordon to be the tree which grew in the Garden of Eden and bore the fruit of the "knowledge of good and evil," has, at last, after many unsuccessful efforts, been reared in the botanical gardens at Kew, says the London Queen. This strange plant, which has its home in the Seychelle islands, to the northeast of Madagascar, a locality somewhat remote from the generally accepted site of the Garden of Eden, is extremely difficult to rear. As will be seen from the sketch, the Coco de Mer has a very different method of growth from that adopted by the general run of vegetation. The huge double fruits, fourteen inches or so in length, require a good deal of coaxing to induce them to send out a shoot. This shoot, too, is very capricious, and must be carefully tempted to attach itself to the soil, which it does at some distance, often as much as two or three feet. The shoot then sprouts up like an ordinary well-behaved plant, and the leaves commence to develop. The whole process is shown in the sketch, where the fruit is seen placed in the small pan of damp moss and sending forth a shoot to another pot. The large fibrous fruits, which look like two cocoanuts joined together, are frequently found floating in the sea, and this has given rise to many traditions; amongst others, the sailors of the Malay peninsula aver that the fruit grows on a tree deep down in the unfathomable depths of the ocean.

Tinsel Thread on Record.

Some interesting as well as extraordinary accounts have recently been given concerning experiments in the production of minute threads from gold, glass, platinum and other substances. The most remarkable of these minute filaments, according C. V. Boys, the experimenter, are those of quartz. He says: "As torsion threads these fibers of quartz would seem to be more perfect in their elasticity than any known. They are as strong as steel and can be made of any reasonable length, perfectly uniform in diameter, and, as already explained in the body of the article, so fine as to be beyond the power of any microscope yet made. The tail ends of these threads must be at least 10,000,000 times smaller than ordinary spun glass. Of course it is impossible to manipulate these minute filaments, although there is no difficulty in measuring threads less than the one-thousandth part of an inch in diameter."

Too Sensitive.

Mistress—It seems you haven't got sense enough to know how long to let the eggs stay in the water. Did they never have any soft-boiled eggs for breakfast where you served before you came here?

New Servant—No, indeed. The lady where I served before I came here was so kind-hearted that she never allowed me to boil an egg.—Texas Siftings.

Encouragement.

"I suppose you know," said the indulgent parent to the anxious suitor, "that my daughter has been reared in the lap of luxury?"

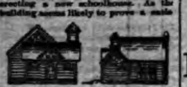
COUNTRY SCHOOLHOUSE.

A Building That Seems Likely to Be Satisfactory.

Its Cost Complete, Not Including Furniture, Not to Exceed Eight Hundred Dollars—Interior Arrangement of the House.

Our school district has just passed through the experience of planning and erecting a new schoolhouse. As the building seems likely to prove a satisfactory one, I have thought that a description might prove of value to some of the many rural districts into which your paper extends its visits.

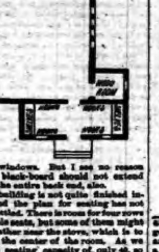


FRONT ELEVATION. SIDE ELEVATION.

Our site is at the junction of two roads which form a right angle at point of union. The front of the building faces the less important road, while the main street passes along the side. The size of the main room is 24x36 feet, with ceiling 12 feet high. The vestibule is 8x12; wood room, 8x8. The chimney is on the outside of the building, resting on an extension of the stone foundation of house. It measures on inside 12x20 inches, and is provided with a smoke flue of galvanized iron 9 inches in diameter, which enters the room 3 feet below the ceiling and extends upward to top of chimney. The space round this flue is for ventilation, and opens into the room through the register near the floor.

Due consideration has been given to warmth of building. On the outside of studding is a close sheathing of floor boards covered with heavy building paper, over which is a good grade of clapboards. Inside there is a sheathing of inch boards between the laths and the studding. All walls except of wood-room are finished with three coats of plastering and have a wainscoting all round three feet in height. The wood-room is finished with inch ceiling. All floors are double, with heavy paper between; top floor of southern pine.

The contract calls for black-board on front end of room and down the side to small windows. But I see no reason why a black-board should not extend along the entire back end, also.



The building is not quite finished inside, and the plan for seating has not been settled. There is room for four rows of double seats, but some of them might come rather near the stove, which is to occupy the center of the room. As we need a seating capacity of only 48, so many seats will be unnecessary, and we can have a wide space for center aisle. Perhaps six rows of single desks, with side rows close to wall, would meet our case as well as any plan. The cost of building complete, not including furniture, etc., will not exceed $800.—L. L. Hill, in Country Gentleman.

The Weight of a Thought.

A scientific journal of high repute is authority for the statement that Prof. Mosso, the Roman physiologist, has invented a machine that will actually give the weight of a thought. To quote from the account mentioned: Prof. Mosso showed by experiment that the effort of thinking causes a rush of blood to the brain, this blood-rush varying in intensity according to the thought. He placed a man in the machine, which was so delicately balanced that the rush of blood turned the scale. The professor says that when the subject is sleeping, the thoughts or visions that come to him in his dreams are sufficient to cause the head to sink below the feet, and that the same takes place when the subject is disturbed by a slight sound. He further declares that the balance will indicate when a person is reading Italian and when Greek, the greater mental exertion required for Greek producing a more profuse rush of blood to the head.

The Pale White Light of Death.

Those who have admired the phosphorescent glow of certain species of crustacea will be interested to learn that a startling discovery respecting it has been made. Formerly it was supposed that such creatures emitted the light of their own accord and that they used it in a variety of ways. It is now known that the light is a disease as deadly to the infected individuals as cobra poisoning is to the human species. M. Girard has traced phosphorescent light in Talitrus and other crustaceans to exceedingly minute bacteria in the muscle. On inoculating healthy specimens with glowing bacteria, the same luminous appearance was transmitted. He also notes that the disease runs a regular course and that those infected die within four days, the phosphorescence lasting but a short while after death.

To See the Heart Beat.

M. Marcey, the well-known investigator of animal movements by means of instantaneous photography and the zoetrope, has now succeeded in rendering the beating of a living heart visible to the eye. All the phases of the movement can be followed and properly examined by this new method. The heart employed in his experiments was that of a turtle.

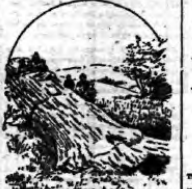
FORESTS OF STONE.

Petrified Tree Discovered in Southern California.

A Transformation Whose Completion Evidently Was the Work of Centuries —A Petrified Trunk Ninety-Seven Feet Long.

So much has been written about the petrified forests of Arizona and the chalcedony mines of Mexico, that one might think that wonderful petrifactions are found in these localities only. In Sonoma county, California, however, writes Thomas Holmes in the American Agriculturist, acres upon acres of petrified trees have been found and are to be seen to-day by persons who care to make a two-hours' journey northward from San Francisco by rail. The reason that the existence of this forest of stone is not more widely known is probably because the hardened substances are not colored as are those of Arizona and Mexico and have no market value as have polished slabs of chalcedony. Sonoma is one of the oldest organized counties in California, and its soil produces some of the best grapes grown in the United States. The surface of the county is rugged and the soil is rich with mineral deposits. About eight miles north of Santa Rosa, the county seat, a farmer a few years ago unearthed a monster petrifaction which proved to be a large tree trunk. The hardened limbs of the tree were cleared away and the petrified trunk measured to a length of ninety-seven feet. (See illustration.) Since that time a large number of petrified trees have been uncovered and some of them are more than one hundred and twenty feet long. The petrified forest lies along the sides and at the bottom of a deep ravine which was evidently at one time the course of a mountain stream. The soil is of a brick color and gives strong indication of a cinnabar deposit. A few miles away there are a half dozen geysers, all boiling springs, whose waters are strongly tinctured with sulphur and iron. The boulders and outcroppings are of rock [illegible] of a volcanic nature.

It is impossible to fix the age of these [illegible] able that the transformation has been going on for centuries. In one instance an oak tree has grown directly through a petrified log, splitting it in two. The oak is now gnarled and knotted and measures between four and five feet through at the base. Scientists estimate that its age is more than a hundred and ten years and the log must have been petrified before the oak began to grow.



PART OF A PETRIFIED TREE IN CALIFORNIA.

The trees are buried to a depth of six or seven feet. Portions of their petrified roots, projecting above the ground, gave the clew that led to the discovery of the trunks. These trees have been petrified by absorbing the silica or flint dissolved in the water which soaked them. The color of these petrifactions is a light gray and of course they are of a flinty nature and very heavy. It is almost impossible to split a block of the substance parallel with the grain, but it breaks very easily crosswise. Along the banks and in the bed of Sonoma creek many petrifactions are found and among the residents of Sonoma valley, petrified wood, which elsewhere is often considered a rare curiosity, is largely used as horse blocks and stepping stones and is frequently found in the houses doing service as door weights and odd hearthstones. In the southern part of the Sonoma valley twenty miles north of San Pablo bay, there is an extensive bed of petrified bushes. This bed apparently extends over a dozen acres and the soil is covered with brittle fragments. The roots of stumps of madrona trees standing on the ground were undergoing the process of petrifaction. Underlying the stratum of soil in which I found the petrified wood was a bed of clay.

A short distance from this locality on the ranch of Capt. J. D. Boyes, there is a warm spring, called Agua Rica by the Spaniards, and its waters are said to possess wonderfully curative properties. The temperature of the water is 108 degrees Fahrenheit, and it bubbled up not more than eight feet from the edge of Sonoma creek. When digging here at a depth of fifteen feet, the workmen unearthed petrified portions of the skeleton of a huge animal. Near this spot there is the trunk of a tree lying partly submerged in the water of the creek. This tree is undergoing the process of petrifaction. That portion of it lying in the water has already become hardened.

Two miles north of this on the ranch of Mr. M. K. Cady, are huge logs of petrified wood piled around an excavation made for a bathing pond or reservoir. A sulphur spring came out of the ground here and in digging around it at a depth of ten feet a bed of petrified wood was reached which seemed to be a tangled mass of trees. Powerful blasts of dynamite were put in and vast quantities of petrified wood thrown out. Out of this hardened wood an immense tank was hewn which is constantly full of warm water flowing in through crevices in the bottom.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

OBJECT TO INTERVIEWS.

Some Statesmen Do Not Like to Talk to Reporters.

Others Tell All They Know, Which, Sometimes, Is Very Little—Our Correspondent's Experience with Gen. Sherman.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The duty of interviewing public men in the national capital is agreeable or disagreeable according to the sweetness or acidity of the stomachs of the statesmen.

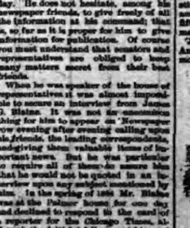
Of all men in public life I think Senator Sawyer, of Wisconsin, is the easiest and best man to interview. He is a very kind-hearted gentleman who has seen much of this world, and sounded the gamut of experience from penury to princely wealth. He is well informed upon all affairs, legislative, executive, political and financial. Out of the abundance of his knowledge he cheerfully gives information in a most entertaining manner to newspaper men whom he knows and in whom he has confidence.

Gen. Sherman when residing in Washington was, of course, not only the chief military officer of his age, but occupied a commanding position in social life. His sayings and doings were constantly chronicled in the newspapers, and the old warrior disliked nothing so much as newspaper notoriety. Moreover, he sincerely disliked newspaper men as a class. Upon one occasion when the New York Sun had reported that Gen. Sherman had joined the Roman Catholic church, I took the clipping from the paper and, calling upon the general at his residence, sought an interview. He received me kindly and affably in his parlor, and chatted very freely for a few moments on current events, but when I showed the newspaper clipping and asked him if its statement was true the old man rose from his seat in a towering rage, walked to the door leading into the hall and, pointing to it with his index finger, said: "That is none of your newspaper's business. It is my business if I want to join the Catholic church. It is my business if I do not want to join the Catholic church. You have no business to interview me on the subject, and I will not submit to an interview. Your New York Sun article is a damned lie."

The old man had given me the information which I desired. He said that the assertion concerning himself was false. Next morning the newspaper which I represented contained an account of an interview with the distinguished hero, in which it was stated that he received the reporter "with the utmost cordiality on account of the paper which he represented," and, in response to the reporter's inquiry, Gen. Sherman, while seated in his parlor, had said: "Of course I realize the propriety of newspapers seeking information concerning public men, and I have, therefore, no hesitancy in assuring you that the published statement to which you allude is without foundation."

When he was a member of the United States senate and was leading a partisan debate in behalf of the admission of South Dakota to statehood, in 1886, Senator Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, was an easy man to interview upon the subject uppermost in his mind. At that time I was representing a St. Paul paper which circulated largely over Dakota territory, and it was my duty every day to ascertain the current news and prospective events upon that all-absorbing topic. Day after day Senator Harrison, in response to my card, came from the senate chamber into the lobby or into the marble-room and gave me full information concerning the action of the committee on territories, the influences which were being brought to bear upon various senators, and all of the detailed prospects for or against the admission of the state of South Dakota to the union. He seemed to realize the importance of everything said and done upon the subject, and no trained newspaper man could have dictated the details of the work of each day better than did Senator Benjamin Harrison to your correspondent.

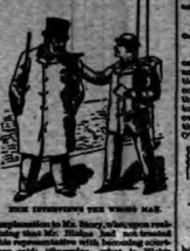
Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky, is a very easy man to interview because he is a young man, a genial and companionable man, and knows that the newspaper men are his friends. Senator Blackburn is about fifty-five years young, and is growing younger every day. He does not hesitate, among his newspaper friends, to give freely of all the information at his command; that is, so far as it is proper for him to give information for publication. Of course you must understand that senators and representatives are obliged to keep many matters secret from their best friends.



"I WILL NOT SUBMIT TO AN INTERVIEW."

When he was speaker of the house of representatives it was almost impossible to secure an interview from James G. Blaine. It was not an uncommon thing for him to appear on 'Newspaper row' evening after evening calling upon his friends, the leading correspondents, and giving them valuable items of important news. But he was particular to require all of them to assure him that he would not be quoted in an interview upon any subject mentioned by him. In the spring of 1884 Mr. Blaine was at the Palmer house for one day and declined to respond to the card of a reporter for the Chicago Times, although the faithful fellow sent his card to Mr. Blaine's room every half hour during the entire day. The reporter saw him several times in the corridors going to and from his room, but Mr. Blaine constantly sent down word to the representative of the Chicago Times that he was "not in." The reporter felt that not only himself, but the paper which he represented, was not properly treated by the distinguished statesman, so he left the hotel and on his way to the Times office met an elderly friend who looked something like Mr. Blaine, and interviewed him upon the topics of the day.

When he reached the Times sanctum the reporter wrote a description of the day's wait, how often he had sent his card, the usual response, and finally the fact that he had met upon the street a man whom he took to be Mr. Blaine, and that man said—here he started a long interview in which the man who "looked like Mr. Blaine" was made to say everything which Mr. Blaine ought not to say. About noon the next day Mr. Story, the proprietor, received a telegram from his personal friend, Blaine, who was then at Racine, Wis., protesting against an interview which never occurred. Mr. Story glanced over the interview, called Managing Editor Snowden, and directed him to discharge the man who had written that interview. When the reporter came in Snowden said: "Nick, you are fired by order of the old man." While [illegible] how badly [illegible] Snowden immediately conveyed that explanation to Mr. Story, who, upon realizing that Mr. Blaine had not treated his representative with becoming courtesy, said: "Snowden, what is Nick's salary?" To this Mr. Snowden responded that it was $25 per week. Mr. Story then said: "Keep Nick on the paper and give him $35 per week."



NICK INTERVIEWS THE WRONG MAN.

President Garfield, when a member of the house of representatives, was so easy to interview that to visit his house was more like calling upon a sweetheart than upon a statesman. Every reputable newspaper man was as welcome as the flowers that bloom in the spring in the home of James A. Garfield.

Roscoe Conkling was almost unapproachable. George C. Gorham, Frank Hatton and Stilson Hutchins were about the only newspaper men in Washington who could talk with him on a familiar basis; but even they were not permitted to interview him for publication. William F. Vilas as postmaster general could not be interviewed; but as a United States senator Col. Vilas is accessible and affable to newspaper men. Knute Nelson, now governor of Minnesota, when completing his first term in the house of representatives, said to me: "When I came here I regarded newspaper men as my natural enemies and I avoided them. I would not talk in the presence of a newspaper man upon any subject whatever. Before I was renominated for a second term, however, I discovered that I needed at least one good newspaper man in my business. I commenced to hunt the boys and ascertain the best fellows in the crowd and carried news to them. I soon found that my congressional work was being reported and my people were informed of my doings, so that all the reputation I have made has been due to the fact that I got in with the newspaper men and kept on the right side of them. No reputable newspaper man in Washington ever betrayed my confidence."

Senator Vest, of Missouri, says that he never had any misunderstanding with newspaper men, but that they have been his best friends. He is frank and free in conversation with them and will give an interview at any time upon any subject with which he is familiar. Congressman Holman, the great objector; William M. Springer, of Illinois; Julius Caesar Burrows, of Michigan, and Tom Reed, of Maine, are about the easiest members of the house of representatives to interview. Mr. Holman, who is such a holy terror to all others in Washington, is a valuable friend to newspaper men who seek information. Tom Reed, one of the greatest men of this age, occupies his seat on the floor of the house an hour or more before the gavel falls every day, and tries to write letters. He is interrupted every minute or two by some newspaper man who addresses him familiarly with some inquiry, and Mr. Reed always cheerfully drops his pen to respond; and he sometimes grants elaborate interviews in an off-hand manner. As I remarked at first, the interviewing of public men depends largely upon the sweetness or acidity of the stomachs of the statesmen and the condition of their general health. The wholesome, whole-souled fellows are the same in public life as in private life, likeable, lovable and approachable.

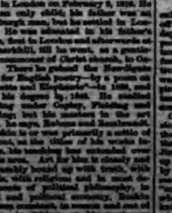
POOR JOHN RUSKIN.

The Famous Critic Not Expected to Live Many Days.

It will be sad news to many to hear that John Ruskin, the celebrated writer on art, has gone mad. The breaking down of this great mind has not been sudden; on the contrary, the brain has been diseased for some time, and at intervals Ruskin has been temporarily insane. These intervals of insanity have been getting more frequent, and this last giving way of his brain will prove, it is feared, final and permanent. Almost from childhood Ruskin has been physically weak, but his extraordinary mental energy has kept his body under control. Fighting fiercely and continuously the inherent weakness of his constitution, he has accomplished an amount of literary work in the past fifty years which would have killed many a man of far stronger physique.

John Ruskin, says the Illustrated American, has long been considered the most eloquent and original of all writers upon art and a strenuous preacher of righteousness. He was born in London on February 8, 1819. He was an only child; his father was an Edinburgh man, but he settled in London. He was educated in his father's house, first in London and afterwards at Denmarkhill, till he went, as a gentleman commoner of Christ church, to Oxford. There he gained the Newdigate prize for English poetry—by a poem on "Salsette and Elephanta"—in 1839, and took his degree in 1842. He studied painting under Copley, Fielding and Harding; but his masters in the art were, he says, Rubens and Rembrandt.



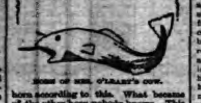
JOHN RUSKIN.

Ruskin is or was primarily a critic of art; but, as the titles of his works indicate, his teaching has extended over a wide area. Art for him is closely and inseparably bound up with truth, with morals, with religion; and in most departments of political philosophy, in social and political economy, Ruskin has been constant, in season and out of season, in lifting up his testimony against what he conceives to be low views, perverted ideals, coarse and vulgar complacencies. Like Carlyle, whose pupil he professes to be, he holds the world in these latter days to have gone on a wrong basis in its views of nature and life. He is, he says, "alone in the midst of a modern crowd which rejects them all," and has no [illegible] against the [illegible] of every one of his best friends." Within the sphere of [illegible] portant part of his life-work has been to teach "the supremacy of five great painters, despised till he spoke of them—Turner, Tintoret, Luini, Botticelli, and Carpaccio."

MRS. O'LEARY'S COW.

One of Her Horns Has Been Turned Into a Jewel Case.

A strange relic has reached the American Exchange hotel at San Francisco and has attracted a great deal of attention. It is the horn of Mrs. O'Leary's cow, the celebrated bovine of Chicago that, in 1871, kicked over the now historic oil lamp. H. C. Atkinson, who owns the relic, gave $5 for it right after the fire. The hide sold for $125. Mrs. O'Leary's cow didn't have a very big horn according to this. What became of the other horn nobody knows. This one was beautifully fashioned by Mr. Atkinson's brother into the form of a fish. A niche had been cut into the edges of the open end, and eyes of glass inserted on the sides, while ivory fins decorate it in the proper places. It is lined on the inside with red plush, and thus with its mouth on a bias and its curved tail it looks for all the world like a trout or a salmon as it jumps out of the water. A hook is in its gill, and a ribbon on the hook, so that all complete, while a fish, it is a handsome jewel case. This is the use to which the horn of Mrs. O'Leary's cow has come at last. With the strange relic is the following:



HORN OF MRS. O'LEARY'S COW.

MADE FROM THE HORN OF
MRS. O'LEARY'S COW
THAT KICKED OVER THE LAMP AND CAUSED THE GREAT FIRE OF CHICAGO.

"I wouldn't take $500 for it," said Mr. Atkinson to an Examiner reporter. "I have had many offers for it, but won't sell it at all. I am going to keep it and hand it down as an heirloom in my family." Mr. Atkinson is superintendent of the Donaldson Manufacturing company, Louisville, Ky., and is with his family to remain some time in California.

Queer English Lunatics.

An English lunatic believes she is an envelope containing a letter, and with this idea she fixes a penny stamp on her forehead and imagines that she goes through the post to visit her relatives. The next day she sticks on another stamp for the return journey. A male patient is convinced that he is a bad half-crown, and, being a very conscientious man, he makes imaginary rounds to various tradesmen, warning them not to take him in payment for any article if his wife should attempt to pass him at the counter.

COL. LYNDE WAS NERVY.

How He Managed a Bold, Bad Border Braggart.

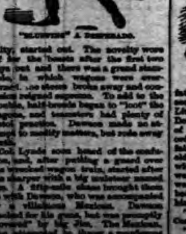
Instead of Running Away He Faced One, Bill Dawson, and Frightened Him Out of His Wits with an Old Pocketbook.

When the branch of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway was extended in 1872 from Parsons, Kan., to Denison, Tex., it went, says the New York Herald, through a section practically preempted by the marauding half-breeds, the rustlers, and the criminals who subsequently had to immigrate to "No Man's Land" in the Texas Panhandle. Respect for law was an unknown quantity in that neighborhood, and as the military were not ordered to help the progressive railway corporation, men in charge of the work were greatly embarrassed in attempting to protect the interests of their laborers.

The towns along the line of railway gradings are almost as bad as those at the end of the track, which in the west are proverbial for original iniquity. While this road was in course of construction the bold monte men, their sisters in sin and as fine a coterie of criminals as ever went unhung, hyena-like, swarmed about the tent towns to prey upon the hard-working "hoboes" (railway laborers). Shooting was as common as swearing, and the cannibalistic saying was that it was exceptional if a man was not "served for breakfast every morning." The officials lived in cabooses with extra timbered sides, sort of fortresses on wheels. These precautions were not in vain, as added tonnage from numerous stray bullets testified before they were sent out of service.

Col. Edward Lynde had the contract for the road—not an enviable one, considering the country from which he had to secure his supplies. He was a fine-looking man, tall, lithe, active, alert and a stranger to fear. He managed to carry on his task with good grace through the Cherokee nation, but things grew tougher in the Choctaw district.

Col. Lynde made an engagement for transporting supplies with one Bill Dawson, a veritable "border braggadocio," who had a stunning record as "a killer" notched in the handles of his pistols. Dawson promised by contract to bring a hundred yoke of oxen to the present city of Eufaula to carry supplies south. He simply went out and rounded up a similar number of Texas steers, and, yoking them up with difficulty, started out. The novelty wore off for the beasts after the first two days out and there was a grand stampede, in which wagons were overturned. The steers broke away and confusion reigned supreme. To add to the trouble, half-breeds began to "loot" the wagons, and teamsters had plenty of pistol practice. Dawson made no attempt to modify matters, but rode away south.



"BLUFFING" A DESPERADO.

Col. Lynde soon heard of the confusion, and, after putting a guard over the wrecked wagon train, started after the sharper with a big muleteer named Jim. A fifty-mile chase brought them up with Dawson, who was accompanied by a villainous Mexican. Dawson reached for his guns, but was promptly "covered" by big Jim. The Mexican, who attempted to throw a murderous knife, dropped it with a strange oath when he got a bullet through the wrist. Dawson was tied up with ropes like trussed chickens, thrown in the wagon and carried back to the end of the line, where he was made to "square accounts."

Dawson did not relish this, and swore that Col. Lynde's life should pay for his inconvenience during that ride, also [illegible] a [illegible] "salute" for big Jim.

One night about a month after this affair Col. Lynde drove into the border town of Atoka, and, jumping from his buckboard, went into the "hotel." The bar was redolent of smoke, full of border men, and in the midst of the largest group stood Dawson. Every man in the room was accounted "a man of experience," and all had heard of the bully's boast.

Col. Lynde had never carried a gun, for reasons best known to himself, but here was a dilemma where nerve must show. He walked over to Dawson and pushed him aside, remarking in a loud voice that he would shoot him on sight if he ever crossed his path again.

Early next morning Col. Lynde went to the stage office, his intention being to get away from the town without trouble as quickly as possible. The office was a long, narrow room, with a railing at one end, behind which the agent was ensconced. Col. Lynde was sitting within discussing the chances for peaceable exit when there was a commotion in the street. Dawson burst in the door and reeled in with a revolver in each hand, with a loud oath and an inquiry for Lynde. That worthy leaped over the railing, and, drawing a huge, old-fashioned pocketbook from his hip pocket, started for the would-be murderer, shouting: "I've got you now!" Dawson evidently thought he had struck a Kansas cyclone with a shooting novelty. He simply turned and fled as if spurred by the evil one himself.

Col. Lynde was never disturbed thereafter by border ruffians.

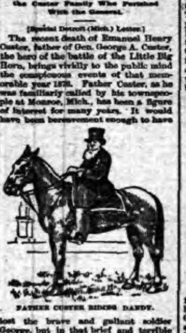
GEN. CUSTER'S FATHER.

Memories of the Venerable Parent of a Gallant Soldier.

He Was a Man of Strong Prejudices, But Lovable Just the Same—Members of the Custer Family Who Perished With the General.

[Special Detroit (Mich.) Letter.]

The recent death of Emanuel Henry Custer, father of Gen. George A. Custer, the hero of the battle of the Little Big Horn, brings vividly to the public mind the conspicuous events of that memorable year 1876. Father Custer, as he was familiarly called by his townspeople at Monroe, Mich., has been a figure of interest for many years. It would have been bereavement enough to have lost the brave and gallant soldier George, but in that brief and terrible battle Mr. Custer lost three sons, a son-in-law and a grandson. With all this burden of sorrow the strong spirit of the father was not utterly crushed. In losing his son George, he lost the companion of his middle life, the boy who had inherited from him a marvelous intensity of purpose, a strong, passionate moral nature, and the fearlessness of a heroic spirit.



FATHER CUSTER RIDING DANDY.

In after years no more pathetic picture could be seen than that presented by the venerable man who, with indomitable will, proudly rode his son's war horse, Dandy, wearing the spurs and gauntlets of the unconquered, while the wide band of black crape on the hat which rested on his white head was his only outward semblance of grief.

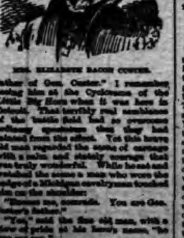
For many years Father Custer has been content to remain within the limits of home, as comprised by the boundaries of Monroe, where he has lived since 1842. He was a native of Maryland, but lived many years in Ohio, where his son George was born at New Rumley in 1839.

Mr. Custer had for some years made his home with his son, Nevin J. Custer, and it was there that he died peacefully on November 27, 1892. His wife had preceded him, her death occurring twelve or fifteen years ago, it being hastened by grief at the death of her sons.

Mr. Custer had two persistent theories, religion and politics. He was intensely, passionately religious, and he was intensely, passionately political. There was no hesitation in either attribute. He was an ardent, impulsive Methodist, and a staunch, uncompromising democrat. People who did not believe as he did in either way he would not even argue with, unless the argument was all on his side. His boys liked to stir their father up by predicting political disaster, in a spirit of fun, but they were soon compelled to show their true colors, or hear a convincing and forcible statement of the situation, given with the power and charm of a native orator. His positive character would brook no weakness of profession—he was outspoken himself and had the courage of his convictions, and he expected all the members of his family to be equally sincere.

He cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson, and his last for Mr. Cleveland, riding a distance of five miles in the cold bleak weather for that purpose, saying he could not die happy if his party did not elect its candidate. His death was consistent with his life, and he felt sure in his last hours that his actions were the result of an honest belief that the course he pursued was the right one.

When Father Custer was seen away from home, there was always some one to point him out and say: "There is the father of Gen. Custer." I remember seeing him at the Cyclorama of the Little Big Horn when it was here in Detroit. That terribly real semblance of the battle field had so overcome ordinary spectators that they had fainted from the effect. Yet this brave old man regarded the scene of carnage with a calm and stately courage that was truly wonderful. While he sat and watched the scene a man who wore the badge of a Michigan cavalryman touched him on the shoulder:



MRS. ELIZABETH BACON CUSTER.

"Excuse me, comrade. You are Gen. Custer's father."

"Yes," said the fine old man, with a glow of pride at his hero's name, "he was my son."

"I was with Gen. Custer when he made that raid out of Winchester, and broke through Early's lines," said the cavalry man.

Then another came up:

"I was with him in the first cavalry," said another, "when his brother Tom was wounded in the neck."

"I remember that engagement," said [illegible]

"Let me speak to [illegible] father. My son fought under him," said an elderly woman in black, coming forward.

"He fought under a good man, then," said Mr. Custer, in his quiet way.

As he passed out some men wearing the grand army badges gave him almost an ovation. I knew him, and as I saw his face paling I said:

"Oh, Mr. Custer! they are glad to see you—how pleased they are."

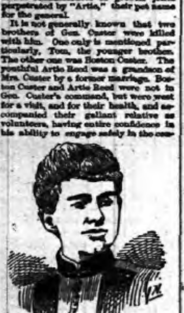
"It isn't for me," he said, and I noticed that his voice was husky; "they are thinking of him—and so am I."

He was very fond of his only daughter, Mrs. Margaret Custer Calhoun, and Gen. Custer's widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Bacon Custer, and these ladies were with him when he died, Mrs. Calhoun going from Lansing, Mich., where she is state librarian, and Mrs. Custer from her home in New York. When the two lived temporarily here in Detroit Father Custer used to come to visit them, and it was amusing and pathetic to see the interesting trio engaged in the amusements of an evening.

However much they smiled or talked when their attention was concentrated on what was around them, there was always a sad preoccupation or a feverish restlessness when the attention was withdrawn. Then it was that those who knew bowed their heads and felt the infinite pity of it—and looked upon these as set apart and consecrated through a national loss and sorrow.

But they could be very jolly, too, at times, and perplex staid, practical Father Custer with their jokes at his expense, and even make merry over occasional reminiscences of greater jokes perpetrated by "Artie," their pet name for the general.

It is not generally known that two brothers of Gen. Custer were killed with him. One only is mentioned particularly, Tom, the younger brother. The other one was Boston Custer. The youthful Artie Reed was a grandson of Mrs. Custer by a former marriage. Boston Custer and Artie Reed were not in Gen. Custer's command, but were west for a visit, and for their health, and accompanied their gallant relative as volunteers, having entire confidence in his ability to engage safely in the combat. Lieut. James Calhoun, the brilliant young officer, was the husband of Gen. Custer's sister Margaret, or Maggie, as her fond brother always called her. Thus five of the Custer family perished in that brief and bloody battle. It was then that the strong religious nature of Father Custer asserted itself most valiantly, and while he mourned for his boys it was not as one without hope. He loved to recount their noble deeds, to dwell on their home life, and the days of their boyhood. That he was proud of his "yellow-haired laddie," was not to be gainsaid, for he saw in him all his fondest hopes realized.



MRS. MARGARET CUSTER CALHOUN.

"George made himself what he was without anyone's assistance," he said once to the writer of this paper. "He asked me once to see Congressman Bingham about getting him an appointment at West Point. Bingham and I were opposed politically, and I didn't want to ask him to do anything for me or mine. But the first thing I knew George had the appointment—he stole a march on his father and asked Bingham himself. And I knew that Bingham was always glad and proud that he gave it to him. It makes me sad every time I look at this picture and think of my three boys who were killed in one day."

If Father Custer had lived until December 10, 1892, he would have completed his eighty-sixth year.

Are These the Old Aztec Mines?

According to advices received at Chihuahua during the last few days there is no abatement in the mining excitement near Ures, in the state of Sonora, over the rich gold finds that were made there a few weeks ago. It is estimated that the new camp now has a population of 15,000 people, mostly Mexicans, with a few American prospectors from the southern part of Arizona. Traces of old workings have recently been discovered, and this fact gives color to the belief that the long-lost mines of fabulous richness of the Aztecs are about to be rediscovered. There has been no trouble so far between the prospectors and the Yaqui Indians, although the latter view with sullen silence the encroachments upon their domain.

Bridging the Channel.

New plans have been made for the projected bridge across the English channel, and the promoters will apply to parliament this session for power to go ahead with its construction. The engineers are Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker. The length of the bridge has been reduced about three miles, and the number of piers has been reduced from 121 to 72. The cantilever system is proposed. The greatest span will be 1,640 feet. The masonry piers are to be 147 feet long and 66 feet broad. The cost is estimated at £[illegible],

THE BREECHES BUOY.

An Excellent Device for Rescuing the Shipwrecked.

The Appliance Is of Great Help to the Daring Life Savers of the New Jersey Coast—How It Is Sent to Sinking Ships.

The sturdy surfmen of Long Beach, as they call the ribbon of sand south of Barnegat inlet separating the waters of the bay and the ocean, have made two gallant rescues in the past week with the Lyle gun and the breeches buoy. The opportunity to use these appliances is always welcomed, says the New York Sun, because it means a fight with the elements that stirs the blood and strains the muscle. Whenever the news that a ship is ashore is telephoned from station to station over the beach wires every surfman within twenty miles says envious things about the lucky patrolmen who are called out to make the rescue. The ordinary routine of the beach patrol is full of hardship and monotonous in the extreme. A daring rescue makes talk for the rest of the winter.

Considering the number of vessels which have to pass it, the New Jersey coast is the most dangerous on the continent, and many ships go ashore on the shelving sands there every winter. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, however, the surf will admit the launching of lifeboats, and the surfmen bring ashore the shipwrecked in this way. It is only when a great storm is raging and the surf is so rough as to baffle the skillful oarsmen that the gun and breeches buoy are resorted to. [illegible]

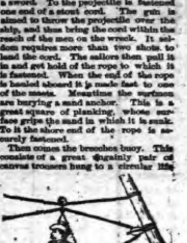
When the patrol sees a vessel aground or in danger he hurries to the station and gives the alarm. The surfmen are out in a jiffy. They always take all their apparatus, so as to be ready for any emergency. If the lifeboat cannot be launched through the surf, they bring out the Lyle gun. This is a small brass cannon, which has a projectile fitting over the barrel like a sheath over a sword. To the projectile is fastened one end of a stout cord. The gun is aimed to throw the projectile over the ship, and thus bring the cord within the reach of the men on the wreck. It seldom requires more than two shots to land the cord. The sailors then pull it in and get hold of the rope to which it is fastened. When the end of the rope is hauled aboard it is made fast to one of the masts. Meantime the surfmen are burying a sand anchor. This is a great square of planking, whose surface grips the sand in which it is sunk. To it the shore end of the rope is securely fastened.

Then comes the breeches buoy. This consists of a great ungainly pair of canvas trousers hung to a circular life preserver. It is suspended by stout ropes from a pulley, which the surfmen quickly rig upon the rope connecting ship and shore in such a way that it moves freely back and forth. A guy line, one end of which was sent aboard the ship with the rope, is now fastened to the breeches buoy, and the surfmen pull on a line which starts the breeches buoy traveling seaward. As soon as it reaches the ship one of the shipwrecked gets into the pair of canvas breeches, sticking a leg through each capacious hole, and grasping the life preserver, which comes just under his armpits. He does not need to be tied in, for his seat is secure.



IN THE BREECHES BUOY.

All being ready, the surfmen ashore begin to haul in. The breeches buoy rolls rapidly shoreward, suspended from its hempen track. For most of the distance the man in the breeches is dangling above the water. When he reaches the surf, though, he is bound to get a ducking. He holds his breath, takes a fresh hold on the life preserver, and in he goes. The next minute he is on the beach, where a dozen strong hands reach out to pluck him out of his canvas breeches. The buoy is sent straight back for another, and so on until all are rescued. A dozen men have been brought ashore in this way by a single breeches buoy in less than an hour.

It sometimes happens that a woman is aboard the ship. She may be the captain's wife. If the ship is a steamer, there may be women passengers. The idea of getting into this pair of canvas breeches may be repugnant to a woman, but she does not hesitate a second. Pulling her dress up around her, in she steps as unhesitatingly as though she were born to trousers. All she asks at that moment is to get ashore.

There have been many devices for rescuing the shipwrecked, including the life car with which the stations on our coast are provided, but no other appliance is of such tried utility as the breeches buoy.

ASTRAY.

Relieved of Scottish diction a familiar quotation from Burns would read thus—"The best laid plans of mice and men go oft astray."

There is truth in that saying, and it has a political application as well as any other.

Scheming politicians often plan and construct what they imagine to be invulnerable partisan fortresses, but which tumble into pieces like toy blocks when assaulted by popular hostility.

A Republican Congress, for the special purpose of perpetuating its party in power, conferred upon a group of Northwestern territories—Washington, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and the Dakotas, the full prerogative of States.

Political leaders were confident that such newly fledged commonwealths were and would forever remain loyally partisan Republican, thereby adding largely to electoral strength in the Presidential contest, and rendering it impossible to change political control of the United States Senate for years to come, and at the same time they refused admission to Arizona and New Mexico, equally entitled to Statehood, because those sovereignties would likely be Democratic.

It was an artfully laid plan but failed to keep the track.

Those partisan carved States instead of voting solidly at the late Presidential election for Republican Harrison gave considerable support to anti-Republican Weaver, and not stopping there, they contributed aid towards making the National Senate Democratic.

Popular intelligence is marching onward and Democracy heads the procession.

BOGUS PROTECTION.

When the McKinley tariff was enacted, imposing as it did on consumers an enormous increase of tin plate duty, the cry went forth from self interested parties that another magnificent manufacturing industry would soon and permanently be added to our home calendar.

And we were further assured that rich deposits of tin ore existed somewhere in the Rocky Mountains, the output of which would furnish ample supplies for a multitude of American tin plate works, and furnish new and lucrative employment to thousands of American workmen.

And to make protection doubly profitable for a bevy of mercenary protectionists, McKinley, by their orders, laid a heavy impost tax on the foreign crude material.

Months have lengthened into years. Majestic piles of promised tin plate mills do not as yet shadow the land.

Legions of expectant workmen stand uncalled.

And to cap the climax, the famous and fabulous tin mines have been virtually abandoned as non-productive.

Yet, every laborer who carries a dinner pail, every housewife who cooks and washes, every farmer who needs a tinned roof, and every canner of fruits, meats and vegetables, must pay exorbitant tribute to the greed of gain.

Such is one specimen of bogus protection.

There are many others.

WORKING FOR CLEANLINESS.

Spring-Time Duties of Householders, as Mapped Out by the Health Board.

The following bulletin was issued today by the Board of Health for March:

Absolute cleanliness is the best preventive of disease.

Cool weather, and early in the spring, is the best time to have privy vaults and cesspools cleaned and put in good condition for the summer season. Slaked lime or dry earth or both should be dusted on the walls and bottom of vaults.

When there is no cesspool for the reception of waste water, the owner of the premises should have one constructed immediately.

Ventilators for cesspools should be at least seven feet high from the ground.

Garbage must be kept separate from ashes, as the dumping of garbage, or ashes containing such refuse, is strictly prohibited within city limits, under a fine of $25.

Place all garbage in a suitable vessel and have it removed twice a week.

Cellars should be cleaned and whitewashed and all objectionable accumulations removed from the same and from outbuildings by April. Thorough cleaning of premises is better than disinfectants.

Be sure the plumbing is in good order, and that all basins, sinks and closets are properly trapped; if not, have them put in perfect sanitary condition.

Look to the outdoor part near the house and see that it is kept in proper order; that no waste-water or decomposing matters are thrown around.

Personal cleanliness, regularity of habits, properly cooked food, moderation in eating, avoidance of stimulants and of unnecessary worry and exposure, are found to promote vigorous health that helps to ward off disease of all kinds.

The Board of Health and its members will cheerfully counsel and assist in any sanitary matters, and urgently request any citizen knowing of uncleanly backyards, or the existence of deleterious nuisances, to notify the Health Inspector, M. M. DUNHAM, at his office, 7 East Front street, or any member of the board.

HERE'S ONE WHO KNOWS.

And He Utterly Refutes What Plainfielders Have Been Gulled with.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I ask the favor of space in your columns to protest against a statement made by one of your contemporaries. The request is unusual, but circumstances justify it. In the Evening News of March 10 we are told editorially—perhaps under the influence of partisan fatuity—that the colonies of the British Empire are "struggling with debt and moving backward", that India is in a "chronic state of poverty and distress, often hunger", and that even in "rich Australia Victoria is in a condition of great financial depression".

Whether the writer of that is simply uninformed, or whether the Evening News is deliberately venturing to presume on the assumed ignorance of its readers, it is not for me to ascertain, but the statement is false. I know India and Australia perhaps as well as the Evening News scribe knows Plainfield, and I repeat unreservedly that he is misleading his constituents. To refute him in detail would require a page of THE PRESS, but I am prepared to defend my position when I say that all the countries named are at this moment enjoying a degree of prosperity fully averaging that of any other nation, and that they are governed with more public integrity than can be claimed by some. I have passed years among them in a capacity which enables me to write with personal knowledge, and which also causes me to wonder how an honest newspaper can seek to befog the public mind and lower the standard of journalism by such reckless and unwarrantable imaginings.

With regard to Victoria, I may mention that unlike its neighbor, New South Wales, it has adhered to a policy of moderate protection, and I was among the first, if not the first, to advocate the policy there. It is not prohibitory, and it has not been less advantageous than the free trade system of the adjoining province. If the writer in the News thinks that a public debt is necessarily a public misfortune, I must consider his condition hopeless. I would not argue with him. But for the information of others I may at least add that the public debt of Victoria has been singularly advantageous. A large part of it has been incurred for public works. Railroads there are public property, built throughout as substantially as any in the world, and owned not by self-seeking monopolists, but by the people.

I refer to these points incidentally, but I could not allow the errors so completely put forth by the News to stand without some effort to correct them.

MORECRAFT AGAIN.

He and Another Scamp Maltreat an Innocent Youth.

A strange sight was presented to the eyes of the passers-by on Front street and Park avenue Wednesday afternoon, when a youth appeared from the direction of Somerset street, with a face of inky blackness relieved by a white streak about an inch wide running from his forehead down his nose to his chin. He was followed by an interested crowd as far as city judge Coddington's office. He entered the office and gave the typewritist such a scare that she recorded nothing but exclamation points for an hour afterwards. Here the youth told his story. He said that his name was Patrick McClymont, and that he had been taken, much against his will, into French's carriage shop by two chaps named Morecraft and Holmes, where by a suitable application of wagon grease, his face had been given its ethiopian hue. The artistic streak of white had been carefully made by the forefinger of one of the operators. Judge Coddington issued warrants for the arrest of Morecraft and Holmes, but they were not to be found, and McClymont returned to his home to remove the decorations of his tormentors. Morecraft is the same youth who was let off Monday with a fine of $5, when tried for disturbing the Salvation Army meeting. He will not get off so easily this time.

Chief Doane Says the Charge of the School Board is False.

Chief Engineer T. O. Doane says that the statement made by George H. Babcock, Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, J. B. Probasco, E. L. Finch and Fred. C. Lounsbury, that the city paid an agent a commission in the purchase of the new engine-house site, "is a lie out of the whole cloth".

The Letter-Carriers' Victory.

I note with much pleasure that Hon. C. H. Ham is to lecture in Plainfield on the Kindergarten and Manual Training. He was one of the speakers on this theme in a series of conferences in New York, under the auspices of our Friends' Committee on Education, and greatly interested his hearers. He has made a special study of the subject and is well worthy of the best audience Plainfield can give him.

AARON M. POWELL.

Mr. Bacon's Pluck and Presence of Mind Stop a Fire and Save a Shock.

William Cortright's house at Fifth and New streets, where he is laid up with a broken leg, was saved from total destruction Monday evening by Frank M. Bacon's pluck, and the patient was saved a severe shock by Mr. Bacon's presence of mind in quietly crawling into the basement by himself and putting out the fire that had started in a wood-box behind the stove and was rapidly spreading.

Mr. Bacon had been calling on Mr. Cortright. After leaving the house he noticed a strange light in the lower story. He made his way in, called upstairs to the nurse who heard him that there was nothing the matter, and with the aid of some water at first and a neighbor's help later, stopped the conflagration.

FLOODS IN MICHIGAN

Kalamazoo City Threatened With Inundation.

OTHER CITIES DAMAGED BY WATER

The Danger Along the Course of the Grand River Is Now Over—Dams Breaking Along the Kalamazoo River—Pumping Out the Ironwood Mines—No More Lives Lost.

DETROIT, March 15.—The flood situation in the Grand river is not much changed from last night. The water is gradually receding at the rate of about a foot a day. Reports from Ionia, Muir, Portland, Grand Ledge and other points along the Grand river, except at the lower parts, show that the danger is over.

The Kalamazoo river has risen at Kalamazoo, and all the streams running into it are higher than for many years.

Railroad tracks are inundated, and more than 100 dwellings are surrounded by water to such a depth as to render it necessary to use boats in going back and forth. Several factories have been compelled to shut down.

The Howlandsburg dam on the Kalamazoo, which holds back Gull lake, has gone out, and the Galesburg dam is in great danger. The dam at Plainwell went out yesterday, and flooded a large area. The Otsego dam holds back a lake of 3,000 acres of water, and may also be forced out. No lives have yet been lost here.

An unbroken lake extends between Saginaw and Bay City, and the Saginaw river is still rising rapidly. A large amount of lumber has been washed from the docks at Saginaw. Many cellars are flooded, and merchants' stocks have been heavily damaged.

The water in the flooded Ashland mine at Ironwood has been lowered to the fourth level, and the big pump, which was flooded, is working again. All danger to adjacent mines is now over. The mine will be emptied by April 1. The flooding has thrown nearly 500 men out of work temporarily.

ST. LOUIS, Mich., March 15.—Pine river is the highest in 17 years, and the mills and electric light works are flooded out, the town having been in darkness for five nights.

One bridge was carried away. Cass river is up 10 feet and is still rising, and bridges over it have been carried away. Unless the streams fall rapidly before the ice in the Tittabawassee and its tributaries give away a disastrous flood is feared.

A KISSING CLERGYMAN.

Why the Rev. David Chambers Was Pelted With Stones.

EAST HARWICH, Mass., March 15.—Rev. David Chambers, who has twice been pelted with stones on the street after dark, seems to have been afflicted with a troublesome mania for kissing the ladies of his church. Their friends have taken this method to avenge the insults.

One lady says that she employed the clergyman to teach her daughter painting, but ordered him from the house when he attempted to embrace and kiss her.

The clergyman at one time had a painting school in New Orleans, but his pupils deserted him, owing to his affectionate conduct.

At a church entertainment here the past winter one young woman slapped him in the face for trying to kiss her.

NINE KILLED, EIGHT INJURED.

Shocking Disaster by the Explosion of Fire Damp in an Idaho Mine.

MCALESTER, I. T., March 15.—A shocking disaster in which nine men were instantly killed and eight more so seriously injured that they cannot live, occurred at midnight in mine No. 1 of the Choctaw Coal company at Alderson, by the explosion of fire damp.

Out of 18 men employed in the level only one escaped death or injury.

Several of the victims were recent arrivals from Indiana and Pennsylvania.

Her Crew in a State of Mutiny.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 15.—Private advices received here to-day from Honolulu report the arrival of the whaling bark William Baylies at that port on Feb. 21, having taken no oil and with her crew in a state of mutiny. Sealing schooners Matthew Turner, C. G. White, Alton, Louisa D. and Rose Sparks had been in port and departed for the Rookeries, previous to Feb. 28. The Alton had been on the railway for repairs.

To Change Wardens at Sing Sing.

ALBANY, March 15.—Superintendent of State Prisons Lathrop admits that he had written to Warden Durston asking him to assume permanent control of Sing Sing prison as its warden. Warden Durston has built up Auburn prison and made it self-supporting and the department wants him to undertake a similar task at Sing Sing. Warden Durston has not yet replied. Warden Brown has tendered his resignation.

More Smallpox in Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 15.—John McCarthy, a ship carpenter, has been found with smallpox in the Curtis boarding house. The house is filled with boarders. McCarthy formerly boarded where William Cole, who recently died at the pest house, was stricken. Both men frequently visited Long Island City, where their families live, in the infected district.

Run Over by an Electric Car.

PATERSON, N. J., March 15.—David Campbell, of the firm of Morrell & Campbell, feed, grain and coal dealers, of Passaic, was struck by an electric car last night and thrown under the wheels. Two dozen men lifted the car from the track and carried the injured man to a drug store. His right foot had been cut off and he was badly bruised.

To Compete With Vanderbilt Lines.

DETROIT, March 15.—It is announced that Henry S. Ives is the principal backer of the new line which is to be built soon between Detroit and Toledo. Several other prominent Eastern capitalists and a number in this city are also interested in the new road which, it is said, will take considerable business from the Vanderbilt lines.

Another Steamer With a Broken Shaft.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The steamship American, from Rotterdam, passed the British steamer Barons, from Liverpool for Halifax, with a broken shaft. Assistance was offered, but was refused. The captain of the Barons was not small communicative.

WILL SUE SPAIN.

The Female Baseballists After Damages for Their Treatment in Cuba.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The American Female Baseball club, composed of nine young women, and Joseph Bruckner, the manager of the team, have brought suit for damages against the Spanish government.

The party returned to this city from Havana Monday and Manager Bruckner tells a story of rough treatment at the hands of the Cuban mob in which he and the girls barely escaped with their lives. Bruckner says that the Cubans not only attacked the women and tore off their clothing, but that they dragged down the American flag which the club carried and destroyed it.

The riot took place at Almendares, Cuba, March 5, where the female baseballists were playing the Cuban Baseball club. Manager Buckner says a crowd of 10,000 people had assembled to see the game. He says that $5,000 in money representing the gate receipts was stolen, a policeman and fireman killed and several other men severely wounded in the general fight that took place.

"We have laid the matter before American Consul Springer at Havana," Bruckner said, "and he has promised to investigate the case. As soon as possible we returned to New York and we have sent a power of attorney to Havana where actions for damages have been instituted by us against the Spanish government."

THANKS FROM RUSSIA AND GREECE.

Sent Stamps to the Czar and New Year's Greeting to the King.

WALTHAM, Mass., March 15.—A young man of this town sent several specimens of the new Columbian postage stamps to the Czar of Russia. He thought nothing more of it until a few days ago he received a large envelope from the Russian Legation at Washington, sealed with the imperial arms of Russia. The letter read as follows:

"His Majesty the Emperor most graciously directed me to express to you his thanks for your letter of Jan. 1, 1893, with postage stamps enclosed. Believe me, Dear Sir, Yours sincerely, "PRINCE CANTACUZENE."

A New Year greeting sent to the King of Greece brought forth the following letter from Athens dated Feb. 3, 1893:

"DEAR SIR—His Majesty the King thanks you for your kind [illegible] which I have been ordered to convey to you. [illegible]

"Very sincerely yours, A. [illegible], Secretary to His Majesty, the King of the Hellenes."

THE PANAMA SHAME

Exciting Times in the Chamber and Senate.

MOSLEM MOBS SACKING CHURCHES

A British Victory in India—Two Hundred Natives Killed—Many Anarchists Arrested in Spain—Many Bombs and Literature Seized.

PARIS, March 15.—There has been another exciting scene in the Chamber of Deputies. M. Chagny said that he wished to question M. Pourquery de Boisserin regarding his attack on Mme. Cottu, but President Perier refused to permit the question to be offered, for the reason that the debate had been closed.

Paul Deroulede then complained that the official report of the debate had suppressed his expression that the government was a government of liars.

M. Tirard, Minister of Finance, left his seat and walked toward Deroulede, shouting abusive terms at the Boulangist champion. A general uproar followed in all parts of the Chamber.

At length quiet was restored and M. Tirard proposed that Deroulede should be censured and excluded temporarily from the House. Deroulede exclaimed: "If I am expelled I will go to the country and declare that the Chamber is thirsting for lies and would not listen to the truth."

This created a new sensation, and ultimately, at the request of the President, Deroulede withdrew the offensive expression.

In the Senate, after a debate on the facts brought out in the Panama prosecution, a vote of confidence in the government was passed by 209 to 56.

M. Bourgeois is the hero of the hour. His vindication of yesterday was complete. There could be but one outcome, and that was his return to the Cabinet.

In the morning President Carnot drove to the residence of M. Bourgeois and asked him to resume his old position as Minister of Justice.

The effect of the vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies was visible when the trial of the Panama conspirators was resumed by the less satisfied air of the enemies of the government.

After some minor evidence was taken counsel proceeded to address the court. The lawyer appealed to De Lesseps, asking him to tell the whole truth, since it was evident that he knew more than he has revealed.

It is understood that an appeal has been lodged by Charles De Lesseps, Fontane, Cottu and Eiffel against the sentences of imprisonment declared against them at the first trial. Their appeal will be heard before the 23d of this month, probably on Monday next.

MOSLEM ROBBERS

Have Established a Reign of Terror Over Armenians.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 15.—Moslem mobs have possession of Caesarea. They have established a reign of terror over the Armenians, have robbed hundreds, and have killed many. During services in three Armenian churches the mob burst in the doors, stripped the women of their jewelry, and beat and cut the men. After the Armenians fled the Moslems sacked the churches.

They afterwards went through the streets attacking all the Armenians they met, bursting into private houses, and sacking shops.

All places of business are closed, and trade is utterly stagnant. Violence and theft continue day and night.

Christian caravans are being robbed and the merchants murdered. The prisons are crowded with Armenian prisoners.

Most of the conspicuous Armenians of Caesarea and Marsovan have been imprisoned. A few escaped by paying ransom.

HONORED BY HAWAIIANS.

Provisional Government Gives a Reception to the Commander of the Boston.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The mail from Honolulu which reached San Francisco last Thursday has arrived in Washington. The annexation commissioners received a large budget of newspapers and letters.

One of the letters stated that Mr. Wodehouse, the English Consul-General at Honolulu, had, up to the time the steamer left there, not called upon the members of the provisional government, nor extended to them any of the usual courtesies. The same was true of the officers of the Japanese frigate, which had recently arrived in the harbor, and the letter giving this information stated that they seemed to be acting under the influence of the British officials.

The reception given to Capt. Wiltse, of the U. S. S. Boston just prior to his departure from the islands for San Francisco was the largest social affair ever held in Honolulu.

It was given under the auspices of the provisional government and leading citizens. The officers of the British steamer Garnet, who had been invited, did not attend the reception.

A member of the provisional government wrote to the commissioners stating that there was no truth in the report that a division of opinion existed among members of the Cabinet, but that everything was progressing with the same harmony that marked the inauguration of its administration.

The same mail brought two despatches to the Navy Department, which were not given to the public.

EXETER MILLS BURNED.

Loss $250,000—Two Hundred and Forty Hands Made Idle.

EXETER, N. H., March 15.—Fire broke out in the Exeter cotton mills about 4 a. m. It started in the basement and burned up through the building, destroying the engine room and the older part of the mill, which was destroyed once before.

The new part of the mill was saved. The fire was under control at 9.30.

Loss estimated at $250,000.

Two hundred and forty hands are thrown out of employment.

Help was summoned from neighboring places.

The building destroyed was a five-story structure, 250 feet along, and was equipped with 10,000 spindles and twelve pair of mules and contained all the carding machinery. The new mill, which was of nearly equal size, and which was built in 1870, was only slightly damaged by smoke and water. The old mill, so-called, was practically a new building, having been erected in place of the building that was destroyed by a $100,000 fire in 1867.

TWO FIRE ACCIDENTS.

One Man Fell in a Snow Bank and Another Gets an Electric Shock.

OGDEN, Utah, March 15.—The six-story Utah Loan and Trust company's building, the finest in the city, has been gutted by fire. The flames were difficult to control and the Salt Lake fire department was telephoned for. The Salt Lakers rendered valuable assistance and the blaze was confined to the one building.

Fireman Frank Burt of Salt Lake was knocked from a fourth-story window but landed in a snow bank and sustained only slight injuries. Fireman Lewis McIntosh of Ogden was struck by a stream of water which had come in contact with an electric wire and received a shock from which fatal results are feared.

The building originally cost $200,000. Estimated loss, $125,000; insurance, $55,000.

MAY BE INVESTIGATED.

The Ann Arbor Strike Likely to Cause Ohio Legislative Action.

TOLEDO, O., March 15.—A special from Columbus states that the Ann Arbor strike may be the subject of an investigation in the Legislature on account of the threat of Detective Boyd of Detroit, who said that if the strikers wanted fight they should get it.

It is claimed that Boyd being a citizen of Michigan had no right to assume police power in this State.

It is probable that he and his men will be placed under arrest.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

Several Hurt in a Bad Wreck on the Georgia Central Road.

MACON, Ga., March 15.—The fast express on the Central road was derailed yesterday two and a half miles above Boling Brooke. The engine and all the coaches save the parlor car are in ruins. The train was making its regular time and in rounding a sharp curve jumped the track.

The engine turned completely over in a ditch and the tender, reversing itself, passed 14 or 20 feet beyond. The mail and baggage car went on the opposite side from the engine and is a pile of debris. The smoker was jammed against the engine and the [illegible] through the windows. The [illegible] was badly broken. Fortunately the [illegible] into a hospital for the wounded. A RABBI ARRESTED.

Divorced a Couple for $8 and Then Wanted to Marry Them Again.

CINCINNATI, March 15.—Simon Isaac Frinkelstein, Rabbi of the Jewish church here, has been arrested charged with practicing a trick game. The arrest was made on complaint of Michael Berken, a Polish Jew, who avers that the Rabbi gave him a divorce decree for $8. [illegible]

After getting this church divorce Berken repented and desired to live with his wife again. He went back to the Rabbi and asked for the money. The Rabbi refused to return the money but offered to marry the couple [illegible] $8.

Berken then caused his arrest.

McLeod President of the New England.

BOSTON, March 15.—The newly elected directors of the New York & New England railroad organized by electing as president A. A. McLeod. The other officers were re-elected. The offices of [illegible] president, auditor and chairman of the board will be filled later.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I sustain a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully.

IT PAYS TO KNOW

That we are the makers of all the goods we sell. Good workmanship costs more and we know it. Also know that it shows in the superiority of the styles, the sewing, the whole make-up of the goods. To us you pay the manufacturer's profit only, so there's no extra charge for the superior excellence of our garments.

The men and boys who we are clothing are likely to be thought extravagant, it is so handsomely finished, so nobby made, so merchant-tailor like.

We believe we beat the town on Overcoats. The greatest value for men at 10, 12, 15, 18 and 20 dollars, and for boys at 3, 3.50, 4, 5, 6 and 8 dollars that we ever had.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—The Legislature adjourned in such a hurry that Plainfield's school bill was forgotten.

—The piano fund of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Washingtonville, is to be benefited by an entertainment March 22.

—You are invited to attend the prayer-meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. to-night at 8, in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church.

—One merchant in this city is said to have dropped one hundred dollars on the result of the Fitzsimmons-Hall fight, Wednesday night.

—The frost has left the ground, and that harbinger of spring, the festive "nightwalker" earthworm, is again able to crawl to the surface.

—A veteran commuter says it's only the young bloods from Plainfield who play for money on the trains. The older heads play only for fun.

—One of the electric street cars jumped the switch at Front and Somerset streets, Saturday, and travel over the road was delayed for a time.

—The defeat of Mr. Bauersachs by so large a majority was only a part of the Democratic landslide that seems to be sweeping over everything of late.

—Some of the colored people of Plainfield are arranging for a ball and cake walk to be given in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains, the evening of March 23.

—Five of Wilson Fisk's thoroughbred dogs arrived home Saturday from the bench show in Boston. This week the dogs are entered in the show at Washington.

—Tickets for the Y. M. C. A. lectures may be obtained from W. H. Williams, Geo. W. Moore, Asa Collier, M. C. Dobbins, R. J. Shaw, or at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

—Tickets for the Y. M. C. A. lectures will not be sold at the door of the church, but may be procured at R. J. Shaw's pharmacy. Tickets for single lectures will not be sold.

—The fire insurance companies, through their representative, W. A. Woodruff, have adjusted the losses of the Heidelolf fire on Somerset street, with the owner of the building and the tenants.

—It is understood that an offer of $22,000 has been made for the Penfield property, at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street, by Pliny Fisk, who is desirous of enlarging his lawn.

—The extensive addition now being built to the Harned academy on Park avenue, is rapidly approaching completion and will probably be ready for occupation at the close of the Easter vacation.

—During the year ending March 1, 1893, there were 51 arrests in North Plainfield, and all but one of the prisoners pleaded guilty to the respective charges. The other one stood trial and was finally convicted. That's a good marshal's work.

—Unpleasant remarks were passed between the owner and one of the "help" on the Broadway building, adjoining the rink, Wednesday morning, over the matter of walling up the rear areaway. Blows were exchanged, but no blood was spilled.

—The brick building at 14 North avenue is to be disposed of at master's sale April 18, on the premises, by virtue of a decree in chancery, issued through John H. VanWinkle, master, between Benjamin F. Moore, plaintiff, and Emma E. Moore and others, defendants.

—Stair-builder Sylvester Peer, of West Front street, saw a strange-looking bird on the walk opposite his house, last Wednesday morning. He captured the bird and found it to be a fullgrown woodcock, nearly frozen to death. The bird was thawed out in Mr. Peer's cellar, where it still remains.

—Hulett, the West Front street music dealer, has been trading many pianos in exchange for new ones. Being anxious to close these out and make room for new goods for his grand opening this month, he will offer some great bargains. Anyone wishing to secure a good bargain would do well to call at once.

—The Rev. Mr. Kingsley, pastor of the Dunellen M. E. church, preached on the subject "Our Public Schools", Sunday evening. The Jr. O. U. A. M. members from Dunellen and New Market, who are champions of the public school system, attended in a body. The sermon was very fine, and enjoyed by the large congregation.

—On account of the scarlet fever in the family of Mr. DeMott, of Somerset street, Richard Warnock will temporarily close his business in the store at that number, and will build a small shop on Grandview avenue, where he will do business for about six weeks. Mr. Warnock has laid in a full new line of meats, and everything is fresh.

—George Kesselring's rooster is gone. It was an extraordinary bird. Besides being a famous fighter and a royal head of the feathered flock, it was quite like a watch dog, as when anyone approached the house at night the bird would crow and cackle in alarming fashion. Mr. Kesselring valued the bird highly, and would like to meet the depredator who has stolen it.

—The insurance men were out on Saturday and adjusted the claims of the Heideloff estate and G. and T. Mantz, for damages to building and stock sustained by the fire on Somerset street about a month ago. The settlement, it is understood, was perfectly satisfactory. Mantz Bros. have removed their stock to the building next to the post office where they will continue in business.

—The good accomplished by San Francisco kindergartens is incalculable, especialy in the tenement districts. Of 9,000 children taught in these schools, not one has been in the police court, though many come from families of criminals. Charles H. Ham will speak of these kindergartens, and pave the way for their introduction into Plainfield, at All Souls' church Thursday night.

—On Wednesday the 19th of April, sheriff Hicks will sell the property on Second street next adjoining Packer's furniture store and backing on the hotel Grenada, to satisfy the judgments of Charles A. Reed, Patrick Lynch, Daniel H. Terry, Conneggys Paul, Thomas Callahan, Newton B. Smalley, Harry Wagner and John T. Fritts, against John C. Moore, only child and heir of "Uncle Billy" Moore.

—The Railroad Employe says: "It is rumored that Dodd's will supplant Wescott's Express on May first, and that the United States company will be succeeded by the Adams' on the entire Jersey Central system, on the same date; those who pretend to know declare this rumor authentic." But the operations of the United States company in this city in establishing new and improved quarters would seem to denote otherwise.

—The cafe of Hotel Grenada is being removed to the rooms occupied by Brown & Hill's barber shop, and the barber shop is being transferred to the former bar room. The new cafe will be a great improvement over the old. The chief reason for the change of location is to get the bar away from the [illegible] [illegible] of the boiler [illegible]. [illegible]

PERSONALIA.

The Rev. L. E. Livermore of New Market is very ill.

Miss Mabel Woodruff of East Second street is visiting friends in Harlem.

Mrs. William Schorb, of North avenue, is convalescent from a week's illness.

George Barrett, a brother of Mrs. C. Kaerth, is dangerously ill at his home in Brooklyn.

A letter received from Mrs. Vanderbeek in the South reports her greatly improved in health.

The Rev. Father Cushing will lecture on Ireland in St. Joseph's church the evening of St. Patrick's Day.

Mrs. Wm. Schorb, of North avenue, is recovering from a severe attack of diphtheria. She is now able to sit up.

John Mantz has been enjoying a trip through Tennessee, in which both business and pleasure were combined.

Mrs. James H. Searing of Madison avenue is spending two or three weeks with her brother, J. M. C. Marsh, at Westfield.

The Rev. Father Smyth, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, returned Friday from an extended trip through the South.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart and family of Netherwood left home Monday for New York, where they will spend three or four weeks at the Plaza Hotel.

Edward VanBuren of this city has gone South to Louisville, Ky., to spend some time with the family of his fiancee, Miss Margaret Young.

Edward White has secured Robert Rick to manage his shoe department. Mr. Rick is favorably known from his long connection with Sherwin's.

Fred Obitz and Frank French of North Plainfield have gone to Fort Worth, Texas. Thence they will join the Plainfield colony at Graham, Texas.

The many Plainfield friends of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, jr., will regret to learn that they are to remove to Brooklyn, their former home, April 1.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Sarah Francis Green to George E. Carter, Thursday evening, March 30, at 8, at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Mann, 46 Plainfield avenue.

THE PRESS sincerely congratulates the honored and successful candidate of itself and of the people, Mayor Saunders; also the new councilmen, Messrs. Howell and Edwards.

That beautiful building lot corner of Grove street and Craig place, has been sold by Alonzo DeCamp for a handsome amount to the widow of E. H. Hanigan, of 10 Craig place.

Jessie May, the 14-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Clawson, of 37 Brook avenue, is dangerously ill with membraneous croup. Two physicians are in consultation.

It isn't Col. Charles K. Moore any more, it's judge Moore. He was elected justice of the peace of Fanwood yesterday by over twice as many majority as his opponent had votes.

Some of the young ladies of Plainfield's 400 are much interested in preparations for a "dove" german. It is to be a subscription affair, and the invitations are to be restricted to a chosen few.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, gave an interesting lecture on "Manners and Social Customs", at Miss Townsend's school, 54 Park place, Newark.

The popular architect, B. Fougate, represented Plainfield last Friday night at the first ball given in honor of Cleveland's inauguration, under the auspices of the Agawam club at Southampton, L. I.

William Hinkson, whose radiant countenance helps illumine the interior of Leggett's popular pharmacy, is again living in loneliness for a time, his good wife having gone on a visit to her parents in Princeton.

It is whispered about that Dr. R. L. Tucker, of 59 East Front street, is to be married in a few weeks to a young lady of Bermuda. After their wedding, it is said, they will take up their residence in Rhode Island.

Mr. Drayton, of Crescent avenue, has leased the beautiful new residence now being completed by J. E. Martine, on East Ninth street, and will occupy it at an early date. The house is a model one in every respect.

Mabel Corey, aged 14, died at her home, Castleton-on-the-Hudson, Monday afternoon. The body was buried to-day at Scotch Plains, the place of her former home. She was a niece of the wife of chief T. O. Doane.

The friends of David S. Dunavan will be glad to know that the Courier report is false that he has had a relapse and that it would be some time before he would be able to get around. As a fact, Mr. Dunavan is able to be out again.

It is reported that Miss Margaret Young, of Louisville, Ky., who has been spending the greater part of this season with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart of Netherwood, has become engaged to Edward Van Buren of the firm of Stover & Van Buren of this city.

R. B. Grinnell, of Netherwood, who is spending the winter in Mexico and California for his health, has been confined to his bed at San Diego, Cal., for some time. He has recovered sufficiently to move to Riverside in the same State, where he now is. He will return to Netherwood about the middle of April.

W. M. Grinnell, brother of R. B. Grinnell, of Netherwood, has resigned his position as third assistant Secretary of State at Washington. Mr. Grinnell has many friends and well wishers in the present administration, but has concluded to return to his law business with his uncle, ex-Vice-President Morton, of the firm of Morton, Bliss & Co., in New York.

Miss Anthony, of Putnam avenue, is staying with friends in New York, where she is rehearsing for an original play to be given to-morrow evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stone, on Madison avenue. Miss Anthony and Charles Noe Daly, who is well known in Plainfield as a clever amateur, will take the two leading parts. The play is from the graceful and accomplished pen of Miss Anthony herself, and its reading has given her circle of friends much delight.

The people of Westfield are electing literary men as trustees of the public schools. Last year the Rev. William A. Rice, D. D., and R. E. Dougherty, Ph. D., were added to the board, and now Willard H. Morse, M. D., is named as a third. Ex-freeholder James T. Pierson declines a renomination for the place, being confined to the house still by reason of the injuries sustained on the Central railroad. Robert B. Sinclair of Harper's Weekly is also named as a candidate for trustee.

Catharine E. Webster, the Quakeress, beloved by all, was given a charming surprise at her home, 49 East Second street, Monday evening. It was a birthday gathering planned by her housekeeper, Mary Terry, during the absence of Miss Webster. When she returned home it was in the possession of some of her many friends. An elegant supper was served, and the time passed enjoyably. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Cadmus, Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Coward, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Woodruff, Mrs. Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Laing, Miss Ida Rosep, Miss Maggie Rosep, L. G. Randolph and daughter, Miss Runyon, Miss Bates, Miss Vail, Park avenue, Mulford Rettl, the Misses Vail, Mrs. Stella, Mrs. Daniel Vermeule and daughter.

GOOD MAYOR SAUNDERS.

HIS MAJORITY BIGGER THAN 'TWAS A YEAR AGO.

The New Borough Council Democratic by a Gain of One—Even Town Clerk Martin Has a Narrow Escape—Democratic Victories in Various Republican Strongholds—Fanwood's Surprise.

From The Press of March 15.

The people of North Plainfield by their ballots yesterday continued in office the Mayor whose record has been so satisfactory to them, and fittingly rebuked those persons who have been boasting that they had supreme control of borough affairs and always elected "their" man.

Mr. Saunders's majority was 17 greater than it was a year ago, and this in spite of the most bitter opposition that the rankest partisanship could bring to bear.

The Republicans further lost one of their councilmen, the overseer of the poor, and very nearly the town clerk. Altogether, they are in a greatly demoralized state, in their former stronghold.

In the second district of the township, 14 ballots, all Republican, were rejected because they were very plainly "marked", under the strict meaning of the law. The cause of the marking was careless work by an irresponsible print-shop on Somerset street, so that on the ballots rejected the outline of the type showed heavily on the back of the ballots. The vote in the table below is as originally declared by the official board. Later the board decided that the ballots were not intentionally marked, and counted them in, so that 14 ballots should be added to each Republican's vote in the second township district below. That elects town clerk Martin.

There is little doubt that should Mr. Kline contest the returns in the courts, he would secure the counting-out of the disputed ballots and win the office.

The sudden opposition to town clerk Martin is attributed to the enemies he made in the Peace street assessment business.

The vote.

FANWOOD DEMOCRATIC.

The Tidal Wave Sweeps Over "the Banner Republican Township"—Breaking up the Kyte Ring.

For the first time for many years, Fanwood township elected a Democrat for town committeeman, yesterday.

The total number of votes cast was 284, of which Geo. C. Miller, Democrat, received 143, and L. W. Miller, Republican, 138. The Democrats also elected their constable, Geo. A. Clark, by 2 majority.

The balance of the ticket was carried by the Republicans by majorities ranging from 30 to 60, except Col. C. K. Moore for justice of the peace, who was elected by 162 majority. The Republicans account for the defeat of their candidate for town committeeman by treachery in their own ranks, as at the primary held Friday evening the the rule was adopted that all present and voting for nominees should support the ticket placed in nomination at the polls, and this was agreed to unanimously. It is claimed that this rule was not lived up to, and in fact it is openly stated that certain candidates on the Republican ticket sacrificed L. W. Miller to make votes for themselves. On the other hand, the Democrats claim that the taxpayers of the township have had enough of Kyte rule and they were determined to break the ring, and when Mr. Kyte's term expires next spring another Democrat equally as strong as George C. Miller will be elected to succeed him, thus giving the Democrats control of the town.

Much amusement was occasioned when Will Sanbury voted a straight Democratic ticket, immediately followed by David P. Hall, whose vote it is thought offset it, from the fact that it was supposed that neither one was entitled to a vote, their families having moved to Plainfield. This was afterwards explained and their votes counted.

Somerville and Bound Brook Go Democratic.

The whole Democratic ticket was elected in Bridgewater township yesterday, except W. W. Dorland for overseer of the poor. He was swamped.

It was 3 this morning before all of the polling districts in the township were heard from. Wm. Logan, the Democratic nominee for freeholder, was elected over James B. Brown in spite of the fact that Logan would not pledge himself against race-tracks. H. V. Hodge was elected town clerk by fully 200 majority.

In Bound Brook a Democratic mayor and two councilmen were elected by large majorities.

The Water Company Wins.

The Democrats won every office at Westfield yesterday except that of town committeeman. The fight on that was [illegible] date, favored the project of leasing the supply from the Union Water company, Plainfield's monopoly. Theodore McGarrah, the Democratic nominee, preferred having the town own its plant.

The Anti-Race-Track Ticket Wins.

The citizens' anti-race track ticket won in Linden yesterday by a substantial majority. Every committeeman on the citizens' ticket was elected. The majority for the head of the ticket was 21. The Democratic vote for town committeeman was 92, Republican, 86, Citizens, 108.

THAT THREE-COLUMN SPEECH.

The Censor Scores Judge Ulrich on His Rhetorical Outburst.

An amusing production is the "speech" of ex-judge Ulrich on the school question, published in a recent issue of the Courier. That paper, which goes to the trouble of filling its columns with the ex-judge's dead matter just because John is its particular friend, calls it "a telling discussion of the legal aspects of the case". Here are some of the "telling" things which the judge tells out of his head. They are not told anywhere else:

"It (the school board) merely certifies to the common council, the fiscal body of the city, the amount to be raised for school purposes."

Anybody outside of the Courier office knows that judge Ulrich is dead wrong when he makes that assertion. The school board does not certify anything to the common council.

Judge Ulrich made another "telling" assertion when he said:

"The power to assess and levy taxes resides alone where he (the mayor) would have it, viz: in the common council."

Anybody who ever read a tax ordinance knows that this is not true. The common council tells the assessor how much to assess for city purposes, and the school board tells the assessor how much to assess for school taxes. The common council order the assessor by ordinance; the school board orders him by a simple notice.

The Courier says: "Here judge Ulrich read mayor Gilbert's letter to the council." The judge was much to cute for that. He did not read mayor Gilbert's letter. He knew better. Yet after the flourish which precedes the Courier's guileless remark that "Here judge Ulrich read mayor Gilbert's letter", it reads like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out.

The Censor ignorantly supposed that the people were the supreme power in our American States. Judge Ulrich enlightens us by saying that it is the Legislature which is supreme. That explains why the last Legislature authorized a lottery in violation of the constitution. As the judge says, the Legislature is supreme.

Boil down the three columns of fine print which the Courier calls judge Ulrich's speech, and there is one argument left. It is this:

(1) The legislature is the supreme power, and never makes any mistakes.

(2) The legislature gave the school board "absolute and sole authority and power of purchasing property for school purposes".

(3) Therefore any proposition to limit or supervise the exercise of such "absolute and sole authority and power" is wrong.

When a bright and interesting woman not unknown in Plainfield read the judge's rhetorical outburst that the legislature has "time and again thrown its fostering arms and protection around the school board", she quietly remarked: "How very touching! Just now, the same fostering arms and protection are thrown around the race-tracks and pool-rooms." If any bold bad man like mayor Gilbert shall ever dare to urge a change in the race-track laws, may we not expect some ex-judge to rise in his place, expatiate on the glory of the legislature as the supreme power in the State, compare himself with Daniel Webster, and denounce as an outrage on his liberties any attempt to disturb those "fostering arms"!

THE CENSOR.

A PRESS REPORTER AGAINST YALE'S PICKED ORATORS.

McCready Sykes Selected to Speak for Princeton in the Joint Debate To-Night on the Annexation of Canada.

McCready Sykes, for many years a reporter on THE PRESS, who is now taking the classical course at Princeton, will close for the affirmative in the debate on Wednesday between two orators each from Princeton and Yale, as to the question "That the peaceful annexation of Canada would be beneficial to the United States." A brilliant speech is looked for. His father was a famous member of the class of '59 at Princeton and an excellent orator. At the time of his death he occupied the pulpit of the Episcopal church at Scotch Plains.

Young Sykes graduated from the schools at Scotch Plains in 1884. He then began the study of law in the office of John A. Taylor, ex-corporation counsel of Brooklyn, and was admitted to the bar in New York in April, 1891.

The New York Herald says: "While studying law, however, he was also preparing himself for college, and in June, 1891, passed successfully the entrance examinations for Princeton. Not satisfied with this achievement, he applied himself during the summer months to the studies of the freshman year and in September passed all the examinations of the first college year and entered as a member of the sophomore class without conditions. Mr. Sykes still acts as counsel for the estate of Benjamin W. McCready, of New York.

"No sooner had he entered Princeton than a liberal share of the honors of his class were bestowed upon him. He served on the Bric-a-Brac committee, was soon elected as a member of the University Dramatic association and one of the editors of the Princeton Tiger. He was the winner last year of the Biddle prize for essay writing, also the sophomore essay prize in Clio Hall. This year he has been one of the most prominent writers for the Nassau Literary Magazine, having recently won their annual prize for the best story in a contest open to the whole college. He is a member also of the "Coffee House" Literary club. Mr. Sykes is recognized by all as one of Princeton's brightest men, possessing a personality which for platform effect has rarely been surpassed by any undergraduate speaker of the college. On the completion of his course at Princeton it is his intention to resume the practice of law in New York."

A Lamb Led to the Slaughter.

In its issue of March 2, the day after Mr. Honeyman's nomination for Mayor, THE PRESS said:

"It's a shame for the Republicans to try to make so good a man as A. V. D. Honeyman a scapegoat. They can't elect the best candidate they can name, and a good man should not be sacrificed. The graceful thing to do is to make no opposition to Mr. Saunders."

Yet the partisan bosses of the borough Republicans insisted on making Mr. Honeyman stand, against his own better judgment. Mr. Honeyman is a most estimable man, such as one he should not have been put up as a sacrifice. How could he win, when his chief allies were "the [illegible]", [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible]! [illegible]

THE BOARD'S LEGAL DEFENSE.

When Col. Tyler Told the Legislative Committee About the Plainfield School Question.

The following was supplied to THE PRESS early in the week with request for publication, but its appearance has been unavoidably deferred till now:

ADDRESS OF MASON W. TYLER BEFORE THE COMMITTEE OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS AT TRENTON, FEB. 28, 1893.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I appear before you as a citizen of Plainfield since 1879. I have twice been a member of the common council and served one term upon the board of Education, so that I profess to some familiarity with both of these departments of our city government. I came to Plainfield from Massachusetts, the State where educational institutions are particularly appreciated, and where, I think, they have attained their highest development. One of the inducements that led me to select Plainfield as my home and place of residence was the reputation of her public schools. I heard of the place as containing the best public schools in the State of New Jersey, and made up my mind that was the place that I wanted to identify myself with. Plainfield public schools stand to-day as a monument to the intelligence and wisdom and public spirit of Dr. Charles H. Stillman. He appreciated the value to a community, of a public school system, well-founded, conducted upon liberal principles and inspired by the activity and spirit of this age of rapid growth of and thirst for knowledge, and he devoted his life to building such an institution for the city of Plainfield. It is a venerable institution to-day; it antedates the birth of the city by twenty years. It has had a most honorable and useful career. Our best citizens have served upon the board; have given to it all the aid and encouragement within their power; the teachers and the pupils alike have always had an honorable pride in its history. Its commencement occasions, at the end of each year, are the fete days par excellence of the city. No other occasion draws such a crowd; no other gathering of our citizens excites such interest and enthusiasm. The school has made a record for itself among the best schools of the country. When Mr. Rockafellow's great and wealthy Chicago university wanted a head for ladies department, they selected the lady who, for more than ten years, presided over our public schools. And I noticed by a recent report that two of the graduates of Plainfield public schools in a competition in which they met the graduates of such schools as St. Pauls at Concord, N. H., Phillips Academy at Andover, Exeter Academy and Williston Seminary at Easthampton, Mass., had received awards from two different colleges, especially commending the preparation received by these young men at the hands of the Plainfield public schools above that of their competitors. The Good Book says, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Dr. Stillman could hardly hope to have the value of his work approved by greater or better results. And yet, after all these years of honor and success, a bill has been introduced into the Legislature which proposes radically to change the institution through which this success has been attained. In effect, the proposition is to put the board of education of the city of Plainfield under guardianship. Under the guardianship of the common council, it is not to be allowed to spend over a thousand dollars for school houses or lands upon which to erect school houses without the consent and approval of the common council. That is the measure that is before the Legislature now, but I fear that it is simply an entering wedge, and while to-day it is proposed to subordinate the board of education to the common council only in one particular, to-morrow if this succeeds, it will be stripped of all its discretionary powers in reference to that most vital of all questions, the amount and perhaps the expenditure of our money for educational purposes. Better wipe out the board of education altogether, and put the schools in the hands of the common council, than thus to deprive it of its powers of sustaining itself in carrying on its work. This scheme in dividing responsibility between two boards, is essentially vicious, an effective administration of any department wants to be under a single head or a board animated by but one purpose or object. The responsibility and the power must both be centralized. Such is the teachings of all our experiments in local self-government.

The boards in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, where the powers and responsibilities are divided between two parties, or two opposing factions, have always been the most corrupt and inefficient boards in that most corrupt city. The only way of accomplishing anything is through deals by one party or faction with the other. We do not want to introduce any such temptation into Plainfield city politics. On the other hand, the whole tendency of modern enterprise and success is in the direction of specialties. To attain the highest results in the profession or in manufactures, you have got to use and employ persons whose energies are all directed to one single point, or to the accomplishment of one single operation. That is the idea that underlies the board of education. It is a body of gentlemen selected especially to superintend the educational department of our city government. There is no politics in it; there ought to be none. The problem is to see that all the children of our community receive the most and the best education that their circumstances will permit, with the least expense to people that will thoroughly accomplish the work. It is a large problem, large enough to require the undivided attention of any body of men, and a body especially selected and charged with that responsibility, and endowed with the power to carry it out, is the only instrumentality, so far as we believe, that will accomplish adequate results.

We humbly ask that you permit the board of education of the city of Plainfield to continue the good work that it has heretofore accomplished.

Somerville Patterning After Plainfield.

Somerville is now equipped with the Gamewell Fire alarm system, just like Plainfield, and is rapidly getting abreast of the times. Seven boxes in different parts of the town are connected with the steam gong on the Somerville Woolen mills. The boxes are placed so that they cover pretty much of the town. Keys are conveniently placed so one can get them in case they are needed. The whole department are much pleased, the system having been put in by their efforts alone. The committee which has pushed the matter to a successful termination are Chief Joshua Doughty, John H. Wakely of the Central Hook and Ladder company, L. M. Coddington of the Engine company, Richard Hooks of the West End hose, and W. H. Cowley, jr., of Lincoln hose.

Base-Ball Prospects.

The success of base-ball in Plainfield the coming season is assured. A stock company, headed by C. A. Reed, George Hallock and T. Keller, will have charge, leasing the Crescent League grounds for the diamond. Stock is already being sold in shares of $25 each. [illegible] will probably be captain of the team, which Mr. Keller will select. Freddy Jones may be engaged, but not Willie Murphy. The stock affords good investment. [illegible] will probably lay out a bigger diamond.

END OF A BUSY LIFE.

Biographical Notes of a Veteran ex-Editor.

Thomas Hale, whose death at his home in this city was regretfully recorded a few days ago, was born in Chelsea, Vt., Jan. 18, 1817; admitted to the bar in 1844; went South for his health in 1845; spent seven years teaching in a French family in Louisiana; returned to Windsor, Vt., and at the earnest solicitation of some of his influential friends gave up the law and began his newspaper career, which he followed continuously thereafter up to the time of his retirement, with the exception of six years (1867-73), when he was engaged with the Continental Life Insurance company of Hartford, Conn. He spent about ten years editing the Vermont Journal, then went to Keene, N. H., bought one-half interest of the New Hampshire Sentinel, and remained connected with that till he went into the insurance business.

He was later connected with the Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel, founded the New England Observer at White River Junction, Vt., and afterwards removed it to Keene, N. H., and sold it to a stock company and was forced to retire from active life, owing to failure of his eyesight. He was married to Sarah Ballou Potter, in 1869; and leaves a widow and one son. Of his family of 12, only two brothers and one sister now remain, three brothers having died in two years. The survivors are the Hon. Matthew Hale of Albany, N. Y., the Rev. Safford Eddy Hale of Elizabethtown, N. Y., and Mrs. Wm. G. Herrick of Castleton, Vt.

The Young Democracy Also Denounce It.

The Young Men's Democratic society of Union county, at a meeting held last Thursday, unanimously adopted the following:

WHEREAS, The race-track acts passed by the Legislature at its present session, at the bidding of gamblers and law breakers, are a menace to the welfare of the State and were passed in defiance of the decent public sentiment of the people and after repeated denials of their constitutional right to be heard respecting the same; and whereas, our representative in the Legislature from the First Assembly District of this county voted not only for the passage of said bills, but also to refuse a hearing to the people, even when it was asked for by members of his own district; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we denounce and condemn the action of our said representative, both in voting for the passage of said bills and in voting to refuse a hearing to the people.

Second—That by said votes our said representative has forfeited the confidence and support of the Democracy of this city, and we call upon him to resign from the membership of this club.

Third—That we approve and commend the action of Senator Marsh and Assemblyman Lane, two members of this club, in working and voting against the passage of said race-track bills.

Fourth—That we call upon the Legislature for the good of both the State and the Democratic party forthwith to repeal said acts.

Fifth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Senator Marsh and Assemblymen Lane and Kelly and be published in the county papers.

Could n't Sue the Wife for the Husband's Debt.

Decision in the case of W. H. Cole against Mrs. VanHorn was rendered by justice Crosley last Friday. The case was brought to recover a debt on contract, $75. The debt was incurred, it was said, by defendant's husband, and a promissory agreement was entered into whereby the wife agreed to stand good for the amount. The judge's decision was as follows: "After careful consideration of the statutory law of New Jersey relating to the property of married women, and the evidence presented at the trial, and also the decision of the Supreme court of New Jersey, as stated in the case of Wilson against Herbert, I am compelled to render a decision of no cause of action."

A PUBLIC PALACE.

THE "MONUMENT" ERECTED TO WALDORF ASTOR BY ABNER BARTLETT.

Four and a-Half Millions of Money and Two and a-Half Years of Labor, Bring About the Consummation of a Hotel Unrivalled in the World.

A private view of the Waldorf Hotel at Fifth avenue and Thirty-third street, New York, which has just been completed at a cost of four and a-half millions of dollars by Abner Bartlett for William Waldorf Astor, was accorded a party of Plainfield people, Monday, under the chaperonage of Mrs. Abner Bartlett, jr., of this city. Of her guests were ex-councilman and Mrs. Arthur Gallup, the Misses Feytel, Mrs. Charles Schermerhorn, Mlle. Helene Sumbatoff a niece of Mrs. Bartlett, and John Jansen of Montclair. Upon arrival at the hotel, the party was met by the junior Bartlett and steward Hilliard, and two hours were spent under their guidance in an inspection of the magnificent building and its rare and gorgeous decorations and furnishings, from the spacious laundry in the eleventh story to the vast kitchens and wine cellars below ground.

Types cannot describe this hotel nor can even the most vivid imagination picture it. As Col. Cockerill, the celebrated New York newspaper man, said at a dinner given in honor of Mr. Bartlett last week, "It is a monument to the name". It is beyond in every way everything of the kind that has ever before been consummated. If it is equaled on the face of the globe, it is only in a small way by one or two European palaces—for even the "Prince of Wales's suite" in the Waldorf that cost $100,000 just to furnish, and for which $3,500 each was paid for the tapestry panels that cover the side walls, is only one of scores and scores of such suites that are contained in this palace THE PRESS is speaking of.

Seventy dollars a day, without meals, is the rate for some of these sets of three apartments, and they can be chosen to gratify any taste from the time of Mohammed or Marie-Antoinette to the present day. And these rooms are not only lavishly provided with the most costly furniture imaginable, but rare oil-paintings hang on the damask-covered walls, onyx pedestals grace the corners, and thousand-dollar Steinway pianos in cases of ivory, gold or natural wood, according to the style of the decoration of the suite, are a part of the furnishing.

Mr. Astor's private apartments and such public rooms on the ground floor as the men's cafe decorated in German Renaissance, the Turkish salon, the Marie-Antoinette reception room, the Garden court, the banquet hall, the ball room and the main entrance hall, are beyond any mortal's capacity and efficiency to delineate or describe. Mr. Astor's private dining room is an exact reproduction of the first John Jacob Astor's dining room, and contains as part of its furniture the table, chairs and chandelier from the latter. Yet all this the owner has never seen. Abner Bartlett, senior, to whose care the property of the Astors has been intrusted for over a score of years, has done it all. It has taken almost three years of incessant thought, wise planning, intense responsibility, excessive care and unremitting personal service. Mr. Bartlett has broken down under it and was unable to be present at the dinner given in honor of himself and his achievement the other day, and his wife sat by his bedside instead of at the right hand of George Boldt, the peer of all hotel men, who has leased the Waldorf at a yearly rental of $125,000. But Mr. Bartlett is better now, and the necklace of pearls and diamonds that was to have been presented to Mrs. Bartlett upon the occasion of the dinner, has been sent her.

The hotel's pay roll includes the names of 30 cooks and 400 men and women servants. One feature will illustrate how thoroughly complete is the service accorded the guests. On each of the ten floors is a cafe in the hands of its own steward and waiters, with its own silver, porcelain and linen marked with the floor's number, and from which everything from a cup of tea to an elaborate breakfast will be served.

Great Head.

From the Courier of March 6 one may learn some interesting facts concerning novel writing in general and the methods of F. Marion Crawford in particular.

Through its valuable columns one becomes aware of a new school of writing whose followers are known as the "Romanists". The Courier says: "The age is called the age of steam, but it is suggested that to call it the age of novels might not be inappropriate. Of the novelists there are two schools, the Idealists and the Romanists. Of these two Mr. Crawford belongs to the latter." The brilliant intellect of the Courier writer who is responsible for this piece of intelligence, and whose ideas have become slightly muddled by the fact that Mr. Crawford was born in Rome, surely cannot stop here in his passion for the creation of schools of writing. One may expect to hear soon, from that august sheet, of "Londonists", "Bostonists", "New Yorkists", or any other "ists" attached to the name of the place where the unfortunate Novel "ist" happened to be born. Now that the literary writer in the Courier has failed to mention the adherents of romance or the Realists, these schools will hide their diminished heads, and Mr. Howells will no longer have to stand up for the latter category in opposition to the former.

Let us by all means have more information of this interesting character from the Courier.

THE BUILDING BOOM.

It Never Lets Up in Plainfield, as Witness These Prospects.

The building prospects in Plainfield and Netherwood are unusually good this spring. Building will soon begin all along the Belvidere road in Netherwood, beginning with the unimproved ground opposite the Netherwood Hotel, where two houses will be erected by Alfred Cooks of Woodland avenue. On the high land beyond the residence of W. L. Brown two houses will be built by Aaron D. Thompson, who at present occupies the old Darling place. On the corner of Putnam avenue and Belvidere, Thomas B. VanBoskerck will soon break ground for the foundation of a handsome residence; while Frank C. Langhorne, the photographer, will build near Putnam avenue. In Plainfield, J. J. H. Pollion of Putnam avenue will build, this spring, on the block formerly belonging to the Ooderdonk estate, at Seventh street and Madison avenue. Mr. Ficken will be the architect, and it is expected that the residence will be a very handsome one. John Leal, of school fame, is about to build on Central avenue, for his prospective bride. These are but a few of the many improvements contemplated this year, but it will be sure from the above incomplete list that the growth of Plainfield as a city of fine residences continues.

SOME SARCASM.

Called Forth by the School Board's Remarkable Defense.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have read with no small interest, I assure you, nor can I tell you with how much satisfaction, the remarkable statement of the school board in Wednesday night's PRESS. How good it is in those learned gentlemen to take all the pains they have to pacify our minds so lately stirred up by the resolution of the mayor and common council and to give us such a high testimonial as they have to the superiority of Plainfield public schools, possessed of the most competent, devoted and enthusiastic teachers in the world! What assurance will it not give to parents to learn that this hard-working, self-sacrificing board so carefully supervises the order, discipline and instruction of the pupils, and the methods and competency of the teachers, especially in the classics and higher mathematics, that they can certify to all this!

How proud we ought to be that our candidates for admission to Harvard and Yale outrank in their preparatory studies those fitted for college in the best private classical schools! And how strange it is that with all these great advantages right at our door and free (save only the paltry bit of school tax we have to pay) more than fifty families of our people will still send their sons to private schools here or elsewhere—paying to one private Plainfield school alone in tuition bills more than $12,000 a year?

Again, I was not aware until I read it in the Board's report in THE PRESS, that such rigid economy had been used in the building of our school houses. I had ignorantly supposed, on the other hand, that some extravagance and waste had been permitted—one item of about $20,000 in the Irving school-house alone.

How glad I am to be corrected on this point, and not only I but the public made to know how egregiously we have been misled.

As to the architectural beauty of our Plainfield school-houses, their fine proportions and adaptations to the purposes for which they were erected, I need not say a word. Like the ancient structures of the Aztecs they speak for themselves.

Lastly, how consoling it is to the Democratic party of Plainfield to know that this high-toned, non-partisan, non-sectarian board "Has not been selected by 'ward bosses' or swayed by political reasons", nor "Men unfamiliar with the needs of the schools" nor untrained in their care, and thus far in the history of our city, ("Credat Judaeus Appella") "divorced from politics". NON EGO

Honor to an Octogenarian.

A surprise party to the number of forty-two persons took possession by storm of the home of Mrs. Sims, West Fourth street, last Thursday evening. They were respected friends from various parts of New Jersey, and came to celebrate the eighty-seventh birthday anniversary of Dr. H. G. Stephenson.

The hours were happily spent. Mr. Norbury and two other friends of Grace church choir sang to the gratification of all present some beautiful old glee songs. A good spirit of sociability existed throughout the evening, and all were happy. The viands were plentiful and excellent.

A Clergyman Shoots at Commuters.

Some of the members of the Westfield Presbyterian church are displeased with their pastor, the Rev. N. W. Cadwell. Last Sunday, while all the other ministers of the town were preaching against the race-track legislation, Mr. Cadwell was busy denouncing the playing of cards on railroad trains. He denounced the practice as a far greater evil than horse-racing. A majority of the male members of the church are New York business men, who commute on the trains and play whist morning and evening to while away the two hours' daily ride. Several threaten to give up their membership in the church.

To Cure Them of Fighting and Swearing.

The Harmony Guards is a club recently organized in James Babbitt's pool place on East Front street. The membership is about sixty, and the rules and regulations are posted on the wall. The club has a president, secretary, treasurer and executive committee. The rules provide that any member adjudged guilty of using profane language, or getting into a rumpus with a fellow member, shall be fined 25 cents, and in case the fine is not paid he is subjected to the "shingle practice", whatever that is. One member took the first degree last Thursday evening, and there are more to follow.

Coasters in Collision.

An exciting accident happened to a coasting party of young people Tuesday evening. They were coasting on Johnston's drive, and as their heavy bob with its load of merry-makers sped on its way towards Somerset street, it ran into Geo. Demler's wagon, wrecking one of the hind wheels and throwing John Schenck, who was driving, out on the road. The horse ran away, but was caught further down the street. No other damage was done to the wagon, but two of the party were severely hurt by the collision.

Plainfield's Assemblyman Always for the Right.

(Elizabeth Journal.)

The Hon. George Kyte, of Fanwood, puts prompt and permanent quietus to the rumor that he favors race-track legislation. It was not necessary for Mr. Kyte to deny such rumor to anyone who has known him personally or who has studied his record in the Legislature. But in some unwarranted and at present unknown way the idle story got started, and in the present righteously agitated condition of the public mind it seems to have spread with startling rapidity. The instant it came to Mr. Kyte he stamped it out. Mr. Kyte favors race-tracks just about as much as the Journal does, and every vote that he has ever cast on this question is evidence of that fact.

THE NAVAJO GODS.

A Mythology More Poetic Than That of the Greeks.

Strange Superstitions of This Savage Tribe—The Great Hole Through Which the Other World Is Visible—Tile and Sand Paintings.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

The coat of arms of the Indian gods is a writhing spiral. It is drawn with loose, flying ends to represent in its snaky coil the trail of the wind. Its symbolism as it grows into the whirlwind is the double helican line. This symbol with the Navajos and other tribes is impressed on the palmar aspect of the terminal joint of every human finger tip, the myth being that the wind god, when he breathed into man the breath of life, went in at the mouth and came out at the tips of the fingers, leaving on them its trail in those fine, waving lines, whose wizardry told in those tingling tips the rush of the current. It is the trail of the wind in the fingertips that produces that electric glow across the forehead when the ends of the fingers are drawn rapidly over it, as well as the kindred phenomena of spirit rapping, table turning, etc. The name of the coiled serpent among the Navajos is Niyol Bitkin, the trail of the wind. It is, therefore, a prime trail of the Indian to sleep with the wind, and wake with the wind, knowing that its current always takes the same course, and that, like the tides, when the wind goes out the current of emotion runs low and the death rate runs high, but that when the trail of the wind comes in it is felt clean to the fingertips in the electric excitement of winwossed ether with which the Leyden of every human being is charged. It is for the same reason, if you watch the phenomena carefully, that the eyeballs of a cat rise and fall with the coming in and going out of the tide.

The traditions of Olympus fade into immortal insignificance before the Indian mythology of the American continent. Its congress of nationalities grafted on an indigenous stock, each with its own peculiar idiosyncrasies of language, dialect, custom, habit, trait, tribal government, belief, etc., far surpasses in its polytheistic cult that of any other country in its beauty, its variety, its simplicity, and especially in its teachings. There is a splendid sententiousness beneath each myth that is full of the very finest practical wisdom. The Indians are natural linguists. They speak as nature speaks. They have grown up among her voices and the rushing eagle, the flowing water, the trail of the wind, the twilight of a blush, the leafy sheet of summer, the absent-minded reverie of the undertone all, all these natural objects are painted in their words. What wonder, then, that these words should take the very music of the winds and waters on their onomato poïa. Let me trouble the fastidious translator of Greek, Roman or Norse mythology to find in all the gleaming palimpsest of the oriental past such crystallized concentrations of beautiful thought as lurk in the occidental pantheon of the Indian gods. Concentration is the core of thought. It is in this capital trait that the occidental savage surpasses the oriental savant. It colors all his unwritten literature. Take the Navajo nation alone. Greece has given names to a spring of water. Has she anything that approaches the name of the Navajo for a spring (Cobinakis), the One-Eyed Water (or) the name for the storm (Ciyeicos, Deliyi, Neyani, Gallacl?) "'Tis I, Reared Within the Mountains," "Who art thou," or the name of the wind-god, Tsegainicini-bchogan; the House of Rock Crystal (or Tsenahale), the "breath-feather of the downy plume," above the fletching of the great plumed arrow, swallowed in the dance of the "katso yiscan" (or Acadall), the Leaf mountain, in which stands under the dewdrops (caco behogan), the House of Dew (or Kac-se-in-tee 'equ), Lone Juniper standing between cliffs.

The Navajo nation is still a race of wild, blanketed Indians. They will draw up their beautiful hand-woven blankets over their heads if you look at them, and peek at you archly sideways as they walk off. Sometimes they will make awful faces at you and spit at you. They are superstitious, and will not, as a general rule, allow you to take their pictures. They think their time has come when the curtain falls on the camera, and when they see the picture they walk all around it in a circle and declare, with frightened countenance as it follows them, that "the eyes move." They think it is their (chindo) devil-ghost. Some of the chiefs who have more sense, and therefore less superstition, will sit for a picture provided you pay them at least from five to ten dollars. They are not fools. They know that you have come a long distance, and that you want the picture so badly that you are willing to pay for it because you must. It is a very dangerous thing to try to cheat them or steal their picture from them by stealth or surprise against their will. The Indian despises meanness. No man with impunity can snap a kodak on a wild savage in his lair without incurring, to say the least, the possibility of arousing his anger. Always fire them money first, and let it be in bright silver or flashing trinkets.

In the same coy way they show you their sand pictures or portrayals of the gods, that are graven on the tiled floor of the medicine lodge. The Navajos, it is true, are a wild people, but not, after all, unprogressive. They have traveled that long road in the journey of human progress which separates the hunter from the herdsman. In the art of weaving they began with mats and have graduated into blankets. They have many curious specimens of handicraft in textile industry. They remain, however, to this day, in spite of their material progress, by means of which some of them have grown wealthy, the same superstitious pagans they were when Columbus first set foot on Watling's Island. This persistent paganism is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that they have had intercourse for three centuries with those most zealous of all proselyters, the Spaniards. But though the Pueblos have acquired at least a vague knowledge of the tenets of Christianity, the Navajos still remain unchanged in their beliefs. This indisposition to change their faith for that of the Christian is unspeakably exasperated by the want of Christianity, as exhibited too often in the lives of those set to teach at the frontier.

Among the cold snow-headed summits of the San Juan mountains, where the peaks spread their white veils forever to the sky, there lies with upturned eye a lake, bounded by [illegible] walls. At the center of this lake there is an island with a hole in it. It is an [illegible] [illegible] has been left by the water serving upon rushing up, about height perpendicular like the top of a ladder, out of this hole. The superstitious Navajos never approach near to it, but stand on high mountains all around it and view from afar their natal waters, and reverently chant their songs on solemn birthdays to the spot through which their ancestors emerged from out the fourth world.

The myth that lies below this huge rock hole is this:

On the fifth day after they came to this world the sun arose, climbed to the zenith and stopped. The day grew hot. They longed for the night to come, but the sun moved not. Then the wise coyote said: "The sun stops because he has not been paid for his work; he demands a human life for every day that he labors; he will not move again till somebody dies." At length a woman, the wife of a great chief, ceased to breathe and grew cold, and, while they all drew around in wonder, the sun was observed to move again, and he traveled down the sky, and went behind the mountains. And now he never stops and we know that every day some one must die.

They laid the dead body to rest among the rocks and all wondered where the living part had gone, and they searched every whither, but found her not, till one, braver than all the rest, ventured to look down into the hole through which she had fled from the lower world. There he saw her seated by the side of the river, combing her hair. Seeing that a shadow was thrown from above she looked up, saw the Indian peeping through the hole and invited him to come down, but he feared to do so. Then she said to him: "Hither have I come and hither all our people must come when they die." He returned and told what he had seen and heard. Soon he fell sick.

That night the moon stopped in the zenith as the sun had done during the day. The wise coyote told the people that the moon also demanded pay and would not move until it was given. He had scarcely spoken when the man who had seen the departed woman in the nether world died. Then the moon with a satisfied smile moved to the west. Thus it is that some one must die every night or the moon would not move across the sky. And because he who gazed upon the death met death so soon after, it is not well to look upon the body after it has been buried, and so with strange mortal dread no Navajo has ever dared to look down into the hole through which they came to this world.

Thus spoke Le-len-cha, the old singer of Navajo songs and teller of stories. This old Indian is upward of one hundred years of age, but he still remembers all the unwritten lore of his legendary race.

The Indian mythology has no great first cause. They begin their cosmogony with an already existing world in the dim twilight of time and go on with it to the thither shore of time. Zoolatry is at the bottom of it all. It climbs up into anthropomorphic forms and personifies its gods in living, breathing prophets in the religious dances. All the creatures in the first world are able to fly away on wings from the rising waters of the flood; in the third and fourth world they seek protection in the hollow of a great reed which grows higher as fast as the rising flood advances and bears the fugitives upward and out of danger. Arrived on this, the fifth world, men multiplied, races formed and wars arose. Tribes devoured each other over and over again. Then came the great hero god Nagenezgani and killed the demons. After this the true mortal Indian came upon the earth.

The Navajo has no faith in Monogenesis. He believes in special creations. The gods made men in the old times by a singular process. They took two ears of corn, one yellow and one white. From the yellow they made the female and from the white the male. To this day among the Navajos yellow corn is called female corn and white corn male corn. The gods laid these two yellow and white ears of corn on a large dish of pure turquoise and covered them with embroidered blankets of brilliant colors and with sacred buckskin taken from deer not slain but smothered. These ears were laid with their points toward the east. But before they were laid down they were handed round from one god to another, and each god turned them in a different direction. This is the reason why the Navajos even today never dwell long in one locality, but wander about restlessly from place to place.

As the ears of corn incubated the shape of man came upon them, and then it was that the wind god entered under the blankets and gave them life, through the mouth to the finger tips, as before described. The god of the white rock crystal gave them mind, and the goddess of the grasshoppers gave them voices. Then they rose, a dark cloud enveloped them, and they became the people of the dark cliff house (Tsedinkini), the oldest genus of the present Navajo nation. All Indian flesh is largely derived from corn, which comes out of the ground from which man sprang. Thus Genesis and Navajo paganism are after all one and the same sprout from the same primeval stock with the wind as God's breath at second hand.

Now, with man on his feet, for the great God that governs him. Who is he? In the early days, first man and first woman, the coyote and the wind-gods, and above all the sea monster appear as personifications of prime importance. But gradually these mythic mist-shapes all vanish before Chebanoai, the sun-god. He dwells in a beautiful mountain palace wrought of turquoise. The sun is a bright shield which he carries on his arm. He is more nearly the counterpart of Zeus than of Phœbus.

But though they naturally attribute most power to a god they spontaneously accord most pity to a goddess. It is in the heart of a woman that the deepest love and sympathy with suffering is supposed to dwell. It is on her face that the sweet, slow smile lingers down the sunset, and suffuses her benignant countenance with burning beauty. Estsanatlehi (the woman who rejuvenates) is the goddess to whom they pray. The beautiful goddess of the west has none of the low jealousy and petty spite of her sister Juno. She was found in the ancient myth at the foot of a rainbow. But the most reliable version is the following: Two divine women were created by the gods. One of them, Estsanatlehi, was made out of pure turquoise. The other, her sister, Yolkai-Estsan, out of a piece of white shell. She was called, as her name implies, the white shell woman. Estsanatlehi afterward became the wife of the sun god, to whom she owes her fertility, who is a polygamist, and who has another wife in the east in true savage style. But Estsanatlehi is his favorite spouse. Did our Aryan forefathers ever promulgate a more consistent myth? She had one child by the sun god—a rainstorm. Her sister had a child—a waterfall. These are the sacred brothers who figure in the myths and legends of so many races. MILLER HAGEMAN.

Value of a Weak Stomach.

The venerable ex-Judge James Campbell, who died recently, was a great favorite among young lawyers, to whom he never tired of giving advice and with whom he loved to sit and chat of the days when he was prominent among the young men at the Philadelphia bar. Not long ago several of the youthful disciples of Coke and Blackstone were gathered in the judge's office, and the conversation turned upon longevity. "To what do you attribute your long life?" asked one of the company of the octogenarian. "To a weak stomach," replied Mr. Campbell, with his usual kindly smile and a humorous twinkle. "A weak stomach?" "Yes, a weak stomach," reiterated the old gentleman. "You see, I realized forty years ago that I had it, and I started in to take care of it. As a result I established a regimen that has resulted beneficially to not only my stomach but my whole system, and here I am to-day over eighty. Take care of your stomachs, boys, and your stomachs will take care of you."—Philadelphia Record.

A Child's Version.

"'The wind bloweth where it listeth,'" read the Sunday school teacher to her class of little girls. "Do any of you know what 'listeth' means?" [illegible] [illegible] who didn't's teacher's attention said, eagerly: "I know!"

"You may tell us, then," said the teacher, encouragingly.

"I'm afraid," said the little girl, in a dubious tone, "that I can't make the rest of them understand, for they haven't any grandpas in the country, same as I have. But there's always a strip on the bottom of the front doors in the country, that grandpa told me was 'list,' and if you would just feel the wind blow in under that door once," said the child in a tone of conviction, addressing the rest of the class, "you'd know what that verse meant, in a minute!"—Youth's Companion.

A Brother's Way.

She—No, I cannot marry you.

He—But you have shown me so much regard.

"Yes, I respect you very much; I will be a sister to you. More I cannot be."

"But you will be a sister to me?"

"Yes, gladly."

"Then just bring me my stick and hat, and hold my overcoat for me—you might also brush it. Do not wear that horrid little apron any more. Be a very good girl and I may take you to the theater some night next week. Here is a kiss for you in the meantime."

"What do you mean, sir?"

"I am merely taking up my part of brother."—Yankee Blade.

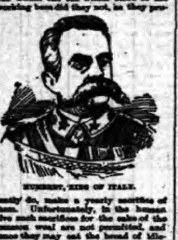
THE ITALIAN ARMY.

It Crushes the People by the Cost It Entails.

The Social Consequences of Conscription—A Huge Mass of Living Forces Lying Absolutely Idle—Democratic Sentiment.

The army is a sore point with the Italian people, whom it crushes by the cost it entails. The military recruiting takes away the wage earning population for three years—i. e., all men who have entered their twenty-first year. The social consequences of conscription are of various kinds. The military service leads to the desertion of the rural districts, modifying the customs of the people; on the other hand, the boor who enters the army acquires before leaving it some instruction and a little polish, says a writer in the Leisure Hour. Weighing one thing against another, the conscription is perhaps temporarily useful, and forms a powerful agent for the future formation of the Italian people by making those from different regions acquainted with one another, and also by diffusing the correct spoken tongue. Students and professional men can serve their time under certain favorable conditions in one year, but they can never have absolute exemption from military service, a fact which bears very hardly upon their scientific training, often temporarily unfitting them, and in any case frequently proving a serious delay and interruption in their course of study and commencement of earning. The day can surely not be far distant when compulsory military service, the cause of notable weakness to all European states, will be abolished. A time may come when the people will no longer bear these heavy, useless, unchristian and provocative burdens. When everything that can be said in favor of the system is said, it corresponds to several years of idleness on the part of half the nation, and in the best time of their lives, when they should be fitting themselves to become useful members of their country.

The huge military and administrative establishment has brought another evil upon Italy. This multitude of officers and employes acquire at the comparatively early age of fifty-two a right to a pension, and this represents a mass of living forces lying absolutely idle. Their life as public servants has robbed them of every idea of initiative and they reenter the national hive like to those bees of male sex who produce no honey, but would eat the whole store of the working bees did they not, as they prudently do, make a yearly sacrifice of them. Unfortunately, in the human hive such sacrifices for the sake of the common weal are not permitted, and hence they may eat the bread of idleness and drain the resources of their working fellows.



HUMBERT, KING OF ITALY.

There is one noticeable point in Italy, and that is that no trace remains of the ancient feudal system. This was destroyed by the republics and the foreign conquerors, who hoped by this means to bring about concord; and when for the republics was substituted the government of the indigenous signori, so far from restoring feudalism, this extinguished its last spark. In Italy, therefore, no aristocracy exists in the political sense of the word. There are princes, dukes, marchesi, counts in plenty, but more than half of these have no right to the titles they bear, many of which are self-imposed. There are proud and humble titled men, poor and rich, some of ancient lineage and some of new creation, but they all have this in common, that they have no importance outside the drawing-room. The country has been given over for so many years to the democracy that the democratic instincts run in the veins of all. The court understands this, and acts on it by being affable to all men of all ranks.

Guns for Our Navy.

Eighty-two high-power guns have been completed for the United States navy during the last year. The greatest progress has been made with the rapid-fire gun, of which twenty-eight four-inch and eleven five-inch have been completed since the last report. These guns, upon which little had been done up to last year, owing to the time required to perfect a suitable breech mechanism, are now rapidly approaching completion. The difficulties experienced in the manufacture of suitable metallic cartridge cases have now also been overcome. Of the six-inch guns, the manufacture of which was most advanced, one hundred and thirty-five have now been completed. Contracts have been made for forgings for six new six-inch guns of forty calibers in length, to be used with brass cartridge cases as rapid-fire guns, and to be supplied to the fastest cruisers.

French Men and Women.

From statistics covering the last thirty-two years it is computed that the average life of women in France has been 36 years and of men 33 years. During last year, however, the average rose to 40 years for both sexes.

PROTESTANT NUNS.

Work That Is Being Done by the Sisters of the Virgin Mary.

The Sisterhood of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a Protestant Episcopal order of nuns, has been granted letters of incorporation, according to the New York World. Their home is at No. 149 Second avenue—the House of the Holy Comforter. The incorporators are Rev. Dr. Maunsell Van Rensselaer, Frances Elizabeth Huister, Rebecca Violante Sperling, Elizabeth Wayne Plume and Josephine Constance Coleline Lawrence. The order was formerly called the Sisters of the Visitation.

"The home is now crowded," said Mother Francesca the other day. "Favoring Providence has enabled us, from time to time, to increase our usefulness, and we hope at an early day to have still another home established. We want to shelter boys and girls afflicted with incurable diseases, and are looking about for a site for such a home. We have some money set aside for the purpose, but will need a great deal more. We are not deterred by the absence of funds, for kind friends always turn up with donations when we are sorest pressed. The current expenses for this Home for Indigent Protestant Women afflicted incurably, is about five hundred dollars per month. At present we have temporarily abandoned the training class of young girls for our hospital service. We make no charge for admission or support of our patients, and there is no endowment to aid us. Our maintenance depends entirely on voluntary contributions.

"There is no home for little incurables now, and those whom we hope at an early day to shelter are now sent to the Island under those in charge of the workhouse. We are ambitious in the manner of relieving distress, in helping the poor and educating the young. We hope to have a home in the country, where to remove our patients and have the benefit of good air and a change of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] until they are [illegible] will get a thorough secular and religious education, together with proper training in domestic and useful duties."

The house of the sisters is a large, roomy, old-fashioned residence. It has a modest sign beside the door, but nothing else to distinguish it from neighboring houses. The interior is arranged with great care and thought as to its uses.

The dress of the nuns, strikingly like that of the Catholic orders, being black, with snow-white headdress, is looked on as a matter of fact now by a number of subscribers who have not embraced high-church tenets. The appointments of the reception room and the general apartments are marked by simplicity, and a ritualist would be pleased at the frequency of crucifixes and other religious emblems.

THE CRETAN LABYRINTH.

A Recent Discovery Gives a Key to an Ancient Puzzle.

The existence of a maze or labyrinth at Gnossus, Crete, is borne out by the legend of Theseus slaying the Minotaur in its heart by the help of Ariadne, who gave him a thread to pay out behind him as a clew in penetrating its recesses, and also by the fact that old coins of Crete exhibit the figure of a labyrinth. Some of the mazes of these coins are circular, others rectangular, but, according to the Philadelphia Record, the internal arrangement is the same in all, and consists of a roundabout path which leaves the traveler no choice of route or chance of error. Hence Richard Inwards has surmised that the device on the coins only shows the clew or key to the right path, and leaves out the wrong ones. By taking the maze as shown on the coins and treating the circular dividing walls as double, each containing a passage of the same width as the road shown on the coins, he obtains the genuine labyrinth, as seen in the accompanying figure, which is difficult to explore to the center even when seen at a glance on paper. The coin device is simply each alternate circle of this one. To give the key in brief—avoid every alternate circle or path. Such a labyrinth helps us to understand how useful the colored thread of Ariadne might be to Theseus, because on returning to any place he had passed he would find his own thread and be able to make a better start next time.

DIAGRAM OF THE LABYRINTH OF CRETE.

DUE TO A BULLFROG.

How a Sonorous Croak Awoke an Inventive Genius.

Dr. Cushman Heard It and Straightway Constructed "Talking Boxes" Which, He Claims, Antedated Prof. Bell's Telephone.

Dr. Sylvanus D. Cushman, of Chicago, claims to have antedated Bell in the discovery of the telephone. Dr. Cushman, says the Chicago Tribune, is one of the picturesque characters in the history of telephone litigation. An organization using his instrument known as the American Cushman Telephone company was enjoined from doing business at the suit of the American Bell Telephone company in 1888.

Dr. Cushman has for years claimed to be the original inventor of the telephone. He is a white-haired man, seventy-four years of age, and for forty-five of these has been connected with electrical work of various kinds. The telephone, he says, was a discovery in which a colony of Wisconsin bullfrogs played a prominent part. The story of his claims has been told before in the accounts of the litigations in which he has figured. The other day he retold them before a rough painting which hangs on the wall of his office. It shows a swampy landscape, stretching into the foreground of which is a telegraph line. The wire drops to the ground and enters a box which contains at one end two iron disks, separated and fitted on their inner surfaces with platinum points, which approach each other, but do not touch. From the disk not connected with the line wire a wire is run into the ground. Another wire runs from this disk to a horseshoe magnet, about which, supported on wooden uprights, is a piece of iron stretching across the poles of the magnet. The wire which is connected with the latter from the disk emerges again at the other side of the magnet and at that point is fastened to a ground wire. Near the box is a large bullfrog seated on a little knoll.

"In 1851 I was engaged in building a telegraph line out of Racine, Wis.," said the doctor. "We ran short of poles on reaching the stream shown in the picture. I wanted a lightning-arrester and rigged up the device shown in the picture. If the wire were struck by lightning the first ground wire, I believed, would carry to the earth most of the current and the second one would provide a passage for any that was left. The use of the magnet and the bar over it was to tell me whether the wire had been struck by lightning. The device was inclosed in a glass box and buried under leaves.

"In a few days I was informed that a peculiar crackling noise was heard at the other end of the wire at Racine. I visited the box and heard a slight noise. I adjusted the metal piece over the magnets finer, and immediately heard the croaking of frogs issue from the box. The telephone had whispered its secret.

"I began to develop it at once. Boxes were made and placed one above the other and one used for listening and the other for talking. The boxes were known as talking boxes. People used them to order their groceries by, and we carried on conversations over a distance of several miles. The volume of sound in the original box was as great as that developed in the modern telephone and the latter instrument does not differ in the least from my original discovery. All of its principles are embodied in the Bell instrument."

Dr. Cushman says after the injunction tying up the American Cushman Telephone company was issued, it was found that the court's edict did not stop the manufacture of the instrument which he had elaborated out of the glass box which gave out the tidings that sound could be transmitted over a wire. He went south and a telephone exchange was fitted with his instruments at a point in Arkansas.

"We have recently fitted up another exchange in this state," said he, "and have besides gone on selling the instruments and many are in use. A broad patent is now pending which will protect us."

A Pest of Squirrels.

Squirrels are plentiful and destructive in some parts of the state of Washington. Linden county paid out forty thousand dollars in bounties on squirrel scalps last year, yet but little good effect was produced. It is proposed to tax all the lands in the county to raise funds to fight the pest and so make railroads and nonresident owners help in the work.

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

RICHARD W. THOMPSON.

The Chairman of the American Panama Canal Committee.

The name of Col. Richard W. Thompson, of Terre Haute, Ind., the "Ancient Mariner of the Wabash," is much in the mouths of men nowadays, owing to his alleged connection with the Panama canal scandal. But "Uncle Dick" Thompson was a noted man long before the Panama canal was thought of. He is eighty-four years old, and a man who received the compliment he did last June at Minneapolis ought to live to be one hundred at the least. The national republican convention discovered one day that it was "Uncle Dick's" birthday, and straightway suspended business. Chauncey M. Depew made a speech in his honor, and the "Ancient Mariner" was exhibited to the admiring delegates. Richard W. Thompson was born in June, 1809, in Culpeper county, Va. Both his grandfathers fought in the war for independence. His stepmother was Mildred Ball, a great-niece of George Washington. In 1831 young Thompson went to Indiana, taught school, was clerk in a dry goods store, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1834. That year he was elected to the Indiana house of representatives. He was reelected in 1836, and at the next election became state senator. In 1840 he was one of Harrison's electors, and the reputation he gained on the stump in the stormy campaign of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," resulted in his election to congress in 1841. He held his own in congress, and it was a day of big men, too. He declined renomination, and in 1843 took up residence in Terre Haute and began the practice of law. In 1847 he was again elected to congress by the whigs over John A. Wright, afterwards governor of Indiana. In 1849 President Taylor appointed him minister to Austria, and later President Fillmore appointed him general solicitor of the land office. He declined both positions. President Lincoln appointed him judge of court of claims at Washington. He declined because his law practice was too large to leave. Lincoln also offered him the position of examiner of railroads. Thompson declined. When the war broke out he supported the union and with "War Governor" Morton was one of the conspicuous figures in Indiana during the exciting time. A recruiting camp was established near Terre Haute, Thompson was made commander of the post, and it was named "Camp Dick Thompson." He raised and drilled many regiments and sent them to the front. He was also provost marshal of the district. In 1867 he was appointed judge of the Eighteenth judicial district of Indiana. He also served a term as collector of internal revenue for the Terre Haute district and held other offices. In 1877 President Hayes made him secretary of the navy, and this is why he is called the "Ancient Mariner of the Wabash." He retired in 1881—before his full four years as secretary were up—to become chairman of the American committee of the Panama Canal company at a salary of $25,000 a year. Col. Thompson has also made his mark as an author, having published in 1887 "The Papacy and the Civil Power," and in 1888 "History of Protective Tariff Laws." Mrs. Thompson, who was Miss Harriet E. Gardiner, of Columbus, O., before marriage, died March 25, 1888. Five children are living.

Antipathies.

Mrs. Horace Greeley had a strong antipathy to kid gloves, and never wore them upon any occasion. One day she met Margaret Fuller on the street, and instead of greeting her with any usual salutation, she touched Margaret's hand with a shudder, exclaiming: "Skin of a beast! Skin of a beast!"

"Why, what do you mean?" asked Margaret, in surprise. "What do you wear?"

"Silk," returned Mrs. Greeley; "silk always!" Margaret touched her hand and shuddered, saying: "Entrails of a worm! Entrails of a worm!"—Mary Lanning, in Wide Awake.

A NEW GODDESS.

She Sits Enthroned on the Gay Parisian Stage.

Is Nearly Six Feet Tall, Has Red Hair and Earns More Money Than Bernhardt—Her Songs and Her Way of Singing.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

Mlle. Yvette Guilbert (this last name is pronounced as if spelled Gilbare), the young woman whose success in Parisian concert halls has been so great that Russia is longing for her at Sarah Bernhardt prices, who will be one of the attractions at the coming world's fair in Chicago if a slight difficulty,—a matter of one hundred thousand francs, or twenty thousand dollars, is gotten over—is an altogether original woman.

To begin with, not every young woman who has passed a few years behind bargain counters is capable of making a success which turns her in an average of five hundred dollars a day, even upon a music-hall stage; much less is it common to find a young lady capable both of charming the average audience of a concert hall and appearing to advantage in the very best salons of a great capital like Paris.

Not only does this songstress turn the heads of the average Parisian who sees her before the footlights, but her spare afternoons are always engaged, way in advance, by the givers of the present Parisian fad the "five o'clock." Just what it is that so enchants one with Yvette Guilbert it is very difficult to say, especially before having seen one of her imitations. After having done so it becomes more apparent. She sings and she sings, and her songs are very risky; it is not there, for others sing even better than she does, and more risky songs still, and often in the pieces that are least risky she scores her best hits. Giving up then as a hopelessly impossible task the effort to convey in a concise statement the idea of the something she possesses that makes her worth some fifty times as much as any other performer like her in Paris: which lifts her from the rut, and puts an ordinary concert-hall singer on the level of a great star, at least financially—like Carmencita in New York—it may be excusable to attempt to trace a faint resemblance of the something referred to, in the mind's eye, by saying that Yvette Guilbert's conception of the proper rendering of a popular song—for money—is to carry out a principle once outlined by Mr. Hoyt, of Hoyt and Thomas.

"It wouldn't be a bit funny," said this author of so many rollicking comedies, "if a street Arab or a clown came on the stage and turned flip-flaps. It would be only what might be expected; but have a staid banker, whose face expresses a thousand and one worries he is a prey to, turn a somersault in the midst of a solemn scene; that takes by storm."

Mr. Hoyt's illustration may not be altogether happy, but the idea fits like one of Abraham Lincoln's stories. Mlle. Guilbert (who, by the way, does not go into any ecstasies over her possible trip to America, merely remarking that if the United States will give her more for a glimpse of her than will Russia, she will be happy to make a tour), in trying to tell the writer of these lines her idea of the wherefore of her wonderful success could only say that she believes it to be a matter of intelligence pure and simple.

She received me in her pretty apartments in the Rue Portalis, just back of the Church of Saint Augustine, and postponed a guitar lesson to try to answer some of my questions. After a few commonplaces in which the lady took the part of interviewer, being particularly desirous to know how Paulus had succeeded in America, she spoke of her intention of singing in English as well as in French. And to see if I thought her wise enough in this branch to warrant her making the attempt, we talked English for a few moments—till it came to explaining the conception of her representations—for one can always understand better in a foreign language than he can express himself in it.

Miss Guilbert—to Anglicise her—began her stage career four years ago at the Varietes, where she appeared in comedy parts with Judic Rejane. After two years of this, with a salary of three hundred francs (or sixty dollars per month), she went by chance one afternoon to a cafe concert, where the quality of the performances struck her so forcibly that she determined at once that what Parisians needed was a more intelligent representation of the very songs they were in the habit of hearing. Her highest stage training at the Varietes may have stood her in good stead here, for though I tried to force her into some acknowledgment that her peculiarities, if they are not really arts, came to her by accident, something as Loie Fuller's serpentine dance idea came to the young woman who was such an attraction at the Folly's Bergeres, she would not be shaken from her claim of being under the control of an intelligent inspiration when at her very first appearance she took Paris by storm.

To put it very literally, Miss Guilbert's idea was that the risky songs of the concert singers that she had seen lost their delicate naughtiness, and became simply only a few removes from obscene in the mouths of coarse, gesticulating, short-skirted, vulgar women. It should be her function to deliver just as pointed verses, but she would give them a value, for she would sing them as refined society women would—in regulation costume—without any gestures, and in short, as if she had not the slightest idea that there might be anything equivocal in the words uttered. Strange as it may seem to those who think that in Paris of all places it is only the songs in which there is double meaning that have a go, it is the innocent Jennie Lee sort of effects that sometimes calls forth the most prolonged bursts of applause, and—another anomaly—it is not alone the guiltless effusions which are permitted at the "five o'clocks."

It may be said: "Oh! That is Paris society!" but there is no more difficult and strict society than the Parisian. A well known young American all but had to meet the brother of a Parisian young lady the other day in a duel for an affront. And what was the affront? The young American had seated himself beside the young girl on a lounge in a small house where both were guests at a party.

But for her singing. We are at the Concert Parisien, which is in the Rue Faubourg st. Denis. The place is packed with people who endure the other performers for what is to come—Yvette Guilbert. At last a very tall young woman walks to the footlights amid a storm of applause, which suddenly dies away as the music ceases. Her first song is "Fiacre," or "Maidens." But a success, be it in whatever line, is worth always a word. Mlle. Guilbert is at least five feet, eight and three-quarter inches in height, and she has red hair. As it is said that it is a work of art, there can be no offense on the direct English of the word 'Titianesque.' Her eyes are not quite the deep absolutely Irish black of the ex-champion pugilist, John L. Sullivan, not quite as light as Sarah Bernhardt's, they are very peculiar eyes, once seen, close to, one never will forget them. It would be a little difficult to call her beautiful, but mademoiselle's charms are not altogether those of face or figure. And everybody says she can't sing. But how delicious, how indescribably sympathetic is her strong, full voice as it pours out the words of the song which no English can translate.

JE NE SAIS PAS POURQUOI
I DO NOT KNOW WHY

The applause is long and loud when the conclusion is reached, and the singer responds with a far less innocent satire on a popular play still running, entitled, "Celles qu, on Respecte," or "Those Ladies You Respect." If there is any cunning by which dissolute women of the higher classes in Paris deceive their husbands not mentioned in the song entitled "Celles qu, on Respecte," it is an oversight; a modern Don Juan could there learn points. But the singer has finished again. And again and again the hand clappings, and the stamping of feet, and the bravos resound—even outside the building. What will it be this time? "Oh, something altogether pure and innocent," remarks a Frenchman beside us; "she will show you that she does not depend on naughtiness alone." And, no more she does, for she next delights the audience with "Je Ne Sais Pas Pourquoi," or "I Do Not Know Why."

This charming little love song is followed by "Le Fiacre," a typical Parisian "cafe chantant" piece, inane, incomprehensible. What can be said about it bad enough? But this singer, with voice and expression, renders it to thunders of applause, and, for a conclusion, puts aside her evening costume to sing "Miss Valerie," which is a take-off of a very common personage at Paris—the English governess. An American is generally liked by the French, but an Englishman is cordially detested everywhere in France, and the reception of the very telling hit on English governesses in general, or, rather, as a Frenchman wants to believe they are, is a most enthusiastic one. The singer comes back on the stage and answers to the wild demonstration and bows her thanks again and again; then she makes a desperate effort and gets back of the wings. Once more she is called out; generous as she has been, the audience insists. Once more she bows her thanks to the throng and tries again to retire.

After the lowest of bows she says: "Je ne puis plus." That settles it. The hearers will come another night.

Refusing the Yolk.

That fine art which enables one to say "no" so that the person refused cheerfully acquiesces is illustrated by a story told in The Gossip of the Century.

Levassor, who was the best French representative of the amusing singing-speaking style of entertainment, was always ready to help any work of charity. On one occasion he performed for a charitable society, and the receipts were so large that the manager determined to compensate him for his services. At the conclusion of the entertainment, therefore, the parish priest brought Levassor a basket of moss on which lay a large egg made of sugar.

The weight of the egg revealed to the artist the delicately disguised intention of the donors to offer him a fee. Breaking the egg, he said: "I am very fond of eggs, but I never eat the yolk. Keep it to feed the poor," and he returned the roll of napoleons inclosed in it.—Youth's Companion.

It was the morning of Mr. McIlwat's birthday. As he came down to breakfast Mrs. McIlwat waylaid him in the family sitting-room, led him to the door of a closet, opened it, and pointed to two gorgeous garments hanging from the hooks inside.

"I made them myself, Billiger," she said, "as a little surprise for you. One of them is a dressing-gown and the other is a nightshirt. How do you like them?"

"They are simply magnificent, Lobelia," replied Mr. McIlwat, gazing at them in mingled admiration and awe. "Made them yourself, did you?"

"Every stitch. I am glad you like them, Billiger."

"Like them?" he echoed. "They overwhelm me. Would you mind telling me, Lobelia, which—hum—which is the dressing-gown and which is the nightshirt?"—Chicago Tribune.

MOLASSES IN WINTER.

A Synonym for Rapid Transit in New York.

Mr. Tompkins, the Harlem Barber, Expresses His Honest Opinion and Manages to Lose Most of His Customers.

[Special New York Letter.]

Rapid transit reform is a question that interests every resident of New York; but nobody can have more pronounced views on the subject than Harry Tompkins, the silver-tongued Harlem barber. There were a number of candidates present in his tonsorial parlor, but, like Mr. Sanford, of Long Island city, I was in the chair, and the rest were "Glencoeites," so to speak. They were emphatically not in it.

"If New York don't get rapid transit pretty soon the live men of New York might as well make an assignment and move over to New Jersey," remarked

RUNNING FOR A CAR.

Tompkins, as he tucked the cloth around my neck preparatory to administering a shave.

"But, Mr. Tompkins, have we not got rapid transit already?" I asked.

He stepped backwards, and gave me a look that will haunt me in my grave. Then he sneered audibly, and, while he was stropping his razor vigorously, he said:

"Yes, I know it is called 'rapid transit.' There is also a liquid at the New York boarding houses called tea that is too weak to run out of the pot."

An East side dude, whose mother keeps a boarding house on Madison avenue, and who was waiting to have his tresses curled, got up and sailed out with his head thrown back and his tail feathers spread, so to speak.

"Yes," continued Tompkins, "it is called 'rapid transit,' but there are also stores where they sell genuine nutmegs made of bass wood, where pure raspberry jam contains everything except raspberries, where the genuine coffee contains more peas than pepper, and the sugar has got sand enough in it to be used for building material."

A bald-headed grocer who does business near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, and was going to have his moustache dyed, stalked out, saying something about punching somebody's head. "I don't mind it," said Tompkins, getting in some fine touches with the lather brush. "I'll have my say about this so-called rapid transit if I don't have any customers but myself. As I was saying, it is called 'rapid transit,' but we have also a genuine dollar that contains only sixty-four cents worth of silver. Genuine Turkish rugs are made in New York by genuine Turks from Ireland—and we have the same brand of genuine rapid transit. Bah!"

"But you certainly must concede that the elevated trains are a great convenience compared—"

"Compared to a paralyzed clam," he interrupted, stopping my flow of eloquence with his lather brush. "As I was going to say when I was stopped," he continued, "our so-called rapid transit is sapping the life blood of this city. A photographer can now take a picture quicker than a mule can kick, and, thanks to modern science, eleven-year-old whisky can be manufactured inside of five days."

A Harlem liquor-dealer gave Tompkins a look that would have done credit to Richard III. himself, and withdrew from the meeting, closing the door with emphasis.

"A photographer can now take a picture quicker than a mule can kick," repeated Tompkins, "but the elevated trains are slower than they were ten years ago, and this is New York, and late in the afternoon of the nineteenth century."

"What are your principal objections to our rapid transit?" I asked.

"I maintain," he said, with forced calmness, "that the elevated railroad system is accomplishing the physical and financial ruin of the average New Yorker; and I can prove it to the satisfaction of any man who is not too far gone with paresis," and he gave me a significant glance, as he held up a hair and severed it with a flourish of his glittering blade.

"Would you mind giving me your views?" I asked.

"In the first place, I will demonstrate that we are being ruined physically by this fraud of a corporation. The New Yorker who lives in the upper part of the city, and does business downtown, must spend about two hours a day on the elevated cars. To make up for lost time he has to bolt his food in an unmasticated condition. His manner of eating breakfast is far more like feeding a patent corn sheller. According to medical authority, to be healthy we must eat slowly, and rest awhile afterwards. This is out of the question with the business man, two hours of whose time is spent in enforced idleness on the cars every day. The result is dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach and other kindred diseases. He has to swallow his coffee while it is scalding hot, which is the real cause of cancer of the stomach, but that is nothing compared to the other diseases for which our 'rapid transit' is responsible," and he paused to catch his breath.

"What other diseases?" I asked, incredulously.

"You certainly do not ride much on the elevated cars, or you would have found out in the bitter school of experience," said Tompkins, with a pitying smile, as he rubbed my cheek. "For some mysterious reason, when the weather is cold enough to wear fur-lined muffs the cars are colder than a church sociable."

The pastor of the Harlem Church of the [illegible], who needed a shave badly, looked very hard at Mr. Tompkins, who continued:

"But when the thermometer indicates that it is ten degrees hotter than [illegible] the cars are so thoroughly warmed up you almost wish you were there already."

The clergyman withdrew quietly from the caucus, closing the door softly.

"If you don't let up, Tompkins, you will not have any customers left," I remarked.

"I don't give a cent. I was awake all night with the neuralgia I got on those accursed cars, and am suffering the pangs of perdition. As I was saying, they have lovely facilities for pneumonia, which carries away the best of us. A Spanish proverb reads:

"'If cold winds reach you through a hole,
Go make your will and mind your soul.'

"On the elevated cars the cold winds reach you through two holes, one at each end of the car, at every station, and go through you like a darning needle. Of course, the tough citizen manages to pull through the winter, but he has a sore throat, and coughs, and coughs, and coughs until he feels like a live porcupine turned inside out, or as if he had swallowed a hedgehog.

"The general manager of the company, Col. Hain, may not know it, but he is shoving us all into our tombs, and making us pay our own traveling expenses. No wonder you read so many patent medicine advertisements on the elevated trains and in the cars. I believe the company gets a 'commish' from the druggist, doctors and undertakers."

Here the barber coughed, and asked me if I didn't think he had made out his case as far as implicating the elevated railroad company with the physical ruin of the modern New Yorker was concerned.

I may mention that the working majority was still further reduced by the secession of a druggist and an elevated railroad official, and an undertaker.

"Where does the financial ruin come in?" I asked.

"That's too self-evident for serious discussion. No less than 500,000 people ride on these cars every day. If we had real rapid transit a passenger would save probably an hour a day. As time is money just think what this would amount to in a year. Again," said the artist, as if clinching the argument, "business men are so worried by the delay that they are not in a condition to transact business properly, particularly if they are jammed together like sardines, and the losses they sustain are simply incalculable.

"Who can calculate the value of time?" asked Tompkins, in a melodramatic tone of voice. "Do you remember that line from Dante: 'Think that to-day shall never dawn again?' I know that to-morrow is another day that has not been touched yet. Some people say that there is going to be plenty of eternity in the future, so we need not worry about time; but are we live New Yorkers to indulge in such dolce far niente nonsense? Not much. We must realize that time slides past faster than a toboggan. When you ride on Third avenue in particular you cannot shake off the impression that you are going to a funeral. One would imagine that eternity was made for no other purpose than to give the elevated trains a chance to get to city hall."

"Is that all of your indictment against the present system?"

"No, I could make a dozen more points in favor of real rapid transit," added Mr. Tompkins, as he jerked away the tablecloth, and shouted "next."

But there was no "next." We were alone; so, as there was no quorum present, it was moved and seconded and carried unanimously that we adjourn to a banquet hall where we moistened our swear-offs to the toast:

"Here is to real rapid transit for New York, and as suddenly as possible."

A VANISHING GUN.

Unique Armament of Our New Coast Defense Vessel.

"This little vessel may work an era in naval warfare," said an expert at Sandy Hook the other day when Constructor Nixon submitted a design for a harbor defense vessel carrying four 8-inch guns mounted on disappearing carriages. The efficiency of the disappearing gun carriage for fortification had been settled beyond doubt by the firing of seventy-eight rounds from a 10-inch gun, weighing thirty tons. The work of the board, therefore, was principally to consider the design of a vessel submitted by the Cramp Shipbuilding company, through their superintendent, Naval Constructor Lewis Nixon. The vessel in question is one that will carry four 8-inch guns on the small displacement of 1,550 tons. She will have a heavy protective deck and an all-round belt of 5-inch nickel steel armor. When in action the proposed vessel will present little or no target to the guns of the enemy, her battery being entirely below the water line. The guns and crew will be entirely protected, the former being exposed only long enough to fire and retire below deck to their loading position. An armored top or cover protects the gunners from small arm and rapid fire projectiles. When the gun is raised into the firing position this cover is thrown back, assuming its original position when the weapon is again lowered. Even to the eye of the uninitiated it would seem as though this vessel will solve the problem of harbor defense, for it seems impossible to construct a better vessel, having the requisite speed, together with light draft and guns that can be loaded and fired twice a minute if necessary. In disappearing carriages, such as the one tested, all the operations of loading, etc., are performed when the gun and all its gear are absolutely protected. The gun is exposed only at the moment of firing, but none of the gunners are exposed at all. All the manipulations of the gun are performed in an armored sunken tower or in the hold of the vessel below the water line. In the vessel proposed the armor which protects the vessel proper also protects the guns. In all other armored vessels special turrets or barbettes must be built for the guns themselves. The amount of money represented by the armor necessary to protect four 8-inch guns is, it is said, about [illegible], and any shot from the gun the turret will [illegible]

HAND WRESTLING.

A Skillful Exercise That Is Not at All Dangerous.

The Sport and Its Rules Explained in Detail—Two Pictures Illustrating Some of the Positions to Be Assumed.

With those persons who do not care to try the more intricate forms of wrestling hand wrestling has always been a favorite. It affords, says the New York Sun, an excellent opportunity for healthy exercise and is not dangerous. The first cut shows the position to be taken by the wrestlers preparatory to the start off. At the word "go" each man endeavors to force his opponent to lose his balance so as to be obliged to move one of his feet. This constitutes a throw.

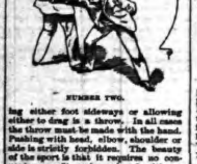
A good throw, if quickly done, is to push your opponent's hand against his side, and then push hard and quick and make him lift or slide his forward foot. To do this well it is necessary to stoop a little. Another way is to turn about quickly toward your left side, if using your right, raise your opponent's hand so that it is over your right shoulder; then lean forward and pull hard. This can be used by a short man better than by one of larger size.

The second cut shows a very ordinary throw. The opponent's arm is faced backward and drawn out to the side directly away from him, so as to make him lose his balance. Still another throw can be made by pulling backward and to one side, so that your hand comes directly in front of the body; then push it away outwardly.

The best position to take is the one shown in the first cut. The forward foot is placed against that of your antagonist and the rear foot about thirty inches removed from and at right angles to the forward foot. Both knees should be bent.

The rules of hand wrestling are as follows: The man moving his foot or touching his hand or any part of his body to the floor, so as to get a better base, is thrown. Turning on one toe, so as to reach further, is allowed. Moving either foot sideways or allowing either to drag is a throw. In all cases the throw must be made with the hand. Pushing with head, elbow, shoulder or side is strictly forbidden. The beauty of the sport is that it requires no conveniences. It can be enjoyed with an ordinary street dress on, and a mat is not required.



NUMBER TWO.

The Slaughter of Birds.

The wearing of birds' feathers on female headgear is so common that but few, probably, realize the immense slaughter of the bird tribes which it necessitates for meeting the demands of fashion. An idea of the great extent of this destruction may be derived from the fact that one dealer in London is said to have received in a single consignment 32,000 dead humming birds, 80,000 aquatic birds and 800,000 pairs of wings, which latter are often wrenched off during life, leaving the mangled birds to die slowly of wounds and starvation. The above was only one shipment to the city of London, and when the other great capitals of Europe, as well as those in the two Americas, are taken into account it becomes apparent that the destruction of bird life, simply to gratify human vanity, is enormous. Such a barbarous custom is discreditable to civilization.

Cosmopolitan Sure Enough.

A southern California newspaper rounds out a birth notice in its columns as follows: "The child was the first Dutch infant born in the San Luis valley. The notice is written by a Dane, put in type by a Mormon, the proof is read by an American, the type placed in the 'form' by a German and the paper is printed by a Mexican. This affords an interesting notion of the composite character of the great American people of the far southwest."

Colorado's Coal.

Colorado is coming to rank high as a coal-producing state, and it is probable that her coal resources will eventually prove a more important and valuable factor in the progress and prosperity of the state than her famous silver wealth. The coal output last year was 3,770,000 tons, worth over $15,000,000, and the number of miners now employed in the coal mines throughout the state exceeds 6,000.

Bilious Fever Bacteria.

A well-known French physician asserts that the bilious fever so characteristic of tropical countries is due to a special bacterium, which, though motionless itself, is accompanied by numberless moving spores.

LAMAR'S SUCCESSOR.

The Democratic Supreme Court Justice Selected by Mr. Harrison.

Howell Edmunds Jackson, of Nashville, Tenn., whom President Harrison has nominated to succeed the late Judge Lamar on the bench of the United States supreme court, is in his sixty-second year. He was born at Paris, Tenn., April 8, 1832.

He lived at Jackson, Tenn., in his youth and was graduated from the East Tennessee college at the age of sixteen. He spent two years at the University of Virginia, and when twenty-four years old was graduated from the Lebanon law school. Then he began to practice law. Three years later he moved his law library to Memphis. In 1876 he went back to Jackson to live and practice law.

He served two terms by appointment upon the supreme court bench of his state and was once defeated in a nominating convention for the same position. In 1880 he was elected to the state house of representatives on a state credit platform. His associates elected him to the United States senate as a democrat. He took his seat March 4, 1881. He served with Benjamin Harrison in the senate, and the friendship formed between the two men at that time was never broken.

President Cleveland appointed him United States circuit judge in the Tennessee and Ohio circuit, March 2, 1887. Mr. Cleveland said last week that he regarded Judge Jackson's promotion as a splendid appointment.

"I have a high regard for Judge Jackson," said the president-elect. "He was in the senate when I appointed him to the bench, and he is in every way qualified for the position to which he has been nominated."

Judge Jackson's present position as circuit judge insured him $6,000 a year for life. He has said that he was not consulted about his promotion, but that, of course, he would resign his seat on the circuit bench for one on the bench of the supreme court.

He is of medium height and stout. His eyes are a clear blue-gray. His face is always smooth-shaven, with the exception of a gray imperial, known in Tennessee as a "chin whisker." In the senate he was a member of the judiciary committee, and he has always been considered a good lawyer and an able judge. He is very studious, quiet and unassuming, and has won friends by his gentleness of manner.

CARDINAL VANUTELLI.

Indications Are That He Will Be Pope Leo's Successor.

"Vanutelli goes to Bologna a cardinal and will return a pope." These are the significant words Pope Leo XIII. is reported to have uttered in speaking of Cardinal Serafino Vanutelli, whom he recently nominated to be archbishop of Bologna. The pope's reported statement is practically verified by his letter to the people of Bologna in which he declares that in nominating Vanutelli to be archbishop he obeyed divine inspiration. Eminent Catholics regard the pope's utterance as equivalent to the designation of Vanutelli as his successor as head of the Roman Catholic church, but the sacred college will, of course, choose a new pope by ballot when the present pontiff dies.

Serafino Vanutelli is a man of fine physique, great magnetism and unusual erudition. He has for some time been prominently mentioned in connection with the papal succession and is supported by an influential ecclesiastical party, with which, it is believed, Pope Leo is in sympathy. By sending Vanutelli to Bologna he is removed from the intrigues of Rome, and his friends will have a free hold to labor in his behalf. Vanutelli is an Italian and was born in 1834.

The prospective pope comes of a family that has won very high honors at the vatican. Serafini and his no less celebrated brother, Cardinal Vincenzo Vanutelli, are both members of the sacred college, and it is said that this is the first instance on record where two members of the same family have been so highly honored by a pontiff. Serafino is credited with having brought about an understanding between Bismarck and the pope which led to the settlement of the kulturkampf, the great dispute between the vatican and the German government.

The occasional rumors of Pope Leo's failing health—he is now eighty-three years of age—make the question of the papal succession a very interesting one at this time.

INTOLERANCE.

It is a pleasure to commend the growth of toleration in this country, both religious and political, during the past half a century.

The time was when the spirit of intolerance led people of different religious persuasions, trampling charity under foot, to bitterly denounce each other simply because of contrary doctrinal opinions, and when ministers of church organizations, rarely, if ever, dared exchange pulpits with those of other denominational names. An intestine war of bigotry in fact prevailed and laid waste the principles of true religion.

A noticeable and encouraging change in these particulars now exists. Charity, the attribute of Christianity, has to a good degree regained her foothold.

So, too, political intolerance once raged rampant. Democrats were traduced and persecuted in various ways for no other reason than their refusal to surrender the Constitutional given right to think and vote as they pleased. Political bigotry reared its hideous form throughout the land.

A change in that respect has likewise made its welcome appearance. Democrats are no longer so generally vituperated and ostracised because of their party faith. Justice and enlightenment have wrenched apart the chains of political intolerance.

Intelligence is marching steadily onward for the correction and removal of former abuses, and it is reasonable to hope and believe, that the period draws nigh when no citizen will be questioned in any manner as to the free enjoyment and exercise of his political rights, and when every individual shall possess the perfect liberty to unmolested worship according to the dictates of his or her own conscience.

PEACE.

When the selection by President Cleveland of Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, as Secretary of the Navy was announced, Admiral Jouett, a Union hero, hastened to write ex-confederate Herbert a letter congratulating him upon the appointment, declaring it to be "broad guage" and calculated to "obliterate sectional and war estrangement."

That was a tribute grand and significant, showing that enmity among actual participants in the conflict between the North and South is fast fading away, and that unity of purpose for the glory and prosperity of a united country has become dominant patriotism and made sectional animosity a thing of the past.

The war ended long ago with the abolishment of the main cause of its commencement. To perpetuate remembrance of its heroism is commendable, but to keep alive its embittered spirit unjustifiable.

The contest is not now brothers fighting against brothers, but citizens of a common country, protected by one Union and loyal to the same Constitution, rivaling each other to render our majestic domain the perfect exemplar of civic freedom, the producer of substantial wealth, and the abode of undisturbed human happiness.

May the spotless emblem of peace be forever triumphant.

THE WESTFIELD DOG CASE.

Editor Pearsall Finds It Costly to Shoot Another's Canine.

The case of James M. French against Clifford E Pearsall for damages for the killing by Pearsall of a Scotch terrier "Carlo" ten years old, belonging to French, was tried Tuesday before judge Nash and a jury. The parties are from Westfield. The evidence showed that the dog was on Pearsall's property and had just been in his chicken yard. Mr. Pearsall said he took his gun and went out in the yard and "yelled" at the dog, which instead of running away ran at him with open mouth and he shot it in self defence. On cross-examination he broke down as to the self-defence plea. Much amusement resulted from Mr. Reed's cross-examination of this witness.

Chas. N. Coding, esq., of Westfield, the lawyer for Pearsall, also claimed that the dog was cross and a nuisance and that the killing was therefore justifiable. However, borough counsel Chas. A. Reed succeeded in convincing the jury that Pearsall had no right to shoot the dog, and they brought in a verdict of $40 and costs against Pearsall.

SCHOOL MEETINGS.

NORTH PLAINFIELD'S NEED OF MORE ROOM.

Not a Dissenting Voice in the Big Gathering of Voters.

From The Press of March 22.

The turnout at the North Plainfield school meeting last night was unusually large. Not a woman attended.

Everything was harmonious and unanimous, and the choice of the voters for trustees was:

S. St.J. McCutchen, for 3 years.
Stephen B. Joseph, for 1 year.

The only matter discussed was the proposition to give more school accommodation. The report was made that the pupils were crowded into quarters utterly inadequate, and one class of little ones was compelled to study in the basement, which was dark, badly ventilated and reeking with dampness. Two plans were suggested, one for erecting new primary schools removed from the present school; this was deemed too expensive. The other was to enlarge the present building, and a resolution was adopted authorizing the trustees to prepare plans and estimates for the work. They will report at a public meeting April 26.

The appropriation adopted was $8,500, the same as last year.

FANWOOD'S HARMONY.

The Women Join in Cheering David P. Hall's Report.

The annual meeting in school district No. 14 was held in the audience hall of the school-house at Fanwood last evening, pursuant to call. Promptly at 8 order was tapped by the district clerk, and Geo. E. Nicholl was elected chairman.

After thanking those present for the honor conferred, Mr. Nicholl stated that "we are here for business" and properly assigned the district clerk as secretary of the meeting.

The district clerk, David P. Hall, then read the call for the meeting and also the report of the school trustees, which was listened to faithfully and approved by all. When Mr. Hall referred to his long services to school district No. 14, and his intended removal to Plainfield, he could not avoid showing his feeling at the severance of his connection with the district he so ably represented.

"There are the books", said he, as he lifted them one by one; "nothing has been concealed, and they have been open at all reasonable times for inspection."

More than one who heard Mr. Hall's report thought of the contrast between his manner of administering school affairs and that of the Plainfield board of education. The financial report was then read, and the trustees' recommendation as to the amount required for the ensuing year related.

The amount as stated by the trustees was $2,600, and in accordance with the law was ballotted for; the Rev. Dr. Parks and L. J. Briggs, jr., acting as tellers. The vote was: Total, 117. To appropriate $2,600—99; the others scattering, practically endorsing the trustees' advice unanimously.

The nominations for school trustee for the full term vice David P. Hall were then called for. Hezekiah Hand nominated Thomas J. Nicholl. That being seconded and no other nominations being made, George Kyte moved that the nominations be closed and that the secretary cast the ballot, which was carried. Mr. Nicholl gave thanks for his unanimous election, and said he would endeavor to fulfill the duties of the office for the best interest of the school district.

A vote of thanks was then unanimously tendered the chairman to which he fittingly responded.

The chair next recognized Judge Moore, who moved a standing vote of thanks to the retiring district clerk and trustee, David P. Hall, for his untiring zeal and successful endeavors in placing School District No. 14 in the position it now occupies.

The motion was seconded from all quarters and unanimously carried, immediately followed by "three cheers for David P. Hall" started by John Robison and responded to with a will.

The nicest compliment that any board ever received was evidenced by the number of ladies present at the meeting, who heartily endorsed the board's report and when Mr. Robison called for cheers for the retiring member vied with the men in their enthusiasm.

It should be stated that the report as presented, congratulated Mr. Goodenough, the principal, on his untiring perseverance in raising the school to the standard it has attained under his management, and also paid a graceful compliment to the ladies of the school who have so faithfully performed their arduous duties.

Although, as Mr. Hall stated, "there is a rise in the market for teachers", it was generally expressed by the parents of the children attending the school that an amount sufficient might be raised to retain the present instructresses whom the children love and all respect.

THE WOMEN WERE THERE.

But Everything Was Harmonious, and the Expected Contest Was Averted.

The annual meeting of School District, No. 2, which includes Dunellen and New Market, was held in the Whittier School building at Dunellen, last evening, and contrary to expectations the meeting was one of the most harmonious ever held in the district. It had been reported that an effort would be made at the meeting to elect one or more Catholics on the board of trustees, but nothing of the sort was even mentioned at the meeting. Fully four hundred people crowded the school hall, in preparation of the anticipated contest, and many of these were ladies, who were there to assert their rights.

District clerk, the Rev. L. B. Livermore, called the meeting to order; W. J. Hamilton was elected chairman, and Harry Gaskill secretary. The latter read the call, in which $2,700 was the amount asked for running expenses during the ensuing year. This amount was granted.

The president's report was read and accepted. It showed a balance on hand at the beginning of the year; the total receipts were $6,355.31; expenditures, $5,859.13; balance on hand, $2,496.19.

The annual report of the board of trustees with reference to buildings, improvements, etc., took the same course. It also showed that at the May census there were 365 children in the district, between the ages of five and eighteen years, and that the total enrollment for the year was 271; of this number seven reside outside of the district.

The following trustees were then unanimously elected: Rev. A. L. Martine and Harry C. Gaskill. Each gentleman signified his willingness to serve on the board, and they were declared elected.

In a communication, the Rev. Mr. Livermore tendered his resignation on account of his proposed change of residence, and it was accepted with much regret. The Rev. Mr. Livermore said he had been most heartily seconded in his labors, and his interest in the schools would never wane. The unanimity which has existed in the schools he considered something remarkable. Special thanks were extended to the outgoing board, and a vote of thanks was given the entire board.

The following persons were appointed on the teaching committee: P. H. Wyckoff, Rev. Edward T. G. Martine. The board now stands: Martine, 3 years, term expires 1896; Gaskill, to fill unexpired term of the Rev. Mr. Livermore, 2 years, term expires 1895; Thomas L. Thomas, holds over, term expires 1894.

NOTES.

At the Dunellen school meeting last evening, R. J. Swackhammer declined re-election.

One lady, Mrs. T. O. Bodine, was nominated for school trustee at the meeting in Dunellen, last evening, but she most modestly declined. She was placed in nomination by Frank P. Heffner. Among other things he said that 95 per cent. of the purity of mankind is in the women and he thought they should be represented on the school board.

Washingtonville's Good Selections.

The election of two school trustees at Washingtonville, took place last night.

George Bullman was chosen chairman; and Andrew Wilson secretary. Robert Clark was chosen to fill out the unexpired term of 2 years caused by the removal of B. Lawrence. George Bullman was elected for 3 years.

The finances made a good showing, there being a surplus in the treasury.

THE CITY'S FAME ABROAD.

New Yorkers Looking to Plainfield for Summer Homes.

The New York Evening Post, that excellent journal which can always be relied on for early and trustworthy information, especially in matters of finance and real estate, has been making a specialty of accurate suburban news, and in a recent issue gives Plainfield and its environs the following valuable free advertisement:

The builders of Plainfield have, in spite of the severity of the season, been busy all winter with the work of erecting more houses to meet the expected demand. So many who were formerly New Yorkers and Brooklynites have made Plainfield a city of commuters' homes that each summer the list grows larger of their friends who desire to spend the outing months near them in the country. Last year there were scarcely enough modern houses to fill the wants of Plainfield's summer visitors from the city, and contractors have been rushed with orders for new houses in every part of the place. Though the number completed is extraordinarily great, every one of them is likely to be occupied, judging from present prospects. Plainfield is now well equipped with desirable houses for people of moderate income, which she long lacked. The number of local changes of residence will be somewhat larger than usual on moving day, but most of these will be among chronic movers; and the thrifty real-estate men are taking care that the houses left vacant are such as people from out of town want. For weeks the Plainfield agents have been busy negotiating for houses for newcomers for the season. Every promise, they say, is for a very much larger spring rental than ever. In this good fortune North Plainfield of course has her accustomed share. The train service of the Jersey Central Railroad is the especial joy of commuters, and metropolitan business men are finding that they can reach a home in Plainfield more quickly and more comfortably than many a nearer locality is reached by other routes. The establishment of an electric street railway in Plainfield is opening up attractive homes in the outskirts. The beautiful drives have been a chief source of Plainfield's attractiveness to summer visitors, and the fact that the recent extension of these fine macadamized roadways throughout the county is becoming widely known may account for the extraordinarily early and unusually large rush for country homes for the coming season. By the completed system of hard and smooth country roads every loveliness of the surrounding country is unfolded, and the delights of the hills to the north are easily accessible.

Fanwood, Westfield and Cranford being included in the same system of roadways, they too are reaping a large benefit, and available houses in all of these places are renting rapidly. Their building movement has likewise been brisk, in anticipation of just such a demand as is now realizing. Pretty Fanwood has developed considerably, and Westfield and Cranford are enjoying decided booms. Netherwood's residents are all-the-year-round people, occupying their own homes, but the Hotel Netherwood will open as usual in June, and its manager is now booking a larger number of families than ordinary. Hotel Albion, at Plainfield, has the same excellent prospects. At Glenside Park, a rare nook hidden away in the mountain and valley back of Scotch Plains, nearly all of the cottages have already been negotiated for. The same story of good business comes from the less thickly built country places roundabout Plainfield. Bound Brook has been putting up a considerable number of new houses to rent, but by June 1 will again be able to maintain her proud boast, "There isn't a vacant house in town".

THE SEWERAGE QUESTION.

A Good Sewerage System Cheaper to Each Householder Than the Present Cost of Cesspools.

Assuming that as a result of the proposed special election the intermittent filtration system of drainage will be adopted as the best in sight all things considered, and that the taxpayers will prefer to pay for it in the course of twenty-five years as set down in the table prepared by the Sewer Commission, let us see what the cost will be to the owner of a property, of average value. Let us take a residence property, for example, worth three thousand dollars, and valued by Assessor Hubbard at fifteen hundred dollars. How will the proposed system affect such a property?

By the table referred to such a holding will be taxed for twenty-five years to come, taking one year with another and striking an average at the rate of seventy-one-thousandths of one per cent. or just about one-fifteenth of one per cent. A tax of one per cent. on the property under consideration would amount to fifteen dollars, and the sewer tax, for both principal and interest, would therefore be one dollar.

A residence property, worth in the market three thousand dollars, can, in other words, secure complete house and stable drainage for one dollar a year paid through a period of twenty-five years.

But the owner of the three-thousand-dollar house will say: "I cannot use the new drainage without a supply of water for flushing purposes, and that will involve an annual payment to the Water Supply Company of from ten to twenty dollars a year." Water from the pipes in the house would be a luxury, not a necessity. A tank at the top of the house, fed from the roof or from the well, or from both as the weather changes from wet to dry, will fully answer the purpose. The cost of a tank, including the necessary plumbing and connection with the sewer in the street, would not exceed one hundred dollars. Let us accept that sum as maximum. We now have the total annual expense involved: Tax, one dollar; interest on plumbing, six dollars; repairs, one dollar; total, eight dollars. It should be remembered that through the storage of six dollars water is secured for other than flushing purposes.

What would the owner of the property get for his eight dollars? A brief enumeration will remind some of [illegible]

1. [illegible] on the premises, and the resultant omission of the visits of the Odoriferous Excavator brigade—an annual saving ranging from ten to fifteen dollars.

2. Total relief from the poison that goes with a cesspool—poison in the air and poison in the soil.

3. Increasing values as a result of increasing population in a suburban town.

4. Lessened danger of infectious diseases in our homes and school buildings.

5. A general feeling of security against rival towns, and an indefinable public spirit that attends cleanliness, pure water, good sanitation and general decency.

Some of the advantages of a delivery from the primitive cesspool system cannot be estimated in dollars and cents; but if the net result of the aforesaid eight dollars is not improved health and improving values, then the history of other towns is misleading. It goes without the saying that some of these results would be quickly felt in Plainfield, which is practically an outlying district of the metropolis.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, held on Thursday, March 2, 1893, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Halliday and Freeholders Badgely, Donohue, Hubbard, Hayward, [illegible], Hand, Kyte, Moore, Bell, [illegible], [illegible], Vanderbeek and Woodruff.

Absent—Freeholders [illegible] and [illegible].

The minutes of last meeting, except bills ordered paid, were read, and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Company:

To the Honorable, the Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your petitioner, the "Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Company," respectfully represents that it has applied to the local authorities thereof for the location of its street railway in the City of Elizabeth and in the Townships of Linden, Cranford and Westfield, and that the route applied for by it crosses and runs upon Westfield avenue from Grove street to Magie street and along Grove street, crosses West Jersey street in said City of Elizabeth; and in the Township of Westfield crosses Central avenue from Elmer street to the Boulevard, the said Westfield avenue, West Jersey street and Central avenue having heretofore been adopted by your honorable body and improved as "county roads." Your petitioner further represents that it may find it necessary to apply for the location of the tracks of its railway in West Grand street so that the same will cross West Jersey street. Your petitioner further represents [illegible]

A Modern Cook.

A New York gentleman hired a cook because her recommendations were good, and moreover she asserted that she had cooked for a gentleman whose good table is celebrated. Much to the disgust of her employer, her cooking was simply horrible, so he called her into his presence and said:

"Bridget, when I hired you you told me that you were qualified as a cook, and that you had been a cook at the Bondelipper villa on the Hudson."

"And so I was, sor; I cooked the turnips for the pigs in a big boiler, sor."—Texas Siftings.

Why Named.

Trivial circumstances give names to children. A gallant Irish soldier was the father of two girls, named respectively Jane and Phœbe.

Some one asked him why he had selected the latter name, and he replied:

"Well, sorr, ye see our eldest was born in January, so we called her Jane; and the other was born in February, so we just called her Faybie."

The story would be better still if there had been a third daughter, born in March and named, of course, Marcia.

A Sad Case.

"Poor man!" exclaimed the warm-hearted woman of the house, impulsively. "What has reduced you to this pitiable condition?"

"Grief, ma'am," replied the hollow-eyed tourist, wiping the jelly and bread crumbs from his mouth with his coat sleeve and beginning on the pie. "Grief! I am the only man in Kansas that wasn't mentioned for the senatorship, ma'am."—Chicago Tribune.

No Difference of Opinion.

Meddling Papa—Millicent, I wish you would show a little more encouragement to young Horricks when he comes to see you. He is well off, he has no bad habits and I consider him a perfectly square man.

Miss Millicent (with a feeble attempt to suppress a yawn)—I suppose he is, papa. I have often noticed that he is very angular.—Chicago Tribune.

Neither.

Mrs. Graynes—James, do women ever speculate in corn and such things?

Mr. Graynes (of the Chicago board of trade)—Sometimes, through agents.

"If I was an operator, James—that's what you call it, isn't it?—would I be one or the other of those dreadful bulls or bears?"

"[illegible] You'd be a gudding."

I have been a great sufferer from dry catarrh for many years, and I tried many remedies, but none gave me so much benefit as Ely's Cream Balm. It completely cured me. W. J. Lally, 39 Woodward ave., Boston Highlands, Mass.

After using Ely's Cream Balm two months I was surprised to find that the right nostril, which was closed for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful.—R. H. Cunningham, 275 18th street, Brooklyn.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—The city is to have a new $250 road scraper.

—Additional help is being taken on at the Pond Machine Tool Works.

—The beautiful and cozy new cafe of Hotel Grenada is already popular.

—Most of the carpenters in the city are now busy, and many of them are overrun with work.

—The old house on the Y. M. C. A. lot is being torn down to make room for the new building.

—John T. Odam of this city has been awarded the contract for slating the roof of a large new hotel at Lakewood.

—Peanuts have advanced in price. Within the past few days the local dealers have raised the price to ten cents a quart.

—The fine residence of Frank P. Huff, at 156 Park avenue, is to be sold by Sheriff Hicks, April 26, to satisfy a mortgage.

—The record for the past three months at Scotch Plains, is six fires, and the total loss aggregates many thousands of dollars.

—Wild duck shooting is said to be good, and the game most plentiful, in the vicinity of Stirling and along the Passaic river.

—Sixty people enjoyed a dance given by the "Jolly Four" in Walsh's Hall, Wednesday evening. O'Reilly furnished the music.

—Mr. Paff of Scotch Plains says that if he is appointed postmaster he will not remove the office from its present convenient location.

—The store of Marshall & Ball, the Newark clothiers, will remain open evenings during the week previous to Easter, for the benefit of out of town patrons.

—The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Exempt Firemen's association will be held at Morristown early in May. The local association will send a delegation.

—Two special officers now parade the streets of Dunellen in citizens' clothes, every Sunday, with orders to arrest all persons found drunk or wrangling on the streets.

—The Courier is getting worse and worse. Last night it called a man "Creater" instead of curator, and published side by side two columns reading exactly alike.

—The white bridge over the creek near Smalleytown was washed away by the high water Tuesday night, and it is said that some of the milkmen had to abandon their routes the next day.

—Turner, Jones and Leidy (if the latter does not go South) and Ad. Vroom of last year's Staten Islands, are already signed for this year's Crescent League team. Bonner's intentions are not yet known.

—The flag shanty on the Lehigh Valley railroad at South Plainfield, caught fire from an overheated stove, Wednesday night, and was burned to the ground. Flagman Thos. Dorgan lost a lot of clothing, shoes, etc.

—Two tramps broke into a baggage car on the siding at Dunellen, Wednesday night, and stole clothing and shoes belonging to the baggagemaster and brakemen. They were followed to Greenbrook and arrested by constable Warden.

—Two dollars in a letter addressed by a good woman's hand, reaches THE PRESS with the request signed "St. Patrick", that it be forwarded to "The poor man mentioned in your valuable paper as suffering with a broken leg in Scotch Plains".

—Strange sounds are nightly heard in a West Front street flat by the inmates, and the superstitious claim the rooms are haunted. There are some of the sterner sex, however, who say that some one will get hurt one of these nights, if he keeps up his foolishness.

—Chief of police Grant has been searching among Irving school boys for concealed weapons. He found one revolver, and the boy promised to stop carrying it. Another boy who carries a revolver hidden in a pocket under his armpit, escaped detection.

—The Somerville Messenger says of the new St. Joseph's Home in North Plainfield: "Men will not be permitted to visit the cottage under any pretence. Many Protestant women who are interested in charitable work have given furniture and other useful articles."

—The beautiful silver trophy, which is to be the prize of the champion team in the Elizabeth Journal bowling league when the series is ended, will probably be finished and ready for exhibition in Elizabeth early next week. It will be placed on view in Plainfield later, but neither of the Plainfield teams will win it.

—Early Tuesday afternoon William Burnett, an electric lineman, fell from the roof of the boiler room of the Somerville woolen-mills and was severely injured. He had put his wrench on a steam pipe, and while pressing on it the wrench slipped, precipitating him to the ground, a distance of twenty feet. He landed on a pile of bricks and received injuries which, while not serious, are extremely painful.

—Plainfield is soon to have another new and attractive building on West Front street. Andrew Love will on April 1, commence to tear down his present store building and begin the erection of a handsome three-story brick structure with stone trimmings, 30x90 feet in dimensions. The entire ground floor will be turned into a single store, and the two upper stories will be cut into offices or flats. Mr. Love, sr., will retire from active participation in trade, and his two sons will form a co-partnership and carry on the business in the Stephenson building on West Front street, where the stock will be placed as soon as the work of demolition begins.

THEIR ROOMS OUTGROWN.

Those Earnest Workers Need and Deserve a Chapel.

The Pink Ribbon society of the Third Street mission gave their second monthly entertainment last night. The entertainment was given chiefly for the employes of Scott's Press Works, and a number of these were present with their families, the committee of this society having taken special pains to give them invitations. The room was tastefully decorated, and pink streamers hung in graceful curves from the ceiling. A large motto was suspended from the wall, reading: "Welcome to our friends from Scott's Press Works. God bless you." The programme was as follows:

Piano solo	Miss Mary Berg
Recitation	Miss Etta Raybert
Cornet solo	Miss Susie Berg
Vocal solo	Miss Bessie Blair
Piano duet	Misses Mary and Susie Berg
Vocal solo	Harry P. Yeager
Cornet solo	Miss Susie Berg
Zither and banjo	Prof. H. Vanque and Son
Recitation	Miss Etta Raybert
Vocal solo	Miss Bessie Blair
Banjo solo	F. Vanque
Vocal solo	H. P. Yeager
Vocal solo	Mr. McCready

After this was rendered, refreshments were served in abundance. The officers and teachers of the Sunday-school of this mission deserve great credit for the way in which they have enlarged the Sunday-school, which now has a membership of 95. The rooms which this mission occupies are far too small for their purpose, and some day these hardworking people hope to have a fine chapel in that part of the city.

PERSONALIA.

Jacob Pentz and family have removed from Fanwood to Bergen Point.

Counselor John H. VanWinkle is confined to the house with the grip.

Mr. Horr of Westervelt avenue started for a Southern trip on Thursday.

William Jubee is in Boston putting up some of the Scott web perfecting presses.

Lewis Randolph is erecting two frame houses on West Front street near Grant avenue.

Robert E. Speer will speak at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. next Sunday.

John Bicknell, one of J. P. Homan's employes, is ill at his home in Washington Valley.

Robert Clark, of Washingtonville, starts for the Far West Friday next, on a business trip.

B. Laertsen, now of Reading, Pa., was down to see his host of friends in this vicinity, last Sunday.

Mrs. A. Bolsterle of 38 Chatham street is confined to her bed by an attack of congestion of the lungs.

The father of J. Howard Leggett, manager of the Central Pharmacy, visited Mr. and Mrs. Leggett Saturday.

George Vaughn, of Newton, has removed to this city and taken up his residence at 34 West Fifth street.

John D. McKenzie of Crescent avenue is confined to the house suffering from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

James Connelly has returned from Steubenville, Ohio. He reports the condition of his mother as much improved.

Charles Dudley Warner will lecture in the Casino Thursday evening, April 6, under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon club.

Miss Maggie Burke, formerly of this city, but now of Philadelphia, is visiting her friend, Miss Alice Callahan of East Third street.

Invitations are out for a meeting to be addressed by Mrs. Ballington Booth in the Crescent Avenue church, next Monday evening.

Charles Dudley Warner, the famous author, will lecture in the Casino, under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon club, Thursday evening, April 6.

Watson Shurts, of Joliet, Ill., is visiting the family of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Campbell. Mr. Shurts is spoken of as the next Democratic nominee for Governor of Illinois.

J. Finley Layton, age 61, died at Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 16, after three days' illness. He was a son of the late John Layton, for many years a resident of Plainfield.

Wm. Patterson, of East Sixth street, has gone to Chicago to superintend personally the erection of the Scott Press works exhibit at the World's Fair. He left town Saturday.

Henry M. Maxson, principal of the High school, contributes three columns of interesting descriptive writing, charming studies of Nature in Winter's garb, to The Sabbath Recorder of March 16.

Mrs. Percy C. Ohl contemplates opening a riding academy in the rink building, Broadway. She has already secured a number of pupils, and as she is an expert horsewoman there is no doubt that she will make the academy a success.

The Rev. Mr. Martine, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Dunellen, is confined to the house by illness. The Rev. L. E. Livermore occupied his pulpit yesterday morning, and in the evening the services were conducted under the joint auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E., and the juvenile society.

Mrs. M. C. VanArsdale and children left town on Thursday for Greenwich, Conn., where Mr. VanArsdale has established one of the finest shoe stores in the place, and is already doing a prosperous business. Every citizen of Plainfield will heartily indorse him as a reliable and trustworthy man to deal with.

Capt. Nichols of the White Star Line steamer "Germanic", which arrived in port on Saturday, was the guest of Captain and Mrs. Geo. H. Phillips during Monday and part of Tuesday. The captain firmly believes that the missing steamer "Naronic" is still afloat, probably disabled by an accident to her machinery.

A party composed of thirty of her friends from Plainfield, Philadelphia, New York, Elizabeth, and elsewhere, dropped in (quite by accident!) last Wednesday evening, to wish Miss Katharine Thorne, of LaGrande avenue, "many happy returns". As the "surprise" was genuine, and as everyone had a thoroughly enjoyable time, all joined in voting it the most delightful of social events.

The second article by Charles E. Doane, of this city, on "Carpentry for Boys", appeared in last week's issue of Harper's Young People. It more than fulfills the high expectation incited by the information and interest of the introductory paper. These articles are particularly timely nowadays when so much is being heard on all sides as to the great benefits of manual training. The rest of the papers are to follow now in quick succession.

THE PRINCETON GYMNASTS.

Having Delighted Plainfield, They Now Will Perform Before Mrs. Cleveland and Baby Ruth.

The entertainment by the Princeton Gymnastic team and the Princeton Mandolin club, under the auspices of the Plainfield Bicycle club, which had been heralded for a week, filled a festive two hours Tuesday night at Music Hall.

Filled, the hours surely were, and the performance was pushed with a rapidity worthy of professionals.

Owing to the length of the programme laid out, some of the numbers which were to have been given by the Mandolin club, were eliminated, but the work of the gymnastic team was irreproachable. It was, in fact, the best work of the kind ever given before a Plainfield audience. Its excellence is the more surprising when it is known that Princeton is without a gymnastic instructor.

It is expected that next year the famous Professor Goldy will fill the "gymnastic chair", but it is doubtful if he can bring out more superb work than has been done by that "little giant", Capt. Hughes, of this year's team.

Where everything was so well done, it is difficult to particularize; but the double trapeze, by Captain Hughes and McCall, was probably the chef d'oeuvre of the evening. Everything, however, from the opening horizontal bar to the closing pyramid, was fine. The wrestling was a new thing to many of the audience, as it was their first acquaintance with scientific work.

The question as to whether it was a suitable performance for ladies to witness was settled in the affirmative "by a large majority".

The ladies of the Philadelphia 400 have set the seal of their approval on the coming exhibition in that city, and their names appear as patronesses of the event, which will be followed by a reception. In Baltimore and Washington it will be a society function, also, and in the latter city it is expected that Mrs. Cleveland will be the leading patroness, with Baby Ruth a close second.

The Opening Event.

Nothing interests the ladies more than fine millinery, and from the number of ladies who attended the spring opening at [illegible] there was only one verdict—that it was, by far, the most beautiful display of spring bonnets ever seen in Plainfield.

The opening continues every day this week.

FIRE-BUGS AGAIN.

SCOTCH PLAINS STILL SUFFERING FROM INCENDIARISM.

Trano & Ryno's Blacksmith Shop Destroyed—William Messler Arrested on Suspicion—Larry Wallace Again Unfortunate.

The villagers of Scotch Plains are still excited over incendiarism. Fire of suspicious origin again visited the heart of the village at 1:30 on Saturday, and William Messler is a prisoner under suspicion of being implicated in the outbreak.

This morning's fire burned to the ground William Trano's blacksmith shop. All of his tools were destroyed. Wheelwright Andrew Ryno also lost his implements, he having occupied the same shop. The building was situated on Park avenue, and was owned by Robert Murphy.

Allen's livery stable stands within a few feet of it. A friendly north wind and the excellent work of No. 1 engine was the means of saving the stable. No. 1 engine is the old Gazelle of Plainfield. The "old Veteran" seemed to be imbued with her old-time vigor. Its valves had recently been put in working order by master mechanic Mooney.

William Messler and Lawrence Wallace were seen early around the fire, acting in a manner considered suspicious. Messler was arrested and brought to the Plainfield lock-up by constable Hezekiah Hand this morning for safe keeping.

Messler emphatically denies guilt. Wallace is the man out on bail on the charge of causing previous fires. He may be rearrested.

The reflection of the Scotch Plains fire caused an alarm to be sounded in North Plainfield. First the old Warren bell was rung, then district No. 9 was sounded on the borough gong.

The blowing of the borough alarm was almost at the same time as that of the city for the Pollion fire. The coincidence caused much speculation among the people awakened. The recalls, some time later, were similarly coincident.

Messler was sent to Elizabeth to-day, in default of $300 bail. Justice Nash will give him a hearing Friday.

A POLICEMAN'S LUCKY APPETITE.

It Was the Means of Timely Discovery of the Pollion Fire.

Fire broke out on Saturday, about 1:30, at the residence of J. J. H. Pollion, corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues. The fire started in the conservatory, and was caused by one of the oil stoves in use for heating purposes. The stove became overheated, and the oil in the reservoir caught fire, communicating the blaze to the wall against which it stood. The glass was cracked by the heat, and the draught admitted by the open panes caused the wall to burn brightly, attracting the attention of policeman Mattox, who chanced to be passing the house. He rang the bell and awoke the inmates, and then sounded the alarm from box 27. Several men from neighboring houses arrived on the scene, and tried to put out the fire before the engines arrived. Extinguishers of the department finished the work. The injury was confined to the conservatory. Its contents, including many valuable ferns and palms, were almost entirely ruined. Mr. and Mrs. Pollion are at Spring Lake.

Had it not been for the lucky chance that brought policeman Mattox by the house at the moment the fire showed itself, the damage might have been great. Mattox was previously stationed in the part of town near Mr. Pollion's house, but was recently transferred to the boulevard section. Last night he felt very hungry and decided to go to his house in Webster place to get something to eat, as none of the restaurants in town was open at that hour. It was while on his way home that he saw the fire and gave the alarm. Putnam avenue at present is entirely unprotected. It would seem that either the police force is too small or that the distribution of the officers is badly arranged, for to leave without night protection a district that is as thickly built up as is this is certainly courting fire and burglary.

TO GO IT ALONE.

All the Sporting World Glad to Learn that Plainfield Is to Have an Independent Club.

[From The Sporting Life.]

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 13.—Editor SPORTING LIFE:—We won the State championship last season against great odds, after a hard struggle, and although Plainfield is by far the best ball town of its size in the country, the game did not pay. This was mainly due to the fact that there was but one team in the League, Somerville, that was a drawing card with us, and our playing away from home on alternate Saturdays was a dead loss. This season the New Jersey State League is not in existence, and Plainfield will go it alone, playing only Saturday and holiday games.

The affairs of the club, heretofore in the hands of the Crescent League, will be taken care of by a stock company that has been formed by last year's president Charles A. Reed, Manager T. H. Keller and others. Catcher "Chic" Hofford will again captain the team and will also manage it, Mr. Keller's business connections as general traveler for the United States Cartridge Company not giving him time to look after it. The team last year was one of the best of its class ever seen on a ball field, and the majority of the old players have gladly signed.

I notice that Billy Keeler, our little short stop, has been re-signed by New York, and his many friends here hope for his success. He is one of the most modest and unassuming players ever seen here, and could time a hit with the oldest in the business. Plainfield has turned out several good men, but none with such bright prospects as Keeler. At the opening game of New York he will undoubtedly see many of his old friends. MACK.

The Youngest in His Regiment.

Albert M. Runyon died at South Bethlehem, Pa., Sunday, March 19. Deceased formerly lived in Plainfield, N. J., and was a relative of the late Martin Giles. He enlisted in Co. C., 14th Regt., N. J. Vols., Aug. 20, 1862, when he was 16 years of age. He served through the war and was wounded at the battle of Locust Grove, Va., Nov. 27, 1863. His remains will be interred at South Easton, Pa., to-morrow, March 23, under the auspices of Post No. 576, G. A. R. Comrades of his regiment, E. P. Thorn, Alonzo C. Townley, Wm. Pangborn and Abraham King, of this city and North Plainfield, sent as an offering to his funeral an elegant floral piece representing the Sixth Corps badge, prepared by Miss Lincoln of Park avenue.

Entirely Satisfactory.

W. J. Arkell, publisher of Judge and Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, writes:

"JUDGE BUILDING,
Cor. 5th ave. and Sixteenth st.,
NEW YORK, January 14, 1891.

"About three weeks since, while suffering from a severe cold which had settled on my chest, I applied an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER, and in a short time obtained relief.

"In my opinion, these plasters should be in every household, for use in case of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises or pains of any kind. I know that in my case the results have been entirely satisfactory and beneficial."

PLAINFIELD'S WATER RATES.

Editor Bowen, of Netherwood, Perturbed Over the Change from Meter to Contract.

B. R. Bowen of Netherwood, Brooklyn editor of the Mail and Express, contributes the following to his paper:

THE WATER-SUPPLY COMPANY AFTER LARGER DIVIDENDS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 8 (Special)—There is a prospect of a lively war in Plainfield over the action of the Water Supply Company removing all the water meters in the city. The company charges that the meters are defective and do not register correctly.

At the time the contract was made last May it was the understanding by the members of the Common Council that the citizens should have the privilege to either pay by the year or use water meters. The Water Supply Company, at the last moment, refused to accede to these terms and changed the wording of the contract.

For some days past employes of the Water Supply Company have been removing meters from the houses of its customers who are not supposed to have "influence".

Evidently the meter has only just been taken out of Mr. Bowen's house, else he would know that the water company long ago began abolishing meters in dwelling houses and supplying water by contract according to the number of faucets in a house. The people have to submit to the change, or else give up the use of the water and return to wells. There isn't any such lively war in prospect, nor is any such favoritism to "influential" customers shown, as indicated in the article republished above.

The New Game Law.

The new game law, which has received the Governor's approbation, has but few changes. Governor Werts knows all about shooting and fishing and probably looked at the provisions of the law closely before affixing his signature. A digest of the new code is as follows:

Open season for deer, October 14 to December 16; squirrels, September 14 to December 16; quail and rabbits from October 31 to December 16; ruffed grouse from September 30 to December 16; woodcock, the month of July and from September 30 to December 16; English snipe, March and April, and from August 25 to December 16; reed birds, rail and marsh hen, from August 25 to December 16; upland plover, from July 21 to December 16; pinnated grouse and wild turkey, from October 31 to December 16; hen birds of the European partridge, European grouse or European pheasant, protected for five years from the passage of this act; male birds of the above species can be killed from October 31 to December 16. Small birds generally are protected at all times, but game commissioners may issue licenses to collect for scientific purposes. It is forbidden to capture deer or game birds by means of traps, snares or nets, except that incorporated associations may trap such animals or birds alive for the purpose of preserving them alive during the winter, providing that they be released again in New Jersey not later than April 15 the following spring. Black bass or Oswego bass may be taken between May 30 and December 1; trout between March 1 and July 15. Black bass measuring less than nine inches and trout less than six inches may not be taken, except for stocking purposes.

The penalty for violating the law is a fine of $20, for each and every piece of game or fish illegally taken, and the method of procedure is as follows: A justice of the peace is required to issue a warrant on the complaint of one or more persons and the warrant can be served by any constable, policeman, fish warden or deputy. Any such officer seeing the violation of the law has the power to arrest without a warrant. All actions brought under the law are to be tried the same as any other complaint, over which a justice of the peace has jurisdiction.

His Watch Dog Was No Good.

Peter Kline, of North Branch, keeps a country store where one can buy anything from a shoe string to a barrel of molasses. He does a good business, and lives next door to the store. Every evening the farmers living around North Branch congregate in Kline's store and tell stories around the stove until about 9, when they go to roost. On Thursday night Mr. Kline closed the store and went home. He slept soundly during the night. When he visited the store early yesterday morning he found that it had been broken into during the night and several hundred dollars worth of goods stolen. Shoes, groceries, cigars and a small sum of money in the drawer, were missing. Investigation showed that the robber or robbers had effected an entrance by forcing the catch on one of the rear windows and then raising the sash. A most thorough overhauling had been given the whole stock, and the most valuable of the goods taken.

Goods that were not deemed worth taking were strewn around the floor. In one corner of the store was found a small iron jimmy and a dark lantern. Mr. Kline keeps a dog, but on this night he made no noise whatever, so the robbers must have worked very quietly. Mr. Kline loses about $400 in goods and money.

Local police officers attempted to trace the burglars, but no clue of them can be found. Since that time every farmer in North Branch has loaded his shot-gun, and midnight marauders will meet with a warm reception.

Death of an Old Jersey Slave.

Louis Carrol, an aged colored man, died at the house of overseer-of-the-poor J. Wallace Cox at Westfield, Thursday morning. He had been a town charge for twelve years. Just how old Carrol was no one seemed to know, not even himself, but he often said he was "very near a hundred", and his appearance seemed to verify such a statement.

Carrol came to Westfield as a slave in the family of Dr. Osborne many years ago, when only a few houses marked the site of the now flourishing town. He was freed from bondage long before the late war, but, having become attached to his master's family, continued in their service for many years. He left them at last and branched out for himself, working at odd jobs about town until a dozen years ago, when his great age and a spinal disease, which bent him almost double, made it impossible for him to toil longer, and the town took care of him. The name of Carrol he inherited from some forefather who had undoubtedly assumed the name of his Southern master.

She Wasn't Used to It.

A good story is told of a well-known business man in this city. On Tuesday he went to New York and on the way home he stopped in Washington Market and purchased a blue fish and a pound package of limburger cheese. Arriving home, he placed the packages on a kitchen table and went out on the street. Presently his wife detected the odor from the cheese, and declared, at first that the fish was stale and spoiled. Opening the package of limburger, she nearly fainted, and not being accustomed to the obnoxious odor, without further ceremony she took the package and threw it into the garbage barrel. When her husband returned he was upbraided for bringing home decayed articles. He asked for the package and was told it was among the garbage. "Why", said he, "that's limburger cheese, and it cost me forty cents". He had been depending on it for appetizer for his supper, but was cheated out of it.

GOOD FOR THE MAYOR.

HIS A CLINCHING ARGUMENT FOR THE SCHOOL BOARD BILL.

Sound Commonsense Reasoning in Favor of the Proposed Change—The Sole Object of the Bill, He Explains, Is to Keep the School Trustees from Running the City Into Extravagant and Useless Debt Against Its Will.

[Mayor Gilbert's argument before the Assembly Committee in favor of restricting the power of the Board of Education.]

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I appreciate fully the fact that to every important public question there are two debatable sides, and therefore I am not surprised that the bill under consideration by your committee should meet with opposition. I am surprised, however, that anyone should appear before you proposing to give a good logical reason for his opposition to the measure.

The language of the bill is clear and explicit; it expresses in unmistakable terms its logical purpose; there is no ambiguity about it; no concealed danger lurks beneath its surface. It is a plain, direct, business-like proposition to give to a community through its common council or other governing body—the body which represents it in its fiscal affairs, the body which can be readily reached and made to conform to the will of the people—the power to fix a limitation to the indebtedness that may be created against that community.

It is simply this and nothing more. The city which I represent is confronted with what may be called a legal anomaly. The board of education with reference to its power to create public indebtedness is clothed with greater power than our common council. Under the various laws which govern it, the board is authorized to raise by taxation each and every year for the current expenses of our schools, in addition to the amount appropriated by the State, one-half of one per cent. of the taxable valuation of our real and personal property. It is also authorized to borrow such further sum as in the judgment of the board may be deemed necessary for the purchase of lands and the erection of school buildings. There is no limitation whatever upon the amount that may be borrowed, the only limitation being that not more than one school-house shall be built in any one year. Whether this power is exercised wisely or unwisely by the board, our people have no voice in the matter.

During the entire period of our corporate existence, our common council has by the provisions of our charter, been prohibited from borrowing money for any purpose whatever, except in anticipation of taxes, without the consent of the people. This restriction has been modified to a limited extent by the general legislation of recent years.

That our board of education, a body composed of five men, three of whom constitute a quorum, should have greater power in this respect than our common council, the power to create public indebtedness without reference to public opinion, is wrong in theory and inconsistent in practice.

We have built school-houses quite freely during the past few years; our educational system is quite fully developed, and we think our present equipment should serve us for some years without any further heavy outlay. We boast of our school system; it stands second to none in the State; we admit all its excellencies. We respect our board of education. Plainfield has always had the good fortune to have a good school board. Nothing can be truthfully said in praise of our school system or of our board of education that we will not heartily endorse. But that is not the question at issue; OUR CONTENTION IS THAT OUR SCHOOL BOARD SHOULD NO LONGER HAVE THE POWER TO RUN US IN DEBT WITHOUT OUR CONSENT—THAT OUR COMMON COUNCIL SHOULD AT LEAST HAVE A VOICE IN THE MATTER. Now why should this proposition call forth any opposition? I have heard it said that the passage of this bill will impair the efficiency of the school board. How will it impair its efficiency? It makes no change in the construction of the board; it does not interfere with its management in any way; the power of the board to raise by taxation each year for the support of the schools one-half of one per cent. of our taxable valuation in addition to the amount appropriated by the State will still remain. The only change contemplated by the bill is the provision requiring the board to obtain the consent of the common council before purchasing lands or building additional school-houses. In other words, THE BOARD MUST NOT RUN THE CITY IN DEBT WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE COMMON COUNCIL.

It has also been stated that the passage of this bill will introduce politics into the school board. I fail to discover how. The bill proposes no change in the mode of electing trustees—no change in the number of trustees—no change in the political complexion of the board. One trustee will be elected each year as now, and the dominant political party will make strenuous efforts to elect its man every time. In no respect will the absolute control and management of the schools by the board be changed or interfered with. If politics creep into the board, it will not be through the agency of the proposed law. All that this law aims to accomplish is the establishment of the principle that the board of education shall no longer be empowered to run us in debt without our consent.

It is also claimed that the school board is just as truly a representative body as the common council; but this is not so. We elect seven councilmen one year and four the next. Only one school trustee is elected each year to serve for five years. We can change the entire complexion of the common council in two years; it will require five years to make a similar change in the school board. Of more importance, however, than this, is the fact that the common council is the recognized financial board of the city, and the charter under which it acts was approved by the people, while the law which empowers the school board to create public indebtedness was secured without the knowledge or consent of the people.

Mr. Chairman, we advocate the passage of this bill because we believe it to be right, and in the interest of the people; and now that an amendment has been added which provides that before taking effect it shall be submitted to a vote of the people, I cannot see how any fair-minded man can logically oppose it.

Sports in Plainfield.

(Elizabeth Journal.)

Plainfield is to have a base-ball team and the management will be composed of Plainfield men, who, under the name of the Plainfield Amusement company, have filed articles of incorporation with county clerk Gerber. The names of the incorporators are: J. A. Demarest, C. A. Reed and Thomas H. Keller. Mr. Reed managed the Crescent team last season. The company's stock, valued at $5,000, is being sold at $25 each. A number of last year's team will be engaged, and Chic Hofford will go behind the bat as captain.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of Plainfield now has a bicycle division, the organization of which was accomplished on Monday night, when fifteen members signed the roll. The club will be known as the Plainfield Lyceum cyclers, and its membership will probably reach fifty by [illegible]

TO BOND OR NOT TO BOND.

That Is the Question to Be Settled by the Voters of Plainfield.

The common council on Monday unanimously adopted the recommendations and resolutions of the following report:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 20, 1893.

To the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN:—Your committee on water and sewers having duly considered the subject are of the opinion that the Intermittent Filtration system of sewerage, as recommended by the committee of citizens in their report submitted to the common council March 6, 1893, should be adopted for the city of Plainfield. It will cost about one-half the amount of any other system which can be adopted considering the location and surroundings of the city; the system has passed the experimental stage and become one of the standard methods of sewerage, especially for inland cities; it is approved by the highest expert authority in that line of engineering, and is rapidly growing in favor; it will require the same general plant as for a system having its outlet in the Raritan river or elsewhere, so that in case it should prove unsatisfactory another could be adopted with small loss, if any, to the city. These considerations, and the additional one that if the Raritan river plan (which is the only practical one) should be adopted, the city may at any time be shut out by hostile legislation based on the undoubtedly growing opposition against polluting streams with sewerage, are some of the reasons which have influenced your committee in its recommendations.

To introduce and complete a system that will be adequate to meet present requirements and make a wise provision for the future, will cost, as near as estimate can be made, from $90,000 to $100,000. The only practicable method of raising such a large amount for immediate use is by the issue of bonds, and your committee suggest that the question as to whether the money shall be procured in such manner for the purpose, be submitted to vote as early as practicable.

It is also suggested that the financial features of the citizens report be referred to the committee on finance.

In pursuance of the foregoing suggestions the committee recommend the adoption of the annexed resolutions.

Respectfully submitted,
RUFUS K. CASE,
E. N. ERICKSON,
WM. G. [illegible]
Committee on Water and Sewers.

Resolved, That it is the judgment of the common council that the Intermittent Filtration System of Sewerage, as recommended by the committee of citizens to common council in their report submitted March 6, 1893, should be adopted for the city of Plainfield, and that measures should be taken to put it in operation without delay, provided the citizens, by vote, authorize the raising of the necessary amount of money.

Resolved, That the committee on finance be and are hereby requested to arrange for a special election at which the question of issuing sewer bonds for an amount not exceeding $100,000 shall be submitted to the city.

Resolved, That the committee on finance be and are hereby requested to take under consideration the financial features of the citizens' report on the matter of sewerage and report to the common council their conclusions with such recommendations of approval, or change, as they may conclude are for the best interests of the city.

MAUD HOWE AS A LECTURER.

She Repeats in New York the Reading First Given in Plainfield.

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, sister of Mrs. David P. Hall of this city, and a well-known figure in literary and social circles, made her first public appearance as a lecturer in Plainfield a short time ago, and repeated that lecture in Daly's theater every day this week. The subject was "Through Darkest England with Booth", and it is described by the New York papers as a most interesting dramatic and panoramic lecture, which had the added charms of the lecturer's magnetic personality and sympathetic style of delivery.

In one hour and a half Mrs. Elliott gave her auditors a clear insight into the workings of the Salvation Army and a graphic description of the London slums in all their horrors, where the army carries on a work that Mrs. Elliott said no other element could in elevating their unfortunate inmates. They were beyond the reach of the churches and of the cultivating influences of Toynbee Hall and the People's Palace of Pleasure. Yet the Salvation Army did a noble work among them, as illustrated in a clergyman's epigram: "While the churches can but lift up their hands heavenward to help these people, the Salvation Army fears not to put its hands in the mire to lift them up."

Mrs. Elliott gave a minute description of the life the Army leads, the surroundings it has, and told pathetic incidents that she saw when she inspected the slums with Mrs. Bramwell Booth. The audience, in fact, learned more of the London Salvation Army from this lecture than from the best published accounts available.

TRADESMEN WANT THEIR MONEY.

Actor Harry Gwynett Tries to Skip from Netherwood.

Long before daylight last Monday morning four heavily-loaded trucks that men had been working all night to load left the house at Netherwood occupied by Harry Gwynett, the actor. A few hours later butcher Woodruff of Westfield heard that the goods and chattels of his former customer were en route for New York city. Mr. Woodruff hated to see the goods go away, as he had been to the house so often with meat that the furniture had become dear to him, and in an hour he was on the way to Jersey City with a regular attachment for it. The vans were stopped as they were about to go on the ferryboat. Mrs. Gwynett was notified of the state of affairs and the case was placed before a justice of the peace in Jersey City. Mrs. Gwynett refused to pay Mr. Woodruff's claim and the justice directed the constable to take the goods back to Union county, and they were returned to Westfield Wednesday in charge of a constable. Yesterday two more attachments were placed on the goods by merchants who had bills owing them, and it is rumored that more claims are to come. Mr. Gwynett has been living at George Taylor's old home, corner of Belvidere and South avenues.

Of course if you couldn't make a better one, you would go off and die? Of course you would. And you would n't be afraid to publish all the choice bits of scandal and give the guilty ones "particular fits!" Of course you would n't. In fact, it would be a picnic for you. "COUNT" VAN NESS.

HIS LEGAL ENTANGLEMENTS GETTING COMPLICATED.

Rather Than Run His Neck Into Other Waiting Nooses, He Stayed Out of Court and Forfeited His Bail on the Forgery Charge—Now to Be Indicted and Taken from Plainfield by Extradition.

When the case of lawyer John K. VanNess, the "Count" of Sam Allen's farm, was called in the Tombs Police Court, Saturday, the accused was riding about the streets of Plainfield, and as he failed to appear his bail bond of $2,000 was declared forfeited. His surety was Mrs. Mary Jones of 206 Ninth avenue. She was notified, and a bench warrant was issued for Van Ness's arrest.

Previous to Saturday there had been six adjournments of the case at the request of Charles Benton Van Winkle, who has been working hard for the accused lawyer, devoting much time to consultations at the Allen farm where Van Ness claimed to be laid up with a sprained ankle.

Vanness was counsel for James A. Waldron in a suit between him and his brother, Dykeman Waldron. A verdict for $1,000, the amount claimed, was rendered in favor of Van Ness's client, and Dykeman gave the lawyer his note for $1,000 payable to his brother James. It is claimed that Van Ness added the words, "or John K. Van Ness, attorney," and cashed the check, appropriating the money to himself. It was on this forgery charge that Van Ness was arrested.

Several other civil suits are pending against him, and deputy sheriff Upham was in court to arrest him Saturday, should he appear, on a judgment of $4,300. Several lawyers' clerks were also present to serve him with papers in various other civil actions. But the "Count" stayed home. An effort to indict and extradite him will be made this week.

Van Ness is a short, red-bearded man, often seen about the City Hotel and on Plainfield's business streets. He always carries a black sachel.

He says that the reason he was not present in court Saturday was because the counsel on both sides had agreed to a postponement until Wednesday. He will go to New York to-day, his lawyer says. The claim for $4,300 is all right according to Van Ness himself. He'll go into court and not only agree that he had it but will show what he did with it and present his claim for a lot more, he alleges, is due him from the same source and which he proposes to get.

A Fine Course at All Souls' Church.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, is now staying at Cleveland, Ohio, with Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins, who is to lecture in Plainfield April 11. Mrs. Hall writes thus of Mrs. Perkins: "She is a very bright woman and an active worker and thinker, editing a newspaper and belonging to five literary clubs, in addition to her regular lecture work. Her lecture on 'Margaret Fuller the thinker, and Mary Lyon the worker', meets with high praise from many quarters, and will, I am sure, be much enjoyed and appreciated in Plainfield. Mrs. Perkins's daughter, Miss Emma Perkins, is professor of Latin at the Womans' college here, and is rapidly following in the footsteps of her mother. She has already gained distinction as a writer and instructor. She is a Vassar graduate, and was valedictorian of her class."

This lecture is one of a course of six afternoon lectures (one dollar for the course) to be given at All Souls' church. The first lecture is on "Helen Hunt Jackson", by Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, March 27, at 4 p. m.

Surprised.

A surprise party was given to Mr. and Mrs. James D. Anderson, of Manning avenue, Thursday evening. Among those present were Miss Jessie Cresse, of Newark, Miss Jennie Bolden, Miss Rose Becker and Mr. Gallagher, of Raritan, Miss Sadie Emmons, of New Germantown, Miss Green, Miss Schenck, the Misses Wikoff, Miss VanWinkle, Mrs. Green, and Messrs. Angleman, McVoy, Barber, F. Wikoff, Westphal, Lou Bird, Williams, Harvey Dayton, D. VanWinkle and others from Plainfield. During the evening Miss Cresse favored the company with a recitation, which was much enjoyed by all present. The time passed very pleasantly.

Capt. Martin's Latest Venture.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Frank L. C. Martin, a successful bicycle agent of Plainfield, has decided to start a branch store in this city, which will be ready to supply the people with all wheelmen's necessities. He will occupy for this purpose the store on the corner of Church and George streets now occupied by Leitheiser & Zimmerman's barber shop. Kelsey Wyckoff, of Bayonne, has secured the management of this branch store, and intends establishing here as soon as possible.

THE "REV." ROBERTSON AGAIN.

New York Papers Continue to Call Him a Venerable Fraud.

The methods of Plainfield's "Rev." D. F. Robertson were again exposed by a New York paper Sunday, this time by the Sunday Advertiser. In a long article the Advertiser tells how the "Rev." Robertson ran the "New York Juvenile Guardian Society" for more than forty years. Indeed, the institution is said to be still in existence, though much discredited and emaciated through the persistent exposures of the newspaper press. Nature had richly gifted Mr. Robertson, it seemed, with the physical and mental attributes requisite to success in his peculiar line. Tall and venerable looking, his naturally fine appearance had been added to by time, silvering his locks and imparting a patriarchal dignity to his aspect. Impelled by divine inspiration to "serve the Lord in the foreign mission field", Mr. Robertson left Scotland at an early age, and when he came to New York decided to stay, "as there was a great field uncovered here".

The Advertiser gives a telling showing of the "society's" finances. The lesson taught by these figures is, that in order to distribute $626 in charity, the New York Juvenile Guardian society was obliged to expend $5,891. A truly remarkable financial exposition! Mr. Robertson's own explanation of this surprising condition of things is, that by the time he took out his salary, the collectors got their percentage, "and the other expenses were paid", there was "very little left for charity".

It should be borne in mind that Mr. Robertson always had a genius for finance. He tells himself of his first notable transaction in this line, when in 1845 he was accused of misappropriating $11,000 subscribed for the building of a church. "But, by the help of the Lord, I went through it all." Quite a suggestive way of putting it. When business is slack—a now not infrequent occurrence—at the Bleecker street office of the society, the growler is said to be worked by the staff in order to dispel ennui. This practice became so notorious at one time that Mr. Listand, the landlord of the premises, complained about it to the "Rev." Mr. Robertson, who as a rule is not much in the office but takes things easy out at his home in Plainfield, and when he comes to town does so at a fashionable hour.

At Rest.

The body of Miss Dolly Vashti Ryder, late sister of Edward Ryder, of Central avenue, and daughter of ex-councilman S. C. Ryder, was brought from Jersey City, Thursday, for interment, which was made in the North Plainfield cemetery. The body reposed in a white casket, which was opened at the grave to permit the large gathering of friends to take a last look at her dear dead face. The Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated, and spoke tenderly of the departed spirit, and comfortingly to the bereaved ones. There was a profusion of floral offerings, including three large pieces. The body was laid to rest beside that of Miss Ryder's mother. The bearers were all young men from New York, friends of the deceased—Messrs. William Luke, Charles Luke, George Ryan, Paul Stillman, Jesse Hamilton and Oscar Hyde.

THREE TIMES STABBED.

An Unfortunate Machinist Foully Assaulted by a Plainfield Tough.

"You're a very bad boy" said judge Coddington last Monday to James Donovan, who was a prisoner on the charge of stabbing John Porter.

Porter is a machinist at Potter's Press Works. He was so intoxicated Saturday night that he does not remember what happened to him. Witnesses, however, state that Porter visited the section shop at 33 West Front street and was plagued by young fellows who kept pulling at the bottle of rum in his pocket. He struck at the crowd and hit James Donovan. Donovan pulled a knife and gave Porter three ugly slashes—one on the shoulder, one on the face, and a cowardly thrust in the back. Porter's left eye just missed being gouged out.

Policeman Frederickson saw that a rumpus was in progress, and charged on the mob. He caught Donovan as that youth was running, and locked up him and Porter.

On Tuesday judge Coddington let off Porter with a $5 fine.

Donovan told the court a number of lies in one breath, and the judge got disgusted and said "I don't believe a word you say. Your very countenance shows your wickedness and guilt." Donovan sneered at this, and the court sent him to jail for 60 days.

When locked in a cell the youth said "I'll kill Porter when I get out." The grand jury will be asked to indict him and give him a longer term.

Donovan is about 19 years old, with a closely-cropped bull head, an incipient beard of fuzz, stooping shoulders, a sneakish hang-dog look, and a tattooed ring on the middle finger of his right hand.

TOILET WARDROBE.

To Be Constructed by the Family's "Mechanical" Member.

How to Make Ample Provision for Proper Toilet Accommodations in the Sleeping Rooms of Dwelling Houses.

One of the most inconvenient elements in the architecture of the average dwelling house is a conspicuous absence of light, well-ventilated clothes presses or closets and provision for proper toilet accommodations in the sleeping apartments. In building a house it seems common to swing a door in front of each dark space or "cubby hole" which by the plan of the house may happen to occur, usually behind a chimney or under a stairway. If the too prevalent idea that nice closets and set bowls are a "waste of room" has deprived the reader of these essentials in his home, my suggestion for a portable "toilet wardrobe" will interest him. By using portiere curtains and omitting drawers it may be constructed by the "mechanical member" of the family, though it should be carpenter built if the doors and drawers are wanted, as shown in accompanying illustration, as the amateur cabinetmaker would find the construction of these to involve knotty problems in the science of joiner work not easy to be overcome.

The engraving furnishes a plan sufficient for an intelligent carpenter accustomed to inside work to build from. The dimensions will, of course, vary with requirements of each case. A length of eight feet will allow of the wardrobe on either side of the center space, which latter is to be devoted to the toilet purposes. Of course either or both may be left off. Preferably the shelving should be removable, resting on cleats. The top shelf of the wardrobe is intended for hats and bonnets, and should be so placed as to allow of accommodating such articles, hooks screwed to the under surface being used for hanging dresses and coats; while the space beneath the lower shelf is intended for shoes and rubbers. To the inside of the door a mirror may be fastened, the surface below this being occupied by a slipper case made of fancy cloth or silk—colored canton-flannel tacked on with brass or nickel-headed tacks answer admirably. A towel rack may also be here, the bar at the back, as shown in the engraving, being replaced by a "splasher." This "splasher" need be nothing more elaborate than a plaited length of white muslin fastened in place by a piece of prettily-colored ribbon at top and bottom. Side corner shelves give place for toothbrush and soap dishes; drawers provide dust-proof storage for spare linen, towels, etc., while the small door at the right may cover an apartment devoted to a shoe-blacking outfit. The long shelf above all is a safe place for "emergency supplies" and family medicines. I know of no other way of securing such a multitude of advantages within the space of a few feet, as may be had by adopting the plan of building a portable "toilet wardrobe," and I have never seen one which answers all purposes so well as this.—American Agriculturist.

DRESSING GOWNS.

Every Woman Should Have Several of These Useful Garments.

The dressing gown is a garment which rarely, if ever, receives the attention it deserves. We spend a vast amount of time on our tea gowns, tea jackets, and even our bed jackets; but the dressing gown proper—the cosy gown of woolen material, which is only to be worn in our bedrooms, or which, under the influence of illness, might be allowed recognition for a few hours during the morning—is, to a certain extent, ignored by us.

A dressing gown does not lend itself to very original treatment, for it is absolutely necessary for its success that it should fasten down the center of the front. A pretty model is made in a light shade of green camel's hair cashmere, and the front is of white crepon, arranged to form a jabot at the neck; whilst its elbow sleeves are full and wide, and the back is a Watteau. It is always advisable to have the sleeves of a dressing gown wide at the wrists, in case one wants to slip it over a night gown.

Another pretty dressing gown is made of light blue crepon, with a deep collar round the shoulders, showing a round, gathered yoke of soft white crepe de Chine, and the deep cuffs reaching to the elbow, with the full sleeves, are also of the white crepe de Chine, while from the center of the front and back the material hangs in loose, straight folds.

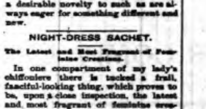
NIGHT-DRESS SACHET.

The Latest and Most Fragrant of Feminine Creations.

In one compartment of my lady's chiffoniere there is tucked a frail, fanciful-looking thing, which proves to be, upon a close inspection, the latest and most fragrant of feminine creations. It is a night-dress sachet, carefully laid apart in its own drawer, quite away from any other odor which might detract from the rarity of the perfume permeating the lovely novelty. Evidently madame has determined to drift into dreamland surrounded by an atmosphere of bewildering fragrance.



THE NIGHT-DRESS SACHET.

This night-dress sachet is a charming affair of misty muslin and lustrous satin. It is of oblong shape, the outside cover being fashioned from sheer white muslin, delicately painted, beneath which glows an inner lining of exquisitely tinted satin. Wide, vaporous frills of muslin flutter about the edges and the corners are garnished with coquettish bows. A padding of cotton is, of course, employed, this being generously sprinkled with Napoleon violet powder, sweet patchouly leaves, or the sandalwood chips so suggestive of oriental woods and spices.

Beneath these perfumed covers the robe de nuit is placed, gathering amid its cascades of frothy lace and frou-frou of ribbons the subtle fragrance of its dainty snuggery.—Dorothy Maddox, in Chicago News.

CLEANING A ROOM.

A System Which Reduces the Labor Necessary to a Minimum.

Remove the draperies, and dust and remove all small articles. Dust all the furniture, removing the lighter articles and covering the heavy pieces [illegible] and cover the pianos. Brush the walls and ceilings, being careful to [illegible] windows. Brush all dust from the window frames, lattices and blinds. If there be rugs on a bare floor, roll them up and put them out of doors to be beaten and aired; then sweep the floor with a soft brush. After all the dusting and washing of windows has been finished, rub the floor with a soft, dry cloth. If it be a stained or painted floor, wipe it a second time with a cloth slightly dampened with kerosene; or, if it be polished, do the polishing at this time. If the room be carpeted, sweep it with a clean broom; if the carpet be very dusty, sprinkle over it, before sweeping, corn meal or sawdust, slightly dampened; or, if it be more convenient, take dry salt. Let the dust settle, then sweep the carpet a second time. Now dust the room, wash the windows and remove the covers from the furniture and pictures. After this has been done, put two gallons of tepid water in a pail with four tablespoonfuls of household ammonia. Wring a cloth out of this and wipe the carpet, rubbing hard to remove any dust. Beat the rugs by spreading them face down on clean grass or a smooth board and beating with a switch or rattan beater. If it be impossible to lay them flat, hang them on a line and beat them. Place them on the floors and put the furniture, ornaments and draperies in place. Clean one or more rooms in this manner on Wednesday morning. Prepare the noon-day meal, and after this has been served, and the dining-room and kitchen put in order, rest until it is time to attend to the evening meal. But do rest, and rest, not by doing something else, but thoroughly.—Ladies' Home Journal.

PRETTY WORK BAG.

How to Make a Useful and Handy Present for Grandma.

This bag consists of two parts. The full bag is seven inches high, with a three-inch hem, which is lined with cream satinette and drawn with two ribbon strings, made of blue satin, but frilled with either lace or net embroidered with yellow silk.

To make this, cut two bands of stout canvas nine inches by twenty inches, slope them gradually to eight and one-half inches, sew them together, and join to the base a piece of blue velvet ten inches by eight inches, which gather all around to an inside wire, introduced to give more firmness and secure a good shape to this roomy receptacle, which is also fulled at its widest part to a second wire, on each side of which hangs a cordeliere loop as handle.—Detroit Free Press.

Cinnamon Cakes.

These are nice for tea and are made as follows: Mix thoroughly half pound each of powdered sugar, of fine flour and butter, quarter ounce of sifted cinnamon, the grated peel of half a small lemon, two well-beaten eggs, a teacup [illegible] of sour cream and a sherry glass full of brandy. When the paste is smooth roll it out and bake on a flat, buttered tin.

A HEALTHY GARMENT.

An Improvement on the Popular Divided Skirt.

It Answers the Purpose of Waist, Skirt and Drawers—A Description of Some of the Excellencies of the New Pattern.

Miss Anne E. Tabor, a trained nurse of the Battle Creek sanitarium, has recently remodeled and greatly improved the always popular divided skirt, and has thus rendered it a still more convenient and comfortable garment. A cut showing ordinary proportions and a description of its many excellencies are given herewith.

In this style of divided skirt, the waist, yoke and skirt are united in one garment, and the divide does not show even through the thinnest of dress fabrics. The waist has six seams and two darts, and is allowed to run down over the hips, thus giving a better form, and also reducing the weight of the garment. The skirt is simply straight breadths, and in order to hang well must have five widths of goods that is one yard wide. It is in two parts, the upper portion of each being shaped like drawers, and as short in the body as can be worn with comfort, as, if cut too long there, the skirt has a tendency to wrap about the limbs. Leave the skirt open down the front only so far as is necessary for convenience in getting on and off. The inner side of the leg must be about one and one-half inches longer than the outer, to make it hang properly. The divide is hidden in this way: When the skirt is sewed on the yoke there are three inches left out on each side of the front and back. This is folded back on the inside, and being gathered a little, is caught to the yoke with the rest. Thus two folds meet in front and two in the back, and being gathered quite full they hang closely together, while the inside of the leg fits exactly like a pair of drawers. An ordinary stocking supporter with two attachments at the top will fasten to the waist of the skirt at the first dart and the second seam. Six and one-half yards of thirty-six-inch goods makes this garment for an adult.

This convenient garment answers the purpose of waist, skirt and drawers, and when made of woolen material and worn over a union suit, is warm and comfortable for winter; and when made of summer skirting and worn over gauze underwear, it is correspondingly light and cool in the summer season.

To those who have been in the habit of wearing the old style divided skirt, we feel sure that the improvements named will commend themselves as comfortable, hygienic and economical.—Good Health.

OUR USEFUL BASKET.

If your skin is harsh and dry, use glycerine in a warm bath, and you will note a decided improvement.

A sack of the best salt standing where there is a smell of fish or any objectionable odor will absorb the flavor.

Castor oil has not failed in any case to remove warts to which it was applied once a day for two to six weeks.

To clean bottles, cut a raw potato into small pieces and put into the bottle with very little water. Shake vigorously until the bottle is clean.

To prevent the hair from coming out take one pint of bay rum, and [illegible] ounce of quinine, mix and apply to the scalp twice a day with a [illegible] cloth, rubbing it in well.

It is said there is no manufactured article of powder better than ordinary corn starch, the kind used for culinary purposes. It gives the desired smoothness to the face, and is perfectly harmless.

People who are fond of sea bathing in summer should know that in winter a most effective and yet simple substitute for sea water is a cup of rock salt dissolved in warm water and added to the bath. A warm salt bath of this kind is the most refreshing tonic for an exhausted body. But don't go out of doors after taking it; just before going to bed is the right time.

For small families it is well to remember that celery can be kept a week or longer by first rolling it in dark brown paper, then pinning it in a towel and laying away in a cool, dark place. Before preparing it for the table place it in a pan of cold water and let it remain for an hour. Thus kept the celery will bleach to a considerable extent and be finer than when first purchased.

Marble is a very difficult article to clean if it is stained in such a way that the stain has sunk into the stone. Slight stains may be easily removed with a pumice stone, or with vigorous scrubbing. Greasy stains are best removed with a paste of fuller's earth applied in the same way it is to wall paper. It is said that stains of ink on marble may be removed by hydrochloric acid, which is a powerful poison, and must be washed off with water almost as soon as it is applied to prevent it eating into the stone.

NEAT SOFA CUSHION.

Made from the Ends of a Muffler and a Strip of Plush.

Having the ends of a worn-out knit muffler and a strip of plush, I combined them to make a very pretty sofa pillow. The plush was cut in points, as shown in the illustration, and turned down in each pointed edge, put over the three-cornered knit pieces and stitched down; then cord was fastened with thread and needle all along the line of stitching. When the square formed by the strip of plush and the two triangular knit pieces was made perfectly true, a piece to correspond with this was cut from silk for the opposite side of the cushion and each of these was lined with silesia before the cushion was sewed up. Heavy cord and tassels finish the cushion. This cushion has been greatly admired, and did I not state that the knitted corners were made from the ends of an old-fashioned muffler, the fact would not be known. In these days of furs and silk mufflers the knitted ones are not much used, and I doubt if many have been saved as I saved this. I have been tempted many times to consign it to the rag bag, but although the center of it was badly worn the ends were good, and I thought it would probably come in handy sometime. There are very few articles of this kind that cannot be turned into usefulness one way or another, but some of us are slow to appropriate things. In making the sofa cushion I have described, I acted on the suggestion of a friend.—Mrs. Harter, in Prairie Farmer.

HINTS FOR THE KITCHEN.

Eyeglasses may be best polished with a bit of newspaper.

To keep eggs fresh, glaze with the white of an egg and keep in a cool place.

Immerse lemons in clear cold water, change it every day, and they will keep fresh for weeks.

To clean gilding brush off dust with a feather brush. Never wipe with linen, it takes off and deadens gilding.

The moment used knives are taken to the kitchen they should be dipped into warm water and wiped, taking care not to wet the handles.

Is it not desirable to hang a few pictures in the kitchen, and in other ways make it as attractive and comfortable as possible for those who work in it?

Knives are often stained by fruit or vinegar. The stains can be removed by rubbing them with a piece of raw potato before they are cleaned on the board.

To clean a metal tea pot put it into a solution of common soda boiling hot; let it stand twelve hours near the fire; then pour it away and wipe with a clear cloth.—Old Homestead.

A Dainty Dessert.

Caramel pudding is delicious when prepared as follows: Boil a handful of loaf sugar in a gill of water till the sirup becomes a deep brown; warm a small basin, pour the sirup into it and keep the basin in your hand till the inside is all coated with the sirup, or caramel, which will by that time have set. Mix the yolks of eight eggs gradually and thoroughly with a pint of milk and pour this mixture into the prepared mold. Cover the mold with a piece of paper, place it in a pan of cold water three parts full, put that cover on the pan and let it all boil gently on the side of the fire for half an hour. Then lift the saucepan into a cool place, and when the water in it is quite cold lift out the mold and turn out the pudding very carefully.

Manufacture of Cod Liver Oil.

The process of manufacturing cod liver oil at Portugal Cove, Newfoundland, is as follows: It requires, as a rule, 2½ gallons of liver to produce a gallon of oil. The livers are first carefully washed, and must then be "cooked" at once. For this process they are first put into a large tin boiler, which is plunged into a large iron boiler filled with hot water, the water not being allowed to touch the livers, which are thus gently steamed till a quantity of oil is floating on the surface. This is dipped out and filtered through bags of moleskin. The last filtration leaves the oil perfectly transparent, and without any unpleasant taste or smell. The oil is exported in 40 gallon casks.

Her Bent Is Inventive.

Among distinguished women inventors Mrs. Ella Gaillard is noted for the number and variety of her original productions, which include the eyeless needle, now used by surgeons, the musical top, a folding flatiron, a musical fountain, a superior kind of dress shield and sweat band for hats, a key which registers whether the door is locked or not, a musical paper weight and calendar combined, and a carriage telephone.

Remedy for Earache.

Dip a little cotton into sweet oil, heated as hot as can be borne, and drop it in the ear, previously preparing the ear for the cotton by raising the upper portion and drawing it upward and backward, so as to open and straighten the canal. Chloroform, laudanum and similar substances should never be put into the ear. Cotton should be introduced only with a pair of [illegible] forceps or tweezers.

His Ter'ble Revenge.

"So!" exclaimed Harold Vere de Vere, folding his arms and regarding the young woman with a stern, pitiless gaze, "you have cast me aside, Mabel Featherbone, in order to get a rich widower, have you?"

"If you choose to speak of it in that coarse manner, Mr. Vere de Vere," she replied, raising her head and meeting his gaze haughtily, "I have, sir! I have promised to marry Mr. Wagonsellers."

Harold Vere de Vere crushed his hat down over his eyes and staggered for the door.

"Mabel Featherbone," he said, pausing with his hand on the door-knob, "you have thrown me over for a man with a bar'l! You will find he is not the only man with a bar'l. I have one at home filled with your love letters! I shall sell them to the ragman! Good evening!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Happy Suggestion.

Histrionic Aspirant—Now, my dear Mr. Scribble, won't you write me a play suitable to my attainments?

Scribble—Why, yes, Mrs. Holloway. Suppose I write a comedy in which you appear as an amateur actor? You would do that splendidly.—Puck.

Too Thirsty to Talk.

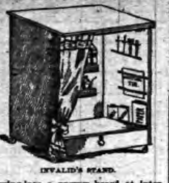
STAND FOR INVALIDS.

A Simple Yet Convenient Piece of Furniture.

It Costs But Fifty Cents and a Little Ingenuity to Make It—A Sort of Catch-All for Unconsidered Trifles.

For the unfortunates who are "shut in" week after week by broken limb, convalescence or lingering disease, employment for mind, and, so far as strength will bear it, for the body also will materially aid recovery. Many idle hours are spent by those confined to lounge or chair because they are not able to work long enough at a time to make it seem worth while to trouble some one to bring out, and soon after put away, the materials for work. A stand like this will not cost more than 50 cents if all materials are bought—say box, 10 cents; another to make into drawer and shelves, 10 cents; castors, 15 cents; curtain, 5 cents; wall paper to line inside, 2 or 3 cents; nails, 2 or 3 cents. The box should be 27 inches high, 15 deep and 18 wide or thereabouts. If bottom of box is not one inch or thicker put board across each end to receive the castors.

Put a drawer 6 inches deep in the bottom, divided into compartments for knitting needles and work, for crochet hooks and yarns, for sewing materials, thread, silks, pieces, etc. Over this place a shelf, which is to be left clear that the work may be laid safely away for a moment's rest. Above this a shelf, 4 inches wide, for medicine bottles, cups, etc., if the invalid must be her own nurse and look after these herself. Draw a curtain before the stand if wished. Above this another shelf, on which may be laid a few books, magazines or games. A railing in front of the shelves to keep things from jarring off when the stand is rolled, is made by sawing into a narrow board at intervals of one and two inches and removing the two-inch alternates. A top can be added and be made to project an inch or more, if liked.



INVALID'S STAND.

The inside finish may be some cheerful fine figured pattern, or plain blue or straw-colored wall paper. The outside may also be painted, the cracks first being filled with putty, or papered, or hung with a cloth-like curtain, put on slightly fulled. A white oilcloth cover or a fancy towel may be laid across the top. A few screw hooks placed near the top of the inside for hanging shears, scissors, etc., is a convenience. Nail a narrow strip of board at one side and three inches above tack a strip of web elastic, putting in a tack at intervals of an inch, thus making a place for inserting pen, pencil, ruler, knife, etc. Tack pockets upon the inside for holding paper, envelopes, letters and postals; also for pincushion and flannel leaves for needles. Hem the curtain. A piece of large wire passing through the curtain hem rests in screw eyes at each corner, or the wire may be bent up at ends and a putty ball put on, which may be painted or gilded.

A writing tin is a convenience which no invalid who uses a pen should be without. It is a sheet of tin about 7 by 10 inches, with one or two elastic cords around it. Slip the paper under these cords to hold it, in place for writing, or to lay one side for a brief rest. The tin is firm, smooth, and yet so light that it can be held in one hand, or rested against the knee when it is in use.—Orange Judd Farmer.

A Woman Did It.

It has remained for a woman to invent and patent glass doors for ovens. The wonder is that the idea has not long ago been thought of by some woman who cooks. All cooking instructors lay the greatest stress on the care to be observed in opening an oven door to watch the progress of cakes or muffins. Maria Parloa, making sponge cake, touches the knob with the most delicate care and lightness, dreading even to jar the cake within, and peeks through the smallest crack that will afford the necessary glance. What a relief to walk boldly up to the oven and through these transparent doors, which the genius of a Michigan woman has discovered, study at leisure the progress of rising cake dough or crisping fowl.

Apple Sauce Dumplings.

Pare and core eight large sour apples, stew soft in a sirup made of one cup of sugar, one cup of water, one teaspoonful of butter, and one-fourth of a grated nutmeg. Mix one quart of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a cup of butter, a little salt and water enough to make a soft dough. Roll thin, cut into diamonds or rounds, place them upon the surface of the boiling apple sauce, cover and cook twenty minutes. Serve in sauce plates. These conveniently and speedily-manufactured dumplings are light and delicious.

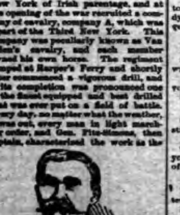
Flavoring Canned Pears.

Pears that after canning prove to be tasteless can be made delicious by heating and adding pineapple in the proportion of one can of pineapple to three of pears. Cut the slices of apple quite small, and if the pears are in halves, divide them again. Heat all together, taking care not to let them cook so that they lose their shape. When putting up pears it is very little trouble to add pineapple to a few cans, and the result is excellent, since the pear becomes perfectly flavored with pineapple, and yet is far more easily digested.

A GALLANT SOLDIER.

The Commander of the First Brigade, Illinois National Guard.

The commander of the first brigade, Illinois national guard, Gen. Charles Fitz-Simons, of Chicago, was born in New York of Irish parentage, and at the opening of the war recruited a company of cavalry, company A, which was a part of the Third New York. This company was peculiarly known as Van Allen's cavalry, and each member owned his own horse. The regiment camped at Harper's Ferry and shortly after commenced a vigorous drill, and at its completion was pronounced one of the finest equipped and best drilled that was ever put on a field of battle. Every day, no matter what the weather, it was out, every man in light marching order, and Gen. Fitz-Simons, the captain, characterized the work as the [illegible]



GEN. CHARLES FITZ-SIMONS.

[illegible]

Captain of company A, Third New York, July 17, 1861; major of the same on May 15 of the following year and promoted to lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-first New York cavalry in October, 1863. For gallant and meritorious services he was breveted brigadier general on March 13, 1865, and after serving one year on the frontier he was mustered out of service at Denver, June 26, 1866.

Since 1881 he has been in command of the First brigade, but a short time ago handed in his resignation, which was not accepted. He is every inch a soldier, and is loved and respected by all his men.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary, Boston, Mass.

Mr. Lafferty (haughtily)—Don't be so stuck-up, Mrs. Lafferty. You needn't t'ink dthere air no other fools in dthis wor-r-rld besides yoursilf.—Puck.

Well Said.

Flattery, when delicately administered, cannot fail to be acceptable. "You forget that I am an old woman," said a lady, in response to an admiring remark from one of the old school. "Madam," was the reply, "when my eyes are dazzled by a diamond it never occurs to me to ask a mineralogist for its history." Horace Walpole in dining with the duchess of Queensborough on her eightieth birthday, said, in proposing her health: "May you live, your grace, until you begin to grow ugly!" Her ladyship's tongue was as ready as his own. She replied: "I thank you, Mr. Walpole. May you long continue your taste for antiquities!"—Waverly Magazine.

OLD HOOP SKIRTS.

Historic Freaks in the Fashion of Dress Expansion.

The Truth About the Farthingale, Hoop Skirt and Crinoline of the Ladies and the Trunk Hose of the Men.

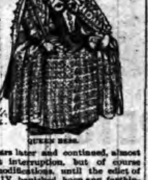
[Special Letter.]

Just at this time, with all the talking and writing about the suggested revival of the fashion of distended skirts in connection with the costuming of the fair sex, there is a great confusion of farthingale, hoops and crinoline, and a pretty general misunderstanding of the close similarity, and yet entire distinctness of these three fashions.

Their effects were similar enough to warrant this confusion, but they were produced in ways as different as the times to which they belonged were remote from each other.

The oldest of these three freaks of fashion is the farthingale, which is generally admitted to have had its beginning in Spain, and to have been introduced in England by Queen Mary as a compliment to her Spanish consort, Philip II. We know that the Catalonian women of Spain were leaders of the fashion of wearing the distended petticoat, securing the desired shape of expansion by means of wire hoops, but it is doubtful if they are entitled to the credit of inventing the farthingale.

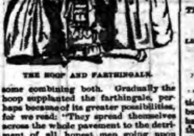
In England, as early as the reign of Richard, in the fourteenth century, the ladies, not content with the contour nature had bestowed upon them, began stuffing and padding their petticoats at the hips, so that the dress stood out much in the shape produced by the farthingale of a later period. This seems to have been the beginning of a fashion that came into full vigor a hundred years later and continued, almost without interruption, but of course with modifications, until the edict of George IV. banished hoop and farthingale from England.



QUEEN BESS.

The house of Tudor was given to extravagances in all features of dress. Henry VIII. encouraged extremes, Mary brought the farthingale to its height of popularity and Elizabeth, in spite of her hatred of everything Spanish, maintained the ruff and farthingale to the end of her reign, dying with three thousand costumes in her wardrobe. And the name of the farthingale is vertingale, derived from vertu-garde, the French for virtue-guardian. It was made of wire, shaped to set upon the hips, a sort of bustle that went all the way round, and the dress fell over it and hung straight down, as shown in the accompanying picture of Queen Elizabeth, where she appears in ruff, stomacher and farthingale. It was not until many years after her death that the hoop came into use to inflate the drapery below the farthingale. It is said the ladies at first found the fashion inconvenient and unpleasant, but they remembered the adage: "One must suffer to be beautiful." So as the reign advanced the farthingale puffed out more and more over the hips, and the ruff about the neck grew more wide—extending to keep the dress company.

But the fashions of the Tudors were objects of reform during the Cromwellian supremacy, so that little was seen or known of ruff and farthingale up to the time of James II. They then revived, and along with them came the hoop, and for many years they reigned supreme, so that the fashion plates of those days contain groups of ladies, some in farthingale, some in hoops and some combining both. Gradually the hoop supplanted the farthingale, perhaps because of its greater possibilities, for we read: "They spread themselves across the whole pavement to the detriment of all honest men going upon business along the street."



THE HOOP AND FARTHINGALE.

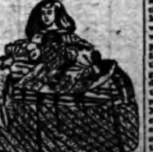
There were various modifications of size and shape, and they expanded and contracted between the extremes of "the size of a butter churn and the circumference of three hogsheads;" and they sloped straight outward from the waist to the ground, or carried the convolution of an inverted bow, as the men of to-day remember the hoopskirts of the sixties and thereabouts.

We find this terse paragraph in the Spectator: "Since your withdrawing from this place the fair sex are run into great extravagance. Their petticoats, which began to heave and swell before you left us are now blown up into a most enormous concave, * * * What the ladies have lost in height by the reduction of their coiffures they make up in breadth, and, contrary to all rules of architecture, widen the foundation at the same time they shorten the superstructure."

One of the extremes of this period is illustrated in the Velasquez painting of Infanta Maria, of Spain, a rephotographic reproduction of which is presented here. Of this young queen it is remarked: "She was an attractive princess in spite of the most hideous costume ever invented."

It was humorously remarked that the reign of the hoop portended the downfall of the French king as the reign of its ancestor the farthingale preceded the ruin of the Spanish monarchy.

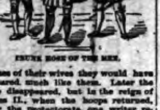
During the reign of George I. the hoop underwent important changes, accompanied by abbreviations of the dress above and below, until the whole kingdom was scandalized. This was the climax of the storm before the [illegible] was cleared by the edict of George IV., who, with [illegible] good taste in all things relating to the toilette, banished hoop and farthingale as both being "cumbersome and inelegant." But he could not control it beyond his reign. A writer of the period says: "The opinion of so good a judge as King George sealed their death warrant, and they disappeared never, we may hope, to return, at least among the British fair, though anti-hoopists have had cause to tremble lately lest it should resume its place in the wardrobe of modern fashionables, for a certain crinoline, or horsehair jupe, has recently astonished the world by its marked resemblance to its ancestor of famous memory."



INFANTA MARIA.

The crinoline was a petticoat woven of horsehair, and so stiff that it answered the purpose of the hoop. But it was expensive, and the expansion fashion coming again into vogue the hoops of the middle of this century came as an economical substitute.

There was a time in the past when the men vied with the ladies in the extravagance of dress, and the oddities of their costumes at different periods of history are familiar to all. But few know that they once imitated the ladies in the farthingale fashion, and that the historic "trunk hose" is but an affectation of that costume of the fair sex. The trunk hose came into vogue during the reign of James I., and some of the men used to stuff them so at the top with rags and other things as to extend them in compass in rivalry with the enormous and stately farthingale of the ladies. To so great an extent was this expansion about the hips of the men carried that had they donned the dresses of their wives they would have appeared much like them. Later the style disappeared, but in the reign of James II., when the hoops returned, after the protectorate, one writer remarked: "If men also adopt the old fashion of trunk hose, a man and wife would fill a whole pew in church." We have the fashion in the paintings of Raleigh, Bacon, Drake, Fairfax, Villiers and others. It never revived, but when the hoop was at the zenith of its influence the men could not resist the extravagance, so that during the first of the Georges they changed the doublet for a coat with tails, and expanded these with wires to rival the hoop petticoat, and this fashion remained a favorite with the men until the good sense of George IV. dismissed it with the hoop of the ladies.



TRUNK HOSE OF THE MEN.

GEORGE S. MCDOWELL.

A Scottish King's Park.

A novel idea for a park was that of King James V., of Scotland, who founded the palace of Holyrood about 1528, by building a house to reside in, with a circular turret at each angle. To accommodate himself with a park King James inclosed a large tract of ground in the neighborhood of this palace with a stout wall about three miles in circumference, which, as Maitland says, in his "History of Edinburgh," instead of trees and thickets, for, which other parks abound with, I could not, after the strictest search, discover one tree therein, in lieu whereof, it is supplied with huge rocks and vast declivities, which furnish the Edinburgers with the best of stones to pave their streets withal; as do the other parts of the said park yield good pasturage and meadow grounds, with considerable spots of arable land." Two hundred years after, however, the level portion was covered with magnificent oaks.—Garden and Forest.

Costume News.

A paper before us says that Mrs. Blank was "gowned in mauve silk." We are not informed, however, whether Mrs. Jones was petticoated in ecru, and we are all left in the dark as to whether or not Mrs. Smith was hatted in cream color. While he was about it the writer should have told us that Mr. Snobb was caned in malacca, that Mr. Dadeleigh was ringed in sapphire, and that Mr. Dash was evening dressed in broadcloth garnished with satin.—Boston Transcript.

YANKEE MICAWBERS.

Thousands of Them Are Now in the National Capital.

Like Their English Prototype They Are Waiting for Something to Turn Up—In the Meantime Their Families Will Suffer.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The official atmosphere of the national capitol is changing thoroughly but gradually. President Cleveland has some ideas of his own concerning the proper administration of the executive departments, and it is well-known that among his most positive views concerning such administration is the idea that a rotation in office should be very slow and conservative. In consequence of this determination on the part of the chief magistrate to the republic the changes in the offices which are occurring are scarcely perceptible up to date. Of course, you have read in the daily papers concerning the principal appointments which have been made; and it was presumed that these changes would occur early in the administration, as they ought to occur.

In a letter written to this paper last winter the attention of readers was called to the fact that it is necessary during the first month or two of an administration for the president to devote his time to the selection of the principal assistants of his cabinet officers. The assistant postmasters general will have to be selected, the assistants to the secretary of the treasury, and the assistants to the other secretaries require almost as much time and consideration at the hands of the president as the selection of the original members of his cabinet. As stated in a former letter these assistants very frequently are required to act for the heads of the departments, and upon them must devolve the great responsibilities of the highest offices. Therefore they must be men of signal ability and knowledge of public affairs.

Of course until these selections could be made, it was impossible for any changes to be ordered in the minor offices, such as commissionerships and chief clerkships of divisions of bureaus. Moreover, the heads of departments, when they assumed their positions, were well aware of the policy which the president intended should be pursued in the matter of rotation in office, and therefore they have been hesitant about giving consideration to the claims and demands of politicians who believe that they are entitled to employment by reason of the political upheaval last November. Mr. Cleveland is a practical civil service reformer. His views concerning a stable civil service are not confined to the continuance in office of the minor clerks—those who wield the pen and do the actual work of the departments; but he believes and does not hesitate to express the opinion that the chiefs of divisions who have charge of these men, after becoming familiar with the details of their important offices, should not be indiscriminately removed and caused to fear that every change of administration will sever their relations with the government. He desires a stable civil service in every sense of the word and his views are heartily concurred in by every member of his cabinet.

Although the official atmosphere of the city has been changing gradually, the new faces and figures seen upon Pennsylvania avenue and other principal thoroughfares in this city are quite numerous. It is manifest that there are thousands of good people throughout this country who do not agree with the president in his views concerning the civil service. Four years ago the streets were crowded with patriotic republicans who were willing to serve their country for two thousand dollars per annum or more; and to-day their places are taken by gentlemen of the victorious party who are willing to wear the insignia of their patriotic brothers and serve their country for the same salary.

In the hotel lobbies and corridors in the evenings, and in the barrooms throughout the city, these patriotic gentlemen can be heard airing their views concerning the president and his intentions concerning the executive departments. At first they are talking in whispers among intimate friends. As the days go by, however, and their hopes are not fully realized, they will be found talking out loud and expressing their views in more vigorous language. Later on, when their funds are exhausted and they are living in cheap boarding houses instead of first-class hotels, and they are obliged to depend upon the evanescent friendships which they have made here for the stimulants which they imbibe, they will denounce the president and declare that they will go into some other party before the close of the administration. Four years ago a great many disappointed republicans were talking that way, and it is fair to presume that a number of disappointed democrats will soon be airing their views in the same manner.

THEY DENOUNCE THE PRESIDENT.

The chiefs of divisions and other bureau officers who are gradually being displaced are probably realizing that the wheels of government will go right on in spite of the fact that they are to depart. They have been faithful and well-behaved officials in nearly every instance. Of course, during the beginning of the Harrison administration, there was a tendency on the part of some officials to magnify their offices at the expense of the people. This is a very common thing in public life in Washington. When a man is inducted into a prominent office and has messengers to attend his every want, a watchman to look after him whenever he goes out and whenever he comes in, a lackey shoes, and in many instances a horse and coupe in which to drive back and forth from his house to the department, or from his office to various points of interest throughout the city, it is not unnatural that these things should produce a largeness of the head.

The gentlemen who are going out and are now standing with their faces to the sidewalk will realize at least one portion of the lesson of individual littleness which is learned by rotation in office. The gentlemen who are coming in to take the places of the outgoing officials will be troubled with a largeness and flabbiness of their own importance for a time, but they will learn, as so many have learned before them, that each and every individual runs but a very small portion of this great government, and they will ultimately find their own level.

TRYING TO LOOK PLEASANT.

These remarks are not made with any intention to convey disrespect to the outgoing or incoming officials, but to plainly intimate to the reader something of the usually unwritten part of the history of official life in Washington. It is a singular fact that many men throughout this great country will surrender fine business opportunities for the sake of accepting government offices, merely because there is a glamour about the positions to which they aspire and which they ultimately secure.

During the past four years a great many democrats who were removed from office during the Harrison administration have remained in Washington, waiting for their party to come back into power, in order that they might secure offices. Mr. Cleveland has given notice to these people that they will not be eligible for appointment, and there is great consternation in their ranks. The outgoing republicans would be wise if they would go back to their homes and forget that they were ever even for a brief time in power in the executive departments in Washington. They ought not to stand around waiting for some one to offer them a great place with a big salary, because of the positions which they have held. They should not hang on by their eyebrows for four years waiting for their party to come back into power, in order that they may find food and lodging on the government pay roll. They should immediately descend from their perches. These are the words of wisdom. There is nothing more pitiable on earth than to see an ex-official in Washington, who has been accustomed to drawing from one hundred to three hundred dollars per month in crisp bills, fresh from the treasury, hanging around the hotel lobbies, and trying to look pleasant. Each and every one of them could go home, live on small salaries, and have the respect of their friends. But they do not want to go home. They do not want to leave this beautiful city. Hence they remain here until their trousers are fringed, their coats shiny, their hats sorrowful in appearance, their shoes run down at the heel, their credit gone, their self-respect damaged and their families in the depths of woe.

I have seen so much of this thing that it seems advisable at this time to take the responsibility of suggesting to readers that they advise their displaced friends to come home. Hanging about Washington, Micawber-like, "waiting for something to turn up," is discreditable. They should all realize this and, moreover, they should understand that their friends understand the situation. They ought to know that their friends at home do not hold them responsible for the political change which has occurred, but are willing to welcome them back and help them begin life again. You do not realize, and words cannot depict to you, what a trial it is to leave this city after once having lived in it, with ample means. But officeholding is a precarious livelihood at best, and when a man comes to waiting four years for another chance at it, he is growing older all the time and the government has less use for him. Moreover, he is playing a desperate game of chance; for he may have to wait eight or twelve years, or even longer, before his party wins another presidential election. Consequently now is the accepted time to go, to get out, to skip, to disappear from these scenes. It is too bad that fat offices cannot last forever; but when they are lost the displaced official should go forth into the world, with head up and independent bearing, into routine everyday life again. He should bid farewell to every fear and wipe his weeping eyes; and, with a heart for any fate, face the world. There is a good living in it for any man who can learn to labor and to wait for the fruition of his work.

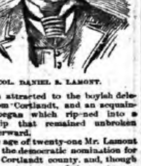
COL. DANIEL LAMONT.

The Youngest Member of Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet.

A Young Man Who Has Enjoyed the Friendship of Democratic Leaders from Samuel J. Tilden Down to the Present Day.

The man whom Mr. Cleveland has chosen to conduct the affairs of the war department, Daniel S. Lamont, is a product of Cortlandt county, New York state, and is the only child of John B. Lamont and Elizabeth Scott, who are still living at McGrawville, a cluster of houses not far distant from the town where the subject of this sketch was born. Mr. Lamont's first experience with affairs, says the Illustrated American, was gleaned behind the counter of a little general store conducted by his father. At the village school, he received sufficient education to enable him to matriculate for the Central academy, which was the successor of a queer institution, known as the New York Central college, established by Gerritt Smith and other abolitionists, for the education of boys and girls without regard to color. At the completion of his academic course young Lamont entered the class of 1872 at Union college. He was a bright and industrious student, and generally had a first place in the rank of scholarship. He early displayed an inclination for politics and public office. Edgar E. Apgar, then prominent in the management of the political affairs of New York state, introduced Lamont to Gov. Hoffman, who had him appointed, at nineteen years of age, to a clerkship of the assembly. When twenty years old Lamont was sent as a delegate to the state convention held at Rochester in 1871. Mr. Lamont is proud of the fact that in that convention he voted on every roll call with Samuel J. Tilden, who at that time was making his famous fight against Tweed and who was already the center of an effective opposition to vast influence in the municipal affairs of the metropolis. Mr. Tilden's attention was attracted to the boyish delegate from Cortlandt, and an acquaintance began which ripened into a friendship that remained unbroken ever afterward.



COL. DANIEL S. LAMONT.

At the age of twenty-one Mr. Lamont received the democratic nomination for clerk of Cortlandt county, and, though his opponent was one of the most popular men in that firmly republican district, he came within a few votes of reversing the majority that had stood for years at 1,600 for the republicans. In 1874 Gov. Tilden made Lamont deputy clerk of the assembly. Later he became chief clerk of the state department under Mr. John Bigelow. Mr. Tilden continued to extend to him marks of his confidence and personal esteem, and he was always among the carefully chosen body of lieutenants whom the great statesman kept under his eye. In the state campaign of 1875, which was directed by Mr. Tilden, Lamont was secretary of the state committee.

After the close of the ill-fated campaign of 1876 Lamont went to Albany and acquired from Mr. Daniel Manning an interest in the Albany Argus. This did not, however, rob him of his interest in politics. He occupied himself closely with the fortunes of the New York democracy, and during the frequent journeys all over the state under the direction of Mr. Tilden he became acquainted with every chief and lieutenant in the wonderful organization that defeated Mr. Cleveland in 1888, and would have done the same in 1892 if it had dared. Cleveland and Lamont met for the first time shortly after the former's first nomination for governor. Just before Cleveland's inauguration as governor Mr. Lamont was offered the post of military secretary of his staff and that place brought him the title of "colonel," which he has since worn. Subsequently he became the governor's private secretary. He continued in that position with Cleveland during his entire term of office as governor, and when the man of destiny went to Washington in 1884 Lamont continued to serve him in the same capacity. After Mr. Cleveland's defeat in 1888 Lamont went to New York city and engaged in the conduct and supervision of various street railways, then owned by William C. Whitney and Oliver H. Payne. He has prospered in that calling, and by this time has certainly acquired a competence.

JEFFERSON'S HEAD.

The Famous Comedian Phrenologically Considered.

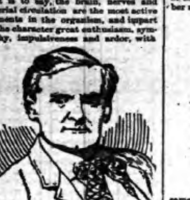
Nature Has Been Kind to the Genial Actor in a Number of Ways—His Personality Is Unique and Hard to Classify.

A well-known phrenologist has felt the head of Mr. Joseph Jefferson, the celebrated comedian, very carefully, and has given to the New York World the following results of his examination:

In the first place nature has been very kind to the great actor in many ways. Few men either on the pinnacles of greatness or the plains of mediocrity possess an equally healthy and wholesome physical and mental balance. He has peculiarities, to be sure, and some that are striking, but they never sting; if he shows any quills they are covered with down.

His personality is unique and not easy to classify in a word. He probably [illegible] from his English ancestors on the paternal side, but the influence of his mother, who was of French extraction, is much more strongly indicated by the form of his head, and undoubtedly predominates. This helps to explain his remarkable vivacity, imagination and many other qualities which are essentially Gallic.

He is 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighs 155 pounds and has a head a little above the full size, measuring 22¼ inches around the line of the hatband. His hair is fine and silken, naturally of a dark chestnut color, and his eyes are sky blue and very expressive. From these and other indications his temperament may be called the nervous-sanguine—that is to say, the brain, nerves and arterial circulation are the most active elements in the organism, and impart to the character great enthusiasm, sympathy, impulsiveness and ardor, with much brilliancy of intellect, versatility of talent and general fertility of mind.



JOSEPH JEFFERSON.

Looking at one or two of the upper and frontal angles of the head it almost suggests the form of a beechnut. But it is well rounded out in the occiput, or that portion which in the typical woman extends backward from the ear like the poll of a hammer. In this region Mr. Jefferson has especially strong love of offspring. This faculty produces not only regard for one's own children, but, in combination with other feelings, it creates also a fondness for domestic animals and, indirectly, colors the mental life in various ways. For example, it often leads to a study of natural history, botany, etc. It is an important element in the character of the model teacher, also that class of benefactors of which Henry Bergh was an illustrious representative. Its influence is very noticeable in the writings of Burns, Dickens and Ingersoll. Among actors, Bernhardt, Sol Smith Russell and Jo Emmet all showed it; and much of Mr. Jefferson's wonderful pathos in the characters of Rip Van Winkle and Caleb Plummer is due to the same trait.

Mr. Jefferson is also gregarious, but somewhat exclusive in his attachments. His conjugal affection is strongly indicated by the depth of his cerebellum and the prominence of his chin, but it is characterized by the utmost refinement and delicacy. This is evident from the form of his lips and eyelids.

The diameter of the side head a little above the ears is only moderate, which betokens a deficiency of the selfish instincts. Especially is this true with regard to the twin propensities of acquisitiveness and secretiveness—the impulses to horde and hide. However, the head widens near the top on a line with money from motives of prudence. There is also an aversion to battle and bloodshed. He is not such a coward as Bob Acres, but he would much rather settle his difficulties by arbitration than war. Still, he is far from being a weak character. On the contrary, he is exceptionally determined and steadfast. He has great will power, and cannot be driven. He yields only when he finds he is wrong or for the sake of some one he loves. This quality of firmness is very easy to estimate, as a rule. It is shown by the mesial height of the head, at the summit of the "auriculo-bregmatic" line. This is drawn perpendicularly from the opening of the ear to the bregma, an anatomical landmark on the top of the skull. All men noted for inflexibility, such as Grant, Conkling, Cleveland and Bismarck, have well developed heads in this region.

Mr. Jefferson has very little order, but superior linguistic talent, great mirthfulness and suavity, remarkable memory, great power for specific observation, fine literary taste and general ability to gather all kinds of knowledge that can be expressed by verbs and concrete nouns. Impressions of physical details are received in his brain with the fidelity of a photographer's camera.

Taken all together he has rare personal gifts, purity of sentiment and a character of which Americans may well be proud.

HAWAIIAN LEADERS.

The Island Delegation Appointed to Secure Annexation.

The first act of the provisional government of Hawaii was the appointment of the five commissioners to visit Washington to secure annexation to the United States. The delegation is headed by Mr. Lorin A. Thurston, the son of an American missionary. Mr. Thurston is a comparatively young man. He graduated from Columbia college in 1880, and upon returning to Honolulu at once became a political leader. In 1889 he headed a revolution against the dissolute Kalakaua, and a year later was appointed minister of the kingdom. In 1892 he was elected a member of the house of nobles. Considering that he is now but thirty-five years of age, his history may reasonably be pronounced an eventful one. William C. Wilder, the second delegate, is a Canadian by birth. He was a member of the United States army before emigrating to Hawaii in 1859. He was elected a noble in 1888 and was sent to parliament again in 1892. He is the president and general manager of the Wilder Steamship company, which has done much to develop the resources and commerce of the islands. Charles L. Carter, the third delegate, is twenty-eight years of age and of American descent. He is the grandson of Dr. G. P. Judd, who was the first premier of the Hawaiian government after its organization on a civilized basis. Mr. Carter received his education at Ann Arbor, and is a lawyer by profession. William R. Castle, the fourth delegate, is also of American parentage and a graduate of the Columbia law school. For awhile he was associated with William C. Whitney, then corporation counsel of New York. In Hawaii [illegible] become a byword, his public services including membership in the legislature and the house of nobles and the speakership of the house. Joseph Marsden, the fifth commissioner, is an Englishman by birth, forty-six years of age, and has lived in the islands since 1869.

A METEOR ANALYZED.

It Is Found to Be Composed of Six Distinct Minerals.

An analysis has just been made of one of the three largest meteorites that have hit the United States. This analysis will prove of interest in view of the recent comet and meteor scare. It is fair to assume that the majority of the meteors in the so-called November meteoric orbit are composed of the same material of which this one consists. In fact a singular sameness in make up has been found to exist in all the meteors which have been analyzed. The formula is as follows:

Iron	[illegible]
Nickel	4.81
Cobalt	.54
Copper	.005
Lead	.19
Sulphur	.01
Total	[illegible]

Only a portion of the crust was used in the analysis, which accounts for the discrepancy in the total. The meteorite was found in November, 1887, by one Jacob Snyder, about a foot below the ground, while digging to plant an apple tree near his house, five miles to the southeast of Gettysburg. Mr. Snyder and his neighbors jumped to the conclusion that there was an iron mine on the farm and his property rose tremendously in value. Had he been any kind of a scientist he could easily have determined the nature of his find and then have exploited the value of his mine, sold his property for a big sum and cleared out pending the mining arrangements. As it was, the true character of the meteorite was not discovered until 1891.

Its three largest dimensions are 11, 24 and 33¼ inches, and it weighs 547 pounds. An effort was made to buy it by the National museum, but as Mr. Snyder placed the price very high it was eventually bought by Mr. Edwin E. Howell, of New York, who has a leaning towards meteorites.

Measuring Time During Sleep.

What is the something within us that measures the flight of time during sleep, oftentimes better than during our waking hours? How many we hear asserting that they can waken themselves at any appointed hour, and again that they are conscious of the time the moment that they first awake. It is related that a lady who has this peculiar subconsciousness is confronted, the instant she awakes, with a vision of her

Into the Trap.

Most of the people at the table were men, says Drake's Magazine, and they were making merry over the subject of feminine vanity.

At last one of the few women present felt moved to say a word.

"Of course women are vain," she remarked, "and equally, of course, men are not vain. Why," she added, with a glance around the table, "at this very moment the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is up the back of his collar."

Then she smiled, for every man present had put his hand behind his neck.

Chicago Will Be Safe.

New Yorker—Just think of Chicago's criminal record. How could people attend a world's fair in Chicago without running the risk of being robbed and murdered?

Chicago Man (confidentially)—Oh, there won't be any at all then; not a particle. Just as quick as the fair opens all the robbers will stop burglarizing and go to keeping hotels.—Texas Siftings.

Two Jokists.

Paragrapher—Here's a funny paper with a lot of jokes you might use.

Minstrel Man (with dignity)—We never use printed jokes, sir.

Paragrapher—Well, but don't you think they are an improvement on the jokes that were gotten up before the art of printing was discovered?—N. Y. Weekly.

TRUE DEMOCRACY.

The welfare and permanent influence of the Democratic party forbids the existence within its fold of political bosses and what is termed machine politics.

Popular sovereignty and Democracy are one and the same thing.

Democracy means the representative will of the people, fairly and freely expressed and honorably carried into effect. It also means that every legally qualified voter shall be politically equal, at liberty to exercise his own individual judgment, and that the voice of the majority shall be respected and obeyed.

Any departure from that rule is unsound political action and adverse to the principles of true Democracy.

Democrats may consistently advocate the claims of partisan candidates for nomination, but the ultimate decision must abide with the sovereign people, either in mass meetings assembled or in conventions composed of delegates honestly chosen.

The Democratic party now occupies a commanding position before the public, and it has reached that praiseworthy eminence mainly through the conservative and straightforward course and loyalty to principles of its distinguished leader Grover Cleveland.

To further the example set by him, and thereby aid in the establishment of just and necessary laws and measures designed only to promote the general public welfare and honor of country, ought to be the earnest endeavor of every sincere Democrat.

A government of the people, by the people and for the people, remains to be the time-honored platform of Jeffersonian Democracy.

On that we stand.

HONOR THE FOUNDER.

The general observance by Democratic organizations throughout our country of the approaching birth anniversary of Thomas Jefferson will be action well taken.

Democrats cannot engage in a more meritorious service than to perpetuate remembrance of the wise and patriotic founder of their faith.

The political principles avowed by Jefferson are the proven essentials of freedom and national prosperity. As a fearless defender of them he was venomously assailed, but his enemies met popular overthrow, while the party of Democracy he was instrumental in forming lives to-day more vigorous than ever.

All honor to the memory of Jefferson.

This Applies to the Raritan.

Of late years there has been considerable trouble and ill-feeling created among the fishermen and residents along the Raritan river regarding the alleged right to place gill and other nets in the waters of the river below the dam near Bound Brook during the shad season. The law was plain about hauling seines or nets within one thousand feet of the dam, but parties insisted that holding a hand net in the waters with which to catch shad or any other fish that might be ascending the river was not violating the law. The recently enacted law, Senate No. 76, entitled "An act for the protection of certain kinds of birds, animals and fish, and to provide a procedure to recover penalties for the violation hereof", specifically says that it is a violation of the law to so place nets in the waters of the Raritan, as will be seen by the following section:

SECTION 26. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, either on his own land or on the land of any other person, at any time whatsoever, either by day or by night, to put, place or haul any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets, or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any other contrivance whatever for the taking or catching of fish in any of the waters of this State above tide water, or to keep any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets, or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any contrivance whatever for the taking or catching of fish in any of the said waters mentioned, or to catch or assist in taking or catching any fish in manner aforesaid, or to put, place, haul or keep, or assist in putting, placing, hauling or keeping in any of said waters any of the aforementioned contrivances therefor, or to spear any game fish in any of the aforesaid mentioned waters, or sell or expose for sale, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been killed, any fish caught by any contrivance prohibited by this section, or to place, keep or use any set line or lines in waters inhabited by bass, pickerel, pike or trout, under a penalty of not less than twenty dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom said conviction is had; provided, that said penalty shall not apply to the legitimate catching of fish commonly called minnows for bait with a seine not over sixteen feet in length, if the young of bass, pickerel, perch, trout and other species of fish known as game fish be not destroyed thereby, or to the catching of fish at any time by or under the orders in writing of the fish and game commissioners of this State; or to the legitimate catching of minnows for bait with a net over sixteen feet in length; provided, a special permit in writing be first obtained from the fish and game commissioners; and provided further, that this penalty shall not apply to the owners or lessees of private ponds which are in no manner runways for migratory fish; and provided further, that this section shall not apply to the river Delaware.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that certain parties who have been in the habit of netting in the above waters will heed the law and save themselves trouble and expense. Senate No. 76 repeals all other laws relative to this subject.

Let Everybody Go.

The Wrens who will appear in Reform Hall next Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Exempt Firemen's Relief Association fund for the sick and disabled, are highly spoken of wherever they have entertained. Says the Elizabeth Herald: "Oliver W. Wren possesses a cultivated and flexible voice, and with his well-developed power of personating character, renders him very popular with all lovers of comic in song, as well as the more grave and pathetic in musical performances. Mr. Wren sang the wonderful story of 'Robinson Crusoe'; he was recalled three times, and delighted the audience with his comic productions, keeping the house in a roar of laughter. Mrs. Wren is one of the most charming of comediennes."

BEDLOW A LA DISS DEBAR.

THE LAST OF THE OLD PLAINFIELD FAMILY THREATENS SUICIDE.

He Sends Out a Note to Prove that He Is Drowned—An Attempt to Make It Appear that He Jumped Off the Nineteenth Street Pier—The Woman Who Married Him Last Month Says the Letter Is a Hoax—The Missing Man a Grandson of Col. Bedlow, of Bedlow's Island.

From The Press of March 29.

In the mail delivered to the World yesterday morning was an envelope addressed to "Mr. Editor, New York World, New York Citie", and containing a badly spelled note. The letter was posted at Station D, and was stamped 10 p. m., March 27. The note read:

> dear sir i fond this hire letter in A cote and Vest on the dock i kep the cote and Vest i am pore and want them bad maybie you now wat to du about it i am poor and dont now.
> TOMASS MCNANAMARA
> P S i fond them on the dok last night fut of 19th st. T M

The penmanship indicated that the writer is not so uneducated as he would try to make himself appear. Inclosed in the letter was another sealed envelope, addressed to "Mrs. H. A. Bedlow, No. 272 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street, city, care of Turner".

At first sight it looked as if some unfortunate had flung himself into the river and had chosen the World as the medium to announce his death to the only one he believed would be interested in his fate. Investigation, however, showed that in all probability, Henry A. Bedlow, of a good old family whose home was long in Plainfield, had imitated spook priestess Ann O'Delia Diss Debar so far as to write a letter threatening suicide as a means of accounting for his disappearance. Bedlow's motive, it is believed, was to deceive and worry the wife to whom he was wedded last month.

The pier at the foot of West Nineteenth street is used as one of the dumping grounds of the street cleaning department. A World reporter found a policeman of the Steamboat Squad there yesterday and informed him of the alleged finding of a coat and waistcoat, and asked him if he knew anything about it.

"Not a word", replied the policeman. "The letter is undoubtedly a hoax, so far as anybody's drowning himself or anyone else's finding clothing on the pier. In the first place, if a man jumped off the pier he would land in the garbage; but, even if he did get into the water, we should have heard of it. There's a policeman in this neighborhood all the time, day and night. Then that name, McNamara or whatever it is, is Irish; and no Irishmen are employed around here. They're all Italians. If an Italian laborer found a coat or vest he would not be writing of it to the World. If clothing had been found the police would know of it. Coats and vests worth carrying away are so rarely seen on this pier that the find would have furnished plenty of talk."

The reporter examined the surroundings and they confirmed what the policeman had said. A more unsuitable place for suicide by drowning could not well be found along the river front.

Mrs. Henry A. Bedlow rents two rooms on the second floor of 272 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street from a family named Turner. She is about forty five years old, of medium height, stoutly built and has brown eyes, and very black hair which is worn back from a broad, well-formed forehead. Her rooms face Eighth avenue and are comfortably furnished.

When the World reporter handed her the letter addressed to her, she hastily tore open the envelope, and, as she read the contents, her eyes filled with tears.

The following is the letter, which was written with a lead pencil:

> 11:30 a. m., March 28, 1893.
> DEAR WIFE—By the time you receive this I shall have ended my troubles and heartaches in this world. Darling, I have tried honestly and faithfully to do right, but without your love my life would be darkness itself. I cannot live without it, and you have told me so often lately that you do not care for me that I fear that I can never again recover what I have lost, so I shall end it all.
> Darling, even as I am writing now, you stir and say things which are entirely uncalled for.
> Oh, love, I cannot realize that your love is all gone. Perhaps, darling, in after years you will look back upon the few happy days we have spent together.
> Darling, there is so much I would like to say, but I dare not trust myself now, for it is better that I finish what I have begun. Good-by, my darling wife, good-by, and may God bless and watch over you will be the last wish and prayer of YOUR OWN BOY.
> Dear little wife, I love you, and do till I die. Good-by. HARRY.

"Yes", sighed Mrs. Bedlow, when she had read it, "it is, what you say the policeman called it, a hoax. It is not the first time that my husband has so cruelly sought to frighten me. I have at length grown sceptical of all his threats. We were married only about eight weeks ago—on Feb. 1—and since then he has repeatedly threatened to commit suicide".

Mrs. Bedlow removed her spectacles to wipe the tears away, and then added:

"My husband is thirty-three years old and is or was employed in the Department of Public Works, but, as I have been led to believe, under an assumed name. He is the last of the Bedlows, a grandson of Col. Bedlow, after whom Bedlow's Island was named. Henry met me first three years ago when I was living with my first husband, now dead. Henry was a constant visitor at our house, in fact, he was almost one of the family. My first husband and Henry were great friends. Very few of my friends know of my second marriage, and for no consideration would I have my dead husband's mother know of my troubles, though she is my best friend and I am greatly indebted to and dependent upon her.

"For the same reason I must conceal my maiden name. The last I saw of Henry was on Monday night. He appeared to have been drinking and left me early that same evening. He did not say where he was going.

When asked if she thought there was any other woman in the case Mrs. Bedlow replied, after some hesitation, "Yes, there is, and it is about her that we have quarrelled. I believe that Henry is infatuated with her. She used to live in East Twenty-second street, but from letters I have found I think she is now residing on East Seventeenth street."

Mrs. Bedlow said she believed that the letter to her was written by her husband in their rooms on last Sunday morning. She was in the same room with him when he was writing it, but he made no allusion to the letter's contents.

Howard F. Frothingham, a time loan broker at 2 Wall street, married Miss Julia Bedlow, Henry's sister. Mrs. Frothingham is an invalid and resides at the Plaza Hotel with her husband. She was shocked at hearing of her brother's threats to kill himself.

"I have seen very little of him", she said. "The last time was when he called here with his wife a week ago Sunday. We are of the old Bedlow family, the only one bearing that name in America, and do not know much of my sister-in-law, but as my brother married her she must be an estimable woman."

Mr. Frothingham, who was found at his office, expressed great surprise at the news, but said that he did not care to talk about it.

The Bedlows were for a long time one of Plainfield's most prominent families, and members of the family still live here. The Bedlows referred to in the story are all from Plainfield originally.

Capt. Davis as a Vertebra.

The Elizabeth Journal says, in connection with publishing his picture:

"While captain J. W. Davis, of the Plainfield Crescents, has not been a member of the executive committee of the Journal league, he has done considerable for the league by his untiring efforts in its behalf. When the Crescents were in a state of uncertainty as to whether or not they would disband, captain Davis, who is one of the strongest vertebra in the Crescent league's backbone, managed, in the face of almost utter disregard of the individual members as to the club's welfare, to keep a bowling team together that met every scheduled game in the Journal league. And the men were not poor bowlers either, but have kept their team the third in pin average for several months. All of this reflects great credit on their captain, whose enthusiasm for the popular winter sport led him with the others to form the first bowling team Plainfield ever had—the Plainfield Bowling club. Later this club was merged into the present Crescent league, and captain Davis was the man who led the Crescent bowlers. He is now serving his second term.

"It is unnecessary to tell of the manner of good fellowship which captain Davis always has, as he is known to every bowler in the county for his jolly, joking disposition."

Funeral of the Rev. Embury.

The funeral services of the Rev. Edmund Embury took place Wednesday afternoon in the Church of the Holy Cross. A short service was held at the house for the members of the family, just previous to the service in the church. The vested choir and clergy met the casket at the entrance to the church, and proceeded up the middle aisle of the church, the rector repeating the words "I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord." The officiating clergymen were the Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor and the Revs. T. Logan Murphy, E. M. Rodman and S. F. Simpson. The musical portion of the service was excellently rendered by the vested choir.

As the remains were borne out of the church the choir and clergy preceded them singing as a processional hymn "O Paradise O Paradise, who doth not long for rest". All the service was said in the church. To-day the remains were taken to Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, for interment.

THE NEW BOARDER WAS A THIEF.

He Ransacked the Lodgers' Rooms and Got Away with Abundant Booty.

Mrs. Z. Pearson, of 21 West Second street, keeps a boarding house, and her boarders are mostly machinists. On Monday night a stranger applied for board, representing himself as agent for some patent face powder. He wanted to remain for two weeks. Strange to say, the man was not even asked his name, but was assigned a room on the second floor. Yesterday morning after the other boarders had gone to work the stranger ransacked their trunks and stole $103 in money, a gold watch and chain, some gold rings and a quantity of clothing. He then left the house unnoticed, and the robbery was not discovered until the chambermaid went to make the beds and found the rooms in great disorder. The heaviest loser is Chas. Linmark, a machinist, who lost $100 in money. The police were notified, but the thief is still at large. The man is described as about 40 years old, medium height, smooth face and fairly well dressed.

BRET HARTE COMING BACK.

Plainfield to Be Visited by the Literary Lion.

For the first time in fifteen years, it is announced, Bret Harte will visit his native land and his family in Plainfield during the coming summer. From Plainfield he will go to the World's Fair. In 1878 Mr. Harte was appointed Consul for the United States at Dusseldorf, in Germany, and shortly afterward was transferred to Glasgow in a similar capacity, where he remained until Mr. Cleveland took office for the first time as President. Since then Mr. Harte has resided in London, in the district known as St. John's Wood, and has devoted himself entirely to literature. He is said to be much sought after in London society, for which he has but little inclination, although he is a member of several clubs.

Mr. Harte's literary reputation has continued to grow abroad during the years of his residence there, while it has declined very materially in the United States. Germany is said to afford him his most profitable field, but his works sell much less readily in his native land than formerly. In fact, it is reported that there is a smaller demand for his stories in America than anywhere else. Nevertheless he makes about $15,000 a year by his work and devotes but about six months to the actual labor of composition. He writes very slowly and carefully and writes nothing that is not solicited. He has an agent in London through whom all orders must be given.

Mr. Harte is said to be a very handsome man still, with a slender but broad-shouldered figure, fine, erect carriage and a youthful-looking face, crowned with silvery white hair. His latest photograph presents quite a contrast to those that have hitherto been familiar to Americans, showing him in a suit of broad checked cloth, with baggy knickerbockers.

Mr. Harte has had a decidedly romantic history, though it is not very well known to his countrymen. He was born in Albany in 1841, and lived there till he was ten years of age, when he removed to New York city, where, at the age of eleven, he wrote and secured the publication of his first poem, "Autumnal Musings". His relatives, rather prosaic people by all accounts, looked upon his literary instincts as little less than criminal, and severely and effectively discountenanced any further ventures of the kind. Two years later he ran away from home and school and crossed the plains with an emigrant train to California, then the Mecca of all youthful minds. His "Waif of the Plains" narrates much of his actual experience on this adventurous expedition.

After arriving in California he tried all sorts of things. He did some mining, set type, taught school, was an express messenger, and tried his hand at frontier journalism. At the age of seventeen he was appointed Deputy Collector at his own request. His ambition caused no little merriment among his friends, for no taxes had ever been collected up to that time, and the mining districts were wild and lawless. He was very successful, nevertheless, and every tax was paid. He was never molested, and, though he carried no firearms, he never received an unkind word from any of the rough characters among whom his business took him.

In 1864 Mr. Harte was appointed Secretary of the San Francisco Mint, a position that afforded him considerable leisure, which he devoted to study and literature. It was at this time he produced "Plicocene Skull", "Society of the Stanislaus", and other things which became famous, including his celebrated "Condensed Novels", which may be said to have inaugurated the era of the short story.

When the Overland Monthly was started his "Luck of Roaring Camp" was printed in the second number, in spite of the adverse judgment of the entire staff of the magazine, and was the real beginning of Bret Harte's fame. It is said that 30,000 copies of the story have since been sold.

—The young ladies of Washington Park are forming a bicycle club.

—Quarantine has been raised from the house of Henry DeMott on Somerset street, where there was a case of scarlet fever.

—Anchor Lodge No. 149, F. and A. M., met Tuesday evening and conferred the E. M. degree on one candidate, Harry Marshell.

—The annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church will be held next week Wednesday, instead of to-night as mistakenly announced.

—Tom Martin, the capable janitor at the North avenue railway station, will take care of bicycles during the day, and teach gentlemen to ride evenings.

—The Easter number of Table Talk is now ready, and its multitude of readers will find it fully prepared to meet the appetite of those whose Lenten fasting has paved the way to occasional feasting. The average housewife is often perplexed with the question, "What shall I get for dinner?" If she is a reader of Table Talk her perplexity does n't last, long. The magazine is the housekeeper's best friend.

Plainfield Genius Gleams from Its Pages.

The second and current issue of that beautiful publication, The Quarterly Illustrator, might be called the George Wharton Edwards number, from the space deservedly given to that Plainfield genius. Perriton Maxwell, a famous authority on art, contributes under the title "A Decorative Illustrator" an entertaining story of Mr. Edwards's career. The bulk of this is the same charming story told originally in the New York Press and those columns, supplemented by honest criticism of Mr. Edwards's later work. The article is profusely illustrated with reproductions of pictures representing the various types of the artist written of.

Mr. Edwards himself contributes many pages of art notes of real interest, and an article in graceful style on "The Illustrations of the Quarter", in which he ably considers the merits of the choicest illustrations that have appeared in the leading publications of the past three months.

The Quarterly Illustrator is a most sumptuous feast of good things, and should adorn the library table of every cultured home. Harry C. Jones is the publisher, at 92-94 Fifth avenue, New York.

A Charming Concert.

Naught but praise can be said of the concert given by the Bradford trio in All Souls' church last evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

While each of the young people composing the trio displayed remarkable musical ability and much study and cultivation, the violin playing of Miss Cecelia was especially delightful, her rendering of the "Seventh Concerto" by DeBeriot, and Cavitina by Bohme being perfect.

Each number on the programme was calculated to make glad the heart of any lover of music, and that the large audience assembled last evening were pleased and delighted was evidenced by the frequent and deserving applause.

Sudden Death of an Old Resident.

John W. Moore of 25 Grove street was found dead in his bed yesterday. He had been suffering from the grip, which affected his heart, and paralysis of that organ is given as the cause of death. Mr. Moore was one of the borough's best known citizens, and was a prominent wholesale flour merchant in New York. He was a widower, and leaves one son, Harry, who succeeds him in business.

The funeral will be from the house Friday afternoon at 2:30.

The Safe Upset the Horse.

That big new safe for the city offices in the Coward building is causing no end of trouble. This afternoon after much effort it was hauled part way up the stairs when it began to slip back again. The horse hauling it by ropes and pulleys was dragged back as it slid down stairs, and after ineffectual struggles thrown to the ground. There was much excitement, and a big crowd gathered. Finally the difficulty was overcome, and the work of hauling was resumed.

A Plainfield Workman Hurt.

At 10 yesterday a collapse occurred of the Pennsylvania railroad trestle elevation at Broad street, Elizabeth, precipitating engine, flat cars, derrick and iron girders, to the pavement. Four men were badly shaken up and cut and bruised, among them Lewis Coddington, formerly of Plainfield, and brother of James who works at Compton's.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—The county roads are in fair condition for cycling.

—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop will speak in Plainfield, April 18.

—The Plainfield Courier calls Westfield a "one-horse town". Mules are jealous of horses.—Leader.

—Charles B. Clifton has offered to build the Crescent League a new club-house at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street.

—The electric lights in the borough council chamber are bad, and cast a gloom over the otherwise attractive looking room.

—A carload of chestnut ties has arrived and been placed on a lot on Somerset street, for the borough extension of the street railway.

—A special meeting of the Plainfield Building Loan association directors will be held in Jackson & Codington's office, Thursday evening, the 30th inst., at 8.

—Miss M. M. Godown will on April 10 open dressmaking parlors at 17 East Fifth street. She may be relied on to give thorough satisfaction to all patrons.

—The interior of the meat market of A. Lutkins, 36 Park avenue, is very handsome in its new coat of paint, and very modern with its latest improved ice chamber.

—No 1 engine team—the big gray and black—have been promoted to pull the new truck, and "Tom and Jerry"—the little grays—have been transferred to engine duty.

—Manager Runyon of the telephone office is about to put a motor in the place to furnish power to ring you up. The current will be obtained from the trolley system.

—John Schump, a sixteen-year-old lad of West Fourth street, tripped and fell, Tuesday afternoon, breaking two of the bones in his arm. A physician set the broken bones.

—John H. Tier & Sons are out with a freshly touched-up delivery wagon. The painting and lettering was done by D. W. Kelly, a step-brother of Wm. Brown of East Third street.

—Justice of the peace Elias Mosher will be ready for business about the 1st of May. He will hold court in a newly-fitted up room in the building adjoining his store on North avenue.

—On Thursday evening, April 6, State county deputy Mills, of Bound Brook, will pay a fraternal visit to Franklin council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., and install the officers to be elected next week.

—R. G. Chase & Co., 1430 South Penn Square, Philadelphia, are advertising for honest men to solicit orders for fruit and ornamental nursery stock. We can recommend Messrs. Chase & Co. as honorable men to deal with.

—The Westfield Standard says: "Plainfield's crack whist team was 'done up' by Fanwood's team the other evening. But it made Messrs. Briggs, Bates, Kelb, Downer, Henry Kyte and Simpson work to win by one point."

—The popular favorites and famous Wrens will give one of their delightful entertainments in Reform Hall, Tuesday evening, April 4, for the benefit of the sick and disabled fund of the Exempt Firemen's association.

—That hustling West Front street merchant, C. M. Ulrich, has added another improvement to his establishment, having placed a telephone in his office. 141 is the number to ring up when you want fine meats of any kind.

—A fine picture of President Cleveland and his Cabinet adorns the wall of THE PRESS office, thanks to the courtesy of James Whelan of Stoutenburgh & Co. Those popular Newark clothiers are issuing the pictures to their patrons.

—Leidy, who was laid up for so many days with a strained back, during the winter, is almost afraid to play ball this summer, and may go home for a rest. Lever is anxious to secure his place in the Plainfield Amusement company's team.

—The last of the series of winter sociables given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Willow Grove Sunday-school, took place Friday evening, and was a most enjoyable affair. The programme consisted of music, recitations, and the serving of refreshments.

—Complaint has been made of a certain scavenger in this city, who, it is said, is in the habit of dumping his refuse in close proximity to the Netherwood Hotel. Only a few days ago a four-horse load of cesspool refuse was deposited along the roadway, less than a hundred yards east of the hotel.

—Wallace V. Miller has made of his new cafe in Hotel Grenada a most attractive apartment. The furnishings are new and handsome, and the decorations richly artistic. Mr. Miller is a most enterprising boniface, and deserves his popularity. Patrons will find the Grenada a most desirable hotel, and the cafe likewise fully equipped.

—As THE PRESS stated Saturday, unexpected financial embarrassment caused an assignment by the United Tea and Coffee Growers' association of this city, and to-day begins the sale of all the goods in stock for the benefit of the creditors. The old firm as agents under possibly another name, will eventually continue the business.

—Harry Jenkins, Plainfield's reliable building mover, has been called to Somerville to move a large house to make room for the new Reformed church about to be built at that place. The people of Somerville made no mistake in contracting the work to Mr Jenkins. He is a careful, reliable man, and thoroughly understands his business.

—The attention of the readers of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST is directed to the advertisement of Mullins & Co., 216 Market street, Newark. They are honorable men to deal with and if you want carpets or furniture, and feel that you cannot get them because you haven't the ready cash they will give you credit. Their stock is of the latest pattern and their prices low.

—The residents of Netherwood and vicinity are circulating a petition for signatures, which is designed to present to the council at its next meeting asking to have Belvidere avenue put in proper repair. They claim that the roadbed has been neglected and that it is now badly cut up in many places. A petition will also be presented from West Front street asking for repairs in that locality.

—If the North Plainfield electric light company expect to get full pay for lights on Duer street and Craig place, in front of the German Reformed church, they would better put the lights in that locality in order, and give the people of that neighborhood the light that the borough pays for. The lights in the neighborhood named have only burned "just a little" for ten nights past.

—The Glorious Gospel is a new and highly commendable venture of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The first issue is at hand, and it is a most creditable publication. The purpose is to produce a number each month, containing one of pastor Richardson's great sermons, church notes and comment. There is no subscription fee, but distribution is gratuitous. The committee consists of Edwin B. Day and David M. Runyon. The Glorious Gospel is issued in the highest style of the printer's art, and as it is a thing of beauty THE PRESS fervently hopes it may be a [illegible].

Miss Wharton of Pittsburg is visiting her brother, Clifton Wharton, Jr., of Crescent avenue.

Ed. Randolph has returned from Summit and will engage in outdoor work on account of his health.

Mrs. Emma Ryno and daughter, of Newark, are spending a few days with friends on Lee place.

Wm. T. Kirk of West Seventh street has broke away from the clutches of the grip and is out again.

The engagement is announced of Miss Beardsley of East Millstone to George White of North Plainfield.

Mrs. Seymour Marsh of Putnam avenue is suffering from serious injury to her knee, caused by a fall.

Invitations are out for a dance to be given by Miss Bessie Gibbs of Broadway on Thursday of Easter week.

Miss Jennie Quick of Somerville is spending a few weeks with her aunt, Mrs. J. N. Honeyman of Duer street.

Miss Ida A. Pearce, of Bradford, Massachusetts, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Eugene Everit, of LaGrande avenue.

J. H. VanDeventer, of Netherwood, has accepted a position in the new Franklin National Bank, Dey street, New York.

A pastor for the Plainfield M. E. church will be appointed at the session of the Newark Conference in Jersey City April 5.

Jacob Field will this week remove his family from the Miller block on Park avenue to the Sebring flats on North avenue.

J. P. Emmons, the mason and builder, is adding a two story extension to the Washington avenue side of his cozy home.

The marriage of Miss Annie Watterson of Manning avenue to Richard Warneck of Grandview avenue is announced for June 20.

Miss Mary A. Hines, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is spending her Easter vacation at the residence of her parents on Liberty street.

Miss Mary Patten, daughter of the Rev. A. S. Patten formerly of Netherwood is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Love.

Very extensive additions and improvements, including a massive stone porch, are to be begun at once to ex-councilman Waring's home.

Miss Annie Corlies, who has been staying for the past month at St. Augustine, Fla., has returned to Plainfield for the Easter festivities.

The Rev. Edward Klonke, pastor of the St. Peter's German Lutheran congregation, has removed from 118 Duer street to 59 West Second street.

The fine new residence of J. B. Dumont corner of Crescent avenue and Seventh street is finished, and the family will move into it in a day or two.

Thomas J. Young, Chas. F. Sebring and Henry K. DeMott are the North Plainfielders on the list of petit jurors in Somerset county for the current term.

Judge Wm. A. Coddington and ex-judge Wm. R. Codington both had their eye and expectation on S. C. Shann's house on Sandford avenue. The ex-judge captured it.

Dr. Ripley, of Ripleyville, has offered Bishop Wigger a lot for a new Catholic church on the Westfield boulevard, and has been elected president of the burying ground.

Maj. W. D. W. Miller of LaGrande avenue, who arranged the course of three war lectures for the Y. M. C. A., says that the course will net $300 for that institution.

Thomas Keller of the Plainfield Amusement company, was referee Saturday at the Berkeley Oval, where that swell club enjoyed a live-bird match between Brewer and Apgar.

S. C. Shann and family, of 61 Grandview avenue, have removed to Newark. They made many warm friends during their residence in the borough, and will be greatly missed.

David D. Smalley, William E. Mattison, Stewart E. Shann and William N. Pangborn were appointed at Trenton Thursday to be commissioners of deeds for North Plainfield.

James T. Anthony, of Putnam avenue, has returned from Boston, where he has been executing some business for the Cape Cod Ship Canal company, before the Massachusetts legislature.

The marriage of Miss E. D. Way to John Leal is announced to take place next Monday evening at 5 at home. The bride is a sister of Mr. Leal's former wife. Dr. Richards will officiate.

John Burke of Dunellen, a member of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., died at the Soldiers' Home, Newark, Friday evening. The post meets to-morrow afternoon at 1:30 to attend at 2 o'clock his funeral at his late residence, Dunellen.

Augustus D. Shepard of Scotch Plains, president of the American Bank Note company of New York, is also vice-president of the Mail and Express company, of which his brother, the late Elliott F. Shepard, was president. The death of Elliott F. leaves the charge of the paper in the hands of Augustus until the will of the former is read. As Elliott F. Shepard held a controlling interest in the Mail and Express, the reading of his will will determine the fate of that journal.

The following are the patronesses of Mr. Venino's concert to be given at The Casino, Thursday evening, April 13: Mrs. H. G. Runkle, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs Rowland Cox, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. John Erskine, Mrs J. B. Dumont, Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Mrs. J. B. Tracy, Miss Isabel Tweedy, Mrs. Charles S. Brooke, Mrs A. G. Baldwin, Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. H. Fleming, Mrs. L. E. Howard, Mrs. George Goddard, Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs O. Arens, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. J. P. Mason, Mrs. C. Wharton, Jr., Mrs. J. W. Reinhardt.

Mrs John F Clapp, at her home, 84 Mercer avenue, Thursday afternoon, gave great pleasure to the Current Events club and a number of their friends. By her invitation, Charles Opdyke, of Broadway, read his paper "One Monk and One Nun", previously read for the benefit of the Unitarian church. This Spanish story, translated into French, has been retranslated by Mr Opdyke, who has preserved in a most happy way the quaint tone and style of the original. Added to the dramatic interest of the story, Mr. Opdyke's manner of reading is full of quiet ease and grace that delight his listeners.

Invitations have been issued for the subscription dance to be held at the Casino April 7. The committee in charge is: Harry V. Borden, C. J. Fisk, Pliny Fisk, J. Parker Mason, H. G. Runkle, George K. Thomas, Clifton Wharton, jr. The patronesses are: Mrs. H. G. Runkle, Mrs C. J. Fisk, Mrs George K. Thomas, Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mrs. Clifton Wharton jr., Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs Pliny Fisk, Mrs. W. WILLIBALD CAUGHT.

THE NEWSBOY THIEF SURRENDERS AND CONFESSES.

Not Only to the Union News Embezzlement, But the Railroad and Vail Robberies—Gulled the Police to the Last—Had Squandered His Funds in Fast Living, and Was Reduced to Five Cents and a Bottle of Poison—On the Verge of Suicide, a Lawyer Saves Him—Kept His Love Letters from Pat.

Newsboy Freddie Willibald, who successfully played hide and seek with the star police of Plainfield, is at last a prisoner through no fault of the "finest". What the bluecoats could n't accomplish, lawyer George DeMeza did; and thanks to him the young fellow is no longer at large.

Young Willibald was employed at the Union News company branch in this city. The Plainfield agent entrusted him with funds to be put on the train and conveyed to the company's headquarters. He appropriated such funds to the amount of $68 and left town the same morning the North avenue station of the Jersey Central was robbed of $130. Suspicion of that robbery attached to him, as did also the theft of $125 from J. T. Vail's safe. Willibald soon reappeared in Plainfield, however, and was easily accessible to other people, though the police seemed not to be able to get their clutches on him.

Saturday night attorney DeMeza saw him and interested himself in the case. Willibald confessed to the embezzlement of the Union News funds, but emphatically denied all connection with the railroad and Vail robberies, in spite of the fact that the evidence against him is so strong. Mr. DeMeza advised him that the best thing he could do for his own peace of mind was to surrender himself and he as a lawyer would strive to have him treated as lightly as possible. Therefore Willibald was taken before justice Nash and committed for a hearing. He insisted on riding in a hack, "so that the police should n't nab him". The police were very sore to find that the very much "wanted" youth had been caught without their aid, but they said they would have captured him by Sunday morning anyway, on the evidence of PRESS carrier Hoffman. Hoffman had several times seen Willibald loitering about A. E. Hoagland's barn, always in early morning, evidently after having spent the night there.

When Willibald was talked to by Mr. DeMeza, he was in a great state of mind; in fact, on the verge of suicide. He said he felt great shame and remorse for the wrong he had done, and was sick of having the people he met look at him so queerly and point him out as a thief. He had not been able to sleep for two nights, and for 48 hours had not eaten a morsel. Only 5 cents remained of the stolen money. He had bought a new overcoat, and the rest had been squandered in bad company in Newark and New York. He had a list of questionable resorts in his pocket; also a bottle of laudanum, purchased in New Brunswick, and a farewell letter to his mother. In his desperate repentance he contemplated taking the poison. At his request, Mr. DeMeza took charge of a batch of letters from a girl whom he spoke of as sweetheart. He said, "Don't let Pat Lynch see those".

Mrs. Willibald was almost heartbroken at her son's confession. She says his head is not right, and that flights of insanity caused by epileptic fits are responsible for his misdoing.

A Pushing Plainfield Man at the Head.

The Constitution, of Atlanta, Ga., speaking of the great prosperity of the Georgia Electric Car and Light company, refers in flattering terms to Harry Edgar the popular and talented young electrician who married Miss S. Kate Potter of Mt. Pleasant. Says the Constitution:

"Mr. Edgar is now general manager of the company. He is from New York and is an expert electrician. His brother has charge of the famous Edison Lighting company of Boston, and is one of the most noted electricians of America. The new manager of the Georgia Electric company is a young man full of energy and will make Atlanta a good citizen. He has been here only a short while and it was not necessary for him to catch the Atlanta spirit of push and enterprise, for he brought a good stock of that with him."

The Central's All Right.

(Elizabeth Journal.)

The death of John Taylor Johnston not only removes a man of large influence in the olden days, but recalls the early and most successful history of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Under his management it was one of the best paying roads on this continent. But he made the mistake of allowing the Lehigh Valley road to be built, thus losing to the Central the enormous coal carrying trade, and from that day to this the road has had a varied experience.

Easter Opening.

For those who wish to "come out" on Easter morning and for all others who require stylish, well-fitting garments, we can heartily recommend the great state headquarters for clothing—Stoutenburgh & Co., 797 to 805 Broad street, Newark.

They have spared no pains to make their spring opening a magnificent one, as regards to styles, shapes and variety of garments for men and boys. Visit them; you will see a splendid exhibit.

Frank E. Miller of Hotels Albion and Netherwood is home in Plainfield again.

James Connelly of Madison avenue is the proud father of a girl baby. The little one arrived during Tuesday night, and both mother and baby are doing well.

George Barrett, of Brooklyn, accompanied by his mother, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. Kearth, East Second street. Mr. Barrett hopes to benefit his health by his stay in Plainfield.

When counselor Charles A. Reed went home Saturday afternoon he found a canary warbling in his vestibule. The bird proved to be F. M. Hulett's runaway pet, and through THE PRESS advertisement it was returned to its owner.

A letter was received in this city on Wednesday from from "Joe" Pitt, the bicycle rider. He is a member of the Sixth Cavalry band, and is stationed at Fort Niobrara, near the Pine Ridge agency, Nebraska, and reports being in good health and spirits.

Because of the continued illness of cashier Frank H. Gardner, who is but slowly improving, the directors of the City National bank have decided it best to elect an assistant cashier, and have given Wm. F. Arnold merited promotion to that office. Mr. Arnold has served the bank long and faithfully, and has the fullest confidence and esteem of all.

OWED TO SPRING.

(Spoken for THE PRESS by "A Boarder".)

Ho! the merrie, merrie springtide
The Joker of the pack.
Beware, all ranks, prepare for pranks,
The spring is coming back.

Ah there April! 'Tis easy seen
Why winter's loath to leave her.
In that coy smile, we'll bask awhile,
And get la grippe, or fever.

She'll throw her dust into our eyes,
Turn we this way or that,
Her handmaid wind tiptoes behind,
And pouf!—behold our hat.

Now smiles Old Sol while sipping blasts,
Ycleept mild zephyrs, blow;
Now balmy showers coax timid flowers;
Anon they turn to snow.

In pensive mood we watch the fishes
And dream of seraph's wings—
Great Scott!—a slide, Thanks, Yes, I'll ride
You mud, bad, sad, glad spring!

I won't take off my furry wraps
For I've been done before;
My overshoes I still will use;
I'll be your dupe no more.

My swell umbrel, alas! keeps Lent
This shower one must do
My mackintosh I'll wear, in brief
I'm safe—Atchoo—a—Atchoo!

Ho! the merrie, merrie springtide
The Joker of the back.
All ranks beware, for breaks brothers,
False spring is here, alack!

"NEAF" APGAR'S CLEVER WORK.

The Plainfield Marksman's Creditable Showing Against Crack Shot Brewer.

Shooting contests at live birds were begun at Berkeley Oval Saturday under the auspices of the Oval Club, a new social and sporting organization, which has leased that fine property for the purposes of a country club. The shooting was merely an exhibition, but a remarkable one on the part of Captain John L. Brewer, the famous wing shot. Mr. Brewer had "Neaf" Apgar, of this city, a very promising shot, to oppose him in the exhibition. Each man sighted at fifty pigeons, and out of that number the Captain laid low just forty-nine. Under more favorable circumstances he would have killed every bird.

The Oval Club is made up of the Country Club set, and others in the Four Hundred, and as its members intend to make pigeon shooting a feature this season they conceived the idea of inaugurating the sport with as fine an exhibition as possible. So they induced Captain Brewer to lend a hand, and with Mr. Apgar he gave an example of some very fine work with a shotgun.

The onlookers gave the Captain due measure of applause as he dropped difficult drivers, incomers and quarterers. The Captain was the first to face the traps, which, by the way, are situated in the northeast corner of the big athletic field.

BREWER'S DEADLY AIM.

Superintendent Murphy, to whom credit is due for the excellent arrangements for the shoot, had provided an average lot of birds, and to this fact is attributed Captain Brewer's single miss. If, as the crack shooter said, the birds had all been fast, then each man would have been keyed up for sharp work.

As it was the pigeons were not all alike as to liveliness, a fact which somewhat puzzled the cracks. Ten birds previous to the thirty-second, which the Captain missed, were either flutterers or slow drivers, easy victims of the Captain's deadly aim.

The thirty-second, aided by circumstances, got away. He was a dull slate colored bird, small and lively as a cricket. When the trap was sprung he hesitated a moment; then when the flag went up he started swift as a bullet, and drove directly ahead, low down. The sun shone directly in the Captain's face, and although he used both barrels he did n't check the flight of the bird in the least. After that the captain went on killing every bird with an easy grace that delighted the club men.

Young Apgar did remarkably well considering the fact that he had not previously shot at live birds for nearly six months. He was phenomenal with his first barrel.

At the conclusion of the shoot the members were so well pleased with captain Brewer's exhibition that he was engaged to take charge of all the club matches during the coming season. It was also announced that the club would back captain Brewer against any live bird shooter, the contest to take place on the Oval's grounds.

The scores follow:

Brewer—21211, 21212, 22211, 12222, 22222, 12122, 20212, 12112, 22122, 12222—49.

Apgar—12121, 21221, 11100, 21221, 11121, 10111, 11111, 21221, 12112, 12210—46.

	Killed.	Missed.	Singles.	Doubles.
Brewer	49	1	27	22
Apgar	46	4	21	25

Referee—T. H. Keller.

Scorer—Alan Sterne.

Modified Hurlingham rules governed the shooting.

The Mother Defends the Son.

When Charles Bartling attempted suicide at the home of his brother Harry, 22 Sycamore avenue, Feb. 26, the borough police were informed that it was because the lad was in trouble through forging a check and insulting his niece. That statement was given to newspaper reporters as authoritative and official, and so published in various papers.

Mrs. A. E. Bartling, mother of Charles, however, claims to have made a thorough investigation, and fully exonerates her son from these grave charges. She says she is satisfied that they are entirely false, and in justice to Charles he is given the benefit of this statement.

Plainfield's New Shakespeare Club.

A Shakespeare Club was recently organized in Plainfield, by about twenty-five representative society people, for the purpose of becoming more familiar with the works of the immortal bard. The club meets at the houses of the various members, and parts are assigned to each to read. The play being read at present is "Twelfth Night". Among the members are: Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Milled, Mr. and Mrs. Goddard, Miss Newton, Miss Scribner, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. Mellick, Mrs. Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. Herring, Mrs. Munn, J. W. Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Steward, Mr and Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs Bret Harte, Mr. and Mrs. VanVliet and Mrs. Andrew Mellick. Mr. Goodrich is president.

Why? Why is Strictly Pure White Lead the best paint? Because it will outlast all other paints, give a handsomer finish, better protection to the wood, and the first cost will be less.

If Barytes and other adulterants of white lead are "just as good" as Strictly Pure White Lead, why are all the adulterated white leads always branded Pure, or

"Strictly Pure White Lead?"

This Barytes is a heavy white powder (ground stone), having the appearance of white lead, worthless as a paint, costing only about a cent a pound, and is only used to cheapen the mixture. What shoddy is to cloth, Barytes is to paint. Be careful to use only old and standard brands of white lead.

"Atlantic" "Bradley" "Brooklyn" "Jewett" "Ulster" are strictly pure, "Old Dutch" process brands, established by a lifetime of use.

For colors use National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors with Strictly Pure White Lead.

For sale by the most reliable dealers in paints everywhere.

If you are going to paint, it will pay you to send to us for a book containing information that may save you many a dollar; it will only cost you a postal card to do so.

OBITUARY.

JOHN TAYLOR JOHNSTON.

The Distinguished Plainfielder Passes Away at His New York Home—Biographical Sketch of His Notable Career.

John Taylor Johnston died at his winter residence, 8 Fifth avenue, New York, Saturday morning, in the seventy-third year of his age. Creeping paralysis, beginning in 1877, caused his death. Thus closed the career of one who, until the last few years when increasing infirmity compelled him to withdraw from business and social life, was one of New York's and Plainfield's best known and most useful citizens. The Metropolitan Museum of Arts and the Central Railroad system of New Jersey, in the founding of both of which he took the leading part, represent his most important achievements.

He was born in New York on April 8, 1820, of old New York merchant stock. His father was John Johnston, of Boorman, Johnston & Co., and his mother was Margaret Taylor, daughter of John Taylor. Both his parents were of Scotch birth. John Taylor Johnston was their eldest son, and with the loyalty characteristic of their Scotch blood, it is not strange that he should have received a part of his early education at the Edinburg High School in their native country. He was graduated in 1839, at the age of nineteen, from the University of the City of New York, of which his father, John Johnston, was one of the founders. He studied law in the Yale law school at New Haven with Charles Astor Bristed, Daniel D. Lord, Henry G. de Forest, and other New Yorkers of the generation which is fast passing away. He afterwards became a student in the office of Daniel Lord, sr., and was admitted to the Bar in 1843.

He remained but a short time in the active practice of his profession, for in 1848 he was induced to take the presidency of the insignificant Somerville and Easton railroad, which he and his associates developed into the comprehensive system now known as the Central R. R. of New Jersey, and with which his business career will always be associated. His presidency continued uninterruptedly from 1848 until 1877, a period of twenty-nine years, when his fortune, invested almost entirely in the enterprise which he had so successfully developed, was almost entirely sacrificed in a vain effort to sustain the credit of the company through the disasters of that period which were common, except in degree, to all the anthracite carrying roads. At that time Jersey Central stock went down to 10. He had faith in the Jersey Central, bought in all the stock he could at that figure and held it; thus in time recouping his fortune. He resigned the presidency of the road soon after it went into the hands of a receiver in 1877, and was never actively associated with it afterwards. Since then his public activity was largely confined to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and to other educational and benevolent institutions with which he was connected.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey owes to him, first of all, the broad foundation on which its system was built up. It was his forethought which led to the acquisition of the Lehigh and Susquehanna railroad in Pennsylvania and its appurtenant coal lands, and linked the traffic of these coal lands permanently to the Central railroad system. It was his forethought, too, which secured the great terminal facilities of this company in New York harbor, which have attracted to it by natural laws the traffic of the Baltimore and Ohio, the Reading, and more recently the Lehigh Valley. Almost alone on his board of directors, he advocated the building and leasing of the New York and Long Branch railroad. Many years before any other railroad men initiated a policy of suburban development, he foresaw its importance, and by frequent train service and attractive station grounds, built up central New Jersey between Jersey City and Somerville. His expenditures to secure low grades and good alignment and to avoid grade crossings were far in advance of the railroad science of his time and were ridiculed by some of his competitors. He also laid out extensive systems of roads specially designed to develop the country in connection with the railroad line. The mountain-top road in North Plainfield bears his name, his property in city and borough is one of Plainfield's most prominent attractions, and central New Jersey between Elizabeth and Somerville owes him a debt of gratitude for its progress and development.

He was always interested in art—an interest fostered by two years' residence abroad after graduation from the law school. His picture gallery was, up to the time of its sale and dispersion in 1877, the most important in America. It was always thrown open generously to the public on one day of each week and it was his habit to assemble in it all the artists of New York at least once a year. Among its noted pictures were Church's "Niagara", now in the Corcoran gallery at Washington; Muller's "Last Roll Call" in the Conciergerie, now belonging to Mr. Astor; Turner's "Slave Ship"; and representative works of Meissonier, Jules Breton, Brion, Fortuny, Madrazo, Daubigny, and the Barbizon School. Three hundred and twenty-seven such paintings he sacrificed at auction for a total of $330,972

His taste in art was thoroughly Catholic. The American, German, and English schools were all represented, as well as the French. He was a natural leader in organizing the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and gave from its first inception until his infirmities incapacitated him from all business, his watchful and earnest care. Of all the many enterprises with which he had been associated, this stood nearest to his heart. He was the first president of the museum and continued to occupy this office until 1889, when he was forced to resign because of his condition of health, and was succeeded by Henry G. Marquand. He was then elected honorary president for life, a position which he held at the time of his death. The acquisition of the earlier collections of the museum was largely due to his generosity. His presidency was no honorary one. His last public appearance was at the annual meeting of the museum in 1892, and the annual meeting for the present year was the first one from which he was ever absent.

Nor was his activity confined to the public enterprises which have been named. The University of the City of New York, of the governing body of which he was president; the Presbyterian Hospital, the Woman's Hospital, the St. Andrews' Society, and the Boards of the Presbyterian church: all claimed and received their share of his attention. He followed his father as an elder in the old Scotch Presbyterian church and took his full part in church councils. He was an influential member of several general assemblies, in which he represented the New York Presbytery.

He never permitted his business or public duties to interfere with his family life, which, until the death of his eldest son and wife occurring in 1886 and 1889 respectively, was an unusually happy one. He married Frances Colles, daughter of James Colles, in 1851. One son, J. Herbert Johnston, and three daughters, all married, Mrs. Robert W. deForest, Mrs. Pierce Mali and Mrs. Henry E. Coe, survive him.

The funeral will be on Monday from the Old Scotch Presbyterian church in Fifth avenue. The burial will be at Greenwood.

A BANQUET TO SENATOR MARSH

He Returns From His Shooting Trip to Receive It.

Senator Marsh returned Wednesday afternoon from Sedge Island, Barnegat, where he had been duck hunting for several days

He had not intended, when he went away, to return quite so soon, but while there he received a call to come home at once to attend a complimentary banquet tendered to him by a number of his political and personal friends.

The banquet was given in New York city, and Gov. Werts was present, the only one invited outside of the city of Elizabeth. It proved to be a highly enjoyable event, the more so as it was a perfect surprise to Senator Marsh.

Speaking of his duck hunting he said it was very successful and he enjoyed it greatly. He had no one with him but his dog and guide, and spent the time in hunting ducks and geese from blinds. Barnegat Bay, he said, was full of brant and geese. On Tuesday last he brought down two very handsome geese, one of them weighing thirteen pounds. He was fortunate in getting a large number of ducks, and was much benefited by his trip.

SHALL PLAINFIELD YIELD TO RIVALS?

Rather Let Her Provide Herself with Modern Improvements as Other Towns Are Doing.

Plainfield's position renders a sewerage system an economic necessity; for this is not an independent isolated trade-center, dependent on the trade of the surrounding country, or on shops or factories. Plainfield is a city of homes, largely for people who do business elsewhere, and who as a rule are quite free to reside where they can be best accommodated—where health and the conveniences of life can be had in the largest measure.

These people to a man know what sanitation and drainage are worth. To them cesspools are an abomination, to be endured perhaps temporarily, but not permanently.

All the towns of homes in New Jersey from Summit to Somerville either have secured drainage, or are planning to secure it. Plainfield will soon be surrounded by sewered towns—by Somerville and Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Rahway, by Elizabeth, Roselle and Cranford, if not Westfield.

What do such surroundings mean to Plainfield, if she remains undrained? This is a question that comes home to every owner of real estate, to every merchant whether he deals in coal or in ribbons, to every man who has or expects employment here: to every individual, in short, who considers Plainfield his home. It is a question that goes to the very root of our permanent prosperity; for we may be sure that we can not, circumstanced as we are, securely build upon soil that is daily charged with impurities from three thousand cesspools. It would be wiser to build upon the sand and let the floods come than to build on polluted ground where rival towns are rapidly substituting modern drainage for the primeval sink-holes.

As an economic question—a plain matter of dollars and cents—we can not afford to cling to the cesspools. It will not pay us to do so when a tax rate of one-fifteenth of one per cent. will secure to us and to our children a system that will drain Plainfield as clean as a whistle, and compel her rivals to admit her superiority in that as in all other respects.

THE TOWN CLERK CONTEST.

Martin Sworn in by the Republican Committee, But Kline Will Fight in the Courts.

The North Plainfield Township committee met in the new council chamber in Spencer's hall, Thursday night,—Messrs. Voorhees, Allen and Smith being present. Clerk H. J. Martin, who took the oath of office before justice Cronley less than six days after election, according to law, called the meeting to order and an organization was perfected by the election of A. P. Voorhees, chairman, and W. C. Smith, treasurer.

The clerk stated that the newly-elected officers had been notified to appear and qualify, but few of them had done so.

The bond of overseer of the poor John Mackey, for $500, with the names of Harrison Coddington and B. S. Braider as sureties, was accepted, and he was sworn in.

Collector H. N. Spencer's bond for $15,000, with the names of Elias Allen and Wm. C. Smith, was accepted, and ordered recorded.

J. W. VanHorn was sworn in as constable, and his bond with J. F. Pierson and Thomas Rutledge as sureties, was accepted.

Township physician, Dr. J. H. Carman, sent in a communication agreeing to attend to the poor, furnish all medicine, etc., for $150 per annum; or, for the same fee as last year, $100, for attendance only. The total expenditure for physician's services, medicine, etc., last year was $160.75. Dr. Carman's offer was accepted.

The following claims were presented and tabled until such time as the treasury shall have given bonds; F. W. Runyon, $26; L. E. Barkalew, $12.13; W. L. Force & Bro., $4.50; E. W. Vail, $13.63; W. H. VanWinkle, $13.50; George B. Stewart, $12.13; W. H. Longer, $12.

At this juncture in the proceedings, Levi P. Kline arose in the audience and said that he was present to be sworn in as town clerk. He claimed that he had been legally elected, and protested against clerk Martin acting in that capacity.

The clerk stated that it was necessary for the township clerk to qualify before a justice of the peace, within six days after election. Mr. Martin was unanimously declared the clerk.

The committee took the stand that even if Kline was elected, he vacated that office by not qualifying; and to make Martin's place secure they appointed him to fill the vacancy. Mr. Kline will fight it out in the courts.

The bond of Job Coddington for $500, with himself, N. B. Smalley and H. J. Martin as bondsmen, was accepted, and he was sworn in as constable.

Clerk H. J. Martin presented his necessary qualifications. J. P. Humble was sworn in as surveyor of highways, and the meeting adjourned to Wednesday evening next for the payment of bills and the transaction of routine business.

THE PRESENT CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR HIM.

Kansas City Methodists Will Build a Larger One for the Rev. C. B. Mitchell.

The Grand Avenue Methodist church in Kansas City, since the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, formerly of this city, stepped into its pulpit, is overflowing, and it is intended now to build, in the near future, a large People's church on its present site, which will have a seating capacity of 2,500, and in addition there will be all the conveniences and appliances of a modern aggressive church.

The present edifice is far too small for the congregations. Every Sunday night for three months from 100 to 400 have been turned away after all the space in the church had been occupied. Recently the official board ordered the purchase of a large number of folding chairs. The church is now undergoing a thorough cleaning and repairing inside and out. The board recently refused $160,000 cash for the property.

THEY WANT A NEW ASYLUM.

The Odd Fellows Will Spend $20,000 for Their Orphans.

A circular has been sent to Plainfield by the Odd Fellows' Orphanage association of the State of New Jersey, requesting lodges to look up sites in the different cities, as it is the intention of the order to build a new orphan asylum to cost not less than $20,000, so as to relieve the present one in New Brunswick, which is overcrowded at present. Trenton has already offered three acres, Mays Landing five, and Arlington five. The committee on sites will meet in Trenton on April 4, when the locations offered them will be decided upon.

OBITUARY.

The Rev. E. A. Embury.

The Rev. Edmund A. Embury died on Saturday at his late residence, 60 Washington avenue.

Mr. Embury was born in New York city, April 13, 1809. He was a graduate from Columbia College and from the General Theological Seminary.

After finishing his education he became pastor of the Emanuel Episcopal church in Brooklyn, and afterwards of St. Mark's church of the same city. From Brooklyn he came to Plainfield, in 1861.

The existence of the Church of the Holy Cross in North Plainfield is due to his generous liberality, as he built it and presented it to the parish.

He was rector of this church for a number of years, and only gave up active work in the church when he became too feeble to have the responsibility of the parish on his shoulders.

Since he retired the Holy Cross has seen four pastors—Revs. Ward, Camp and C. W. Fiske, besides T. Logan Murphy, the present rector.

Mr. Embury was especially noted for his parish work. Wherever he chanced to be rector he organized the work of the parish so that much was accomplished under his efficient guidance.

He has been failing gradually for some time, and his death this morning was not unexpected. The end was extremely peaceful.

Deceased was in his 84th year; he leaves two sons and three daughters. He was possessed of considerable wealth in lands.

REMARKABLE PEOPLE.

Easter Island and Its Peculiar Inhabitants.

Race That Was Once Powerful and Apparently Semi-Civilized — Queer Images and Statuary — A Simple Love Song.

[Special Letter.]

The nautical explorer to whom the honor is due of first discovering Easter island did not take the precaution of leaving an authentic "log" report to his posterity. I use the term first discovered, advisedly, for this singular and remote bit of Oceanica has been regularly discovered at intervals for several centuries. It was sighted by Sir Edward Davis, a navigator, in 1686, but after that it was visited and named by the Dutch Admiral Roggewein when sailing the South seas on a voyage of discovery and circumnavigation. As he was looking for new countries he anchored whenever he found an unknown shore, although making a tour of the globe, which he really accomplished in two years and two months.

Admiral Roggewein was looking for the island previously named Davis island, and discovered it on April 6, 1722, in latitude 27 degrees west. It has never been decided by histographers whether it was really Davis island or not, but the Dutch admiral commemorated the event of his landing by renaming the disputed spot Easter island, or "Oster," in honor of Easter Sunday, upon which day he and his crew landed. These were the first Europeans to set foot on these lonely cliffs, twelve hundred feet above the level of the sea. Occasionally some Spanish buccaneer stopped at the island after this. At least that is what the La Perouse expedition decided in 1786, when they found the Easter islanders wearing fugitive pieces of Spanish clothing of a fashion twenty years out of date.

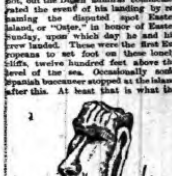

IMAGE OF WRY-NECK IN RANA RORARKA CRATER.

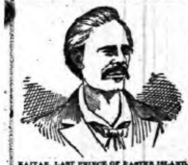
How the inhabitants themselves ever reached this inaccessible mountain of the sea is an unsolved mystery. That they are there is an indisputable fact, five hundred miles from the nearest land—Pitcairn's island—and two thousand miles from the coast of Chili.

A rude, lazy, untaught people, speaking the barbaric dialect of the South Sea islands; a race of whites, yet with no knowledge of any of the arts of civilization, how did they come into possession of the curious sculptures with with which the island abounds? To have made these and placed them where they are would have commanded a thorough knowledge of the engineering science and all the appliances of modern power-invention. There is not even a tradition of the people who made these idols and images of past centuries. We can only hazard a supposition that they were some wandering body of Aztec artisans, such as those who knew the lost mechanical arts of the ruined pyramids and temples of Mexico.

It would seem from all accounts that they are a simple people who have been ill-treated by Europeans and only recently converted to Christianity by Catholic missionaries, who braved death to help these unfortunates; who, when Cook landed, had for their only weapons a stick carried in one hand, but who, to save themselves from annihilation, were obliged to learn the noble art of self-defense.



KAITAE, LAST PRINCE OF EASTER ISLAND.

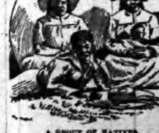
There are now churches, mission houses, schools and other improvements on the island, but there is little doubt that in the course of time the island will be depopulated, as the number of natives has been steadily decreasing, there now being less than two thousand.

Formerly there was a native king, but the last one was stolen with a large number of his people by the cruel Peruvians. He died a captive, only two of the kidnaped islanders ever finding their way back to their homes.

The only descendant of the king is a sturdy old fellow named Kaitae, who when last heard from was living and well at the age of eighty.

While the Easter islanders themselves are not a highly interesting people, they are surrounded by evidences of a strange and more intelligent race. These are manifest in the traditions with which the place abounds, and the singular native houses of great antiquity, the interiors of which are made of slabs of carved stones, covered with mythological figures. The rocks, too, are covered with sculptured figures. Remarkable images are found in the crater of Rana Rorarka, where a series of workshops exist. Some of the images are of colossal size, but no method of moving them when finished is left to show us how the rude artist intended to convey them to the world outside. The largest of these images measures seventy feet in length. It is said that many of the standing images are as perfect as if just finished. The one in the illustration is noticeable from a peculiar turn of the neck, which might have been accidental. It is called "Wry-neck."

These images occupy a number of platforms, each one of which was a workshop for the image builder. These have been numbered up to one hundred and twelve, which contains sixteen small images all lying on their sides and in good condition. The platform itself is on the face of a steep cliff, nearly one thousand feet high, and about half-way between the sea and the top of the cliff.

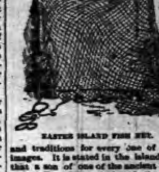


A GROUP OF NATIVES.

The platform called Tahiri, which is 100 feet high, is remarkable, say historians, for its finished workmanship. It is said to have been the last one made, as at this juncture a great feast was held by a powerful tribe of Vinapu. There was a roast of "long pig," the islanders then being cannibals, and one lady, the wife of a powerful chief, did not receive her fair share of the human delicacy. Her clan, the Tongariki, at once avenged her, and a long and bloody war followed. This tradition accounts for the sudden cessation in the line of sculpture.

Tablets of [illegible] in various museums, whither they have been taken as scientific curiosities. They do not resemble other discoveries in hyroglogic writings. It is hoped that when these cabalistic letters have been deciphered some information may be gained of the people at the period of the stone image making with which the tablets are believed to be coincidental. Many traditional translations have been made, but they are always traditional, as the key to the ancient language has been lost.

By actual count it has been ascertained that there are 555 images on Easter island. The people have names and traditions for every one of these images. It is stated in the island lore that a son of one of the ancient kings named Flo Kaiho designed the first image, but this is traditionary knowledge. It is certain, however, from the results, and from the known antiquity of the images, that these crater workshops must have been in operation at the time of Capt. Cook's visit to the island. But it is evident that he did not explore the crater of Rana Rorarka.



EASTER ISLAND FISH NET.

The native dialect is that of Malayo-Polynesian language. It is rather musical to hear, but somewhat perplexing to learn, as its personal pronouns are most bewildering, and the words are duplicated. Manga-manga, means finger, while toes are expressed by manga-manga vae, "fingers of the foot."

An Easter island tablet love song has this refrain:

To hi tiena fia hare
Horea ita hare
Hora moni a tatti
Ana ori mira
Ana piri atu;
Ana piri atu;
Ana tagu atu.

"O, where is the messenger of love between us?
When the feast of driftwood is commemorated
There will we meet in loving embrace."

It is really surprising that so little is known of one of the most remarkable natural museums in the world, or of a people who are now almost extinct, although once they were a formidable power, with a king of their own by right of succession.

MRS. M. L. RAYNE.

An Educational Error.

An amusing story is told in connection with the recent teachers' reception held in Boston. A certain man of influence in educational circles, being slightly rejuvenate, ordered the caterer to prepare a bowl of properly brewed punch. He did so, and the hospitable bowl was placed in a position easily accessible, and where it was soon emptied. At that time another gentleman, well known for his strong opposition to the use of intoxicating beverages, discovered the empty condition of the late flowing bowl, and, supposing it to have been previously filled with lemonade, as a part of the entertainment, ordered it refilled, which was done. Again the bowl was drained by the thirsty pedagogues, and again another unsophisticated entertainer ordered it filled, and so it happened in the course of the evening that some six gallons of punch were drank by the thirsty and guileless educators.—Boston Journal.

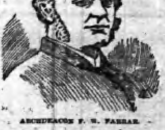
REACHING THE POOR.

Archdeacon Farrar Talks About Church Attendance.

A Plea for Corporate Christian Life—The Danger of Isolation—Abolish Pew Rents and Make Sermons Brighter.

The great English clergyman, Archdeacon Farrar, like the late Phillips Brooks, whose ardent friend he was, has always shown the deepest sympathy with and a thorough understanding of the common people. In Archdeacon Farrar's case there are peculiar reasons why this should be the case. Unlike Bishop Brooks, the Englishman himself began life in very moderate circumstances. Of his mother he wrote recently: "She passed her life in the deep valley of poverty, obscurity and trial, but she has left to her only surviving son the recollection of a saint."

Replying recently to the question: "What should the clergy do to bring the workingmen into closer connection with them?" he said: "For one thing, I hold that they should lay much greater stress on the fact that if a Christian is a Christian he ought not to be an individual one. It would be a most advantageous thing if it could be conclusively shown to the working classes that they should live, as Christians, a corporate life and not one of isolation. They would then come to our churches quite independently of liking the services, but as the duty of Christians to come and worship in common as Christians. At a recent church congress one of the speakers made the remark: 'We don't ask why the workingmen do not go to church, but why the church does not go to the workingmen. The house-going parson makes the church-going people.' There is a great truth underlying that statement. It means that if the people know their clergyman socially they are far more likely to trust him and to come to church. Almost any body of clergy working in a parish who know the lower classes personally are sure to get them to come to religious gatherings. Further, it is of immense importance that the churches should be free, especially parish churches. At St. Margaret's, from time immemorial, there had been pew rents. But when I was appointed rector the first thing I did was to abolish them. If things had been retained as formerly these rents would have furnished a large income; but I did not think it right that they should continue to exist. I considered it was of the utmost importance that the seats should be unappropriated from the moment that the service began; and this I hold should be the case in all parish churches. Of course, the seats could not be wholly unappropriated; otherwise the parishioners would not be able to get seats. But in cases where the church is not a parish one and where there are no parishioners, I think that all the seats should be free and open to all at all times. But that is not all. The officials should be instructed to give the kindest and warmest welcome to all who come, especially to strangers and the poor. If this were the case, all the working classes who chanced to attend would at once feel at home and as if welcome guests. This would be very different from what one experiences in most churches.



ARCHDEACON F. W. FARRAR.

"In addition," he continued, "the church should be scrupulously clean, bright and well warmed, and as beautiful as the means of the parish will allow. The seats themselves should not be comfortless, but could be arranged so that the worshipers should go through the services without suffering personal inconvenience. It is a great mistake for the clergy to put small [illegible] in the way of possible [illegible] [illegible] in their attendance at public worship. As to the conditions of the services, it is highly important that these should not be wearisomely long. It is essential that, if people are to begin and continue to be church-going, the service should be shorter, brighter, less formal and much more elastic.

"I certainly think sermons ought not to be too long; very few are now; they should be reasonably short. A written sermon, if fairly well delivered, is quite as acceptable, at any rate to an educated audience, as an extempore one. The reason why clergymen prefer to read their sermons is that they consider they can give more carefully expressed thoughts, in better form, if they write them out, than if they give them forth extempore. At the same time every clergyman who can do it fairly well should address the poorer audience without book. In conclusion, I maintain that wherever the services are short, bright and hearty, and wherever the preacher has any real message to deliver, the church will not be empty."

Useful Bird.

A small bird which inhabits the valleys and canyons in Death valley, California, is said to be very skillful in killing scorpions, which, it is further stated, seems to be its chief occupation.

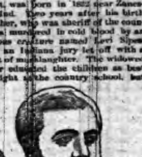
Timber-Destroying Craze.

What was once the heart of the Wisconsin pine region is now said to be importing thousands of feet of that timber from the state of Washington.

WALTER Q. GRESHAM.

The Eventful Career of the New Secretary of State.

Walter Quintin Gresham, who holds the portfolio of state in the Cleveland cabinet, was born in 1832 near Zanesville, Ind. Two years after his birth his father, who was sheriff of the county, was murdered in cold blood by an infamous creature named Levi Sipes, whom an Indiana jury let off with a verdict of manslaughter. The widowed mother educated the children as best she might at the country school, but when Walter was sixteen years old he was given a post in the office of the county auditor, the duties of which were of such a character that the ambitious youth was enabled to pursue a course of study at the Corydon seminary. In 1854 he was admitted to the bar. Two years later he was stumping his district for John C. Fremont, the first presidential candidate of the republican party, with which organization Gresham has always allied himself until within a few months ago, when he declared himself a believer in the tenets and practices of the democracy as represented by Grover Cleveland.



WALTER Q. GRESHAM.

In the early part of the war of the rebellion, Mr. Gresham served as colonel in the Fifty-third Indiana regiment; later he rose to the rank of brigadier general.

In President Arthur's cabinet he filled first the post of postmaster general and then that of secretary of the treasury. Subsequently he was appointed United States circuit judge at Chicago.

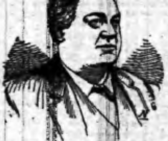
Judge Gresham made his mark as a jurist in the decision he gave in the intricate Wabash railway case. The road had the backing of the greatest corporation in the country, and the case was defended by the ablest counsel that could be secured. Judge Gresham's opinion was so fearless, and at the same time so just, as to gain the admiration of the whole country.

Judge Gresham was married to Miss Matilda McGrain in Harrison county, Ind., in 1858. He has two children, a son and a daughter. His widowed mother still lives on the old homestead, and the judge often visits her there.

JUDGE WILLIAM LINDSAY.

John G. Carlisle's Successor in the United States Senate.

The election of Judge Lindsay as the successor of John G. Carlisle in the senate of the United States accords with the prevailing sentiment of Kentucky democracy. Kentucky, the state of Clay, Breckinridge and Beck, has always chosen senators of social, business and political prominence and merit, and she has not departed from her rule in the election of Judge Lindsay. He was born September 4, 1834, in Rockbridge county, Va., and is of Scotch ancestry. He began the practice of law in Clinton, Ky., having previously been a teacher. He joined the confederacy when the civil war began, and was a staff officer with the Second Kentucky brigade. His first political promotion was to the state senate in 1867. From the senate he went to the bench as the judge of the court of appeals, and then, in 1878, became chief justice of Kentucky. He is described as a man of remarkable mental alertness, clever in debate, of ready wit and seemingly inexhaustible resources. Added to his mental power he has a physical magnificence, towering into six feet, with proportionate fullness, and having a face which wins him favor in any assemblage. Two years ago he was the leading candidate for United States senator against Mr. Carlisle, resigning his seat on the state bench to enter the contest. Judge Lindsay was appointed a member of the interstate commerce commission by President Harrison, but declined.



SENATOR LINDSAY, OF KENTUCKY.

Cultivate Refinement.

Do not grow into your shell. So much is to be gained by contact with the outside world. The influence of the social current has the same effect upon human nature as that produced by the constant friction of the sea upon the pebbles of the beach, says the Brandon Banner. Rough corners are polished and sharp angles smoothed down into symmetrical proportions. But it is not enough to be simply in the swim. One must, to be happy, cultivate that society which elevates and ennobles. Seek relaxation for the mind and body among a set of people who hold broad views of living. Narrow-minded men and women, and the world is full of them, will only give you distorted ideas of life. Ideas that will change the sunniest and most healthful disposition into one morose, churlish and ill-natured. Be careful, then, whom you choose for your companions.

DIAMOND CHANGES.

The New Baseball Rules May Cause a General Revolution.

The committee on rules of the National league completed its labors with the following result:

First—No abridgment of the infield now in use.

Second—Removal of the pitcher from his present position to the center of the infield; abolish the pitcher's box and substitute therefor a [illegible] plate [illegible] to which the pitcher will be confined.

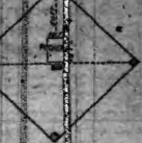
Third—Abolition of the flat bat.

Fourth—A better definition of a balk ball.

Fifth—A modification of the rules pertaining to the [illegible]

[illegible]

The most important of the changes is the moving back of the pitcher a distance of over eight feet. The result of the change will be shown in the subjoined diagram. The small plate shown in the cut will be the only guide for the position of the pitcher, the box of course having been done away with. This will cause an entire revision of the playing rules.



NEW PLAN OF DIAMOND.

If there is no pitcher's box that portion of the rules requiring a base runner to touch his base on a foul ball after the pitcher has taken his position in the box must be changed. A new rule for the putting of a block ball into play must also be adopted, as at present the ball must be held by the pitcher in the box before it is in play.

Then, too, there must be some rule made to preserve base running, or it will become extinct as a factor in the game.

It can be seen from the diagram that a pitcher from his position can keep watch on first and third base all the time and is always in position to throw to them, while under the old rules he was compelled to turn half way around to throw to either first or third. The small square just back of the present box shows the proposed plate behind which the pitcher's front foot must land. Before he delivers the ball he will be at least five feet back of this slab, so that it is easy to see how closely he can guard first base.

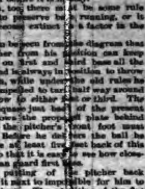
The putting of the pitcher back makes it next to impossible for him to field a bunt. The abolition of the flat bat will not do away with the bunt. If the pitcher is to be moved back and free hitting thus encouraged the bunt should have been abolished.

The committee on rules, thinks the Chicago Tribune, is inconsistent, to say the least. It encourages sacrifice hitting and bunting, yet legislates with a view to securing free hitting.

THE FOUDROYANT.

Admiral Nelson's Flagship Rescued from a Junk Dealer.

This famous relic of England's naval hero has met with many vicissitudes of time and change since Nelson trod her decks with conscious pride and said of her: "I love her as a father loves his darling child." To complete the chain of neglect and ignominy which was forged by an ungrateful posterity, the hull of the forgotten craft was sold to a thrifty German junk dealer for $5,000. Not until then did the English nation appreciate the fact that they were losing a valuable link in the records of the most splendid achievements of naval warfare the world ever knew. Such excitement resulted that the admiralty took the matter of repurchase into consideration, but was anticipated by a private English syndicate who have bought the old warship back again and will keep her hull as a relic of public interest.



WHEN NELSON TROD HER DECKS.

Where Jeff Davis Sat.

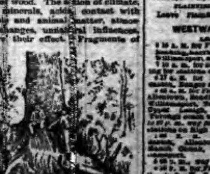
The desk which Jefferson Davis used when he was a member of the United States senate is still in the senate chamber. Senator Cockrell of Missouri uses it now. It is related that during the civil war some union soldiers, when the desk was pointed out to them, attempted to demolish it with their bayonets. One of the attendants hastened to interfere, asking: "What are you doing?" "Breaking up Jeff Davis' desk," the soldiers answered, as they made another stab with their bayonets. "It is not Jeff Davis' desk," was the answer, "it is the property of the government, and if you don't stop right away you will go to jail." Then the soldiers ceased; but to-day the ugly holes made by the bayonets in the polished mahogany tell a mute but eloquent story of the passions of 1861.

SEVEN CENTURIES OLD.

A Cedar Plank Remarkable for Its Longevity.

For Five Hundred Years the Log Was Imprisoned Under the Roots of a Mammoth Tree — A Surprise to Scientists.

Science and research have many times been directed toward computing the longevity of natural wood, but there are so many obstacles in the way of a satisfactory conclusion, as there are species of wood. The action of climate, water, minerals, acids, contact with vegetable and animal matter, atmospheric changes, unnatural influences, all have their effect. Fragments of vessels which have lain beneath the waves for hundreds of years have shown the timbers to be as firm and solid as when placed in position, yet this state of preservation is due to the action of the briny substances with which the wood has been saturated, offsetting the destroying influences.



SPRUCE TREE GROWING OVER A CEDAR LOG.

But the life of a wood, cut off by storm or the act of man or beast from the nutriment of the earth, when that life and resistance to decay is extended into centuries, proves wonderful to the most conservative scientists. Instances are rare where the wood, dead as far as connection with the vital force of roots and earth is concerned, and left exposed to the action of climate and vegetable and animal matter, has failed to succumb to decay within a century.

In the office of the Pacific Coast Lumber company in Chicago is a specimen of wood remarkable for its longevity and presenting a valuable lesson in natural history. It is a small slab of fragrant cedar, [illegible] presenting the appearance of a carefully seasoned piece of wood. It is certainly well [illegible] slab is taken from a log that has been dead, according to expert calculation, at least 700 years.

Near the town of Fairhaven, Wash., and a few miles from the Fairhaven & Southern railroad is a spruce and cedar forest. For years the inhabitants and visitors have viewed with interest a peculiar natural formation, and it became one of the sights of that section. It was a huge spruce tree, towering high in the air and far above many of its sturdy neighbors, healthy and sound, although its feelers were exposed in many directions. Down among its roots, yet above the surface of the ground, was a good-sized cedar log, and about this log grew the roots of the tree. Firmly secured was it, only to be removed by the hand of man through the destruction of its protector.

The woodsman, scientist and mathematician have decided that the spruce tree was at least five hundred years old, and from the size of the log it must have taken in the neighborhood of two hundred years to attain its growth. The ends and major portion of the body of the log had been exposed all these years, and last fall, anxious to gain some idea of the longevity of Washington cedar, some responsible men cut the roots away and liberated the well-seasoned prisoner. The log was milled, being cut into small slabs, and the result was a surprise to the most sanguine. Not a weak spot existed, and the slabs presented the appearance of carefully nurtured and cured wood. The fiber is firm and solid, the grain is almost artistic in its perfection, the color is rich and dark, and the fragrant odor of cedar still remains. In its perfection it has proven a surprise and gives the palm for everlasting life to Washington cedar.

Their Military Expenses.

A comparative statement of the military outlay in different European countries shows the percentage of the cost for the army and navy to the budgetary expenditure. The figures, which apply to the fiscal year 1892-93, are these: Great Britain, 38.9; Russia, 29.7; France, 27.1; Italy, 22.4; Germany, 17.8; and Austria-Hungary, 17.6 per cent. The expenditure for the interest and sinking fund on the public debts of the different countries amounted in Italy to 42.4, in Austria-Hungary to 39.2, in France to 38.4, in Great Britain to 27.9, in Russia to 25.7 and in Germany to 12.9 per cent of the whole budget.

Age of Trees.

Information gathered by the German forestry commission assigns to the pine tree a life of 500 to 700 years as a maximum, 425 years to the silver fir, 275 years to the larch, 245 years to the red beech, 210 years to the aspen, 200 years to the birch, 170 years to the ash, 145 years to the alder and 130 years to the elm. The heart of the oak begins to rot at about the age of 300 years. The holm oak alone escapes this law. But in England there are several famous old oaks of gigantic proportions, and with ages variously estimated at from 700 to 1,500 years. The latter age, however, seems incredible.

LIT BY BALLOONS.

Aerial Ships with Electric Lights Will Illuminate a City.

A balloon with electric lights attached to it for lighting cities is the latest idea of turning the "light of lights" to a practical use. This idea may seem very visionary, but C. A. Smith, of No. 112 Grove street, one of San Francisco's inventors, has sufficient confidence in the scheme to commence operations of constructing a balloon for that purpose, says the Call of that city.

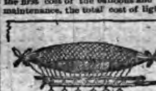
This balloon will not be of the ordinary silk bag pattern, but will be made of aluminium and in the shape of a cigar, pointed at both ends. It will be about forty feet long and fifteen feet in diameter at its largest point, and will contain sufficient gas to sustain it in the roughest kind of weather. Fans will be constructed so as to hold its point up to the wind and help it from dipping; and in calm weather it will be so balanced that it will remain perfectly level.

A cable containing the electric wires will hold it at a sufficient elevation, so that the light will be spread over the area to be illuminated to the best advantage.

The balloon will sustain six arc lights, or it can be so made as to be covered with incandescent lights, each one of which will be inclosed with a reflector, so as to concentrate the rays of the light and throw them downward.

An appliance will be provided for hauling the balloon to the earth for trimming the light or making any repairs that might become necessary, or raising or lowering it so that the light may be advantageously distributed.

The inventor claims that, counting the first cost of the balloons and their maintenance, the total cost of lighting a city the size of San Francisco will be reduced considerably, as one balloon will suffice for from four to six blocks. At the same time the tangle of deadly and unsightly wires from the streets will be removed and danger from fires reduced.



THE SKY LIGHT FOR ILLUMINATING A CITY.

Mr. Smith, in addition to the lights, has invented an arrangement of mirrors, which will be placed on the under side of the balloon, so that a person on one street can see what is transpiring on the next, even though blocks of buildings intervene, and this mirror arrangement, the inventor says, will be of great service to the fire department, as the location of flames can be easily ascertained should they break out from a building.

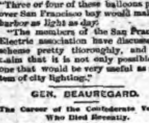
"Perhaps the best use to which this system of lighting would be turned would be to harbors," said Mr. Smith. "Three or four of these balloons placed over San Francisco bay would make the harbor as light as day.

"The members of the San Francisco Electric association have discussed my scheme pretty thoroughly, and they claim that it is not only possible, but one that would be very useful as a system of city lighting."

GEN. BEAUREGARD.

The Career of the Confederate Veteran Who Died Recently.

Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard was born near New Orleans, May 28, 1818. He graduated second in his class rank at West Point in 1838. He was assigned first to the artillery and then to the engineers, and in 1838-39 to assistant in the construction of Fort Adams, Newport, and at Fort McHenry, Maryland, in 1844-45. At the beginning of the war with Mexico he was engaged in the construction of defenses at Tampico, in 1846-47; siege operations at Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo, Chapultepec and City of Mexico, where he was twice wounded. Shortly after he was brevetted major. He attained full rank of captain of engineers in 1853 for fourteen years of continuous service as lieutenant. On returning to the United States he was assigned to engineering in the construction and repairs of fortifications on the Mississippi river and in the construction of the custom house at New Orleans. His supervisory duties extended over the gulf coast from Florida to the Rio Grande. He offered his services to the southern confederacy in 1861.



GEN. G. T. BEAUREGARD.

On the refusal of Maj. Robert Anderson to evacuate Fort Sumter he opened fire soon after daylight on April 12, 1861. He was practically in command at the battle of Bull Run, where he was again victorious. He nearly succeeded in routing the northern army at the battle of Shiloh, and held Petersburg against the federal advance and defeated Butler at Drury's Bluff. He surrendered his army to Sherman in April, 1865. After the war he became president of a railroad, adjutant general of the state and manager of the Louisiana state lottery. Gen. Beauregard has, until recently, been engaged in many important enterprises in the south.

Great Wine Cask.

The most capacious wine cask in the world is the celebrated tun of Konigstein, constructed under an edict issued by Frederick Augustus, king of Poland, in 1725. This greatest of all tuns holds 1,869,136 pints.

SALTED PEANUTS.

An Excellent and Toothsome Substitute for Almonds.

Perhaps all women are not aware that for "salting" the peanut is an appetizing substitute for the almond, and, as it is less expensive, it is worth while to know how to prepare it.

Being this moment flushed with triumph—my effort at the "salting" to-day having proved a shining success—I will, while the matter is fresh in my memory, "tell my experience," especially as some of the "things" I did were done by accident instead of "by directions," and are therefore discoveries.

I bought the green or unparched peanuts. This was an of-course procedure, and would not be mentioned, except that already two housekeepers who have eaten of my salted nuts have asked if I started with the ordinary roasted peanuts.

I used the nut cracker, gently crushing the shell to avoid breaking the nut. By using boiling water the peas are readily blanched, the red envelope being easily rubbed off. In my first essay the water was not scalding hot, and that led to my first "discovery."

In order to bring to the requisite heat I set the dish containing water and peanuts in the oven. Then there was a short call on my attention, causing me to forget the nuts, and on going to the oven I found the water gently boiling—simmering. I feared the nuts were ruined by this parboiling. But after rubbing off the skins, I spread the nuts on a tin dish, treated them to butter and set them in the oven again. It was then at a baking or browning heat, but was not a quick oven. This, too, worried me, since the "directions" called for a quick oven. This second mistake, I was sure, would complete the failure.

The nuts were in that oven for a half-hour at least before they were browned or sufficiently parched, that is, until they had turned a light snuff-color. Then I took them out and salted them hot.

Were they spoiled? They were superior to any salted almonds that I ever ate.

A similar verdict has been pronounced on them by a half score of skilled [illegible]

I now consider the peanut for salting [illegible] moist and will, therefore, bear a long, thorough, slow cooking before scorching. Deep browning ought to be avoided, with both almonds and peanuts, since this renders the nut in either case bitter.

While the ordinary roasted peanut of the market is trying to weak stomachs the salted peanut is purely harmless and may safely become one of our common delicacies.—Mary Maxwell, in Chicago News.

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
UNITED HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY,

MAKING EASTER CARDS.

Pleasant Employment for Cold Winter Evenings.

Take a square piece of paper, bend the corners over as seen here, and you will have the pattern for the Easter card, which is made of rough water color paper, or it can be made of cartridge paper. The chicken is made of yellow plush. First cut one out of cardboard, one the exact size of cotton, and one a trifle larger of plush. Scent the cotton, lay it on the cardboard and draw the plush smoothly over it. Glue it down on the back, and also on the card. Shade it with a little brown paint. Do the lettering and grasses and also the turned-over corners with gilt.—American Agriculturist.

AN EASTER CARD.

Why Women Are Not Humorists.

A writer in the open-letter department of the Century asks why in literature there are no lady humorists. He then goes on to answer his question by explaining that from childhood man finds the sawdust dropping out of everything, and soon discovers the worthlessness of much that passes for valuable. Therefore he learns to smile and say: "Is it not absurd?" instead of allowing his passion for something to adore to override his growing desire for truth. But, on the other hand, a woman's idols are so much a part of her life that when they are broken she cannot snap her fingers nor seek mirth as an avenue of escape. Women may possibly grow satirical, but satire is only a form of humor. "When life ceases to be in some way holy, or at any rate ideal, then woman's creative faculty terminates," says the writer. "She ends where man's talent as a humorist begins."

To Pack Silk and Wool.

Whenever you have occasion to pack away silk or woolen goods which you are afraid may turn yellow break up a few cakes of white beeswax and fold the pieces loosely in old handkerchiefs that are worn thin. Place these among the goods. If possible, pin the silks or woolens in some old white linen sheets or garments. If it be inconvenient to use linen take cotton sheets. Of course, it is important that the clothing shall be perfectly clean when put away.

Dry Process for Cleaning Gloves.

Lay out the gloves on a clean table or board, then rub into them a mixture of finely powdered fuller's earth and alum in equal quantities. This will work a dirty color, and should then be brushed off; then sprinkle the gloves with dry bran and whiting. Lastly, dust them well. Those who have glove trees will do well to put their gloves on to them, instead of laying them out on a table.

Demand and Supply.

The star boarder shoved the eggs away from him.

"What's the matter?" inquired the landlady.

"I don't like these eggs," he replied.

"What's wrong with them? Eggs are scarce now and cost a great deal of money."

"I don't doubt it," he ventured. "I notice that the fashion in antiques has increased the price quite beyond reason."—Detroit Free Press.

Borrowing Trouble.

"Maddock and his wife are always worrying about their children. Mrs. Maddock had a fit of nervousness the other day over the thought that their boy Wilfred would grow up and become a drunkard."

"And what does Maddock worry over?"

"He's afraid Annette will learn to play the piano."—Truth.

SOLDIERS' RECORDS.

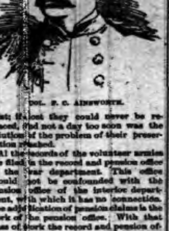
The Greatest Work of Tabulation Ever Attempted.

A Difficult Problem Solved—At a Minute's Notice the Career of Any Man in the Union Army Can Be Ascertained—Saves Delay and Expense.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

The most remarkable feat of systematizing ever brought to success—perhaps the best illustration of the power of method in human affairs—is now near completion in one of the departments of the general government. An idea which will save eight hundred thousand dollars a year to the nation, which has preserved vast and invaluable records and has made minutes worth days in the administration of an important branch of the national affairs, is certainly a matter of everybody's concern.

The preservation of the records referred to, if nothing else had been accomplished, is so important that it may be called absolutely indispensable, for those records are the individual histories of the union forces in the war of the rebellion. They were crumbling to dust; if lost they could never be replaced, and not a day too soon was the solution of the problem of their preservation reached.



COL. F. C. AINSWORTH.

All the records of the volunteer armies are filed in the record and pension office of the war department. This office should not be confounded with the pension office of the interior department, with which it has no connection. The adjudication of pension claims is the work of the pension office. With that class of work the record and pension office of the war department has nothing to do further than to furnish to the commissioner of pensions the histories of soldiers in order that their claims may be adjudicated.

In one of the rooms of the record and pension office I saw a small basket fastened against the wall. It contained some dozens of decaying bits of paper. Col. Ainsworth, chief of the office, lifted them gently. They ran through his fingers and fell like dead leaves into the basket.

"These are fragments of soldiers' records," said he. "Every one of them bears a soldier's name or some essential part of a soldier's story. They will be taken from this basket, and with infinite care put together like the pieces of a child's puzzle. It can be done; it has been done in many cases which looked as hopeless as this. Then the facts which they disclose will be preserved in clearer form and forever."

The wonderful system which makes this possible may be appreciated when one learns that there are about thirty million separate entries relating to over two million persons in the original war records; that two or three or perhaps a hundred of them may refer to a single soldier, that these were in the first place scattered as if for the purpose of concealing them, and that to-day it is as easy to find all of them which bear upon a single case as it is to turn to a man's name in the directory.

This amazing triumph of method has been accomplished without the expenditure of an extra dollar by the government or the addition of a man to the clerical force. It is simply an illustration of the value of an idea, which was evolved independently and developed into a great system by the present chief of the record and pension office long before any other successful application of either the idea or the system is known to have been made. After Col. Ainsworth had demonstrated that the method devised by him was not only perfectly adapted to the reproduction and preservation of old records, but that it was equally well suited to many other purposes, including that of recording the current correspondence of large offices. Several claimants for the honor of having first devised a similar system have been heard from, but investigation has shown that every one of these claims is without foundation and that the first successful application of the new method was made by Col. Ainsworth, who devised it.

IN OLD FORD'S THEATER.
[An elaborate eye shade.]

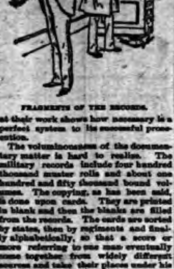
The story of the real work begins in 1886. Notwithstanding the fact that congress had greatly increased the clerical force of the war department for the purpose of enabling it to keep pace with the growing demand for record evidence in pension cases the work was always falling further behind. This did not show any lack of diligence; it was the difficulty of the task.

A solution of the whole problem was found when it was determined to substitute for the slip a card of imperishable paper and to put upon it not only all that was necessary for an index, but also the information itself, so that the card should bear a complete and literal transcript of everything shown by the original record in connection with a certain entry. This is not merely an index to a certain record, it is a reproduction of the record itself and is very properly called an "index record card."

Its value can be told in a word. Under the old method the two hundred and eighty clerks engaged in making reports from the hospital records for use in the settlement of pension and other claims could make no more than one hundred and fifty such reports a day on the average. From the index record cards forty men can answer one thousand calls a day. Formerly the answers were far from complete. Often the most important fact was missing—the fact that would have given a deserving person a pension or denied one to an impostor. Now every matter of record is shown in every case. Then from three to six months was the time required for any call to be answered. Now it is usually done on the day received.

When the hospital records had been nearly all transferred to the cards, the record and pension division of the surgeon general's office—in which the work had been done—was consolidated with several divisions of the adjutant general's office, where the military records were filed, and Col. Ainsworth was placed in charge of the whole. He was, and still is, directly under the secretary of war and responsible to him alone. At the time the work of the medical [illegible] was up to date. But in the other [illegible] scores of hands seemed to [illegible] efforts to bring order out of chaos. There were forty thousand cases of all kinds awaiting action. Two-thirds of these were calls from the commissioner of pensions. The remainder were from the second auditor for information relating to claims for back pay and bounty or other matters necessitating a search of the mutilated and decaying rolls or other military records.

Then the vast military records were treated in the same way. The present record and pension office was created by executive order in 1889. It was thus at first dependent upon executive authority for its continuance, but on May 9, 1892, it was given permanent establishment as an independent bureau by an act of congress, and Col. Ainsworth was appointed and commissioned as its chief. The military records were carded by states. At present there remains some work to be done upon Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. It will soon be finished. The carding is being done in the old Ford theater, where Lincoln was shot. About five hundred clerks are there employed, and a casual glance at their work shows how necessary is a perfect system to its successful prosecution.



FRAGMENTS OF THE RECORDS.

The voluminousness of the documentary matter is hard to realize. The military records include four hundred thousand muster rolls and about one hundred and fifty thousand bound volumes. The copying, as has been said, is done upon cards. They are printed in blank and then the blanks are filled from the records. The cards are sorted by states, then by regiments and finally alphabetically, so that a score or more referring to one man eventually come together from widely different sources and take their places under his name. The system of indexing and sorting is marvelous; the result is beautiful in its simplicity. At the "Tenth street branch," as Ford's theater is called, Oliphant C. Brown is in charge. With the permission of Col. Ainsworth I inspected the branch under Mr. Brown's guidance. The building is little divided by partitions. The three great floors are covered with rows of desks, where clerks are busy with muster rolls or cards which are being compared. A glance over the desks shows the great volume of papers through which the clerks must make their way to reach the necessary facts. The comparison and verification are attended to with the utmost care, so that any divergence from the original records is impossible. Even palpable errors are preserved with explanatory notes. If a man's name has been spelled wrong anywhere in the four hundred thousand muster rolls and the hundred and fifty thousand volumes, a glance at his card will show where the error occurred. If an entry in the original is, from age or peculiarity of penmanship, open to several constructions, the original will be found reproduced upon the card. This care is absolutely necessary, and the discretion which suggested it proves its utility every day. And yet, when all is done, the new records are not bulky. They are models of condensation.

The results are on file in the war department. There one may see rooms full of ordinary file cases indexed upon the outside, to show the regiment, company or alphabetical division. Here, for instance, is the room devoted to New York. It contains, roughly speaking, one-seventh of the union army. There were four hundred and eighty thousand enlistments from that state. The records are kept in six thousand, one hundred and ninety-two boxes, of which twenty-four refer to the Mexican war and the others to the rebellion.

"Make a test of the system," said Col. Ainsworth, as we passed through the room. "Call for some soldier whom you know."

"Wait till we come to Maine," said I. "That is my state."

We passed through several rooms similar to that devoted to New York. There was something deeply impressive in the orderly arrangement of the military titles standing forth sharply upon the white placards. It was like walking through a vast camp. The great host whose individual history surrounded me seemed to be on guard. The valor of the nation was gathered about me. On every hand were names associated with heroism upon the field. This regiment was at Gettysburg; that shed its blood in the Wilderness. The solemnity of death was upon those white cards that stood in rows as of tents, but no observer with a trace of sentiment could fail to realize that the dead, no less than those that still survive, are in this very day defenders of the nation by the record of their courage and devotion.

"Here is Maine," said Col. Ainsworth. "Who shall it be?"

"Col. Charles W. Tilden, of the Sixteenth," said I; and in less than a minute the whole gallant record of this soldier was before me, the story which I had heard as a boy in the little town whence he had gone to the war. There was the charge at Gettysburg from which he did not return; the imprisonment in Libby's noisome dens; the escape, recapture and second escape; the record of what he had suffered in the rebels' hands, and his return to the ranks of the bluecoats. The minor incidents which I had remembered and which had caused me to take his case as a test were all there in black and white. Then I tried others in humbler ranks and found the same accuracy in every instance. I spent less than half an hour in the room. The information which I received would have taken months to secure under the old system. Much of it, indeed, would never have been obtained.

Of course great care is taken to preserve these records from improper use. No person with a doubtful errand can keep anything which he might use for malicious purposes to annoy the living or discredit the memory of the dead.

There are endless stories of queer acts in those boxes. I was interested in the Indian troops. They were, I am told, of little use to the service—not enough, I judge, to pay for the keeping of records which include such names as Yet-tah-ho-ho-nar-ner and Wa-ne-shaw-bowily-hoy. Some of them, however, had names which were more to the point. One box, I remember, contained the records of those who alphabetically fell between "Liar" and "Blind Water." What the writer was mixed with anybody familiar with the Indian character can guess.

I did not expect to come across the name of Jefferson Davis in this collection, but a little reflection might have prepared me for it. He served in the First Mississippi Infantry in the Mexican war, and there was no [illegible] ly—of the operations near Monterey, in which he took part in September, 1846.

Now and then among the [illegible] baskets passing rapidly through the rooms.

"They are the mail carriers," said Col. Ainsworth. "I have introduced a system of communication between the various parts of the office which obviates one of the worst forms of delay existing under the old system. In such a large office as this, where papers pass through many hands, much time is ordinarily lost by the accumulation of matter upon the various desks. A clerk would finish his work upon a great many papers and then transfer them to the next man, who might have been waiting in idleness for some hours. That is impossible now. I have messengers who start from the main office at five minute intervals and make the rounds. Each clerk has a basket of cards bearing the numbers by which various departments are designated. When he has finished work on a paper he fastens to it a card bearing the number of the department to which it should go next. The carrier takes it from a box provided for it and delivers it by number. When it is to be returned the clerk simply turns the card over, and there upon its back is the number of the department from which it came. The next carrier going the opposite way takes it back. By this system the average delay is not more than two and a half minutes. It used to be twenty-four hours."

It would pay any business man to study the methods of this office. For instance, in all the vast operations conducted there, involving endless correspondence and the most perplexing details, there is only one book. That is in the "Tenth street branch," and is used for keeping track of the card work. It shows where any card is at the given time. When the carding is completed the book will be destroyed. Every other matter in all that vast establishment is kept track of by the index card system. The method of dealing with correspondence is a marvel. Every letter received or written is transferred to a card which is extended by means of pasters, and the result is that instead of hunting through the indexes of letter books the entire correspondence on any subject can be found in a minute all together, just like a soldier's record. There are a hundred other details of the system equally perfect in their adaptation to the conditions, but the limits of space forbid a reference to them. Taken as it stands, the office, I believe, justifies the statement I made at the beginning—that it embodies the most remarkable triumph of systematization in the world. It has been done, as I have said, practically without cost to the government, and the reduction of the clerical force which it will permit will save $800,000 a year in salaries. And the records of the nation's defenders have been preserved.

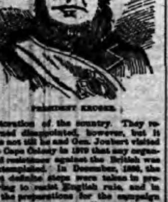
It is now proposed to reduce the records of the revolution and the war of 1812 to the same system, and doubtless this will be done. Then this government will have the most complete military history that exists anywhere.

STEPHANUS KRUGER.

The Popular President of the South African Republic.

One of the Prime Movers in the Organization of Offensive Measures Against the British Government—His Remarkable Frugality.

Mr. Stephanus Johannes Paulus Kruger, recently reelected state president of the South African Republic, is in his sixty-eighth year, but is still active, vigorous, and apparently possessed of great vitality. Born in Colesberg, Cape Colony, his earliest years were occupied in farm work, and he had but little education, as we understand the term. In 1836, when Paul was but ten years old, he accompanied his father and relatives in the great trek from the Cape Colony to the regions beyond, which have since been given the names of the Free State and the Transvaal. In all the principal conflicts with the natives the youth had to take a part, and long before he had reached the age of twenty years Paul had obtained a high reputation among the Boers for pluck, physical strength, and effective shooting. After the republic had been established at Potchefstroom, in 1841, Mr. Kruger received his first official appointment as assistant field cornet, a mixed civil and military duty. Later, he was appointed commandant of a district, and in that capacity had much active work in quelling native revolts. All this time Mr. Kruger was also active in religious work, and won a high reputation as a lay preacher. The branch of the Dutch Reformed church of which he is an adherent term themselves "Doppers," and affect simplicity in dress and frugality in living. It was not, however, until 1876 that Mr. Kruger became intimately associated with the government of the country. In that year he was appointed vice president, and consequently a member of the executive council. He and President Burgers protested most energetically against the annexation of the country by Great Britain, and in 1877-8 Mr. Kruger came to England as one of a deputation from the Boers to the imperial government, requesting the restoration of the country. They returned disappointed, however, but it was not till he and Gen. Joubert visited the Cape Colony in 1879 that any organized resistance against the British was contemplated. In December, 1880, the first definite steps were taken in preparing to resist English rule, and in all the preparations for the campaign Mr. Kruger was a ruling spirit. In 1883 he was chosen president, and since that time the personal history of Mr. Kruger has been interwoven with that of the state. With the older and middle-aged Boers he is immensely popular for his services to the state and his patriotism; the younger Boers and the foreign population do not generally regard him as sufficiently progressive. President Kruger has been twice married, and has a family of ten sons and daughters. His ordinary daily life at the presidency, in Pretoria, is simple and frugal to the extreme. His political opponents accuse him of parsimony, and charges of corruption are frequently heard, but they do not appear to have any serious foundation. He appears to dislike the English language and rarely tries to speak it, but in the landdraat he is eloquent and impressive and has great influence in the volksraad. Those who know him intimately say he is far more progressive than he obtains credit for in this country and that he is a remarkably able ruler. President Kruger is extremely abstemious in reference to alcoholic liquors, but is an inveterate smoker, and, away from official cares is a most genial and jovial gentleman.



PRESIDENT KRUGER.

Bothered by a Joke.

"The danger of being a little facetious [illegible]

[illegible] Gladstone's bench to admit of a little joke," said Henry B. Harris, of Portland, Me., in the Washington News. "When Hamlin was speaker of the Maine house of representatives there was an old up-country member whose head was as bald as a billiard ball. Two or three long hairs sprung up from the back of his neck, however, and the old fellow used to plaster these up over his shiny pate. One day Hamlin stopped him as he was passing the speaker's chair, and, with an air of serious gravity said: 'Mr. Campbell, I desire to inform you that two of your hairs are crossed.' The victim smiled a rather sickly smile but said nothing. Years afterward Hamlin ran for senator. The decisive vote was cast by this man. He elected Hamlin's opponent, Morrill. I think it was Hamlin always maintained that a joke cost him a senatorship."

Disease Spread by Pencils.

Now they say that the free lead pencils furnished the school children of Detroit by the board of education are responsible for the epidemic in that city. The children get a different pencil each day, all the pencils being dropped into a box at the close of school. The average child using a pencil will put the point in its mouth very frequently, and it is not difficult to see that the practice might become very dangerous.

THE LITTLE SENATORS.

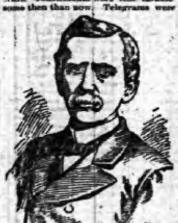
The Work and Pay of the Pages in the Senate Chamber.

The New Pages a Bright Lot of Boys—Some Great Men Who Have Served in That Capacity—History of the First Page.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

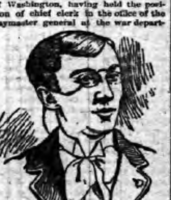
A hundred years ago there were no pages in the senate. That august body was composed of twenty-six gentlemen, representing the thirteen United States. They were obliged to do their own "hustling."

There was considerable of it to do, for the ways of legislation were not beaten tracks and senators had not served a long apprenticeship in statecraft. Constituents were less troublesome then than now. Telegrams were an unknown trial, the imperfect postal facilities made letters infrequent, and personal visits were few and far between. A journey of a few hundred miles to the seat of government meant more in the closing days of the eighteenth century than a trip to Europe does in these fin de siecle times. Under these conditions, like the good housewives of the period, the senators managed to "do their own work" for forty years, until Andrew Jackson took the reins of government. He made things lively for them, and as office making and office giving became the rage of the hour they created the position of page in the senate.



GRAFTON D. HANSON, FIRST PAGE.

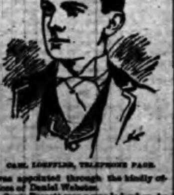
Grafton D. Hanson was the first page, appointed in December, 1829. His grandfather, Gen. Montjoy Bayley, who was then sergeant-at-arms, was his sponsor. Mr. Hanson is still a resident of Washington, having held the position of chief clerk in the office of the paymaster general at the war department for a period of thirty-one years. He is a man of scholarly attainments, fine social position and the affable manner of the old school. Few men in these days have such rare reminiscences of their boyhood.



ALONZO H. STEWART, CHIEF OF PAGES.

The senators had many bon mots among themselves, to which young Hanson listened with appreciation. A drove of mules was passing through the grounds one day, and Henry Clay, calling the attention of John Holmes, of Maine, to them, said in a bantering way: "Holmes, there are a lot of your constituents out there." "I see," replied the senator from "down east," nonchalantly; "they are on their way to Kentucky to teach school."

Isaac Bassett, the same who for many years has been the most picturesque feature of the senate, was the second aspirant for the position of page, and he was appointed through the kindly offices of Daniel Webster.



CARL LOEFFLER, TELEPHONE PAGE.

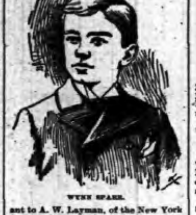
Capt. Bassett was a [illegible] lad when he entered the hall which "Honest John Davis," of Massachusetts, predicted would be the [illegible] of his life.

A faithful prophecy it has proven. From page to [illegible] Capt. Bassett has [illegible] years. He [illegible] since 1831.

A number of [illegible] his great [illegible] those pages [illegible] [illegible] He was appointed a page in the senate by Stephen A. Douglas, when he was but thirteen years old. During the fourteen years he remained in the service of the senate he held every subordinate position except that of sergeant-at-arms, finally attaining to the dignity of postmaster. In 1866 he was appointed collector of internal revenue in Maryland, and subsequently represented his county in both houses of the state legislature. When he was forty-two years of age he returned, as senator from Maryland, to the halls where in his boyhood he had served as page.

David S. Barry, the brilliant Washington correspondent of the New York Sun, is another graduate from the ranks of senate pages. He was not a novice when he entered that "high school," having served as page in the lower house of the Michigan legislature for three years, when, by request of Senator Christiancy, he was admitted to the United States senate in the same capacity.

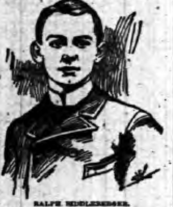
While in the senate his spare moments were devoted to the diligent study of stenography and he was thereby enabled to step into the higher grade of private secretary, in which capacity he was associated with Senators Matt Carpenter, N. W. Aldrich and O. D. Conger. His next promotion was to a departmental clerkship, when he rotated from the war department to the census office and finally to the post office department. The next step upward was as assistant to T. C. Crawford in newspaper work and as correspondent to the Chicago Times, the Detroit papers and several other western newspapers. In 1887 he filled the position of assistant to A. W. Layman, of the New York Sun, and when that gentleman resigned to become editor and proprietor of the Helena Independent, in Montana, Mr. Barry assumed the management of the Washington office of the New York Sun. He evidently does not intend to stop climbing until he reaches the topmost round of the ladder.



WYNN SPAID.

Other "past pages" who are filling promising and prominent positions in the world are three Bailey brothers, one of whom, under the nom de plume of Edward Allison, is making a name in the field of literature. The other two are in the United States navy. The United States consul at Tahiti, Mr. Jacob Doty, was once a bright page. Mr. Stuart Robson, the comedian, learned a few of his tricks in the senate chamber when he was a page there.

Alonzo H. Stewart, under whose watchful care the present pages are brought to a well disciplined condition for launching into wider realms of usefulness, was an Iowa boy, from which state he was appointed as page to the senate in 1877. His deceased father had made a brilliant war record as colonel of the Fourth Ohio infantry. Mr. Stewart did duty as page for eight years, when he was promoted to his present position, which was created for him and which admits him to the executive sessions. He is the youngest man who was ever admitted behind those mysterious closed doors.



RALPH MIDDLEBERGER.

There have been no idle moments in Mr. Stewart's young life. The time not required by his duties in the senate chamber has been devoted to the study of law, and he has graduated from the Columbian university.

The corps of pages at present doing duty in the senate has swelled to eighteen members. They are a bright lot of boys, with ready wit to seize the many opportunities afforded them for picking up bits of wisdom.

At half-past eight every morning they are required to report in the senate chamber. When the senate does not convene until midday they find many moments of the morning hours available for reading or studying. During the short session or in the hurried hours of a closing session they are often kept on duty well on toward midnight. The position is not a sinecure.

All in all the present pages of the senate are worthy successors of the distinguished men whose foothold in the path of fame was secured in their morning of life in the United States senate.

Force of Habit.

The large and fashionable audience attending the Snobbobopera house had its eyes glued to the Hootenay's box, where sat Count Bonesi di Banan, the latest lion and a new arrival in the social world.

Then the orchestra struck up the familiar air of "Rigoletto" and the large and fashionable audience were surprised to see the count arise, with an absent-minded manner and mechanically extend his hat toward the galleries.—Chicago News Record.

PRUDENT STATESMANSHIP.

The statesman ability of President Cleveland was clearly exemplified in his action regarding that hastily concocted Sandwich Island annexation treaty sent to the Senate by his predecessor.

He promptly withdrew the document from the files of the Senate, and in order to know positively its real origin and design, dispatched a competent and impartial Commissioner to the Islands for the purpose of ascertaining the facts of the case and thereupon submitting a trustworthy report.

That was prudent statesmanship.

The project of bringing distant foreign territory under the American flag, with its attendant responsibilities and risks, is a serious matter, and should not be consummated without the most thorough investigation and deliberation.

There are several questions connected with the Sandwich Island scheme that demand close inquiry—

Are the Islanders, both native and foreign born, willing and anxious to be annexed, and would they prove a desirable addition to the roll of American citizenship?

By what means was their recent and long-established form of government so suddenly changed?

What personal motives, if any, prompted the hot haste for a ratified treaty?

Would annexation be worth its cost?

When all the facts are reliably set for then, and not until then, can a right opinion be formed.

Caution is safety.

PEACE AND PROSPERITY.

The Court of Arbitration, mutually convened, and now sitting in Paris for the consideration and adjustment of differences between England and the United States growing out of the Russian-Behring Sea question, brings into view the growth of enlightened sentiment and argues for the blessed dominion of peace.

If all international disputes were submitted to impartial arbitrators, as they might readily and honorably be, the terrible havoc of war would be lessened, if not entirely abolished, and justice obtained without the deplorable sacrifice of life and property.

National and personal disagreements are very similar, there being, as a general rule, two sides to the argument, and if contestants, instead of fanning the fires of hostility, were willing to abide the decision of a capable and unprejudiced umpire, what glorious results would bless the world of humanity.

Peace and Prosperity are identical.

Congressman John T. Dunn has made his first selection for political patronage in Union County, by presenting the name of Patrick Sheridan for Postmaster of Elizabeth, which name President Cleveland promptly sent to the Senate, where it will be confirmed. In this appointment Congressman Dunn has made a good selection. Mr. Sheridan is one of Elizabeth's most prominent and honored citizens, and has excellent business qualifications, which is a guarantee that he will perform the duties of the office alike satisfactory to the community and the department. We congratulate Mr. Sheridan upon his appointment.

DISGRACEFUL FALSEHOODS.

How the "Journalist" of an Alleged Local News-Shop Serves the Papers He Misrepresents.

The New York morning papers that yesterday told a tale of horror (from the pen of a notorious faker of a local news-factory) concerning the alleged attempt to destroy the Plainfield Children's Home with all its inmates, to-day are forced to swallow their words as follows:

PLAINFIELD, April 4.—There was some indignation to-day among the wealthy women who maintain the Children's Home at North Plainfield. A report was freely circulated that two hundred lives had been endangered by an attempt to burn the Home. Here are the facts: A small out-building, located at least twenty-five yards from the main structure, was set on fire by some unknown person Sunday evening. The flames were easily extinguished. There are but thirteen inmates of the Home at present, besides the matron and her assistants, and even if the out-building had been burned there would have been slight probability of the main structure taking fire. The matron and her assistants were somewhat frightened because about five weeks ago the out-building was discovered on fire under similar circumstances. It is believed the fire was started in both instances by tramps, who are numerous in the vicinity. The Home is but three stories high and no difficulty would be experienced in getting out the inmates in case of fire originating in the out-building mentioned.

THE FARMERS INDIGNANT.

They Have Caught Raritan Shad for Their Own Use from Time Immemorial, and Don't Want Their Inherited Right Abrogated.

Some of the citizens of Bound Brook are exercised over the passage of the new game and fish law, which prohibits fishing with nets so that it applies to shad fishing in the Raritan river below the dam, and they have called a mass-meeting for to-morrow night to condemn the law. Some of the hot-headed ones are condemning Senator Keyes for his not looking after the defeat of the law. To blame him is all wrong. The senator should not be blamed for his vote. The bill was framed by the Fish Commission and Game Protector according to the provisions of a law enacted in 1892, and was meant to codify all the game and fish laws and repeal a lot of useless and worthless ones. The framers of the law and the voters for it did not for a moment think that it affected the rights of those who for years past have been in the habit of catching shad in the Raritan river, according to existing laws. The error in statutes will be corrected at a future date. There is no reason why the citizens of Bound Brook should "sit on" Senator Keyes. He is not responsible for the bill, which is all right in many respects.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Senate Still Arguing—Another Batch of Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The debate was continued in the Senate yesterday on the right of Governors of States to appoint Senators at the beginning of a term when the State Legislatures have been in session and have failed to elect.

Mr. Vest (Dem., Mo.) made an argument in opposition to the existence of such a right, and claimed that, although precedents were in both ways, they preponderated largely in favor of his contention.

The President sent in the following nominations:

James O. Broadhead, of Missouri, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Switzerland.

Bartlett Tripp, of South Dakota, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Austria-Hungary.

Eben Alexander, of North Carolina, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Greece, Roumania and Servia.

To be Consuls of the United States—James E. Neal, of Ohio, at Liverpool; James M. Dobbs, of Georgia, at Valparaiso; O. O. Eckford, of Mississippi, at Kingston, Jamaica; David N. Burke, of New York, at Pernambuco; Edgar Whidden, of Maine, at St. Stephen, N. B.; Henry F. Merritt, of Illinois, at Barmen; Asa D. Dickinson, of New York, at Nottingham; Benjamin Lenthier, of Massachusetts, at Sherbrooke.

Charles E. Ingersoll, of Pennsylvania, to be Appraiser of Merchandise in the District of Philadelphia, Pa.

Paul F. Faison, of North Carolina, to be an Indian Inspector.

James O. Broadhead, of Missouri, who is named as Minister to Switzerland, is by profession a lawyer, and has represented his State in Congress as a member from St. Louis. He is about thirty-five years of age, and has been prominent in politics in Missouri for a long time, being at one time a member of the Democratic National Committee and a delegate to several national conventions.

Bartlett Tripp, of South Dakota, who goes as Minister to Austria-Hungary, was one of the pioneers in the Dakotas before the division of the territory, is 48 years of age and is a brother-in-law to Senator Davis, of Minnesota. He is a staunch Democrat and was made Chief Justice of the Territory of Dakota by President Cleveland during his first administration. He has had a good deal to do with State politics and was prominently mentioned for the Senate as the Democratic opponent of Senator Kyle. He lives at Yankton and is a lawyer.

Eben Alexander, nominated to be Minister to Greece, Roumania and Servia is at present Greek professor at the University of North Carolina, which was before the war the greatest seat of learning in the South, from which President Polk and many others of the statesmen of that part of the country graduated. Prof. Alexander is a little more than forty years of age and has been in his present place for ten years. He stands among the leading Greek scholars of the land.

EXPEDITION AGAINST CUBA.

Said That Revolutionists Are Preparing to Sail From Key West at Once.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The dispatch from Key West, Fla., on the subject of the revolutionary expedition against Cuba has made quite a stir here. The revolutionists, who are said to number between 300 and 400 men, are reported as being actively engaged in preparing to sail for Cuba at once.

The United States revenue cutter McLane is on the alert and prepared to intercept the revolutionists if they make a start. It is believed that the Federal officers have had either knowledge or suspicion of the intent of the revolutionists to leave for several days past and that a call was sent to the Navy Department asking for reinforcements.

The statement is made now, and not denied, that two other revenue cutters have been ordered to Key West.

If the revolutionists believe that the McLane is to be thus reinforced, it will undoubtedly hasten their attempt to get away. The revolutionary party is said to be composed almost entirely of native Cubans, and it is understood that they have made arrangements for a revolutionary movement among the people of Cuba simultaneously with their arrival there.

The purpose of the revolution is the liberation of Cuba from Spanish rule.

THE PRESIDENT'S SUMMER HOME.

A Charming Spot Near Washington Chosen—A Chance to "Farm It."

WASHINGTON, April 5.—President and Mrs. Cleveland are going to have a home in the country, as they did four years ago. By the end of this month it is expected that the Middleton house on the Woodley Lane road will be in readiness for their occupancy.

The house is a large, old-fashioned structure, roomy, comfortable, and occupying an ideal location. It is nearer the city than Oak View, which was the President's home during his former administration.

The house stands on an elevated knoll, surrounded with fine old oaks. It is some distance back from the road, and commands an excellent view, not only of the rolling country to the north, perhaps the most striking and picturesque section of the famous Rock Creek region, but from the windows there is one of the most charming views of the city to be found in this vicinity. In every way the house is larger than the one at Oak View.

There are some 30 acres of land about the house, and if Mr. Cleveland is inclined to agricultural pursuits he can have ample swing for his fancy in this direction.

ELECTIONS IN THE WEST.

Harrison Wins in Chicago—Republicans Win in St. Louis and Michigan.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Carter H. Harrison who was opposed by nearly all the business men and the newspapers was elected World's Fair Mayor of Chicago by 19,000 plurality.

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—The election in this city resulted in a victory for the Republicans. They secured mayor, collector, council and most of the minor offices if not all, by majorities of about 3,000.

DETROIT, April 5.—The Republicans carried the day electing most of the judges of Supreme Court and both regents of the University by majorities of 14,000 on a light vote.

WILL FIGHT RECTOR JENNINGS.

Ladies of His Parish Return to Him His Photographs.

The anti-Jennings vestry held a meeting last night at the residence of Samuel Elliott, Westfield, to organize. The vestry as it now stands consists of the following re-elected vestrymen: Samuel Elliott, senior warden; Charles Forster, J. Harper Hunt, A. K. Gale and E. Shields, and these new ones: T. D. Bushnell, junior warden; John F. Irwin, W. C. Barton and H. W. Greene. C. E. Young and J. B. Greene declined re-election on purely personal grounds, but are in sympathy with the vestry.

Mr. Shields said Mr. Jennings was not the legal rector, and the vestry proposed to put him out of the church if it takes a year. When asked if the new vestry would stand under the circumstances, Mr. Shields said that in view of Jennings's attitude yesterday in refusing to allow the old vestry to vote, the only thing which could be done was to elect another chairman and proceed with the election as they did.

There are now two boards of vestrymen, but Mr. Jenning's opponents have possession of all the books, papers and church records, and, therefore, have the upper hand, at least to this extent, although the Jennings faction still retains possession of the church property pending the hearing before the Supreme Court.

It is related that when Jennings first entered upon his duties as rector here he allowed photographs of himself to be placed on sale at a church sociable. They found a ready sale, particularly among the ladies, and a likeness of the handsome rector was to be seen in nearly every Episcopal household in town.

When the present trouble was at its height, however, it is said these same women gathered all the rector's photographs they could find and returned them to him with this simple inscription across the top of the bundle: "We have no further use for these pictures".

HE COULD HAVE GOT MANY OTHERS.

So Why Did Col. Spencer Pick Out Bondsmen Who Would Have to Sue Themselves if He Made Them Liable?

Good boroughites are inquiring if it isn't somewhat unusual for a majority of the township committee to constitute a majority of the township collector's bondsmen. Mr. Spencer is a man and an official in whom everyone has the fullest confidence, but business is business, and in all lines of public work everything should be done in order and strictly according to rule. As the matter of the township collector's bondsmen now stands the township committee with Elias Allen and Wm. C. Smith as a majority have accepted Messrs. Allen and Smith as two of the collector's three bondsmen. Should the emergency chance to arise of its becoming necessary to call on the bondsmen to fulfill their pledges, Messrs. Allen and Smith as bondsmen might (as is so often the case) refuse to accept the responsibility and make good any irregularities. Then as town committeemen Messrs. Allen and Smith would be in duty bound to bring suit for the township against themselves! A truly singular state of affairs, and one the contemplation of which may well fill thoughtful citizens with concern. The possibilities of the situation are varied, and the clear-headed tax-payer may well feel that so irregular a proceeding as town fathers accepting themselves as bondsmen for town officers is fraught with danger to the welfare of the community's interests.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS WRIT.

A Pitiful But Amusing Letter of the Days of Long Ago.

The following is a copy—verbatim et literatim—of a note received many years ago by a lady of this city then serving on the relief committee of the Young Men's Christian association—which committee, by the way, was a forerunner of the Ladies' Relief association of to-day. Printed without remark, as it is, various and sundry will be the comments which it will suggest. Some will simply be amused at the wretched English, and wonder whether its writer was ever a pupil of our public schools; others will find in it only a temperance lecture; to others it will tell of all the weaknesses of our poor human nature—and perhaps the last will read it to the best purpose.

Here is the letter:

THE VICTIM OF HER OWN FOLLY.

Why Somerville Now Envies Plainfield.

[Bound Brook Chronicle.]

The death of John Taylor Johnston, for many years president of the Central Railroad, which occurred last Friday, recalls a fact concerning his experience in Somerville which may be profitable for us to relate. A long time ago Mr. Johnston was one of the first to become impressed with the suburban idea, that is of New York business men living in rural communities. He wanted to buy a lot of land on the outskirts of Somerville for building purposes, but the grasping real estate owners at once raised the price to a figure he would not touch. The result was that Mr. Johnston went to Plainfield, where land could be obtained at reasonable prices, and to-day our eastern neighbor is a city several times the size of our western sister.

Memorial Flowers at Holy Cross.

The services in the Church of the Holy Cross on Sunday were exceedingly brilliant. At the 8 a. m. celebration of the Holy Communion the number was very large, lacking only a few of the number that communed at the second service. The decoration of the church was in excellent taste, not so many flowers being used as usual. All were white, as was appropriate for the day. On the altar and alcove only callas and Easter lilies were displayed. There were several memorial pieces. At the entrance to the chancel were many plants bearing white flowers, which produced a very pleasing effect. There were large congregations at all the three services. In the afternoon at the children's service the church was crowded, people were standing in the aisles and many went away unable even to find standing room. The music was excellently rendered, and the people of the church felt that they had a very joyous Easter.

Detectives After "The Count."

Two detectives came to Plainfield Monday night in search of John K. VanNess, who is wanted in New York for forgery and forfeiture of bail. One of the men was of Inspector Byrnes's staff, and the other was Godfrey C. Dilloway, constable and detective, of Jersey City. The two officers went to VanNess's home on the Allen farm, but "the count" was not to be found there. They next went to Harry Bisley's at Scotch Plains, just in time to see him jump into a wagon and drive away. They searched for him in various places, but "the count" successfully hid himself. The detectives vowed they would catch him some day.

Sad Accident to a Child.

The five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Kirkner of East Third street, accidentally injured one of her eye-balls with a pair of scissors, a few days ago, and it is feared that she may lose the sight. The little one is undergoing special treatment at a New York Hospital.

Change and Decay in All Around We See.

The M. E. church in this city was built of hard brick in the year 18[illegible]. It was only recently that it was discovered that some of the brick, especially on the north side of the building, are gradually resolving themselves back to clay. They are getting soft, and pulverize easily so as to be cut with a penknife.

Maybe This Will Fit the [illegible] Street Extension.

A law was passed by the last Legislature of New Jersey which gives the local authorities power to grant franchises for the building and operation of electric railroads in any street without the consent of the fronting property-owners being required.

"NO SALOON IN PLAINFIELD."

A NEW MOVEMENT ON ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PRINCIPLES.

Something Which May Affect the Future of the Liquor Traffic in This City.

THE PRESS understands that a new organization composed of the leading citizens, as well as clergymen, of the town, is in process of formation, whose creed is to be "No saloon for Plainfield!"

The organization has no political creed, and cranks will have no admittance. There are very many people in town who believe that in a community like Plainfield, in which the moral and religious elements largely predominate, there is no room for the saloon. The last disreputable incident in connection with the insult offered to the colored Baptist church, has intensified this feeling on the part of hundreds of citizens who have no political affiliations with the party of legal prohibition.

THE PRESS further understands that a committee composed of very prominent citizens has been engaged in framing a constitution and by-laws which will admit to membership any man who does not believe in the existence of a saloon in Plainfield, whatever may be his own personal political belief.

The organization is to be made most effective, and an emphatic temperance crusade begun. The projectors of the movement hope to elect a no-license council, and effect various other local reforms.

Ask for a Copy of the Sewerage Petition, and Fix Your Name to It.

There is an impression in the public mind that if intermittent filtration should prove unsatisfactory the expense incurred on account of pipes and the disturbance of the surface of the streets, would be money lost. This is a mistake. The pipe-plan down to the filtration beds would be the pipe-plan of any other system, whether that system be one with a tidewater outlet, or of precipitation, or of irrigation. If a change in plan should become desirable, nothing would be lost except the money expended in preparing, say, twenty acres for filtration purposes. The cost of turning land into filtration beds is, at Framingham, Massachusetts, about one hundred dollars an acre; so that the utmost possible loss, in case of a change of plan, would not exceed a few thousand dollars, assuming, of course, that the land is purchased at its market value. If precipitation or irrigation should be selected, the land would be needed; if a tidewater outlet should become advisable, the land would be sold and a line of pipe laid from the abandoned beds to the Raritan. Not an inch of pipe would in any event be changed or lost.

This will be readily understood when it is remembered that in most places it is now considered wise to separate foul sewage from the rainfall—to provide smaller, and therefore easily-cleansed, pipes for the known extent of the former, while the irregular and at times excessive volume of the latter is permitted to fill the channels that nature provides. Even in London the separate plan has become advisable. In Plainfield such a system is beyond reasonable doubt; for every portion of the surface of the city is quickly and safely drained into two natural sewers, Cedar brook and Green brook. But only the rainfall should, for health's sake, be permitted to flow into those small streams; the sewage proper should be carried in closely-sealed pipes, neither too large nor too small, to some point beyond our homes for final disposition. If this feature of modern drainage is kept in mind, it will be seen that the pipes proposed for a filtration system are the pipes that would be needed were any other system adopted.

But the filtration system will not prove unsatisfactory. Scores of English and German towns have adopted the system, and it has been commended by a Royal Commission as a proper method for the treatment of London sewage. The street commissioners or other supervising official in Plainfield may, it is true, carelessly prepare the filtration beds; he may not apply the principle intermission with any degree of regularity—possibly, in other words, there may be temporary slackness in the local application of the system, but the system itself is known to be sound and satisfactory whenever and wherever it has a fair working chance. It is, in a word, one of the standard methods of handling sewage.

Consider its advantages. It costs less by one-half than a tidewater system. It can be built in one-half the time. It can be located—pipes, beds and water-supply—within the city. There will be no litigation or conflict with other municipalities—no pollution of any stream—no poison for anybody. The line of pipes being short, the flushing can be closely controlled, and the number of flushing tanks lessened.

Looking at the subject from a strictly business standpoint, may it not be said that a plan which has served other towns efficiently for twenty years, which involves no considerable loss on the one hand while it offers various possibilities of economy both in time and money on the other hand, is a plan worthy of consideration?

Fortunately the matter has been advanced on the commission's calendar, and the main question is now with the jury of tax-payers—people who generally know an opportunity, especially one that relates to the value of their property, and the health of Plainfield's children, if not of themselves.

A Beautiful Service to Be Repeated.

The festival of the Resurrection was duly celebrated Sunday in the Church of Our Saviour, by three distinct services at 7 and 11 a. m. and at 4 p. m. Easter lilies, roses, tulips and daffodils banked the whole length of the retable, while the altar was ablaze with lighted candles. The steps of the altar were covered with growing plants, callas in bloom, ferns, palms, begonias, etc., all arranged in excellent taste. A good congregation listened with attention to an appropriate sermon delivered by the rector, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, from the words "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more, Amen, and have the keys of Hell and death".

The surpliced choir rendered the musical part of the service most effectively. Noticeable was the anthems "He is risen", by Clare, and the Communion office in G, by Gilbert. The solo parts in anthems and Agnus Dei were sung by William and Bertram Tallamey, and O. W. King. The organist, Mrs. E. H. Buckley, whose patient rehearsals with the choir add much to its efficiency, was assisted by Mr. Neilson of South avenue, Netherwood, who accompanied the voices on the cornet-a-piston.

The perfection of the choral service was the finest yet attained in the Church of Our Saviour.

The service will be repeated next Sabbath, Low Sunday, the Octave of Easter.

He Didn't Know It Was Soup.

An amusing occurrence was witnessed at the Casino dance in the Casino Monday night. A youth, whose acquaintance with the usual menu of a dance supper seemed to be limited, was seen gazing with dissatisfaction at a cup of bouillon that he held in his hand. He was overheard asking a bystander if there "was both coffee and tea", as he did not like tea "very much". The person asked, advised him to try his tea, which he did. When he had tasted it he looked very much surprised and exclaimed "Oh, I did not know it was soup!"

The Bride, the Groom, and the Creed.

City judge William A. Coddington will performed his first wedding ceremony last night. The bride will be Miss Marie Celia Loiseaux and the groom George Atkins Bowman of Brooklyn. The wedding will be at the bride's home, 101 Chatham street. The contracting parties are members of the sect know as Plymouth Brethren, which sprang into existence between 1827 and 1832 in Plymouth, Dublin, and other places in the British Islands. The sect has spread, until now it is known in France, Switzerland, Italy, and the United States. It seems to have originated in a reaction against exclusive High Church principles, as maintained in the Church of England, with everything of a kindred nature in other churches, and against a dead formalism associated with "unevangelical doctrine". The sect owes much to the labor and influence of a Mr. Darby, from whom it is generally known on the Continent as Darbyism. They hold a religious belief contrary to the usually accepted ones, one tenet being that every male member of the church has the right to prophesy or preach. They exclude persons known to have been guilty of gross sins from participation with them in the Lord's Supper until proof is afforded of repentance. There are about one hundred "meetings" of the sect in the United States. The annual conventions are always held on the grounds of Mr. Loiseaux, father of the bride of to-night.

Their Own Sons Not Excepted.

The boys who have been burning the grass land and thus endangering fences, wood-piles and other property in Fanwood, have been warned to cease. The boys were innocent in the matter, not thinking of the risk, but the board of justices decided to stop the practice although it is reported that each member had a son mixed up with the crowd. The sport was thoughtless but dangerous.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

UP GO THE ASSESSMENTS.

The Increase Attributed to the New Engine-house and the Gravel-pit.

Plainfield's reputation as a liberal spender is in no danger of waning. Last night the common council again increased the appropriations, to the following figures:

General purposes	$[illegible]
Streets	$[illegible]
Fire department	$[illegible]
Poor fund	$ 2,300

Councilmen Marsh and Franze protested against such increase in the assessments. They argued that the taxes already were too high. They voted to make the streets appropriation $15,000, and the general fund $33,000.

The fire department increase is $3,000, attributed to the cost of the new engine-house. The probable expense of abolishing the gravel-pit nuisance is responsible for the health board increase (included in the general fund) of $1,000.

Elizabeth's Coming Postmaster.

Congressman John T. Dunn has made his first selection for political patronage, by sending in to the President the name of Patrick Sheridan for postmaster of Elizabeth. Mr Sheridan is a close and personal friend of the congressman, and had a strong backing of citizens and officials for the office. He has excellent business qualifications for the office. He is about 54 years old and was born in Ireland, but came to this country when a boy. After serving his apprenticeship he went into business as a carpenter and builder. He has probably built more churches than any other man in New Jersey. At his large planing-mill he employs many men. He has had contracts in all parts of the State and in New York, Brooklyn and Richmond county. He owns valuable property in New York.

For several years Mr. Sheridan has been a member of the Board of Alderman, for several years he was Collector of Union County and he ran for Mayor a few years ago and met his first defeat, being beaten by Mayor Rankin. As a strong Irish Nationalist Mr. Sheridan is known all over the United States. His time and money are always at the service of his native land. He is a member of St. Mary's church, Elizabeth, and is the owner of the Sheridan House, the largest hotel in the city.

They'll Discuss Books and Newspapers.

The New York League of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women, of which there is a branch in Plainfield, will hold its regular meeting in Unity church, Brooklyn, corner of Gates avenue and Irving place, Friday, April 7, at 11 a. m. Papers will be read by Mrs. James H. Morse and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, on "Books and Reading", "Good and Evil of Novel Reading", "Influence of Journalism on Mind and Morals", and "Necessity for Serious Reading". To get there take the Kings county elevated railroad at the bridge, to Grand avenue station; you'll find Unity's sexton at the foot of the stairs to direct you to the church. All women are invited.

A Pleasant Event in a Charming Home.

A very pretty Easter fair was given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Case, Central avenue. The beautiful interior of the magnificent house called forth unstinted admiration from the large number of people attending, and the entertainment provided was greatly enjoyed. Refreshments were daintily served, and wares tastefully displayed. There was rare good singing by Miss Whiting and Messrs. B. T. Barnes and Elmer E. Runyon. The profits of the fair are for Congregational church work. The good women of the church planned it all.

The Faithful Graycoats Organize.

The letter-carriers of this city met Monday evening in Reform Hall, and organized a branch of the National Association of Letter-Carriers of the United States of America. The following officers were elected:

President—William Demarest.
Vice-President—Edward T. VanWinkle.
Secretary—Robert Loughlin.
Treasurer—Charles R. Stephens.

The new organization is to be known as Branch, 396, of Plainfield, N. J.

Plainfield Shooters Abroad.

Plainfield experts made some good scores in the second tournament of the New Jersey Trap Shooters' league, yesterday, at Maplewood. Besides their wins in sweepstakes, Neal Appar scored 23 and Thomas Keller 20 on the Boiling Springs team, while Charles Smith scored 22 for the Unions. The complete score of the Independent Gun club of Plainfield was: A. Soper, 16; R. Manning, 16; R. H. Rushton, 13; T. Brantingham, 26; D. Terry, 20. Total, [illegible].

EARLY MORNING FIRE.

A LANDMARK DESTROYED.

Hyde's Mill Burned to the Ground, With Its Contents and Adjoining Buildings.

Fire Thursday morning destroyed the old landmark known as Hyde's mill, situated along Green brook at the rear of Mr. Hyde's private residence on East Front street.

About 4 o'clock some belated wayfarer saw a fierce light in that direction, and ran down Norwood avenue shouting "Fire!" He told the night watchman of the district and an alarm was sent in immediately from box 16.

The Plainfield firemen were quick to respond, but when they reached the scene the mill was found to be a mass of flames, and the fire was spreading to adjoining buildings. There were no hydrants in reach, and the water had to be pumped from the brook. The lack of hydrants was felt by the firemen, who find them much more serviceable than the engines.

The burning buildings were on the North Plainfield side of the brook, and when borough chief Fairchild ran to the fire and found it was in his territory he went to Warren engine-house and sounded the call for district 3. By that time the fire was under control, and the Plainfield firemen yielded the work to the borough department. Warren's men stayed on duty till 7:30, when the last spark was extinguished.

The mill was occupied by Charles H. Randolph as a grist mill. His stock of grain, kindling wood, etc., was consumed. The ice-house adjoining the mill, with its new crop of ice, was destroyed, and the dwelling occupied by John L. Ludlum's coachman, which backed up close to the ice-house, was badly damaged. Yet the stable between the mill and ice-house was saved, also the $800 sluice-way of the mill, and one or two small outbuildings.

Mr. Hyde estimates his loss at between $4,000 and $5,000. He had no insurance; in fact, never carries any on his outbuildings. He has lost seven barns by fire, with never a cent of insurance.

Miller Randolph's stock was worth about $2,000, on which the insurance was 1,500. The burned dwelling was worth probably $2,000. Mr. Ludlum's loss is $1,000 partly insured. Chas. Jedder, his coachman, loses $400 on furniture and household goods. His insurance is $600.

The burned mill was one of Plainfield's landmarks. It was one of the oldest sites in town, and was built fully half a century ago, by Lewis M. Force, father of the publishers of THE PRESS, who, when it was farmland owned the large estate running from Front street to the mountain. That estate was sold 31 years ago for $6,000, which was considered a fair price in those days. Plainfield's great future was not foreseen. The mill was used at one time as a pin factory, but grinding grain has been its greatest usefulness. The pond was dug out and built by all the people of the neighborhood, at an old-time "frolic". The original overshot water-wheel was only recently replaced with a turbine.

The mill was popularly known as Hotchkiss's, Mr. Hotchkiss having owned it for years previous to Mr. Hyde's purchase.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. Mr Hyde has the gratitude of the firemen for his generous donation to them.

ARE THE COUNCILMEN FAVORED?

"They Won't Take Out My Meter", Said One of Them, with a Wink.

In a recent issue of THE PRESS, a clipping was published from the Mail and Express, relative to the removal of water meters from many of the houses in Plainfield. The clipping referred to the unjust discrimination made in removing the meters, and said that those who had "influence" were not troubled.

THE PRESS learns on excellent authority that the original copy of the article in the Mail and Express read "influence among the councilmen", but that the political editor did not choose to be so explicit. THE PRESS also hears that the information which led to the publication of the howl in the New York paper came directly from a member of the common council of this city, and implied that while others are obliged to pay for their water according to the number of faucets in the house, members of the common council and those others who have influence with that body still retain their meters and get cheaper water rates. Indeed, when asked by what right the company took out the meters and raised the rate, one councilman winked and said, "They won't take out mine".

That the council that granted the clause in the franchise of the water company, allowing them to take out meters at their own discretion, should be exempt from the effects of that clause, is significant. If the company cannot make enough money with the meters in, let them remove them from all houses, and not discriminate in such removal.

A SOUND INSTITUTION.

By This Loan Society, Many Thrifty Plainfielders Are Making Money.

The report of the Plainfield Building and Loan association for the year ending Feb. 27, 1893, is an exhibit of substantial prosperity, as the following extracts will clearly attest:

The association has three series of shares, each separately accounted—

The first running [illegible] months.
The second running [illegible] months.
The third running [illegible] months.

The ascertained profit on each full paid share figured as follows:

First series	$[illegible]
Second series	[illegible]
Third series	[illegible]

The aggregate of securities and cash amounts to $[illegible] 74, divided thus:

First mortgage investments on property in Plainfield and vicinity	$[illegible]
Real estate loans to shareholders secured by first mortgages on title deeds	[illegible]
Loans to shareholders on notes secured by assignment of shares	[illegible]
Cash	[illegible]
	$[illegible]

The annual expenses for the year were $[illegible], being less than three-eighths of one per cent. on the value of securities cared for.

Shares outstanding, 1,735½, an average of 9 to each shareholder.

Members of the association numbered 19[illegible], nearly all of whom are residents of Plainfield and vicinity, where loans are mainly located. It is a strictly local institution.

It is proper to add that the annual statements were made out in an elaborate manner, every item being plainly detailed, and the whole received thorough examination at the hands of a careful auditing committee.

AN AUTHORITY ON GAME.

Widespread Destruction Caused by the Severe Winter — Interesting Habits of Quail, as Described by a Plainfielder Who Has Made Them a Life-Study—Plans for a More Extended Protection.

GREAT destruction to song and game birds was caused by the heavy and continuous snows of the past winter. The entire country north of latitude 35 was constantly buried under a white blanket of from 12 to 60 inches, and the weather was at times so freezing cold that the creatures exposed had little opportunity of resistance.

Percy C. Ohl, president of the New Jersey Game and Fish Protective society, was interviewed recently at his home in the outskirts of Plainfield. Mr. Ohl has been conducting a personal investigation of the matter of bird-destruction, and developing plans for helping the feathered creatures during future protracted cold spells.

Mr. Ohl says that as a result of his investigations he finds that the destruction of birds has been really appalling, and in many sections most complete. He himself has found large bevies of quail frozen to death, and his agents present similarly deplorable reports.

"The reason that the heavy snow and cold have been such a hardship for our birds"—said Mr. Ohl—"is that the seed-bearing weeds, etc., on which the birds ordinarily survive the winter when other provender is gone, have not been available, being buried by snow and covered by hard crusts which the birds could not penetrate. Only in sections where cedars grow, have the birds been able to survive in any number, their foliage and berries affording some shelter and food. Fortunately for quail and grouse, these trees have been particularly well fruited this season. Nature was lavish enough with her provision in other respects, also, in the matter of seeds on the weeds, etc., but as stated these have been buried. This heavy fruitage is a sure indication of a hard winter, and the weeds also grow at such times taller than usual, as though preparing to keep their heads above the snows. But this year they missed their calculation.

"Time was when stacks of grain afforded shelter and nourishment for the quail during severe winters, but now—alas for the poor birds!—a stack of grain is seldom seen, excepting close to barns; and should birds pressed by hunger approach these it means sport for the farmer's boys, and dainties for his table. Game societies and their members seek to do good missionary work for the helpless creatures of the air. It is their mission to see that grain is liberally distributed where grain abounds. A stack of corn-stalks in an open field is an excellent place to throw grain, as it will be found by the birds when other provender is covered by snow and ice.

"A feature of this winter's hardships particularly regrettable is that most of the quail are young and from southern stock. Their instinct in the first and second generations does not teach them to battle with our climate. They show no inclination to wander, and can always be found where bred. I found a bevy of such birds, frozen and starved, all dead, within half a mile of a sheltered swamp, to which had they been native birds they would have gone. These particular birds were of a brood from a cock bird raised in captivity and a hen bird from Long Island, which in turn were bred from the south.

"The exception to this rule are the 'tide-water birds', that is, those bred from the southern stock along the coast. They are almost sure to migrate southward on approach of winter, returning in the spring."

Mr Ohl gave some interesting facts of the migration of quail.

"The season for moving"—he said—"is in the fall. Then several bevies will leave from the same locality on the same day, or at times like their California cousins will join together.

"In migrating they move by day, and almost entirely on foot. They seem afraid to trust their wings, and in coming to a water-course, if it be of considerable width, they will follow it for miles in search of narrow channel or island resting-places, before attempting to fly across.

"Bergen Point, N. J., on account of its geographical position, some years ago afforded excellent quail shooting, though no birds were bred there, and even now scarcely a year passes but several bevies endeavor to work their way there against the guns of the pot-hunters.

"Our native birds seldom migrate, and if proper care is exercised in turning out the birds brought from the West and South more satisfactory results would be obtained. In stocking a mountainous country it is money and time thrown away to release birds that were raised in a flat country. Stocking is successful only when judicious. Great study and care are needed, else after all your trouble the quail that you freed in the spring are only heard in summer and seen in early fall and then missing when the shooting season is at hand.

"Eighteen years ago I liberated 120 quail in the vicinity of Bonhamtown, N. J. These birds did remarkably well, so that 29 bevies were flushed on Oct. 27 of the same year. But four days later not one of them could be found. The country was not suited to their remembrance of home.

"The quail in the lower counties of New Jersey, near the great pine lands, spread over the farming districts during the breeding season, but seek the pines in the fall. They start on their pilgrimage late in the afternoon, and journey until quite dark. After a rest, they start again before daylight, stretching their wings by a flight of about a mile and then resorting to their legs again. This short flight is enjoyed before the hawks are about, for of those fierce hunters the little creatures are in great dread. One reason for this aerial flight is to baffle dogs and other animals which trail by scent, from tracing them from their roosting-places.

"Such migrations are not characteristic of all the quail of the North, as in the upper counties of New Jersey and in New York State the birds remain for the entire year near their place of breeding.

"Some years ago our society liberated five hundred or more at once. Some flew short distances, others ran, and others sulked and hid, all chirping and talking. Then suddenly, rising like one bevy, away they whirred, as though panic-stricken. Though trees were thick in their course they flew madly forward in an unswerving line, and many were killed by dashing against the trunks. So blind and headstrong was this flight that my house, which was directly in the way when they reached the clearing, had every pane of glass broken on the side facing the flight, and sixty-odd dead and battered birds were picked up in the round.

"I find it best, in liberating quail, to release only four to six at a time. These soon realize the situation, and are quick to pair off, the cocks seldom fighting. Often two hens will seek to mate with one cock, and each of the belligerent [illegible] will prevent the other from going near the male. Then you will find the lonely bird perching disconsolately on a fence rail or low branch of an apple tree, calling 'Where are I be some one?' or [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] these the young blood wins; so that the 'survival of the fittest' rules and the progeny of each generation is insured the full strength of an able bodied sire.

"Combat among quail ends only in death; and the killing off of the weak and sickly birds prevents the in and in breeding from degenerating effects, while type and symmetry are retained. This method of destroying all unhealthy specimens is a most interesting feature of the habits of quail-life.

"More extended protection is what the propagation of game in New Jersey and elsewhere demands. In the very near future, game preserves will be essential. The poor man should not look on these (as unfortunately he does) with envy or malice; but he should welcome them. They will better him and everyone from a few acres. But they will be protected breeding grounds for the stocking of the broader fields and the woodland outside. And the present deplorable disregard that the rabble of pot-hunters have for the welfare and perpetuation of game make them a great necessity. Our society would hail with delight the co-operation of any lover of birds and game who has the time, means and inclination to help to perpetuate the species. Meanwhile, we can only work among farmers and other country people and seek to imbue them with the spirit of old Walter von der Vogelweid."

Of this friend of the feathered creation, so tenderly remembered in the affections of humane people, it has been written that

"He gave the monks his treasures,
Gave them all with this behest:
They should feed the birds at noontide,
Daily on his place of rest.

"Saying, 'From these wandering minstrels
I have learned the art of song;
Let me now repay the lessons
They have taught so well and long.'

"Thus the bard of love departed;
And, fulfilling his desire,
On his tomb the birds were feasted
By the children of the choir.

"Day by day, o'er tower and turret,
In foul weather and in fair,
Day by day in vaster numbers,
Flocked the poets of the air."

SAVED FROM DEATH, BY FIRE.

George Seums and William Kline Rescue Madame DeBand.

Mrs. Antoinette DeBand, who lives at the corner of East Front street and Westervelt avenue, came near meeting a horrible death by burning, late Saturday afternoon. She was alone in one of the lower front rooms, renovating a lounge, having saturated it with naptha. Soon afterward she lighted a match to look under the lounge for something she had dropped. On the instant, there was a flash, an explosion, and the room was filled with flame. Mrs. DeBand fell to the floor unconscious, and had it not been for the prompt action of George W. Seums and William Kline, two of G. Q. Packer's men, who were passing at the time her clothing would have caught fire and she would undoubtedly have been burned to death, and the house destroyed. As it was, she was slightly burned, and her hair singed.

The two men were on their way to Sandford avenue to deliver a load of sods, and when passing the house they saw the fire and rushed in, finding Mrs. DeBand unconscious on the floor. The flames had burned the base-board and flooring, and were fast eating their way to the ceiling. The lounge was a mass of fire when the two men threw it into the dooryard. The fire in the house was extinguished with much difficulty. George Seums blistered the palm of his left hand.

COSTLY MEMORIAL AT HILLSIDE.

Touching Tribute of Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson to the Memory of Their Daughter.

Hillside Cemetery will soon be beautified by a handsome mausoleum to be erected by Wm. R. Clarkson in memory of his beloved daughter Jennie. It will occupy a most commanding site, looking at a distance like a beautiful little chapel. It will be entirely of New England granite, even the sloping roof being of the same highly polished stone. The width and breadth will be 16 feet each way, and the height 19 feet. No expense will be spared to make it a noble monument. Within this memorial the body of Mr. Clarkson's daughter will sleep in its final rest. The mausoleum will be a mark of the touching devotion of the fond parents so sadly bereaved.

The derrick to unload the granite from the cars is at the freight-house, and the granite will probably be unloaded next week.

"A Chain of Affection Such as No Other Organization Can Boast Of."

Upon the occasion of the death recently of veteran A. M. Runyon, a member of Co. C., 14th N. J. Vols., E. P. Thorn and others whose comrade he had been, sent a token of remembrance in the shape of a floral piece to be placed on his grave. The following letter of acknowledgment has been received:

HEADQUARTERS WM. M. MCKNIGHT POST, G. A. R., DEPARTMENT OF PENNSYLVANIA.
SOUTH EASTON, PA., March 29, 1893.

To Edward P. Thorn and others, members of Co. C, 14th N. J. Vols:

GENTLEMEN—At a regular meeting of this Post I was unanimously directed to return our sincere thanks for the floral tribute sent by you to our comrade, A. M. Runyon. It was certainly very beautiful and very appropriate, and I can assure you highly appreciated by the family of deceased. It was an earnest evidence of the fraternal feeling which so lovingly predominates in the hearts of the veterans of the late war toward each other, forming a chain of affection which grows stronger and stronger as time rolls along, such as no other organization on the globe can boast of. Allow me to extend to you all our warmest expressions of fraternity and charity, with an earnest hope that if we may not be permitted to meet in this world we may in the next.

Yours truly,
In F. C. and L.,
F. O'CONNELL, Act'g Adj.

Why Is It, Mr. Mosher?

The people of that neighborhood are inquiring why street commissioner Mosher doesn't serve the notices which he has had for seven or eight days, requiring the taxpayers on Elm place to pave and curb the sidewalks. They hint at a "pull" on the part of a large property-holder who wants to shirk the expense.

"Female Sufferers,—
"Hear me,
"Many times I wished I was dead before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I was discouraged, broken-hearted. I was so ill with female trouble I could not walk or stand, and had to be assisted to my feet when arising from a chair. My head whirled, and back ached, but worst of all was that awful crowding-down feeling in my abdomen.

"A friend told me of the Vegetable Compound; her faith won mine, and now I am well. Oh! how can I return thanks to Mrs. Pinkham!

FOR LAW AND ORDER.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE ORGANIZED TO REFORM POLITICS.

Its Especial Object the Annihilation of the Race-Track Evil, But General Good Government Its Aim Throughout State, County and City.

A body of representative citizens met in the council chamber Thursday night and organized a Plainfield Citizens' League, with the following officers:

President—Mason W. Tyler.
Vice-President—W. H. Richards.
Treasurer—C. F. Bull.
Secretary—C. B. Leonard.

The meeting was called to order by Craig A. Marsh, who yielded the chair to Dr. Richards when that gentleman was elected temporary chairman. The chair announced Messrs. Marsh, Cox and Walz as a nominating committee, and they made the nominations which were immediately ratified as announced above.

The roll call of those present was taken as a record of those actually attending organization, but the hundreds of good citizens who had already signed the agreement to join were taken as members.

This agreement, which is virtually a declaration of principles, is that the citizens will use every endeavor to effect a repeal of the race-track legislation, and prevent such enactments in the future.

But though the especial object of the league is to fight the race-track evil, the league will strive for general good government in county and city as well as State. The Plainfield league will be auxiliary to the Union County Citizens' League. Somerset county and North Plainfield are to have similar branches.

The city league, having resolved itself into a branch of the county league, is governed by the county league's constitution, but a special supplementary constitution is to be prepared by the committee appointed for that purpose, Messrs. Marsh, Cox and Bull, who will report at the next meeting.

The secretary was directed to notify the State officers of the organization, and a resolution was adopted that the city branch heartily favored aggressive action looking to the carrying out of the objects of the league.

In the absence of Col. Tyler, Dr. Richards presided throughout the meeting, and Craig A. Marsh was temporary secretary.

The president is to make arrangements for a place of meeting and call the next session. Articles of agreement are to be placed in prominent places for signatures.

FIVE TRAMPS ATTACKED HIM.

Unpleasant Night Adventure at the Lonely Evona Station.

A young man named Kenney, who lives a short distance southwest of Clinton avenue, had a rather exciting experience with tramps at the Evona station, one night this week.

He is employed in the New York post-office, and had gone to the Evona station to take a train for New York.

While standing on the station platform, he was accosted by a rough-looking man, who asked for a cigar.

Kenney replied that he had none, except the one he was smoking.

"Then give me that"—said the tramp, attempting to snatch it from his mouth.

At that moment another man came from behind a clump of bushes, and demanded a chew of tobacco from Kenney, who responded that he did not chew the weed. Just then three more men ran out, and the five closed in around Kenney, but fortunately for him his train came in then, and he escaped by knocking one of them down and pushing his way past the others.

The fellows are believed to be part of the gang of tramps who have a rendezvous near the Clinton avenue railroad bridge.

ANOTHER GRACE CHURCH.

This is in the Borough, and is of the Methodist Denomination.

The Park place congregation, having outgrown its chapel dependency on the mother church, as told of in these columns weeks ago, permanently organized Wednesday night into an independent church, with the official title Grace Methodist Episcopal church of North Plainfield.

At last night's meeting C. S. Ryman, presiding elder of the district, preached an interesting sermon on "Woman's Work in the Church".

After the service the first quarterly conference was held, and the following stewards were elected:

J. Vaillant,
A. A. Taft,
J. S. Langer,
R. R. Stevens,
W. M. Gritten,
L. A. Hummer,
J. Voehl,
J. W. VanHorn,
T. W. Powell,
E. A. Vermeule,
H. DeMott,
R. Lounds,

Souvenirs That Are Appreciated.

When Edward P. Thorn, of 17 Park avenue, returned from a trip to Florida, some months ago, he brought with him a large number of cut orange sprouts suitable for canes and walking sticks, which he generously distributed among favored ones. A number of these he had mounted and engraved, and presented to personal friends, which may account for the dudish appearance presented by some of Plainfield citizens Easter Day. Through the kindness of Judge Charles E. Moore, an expert silversmith did the mounting and engraving in a fine manner. The genial Mr Thorn is always doing something to please his friends, of whom he has a host.

Willfield Can't Leave the Jail.

The hearing in the case of Union News Company against Fred. Willfield, who is charged with stealing $150 from the ticket office in the North avenue station, was Friday indefinitely postponed. The prisoner waived examination on one charge, that of stealing from the Union News company, and a hearing in the other matter was set down for this afternoon. Prosecutor Marsh, however, refused to release Willfield from the Elizabeth jail without bail, and he must therefore remain in jail awaiting the action of the grand jury.

RID OF THEIR BURDEN.

Glorious Easter Gladness for a Debt-Freed Church.

If ever faithful pastor and fervent congregation were deserving of a jubilee, that pastor is the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and that congregation the Trinity Reformed. For to-day clergyman and church stand free, relieved of the heavy burden that so long oppressed them.

When Mr. Schenck came to the Trinity people in June, 1887, he was confronted by a debt of nearly $14,000. This hung like a cloud over the church's prospects. Mr. Schenck was a man of determination and perseverance, and from the outset he applied himself diligently to the task of removing the burden, with the earnest assistance of his own people and other friends of the church. Little by little, step by step, the fund for clearing the debt has grown, until through the efforts of an indefatigable pastor, ably backed by a sympathetic and earnest people, a balance of only $373 21 remained on Easter Sunday morning.

With the skies so bright, and all Nature rejoicing, it seemed as though such a day should not pass without witnessing an entire removal of the debt.

So pastor and people united in a final joint application, and succeeded admirably in fulfilling their hope.

At the morning service, in envelopes placed in the pews for Easter offering to pay off the remainder of the debt, $230 60 was contributed. The Sunday-school raised $31.71. In the evening $21 was deposited on the plates. In special treasurer B. A. Hegeman's hands there was $16, and a friend who has modestly but generously contributed before, subscribed the balance of $74 to meet the full amount.

There was great rejoicing over the announcement that the debt was now wiped out, and at the conclusion of the service when all joined heartily in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" many an eye was dimmed with tears of gladness.

Pastor Schenck announced that a public service of thanksgiving to commemorate the event would be held at an early date.

ST. MARY'S GLORIOUS MUSIC.

To the Master-Mind of Organist Lee, the People Owe the Rarest of Easter Treats.

Nowhere in all Plainfield was there a more enjoyable and beautiful Easter observance Sunday than in St. Mary's church. The edifice was thronged with reverential worshipers, to whose souls the glorious music of the service was like an echo from the celestial choir. The music was conducted under the sole direction of the matchless organist, P. E. Lee. Mr. Lee is a most superior musician, and has wonderful talent both as a player and a wielder of the baton. He planned most admirably the programme of the day, and accomplished a wonderful achievement in training the great choir of 50 boys and girls, with full children's chorus of 300, to sing such rare productions as Bock's great Easter anthem "See Now the Altar". This in particular was a marvelous piece of work, and one whose success gave great delight. The quartette consisting of Miss May Flanagan, Miss Marguerite Day, John C. Traynor and M. C. Cashin, deserve especial mention for their praiseworthy work. The singing by them was very sweet and rich. Everything throughout reflected splendid credit on Mr. Lee's brilliant genius. By his training he again proved that his conception of the classic strains is profound and complete, and his execution brilliant and broad. He has received very flattering eulogies from those whom he serves, and from those who have been delighted and enthralled by his magic. His work on the organ was superb.

To be a pupil of so truly eminent a master-musician as Mr. Lee would be in itself an honor and an education.

BOX 16 HAS LOTS OF WORK.

Several Little Fires Make All Fools' Night Quite Lively.

John Rector's dwelling on East Third street near Richmond was slightly damaged Saturday night by the upsetting of a kerosene lamp. Box 16 called out the firemen, but the neighbors got the fire out before them.

Soon after the recall for the Rector fire was sounded, box 16 again sent in a call. The damaged ice-house at Hyde's mill was again afire, the wind having fanned smouldering sparks. There was danger to adjacent buildings from the flying sparks, and the fire was thoroughly drenched out. Warren engine was called out to the same fire by district 3.

The upsetting of a lamp at John Lindsay's, 94 West Front street, at 10 Saturday night, caused a small fire.

Albert Venino nearly set fire to his house Saturday night by throwing a lighted cigarette into a heap of rubbish just outside his window. There was lively work for awhile.

A Charming Parisian in Plainfield.

Among the attractive talent at Hulett's spring opening concert will be Madame Ina Letnom, late of Paris, a most accomplished young woman with whom Plainfield people will be pleased to become acquainted. Madame Letnom is but recently arrived in America, but speaks English fluently, besides her native French and German. She is a woman of fascinating personality and bewitching grace, and will doubtless have many applicants for the class she will form at Hulett's conservatory of music, in physical culture, deportment and grace of walk, which she will teach according to the French method. Her students will be restricted to young ladies and children. Madame Letnom brings to Plainfield the highest credentials, but the best recommendation of all consists of her own rare qualities of heart and mind.

In Paint the best is the cheapest. Strictly Pure White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting. Paints which peel or scale have to be removed by scraping or burning before satisfactory repainting can be done. When buying it is important to obtain properly made. Time has proven that white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brands that have given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

"Atlantic" "Bradley"

BALL TOSSERS TALK.

They Say the Coming Season Will Be One of Interest.

Does the Public Want Good Ball?—John M. Ward Thinks So—Brush, Powers, Talcott and Van Cott Express Opinions—Diamond Dust.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

The outlook for baseball for 1893 is brighter than it has been for five years, and this may be taken for all it is worth. To be sure it is the custom of managers and players to say every spring that "the game will take a fresh boom," "things never looked brighter," etc., but they have never made such predictions with as much reason and right as this year.

Just why this is so will be told better in the managers' and players' own words. But, taking everything into consideration, it is hard to believe anything else. There are three main reasons on which to base the assumption.

First—The presidential campaign is over with, and, little as some may think it, the baseball season is as much affected by this quadrennial event as the theaters and business generally.

Second—There is only one association of clubs—the National league—and competition will be less and the interest in the great contest proportionately greater.

Third—There will be only one championship season. The experiment of two seasons was tried last year and, as every follower of the game can tell, it was not a success. One club had it all its own way the first series, and another club in the second. The season was much too long.

Brush and the Boom.

We have labored over this business considerably the past six months, and if baseball doesn't take a mighty big boom this summer I will be very much fooled. Every objectionable feature that the directors have believed has handicapped us in past years has been speedily and completely done away with. Exorbitant salaries, double championship series, competing associations, the rule with regard to contract jumping—everything has been dealt with summarily, and now we start in a season of honest, conscientious ball playing, with no fear of outside interference or trouble among clubs because of greater salary inducements. In other words, we mean to give the public the kind of ball they saw in 1886, and for several years before that. They'll see more hard hitting, more base running and larger scores this year, and the games for this season will be more entertaining.

We propose to make a bid for ladies' attendance this year, too. There was a time when box parties at the ball games were as swell and usual affairs as box parties at the theater. Too much professionalism, however, hurt this very desirable feature. In England the ladies are as regular enthusiastic attendants at the cricket games as the men. That's what we want in this country. As to which team will win the pennant, that is already a foregone conclusion—Cincinnati, of course. Charley Comiskey will again captain and manage the team, and before he takes his men south for practice I may be able to announce some important additions to my nine. The Reds are out for the flag this season, and no mistake. They have had it flaunted in their faces long enough. Next fall it will float from the flagstaff at Exposition park.

JOHN T. BRUSH.

John M. Ward on New Rules.

I think the result of the coming season depends largely upon the success of the New York and Chicago teams. If they are playing good ball and their cities support them well there is every reason to believe that the season will be good all over the country. Baseball would prosper better without any New York club than with a poor one, for other clubs and the baseball patrons in general get their stimulus not only from the Giants' good work but from the influence of the metropolitan papers as well. It has been my observation that the cities that have won the championship one or two seasons have dropped completely out or lost interest in the game to such an extent that they did not support their club.

They have reached their limit when the pennant has been won, and that seems to satisfy them, instead of stimulating them to keep up the support of their home team. It has been the case with Buffalo, with Providence, with Detroit. It had its effect with New York and was too much for Chicago, and in the association Columbus, Louisville and St. Louis are only evidences of what I say.

The quarrel among the clubs themselves and the disappearance of the favorites from New York and other of the leading clubs also had much to do with dampening popular enthusiasm. For I believe the public has tired of poor ball and has had enough of it, and will support a good club.

We will give New York as good a club this year as possible under the circumstances. You know there has been a cut all along the line and there may be some trouble in getting the boys to sign. These gentlemen who are supporting baseball in New York are not dependent on what they get out of it for a livelihood, it is true, and yet they are not exactly in it for their health, either. They have been going down in their pockets year after year and paying for the losses without a murmur. It is nothing more than fair that once in awhile they should be allowed to end a season with something to their credit. We players owe it to them to meet them half way and share the burden of keeping up the game. I believe most of the men understand this and will sign without protest.

Chicago has got to have a cracking good team this season if she wants to make it pay. The world's fair will take many people there, but there are other attractions as well as baseball to see, and unless the team is of exceptional excellence it won't come out any better next September than it did last. The centennial killed baseball in Philadelphia in 1876 for the same reason.

With regard to Kelly I can say that he has been sent a blank contract to fill out and sign. The amount of salary we can afford to pay him has been filled out by us, however. Kelly is a good man and I want him if he will come. He likes to dally and hang off awhile, but I think he will sit on our bench this season. With regard to the proposed rule of putting the pitchers' box back further, I am not in favor of moving it more than five or six feet further. If they find that the pitcher is unable to get the ball over the plate at that distance it may be necessary to increase the size of the plate. For this reason the committee on rules should be empowered to make any changes at any time which the actual play shows to have become expedient.

JOHN M. WARD.

Van Cott Talks.

I look for a complete revival in baseball affairs this season. I cannot see how it can be otherwise with the changes that have been made. With John M. Ward as our captain the New York team can hold its own, and speaking for the game in general I am glad to say that there will be more equality among the teams of the league than was the case last season. All the star players will not be in one or two nines, and this is as it should be. Baseball is the great American game and I want to see it kept so, and will do all in my power as president of the home team to promote the interests of the national sport.

CORNELIUS VAN COTT, President.

Powers Is Confident.

I look for a genuine old-time, exciting baseball season this year, just such a one as we used to have ten years ago, before salaries were so large and good players so plentiful. The west was successful enough last year from a financial standpoint, but the east got hit hard. Then, too, New York's hard luck cut considerable of a figure in the general depression, for, you may talk as you like, when the Giants are leading the race baseball is more prosperous and the interest is greater. When they are down in the middle or toward the tail end of the percentage list the interest lags. I am an old and close student of the fortunes and changes of baseball, and I know this to be the case. Chicago, Boston and other cities will laugh at such a statement, but it is a proven fact all the same.

"I could have gotten the team I been far different. With such an excellent manager and player and drawing card as John Ward at the head, the Giants ought to be winners this year and if the men with whom Ward is now negotiating are secured they will be winners in a canter. Mike Kelly is one of these, and I hope he will sign the contract to play here. Aside from his excellent playing qualities, he is a popular man with the baseball public and with the team. His very presence and his incessant good nature have stimulated the Boston team and pulled them out of many a hole. I believe he'll wear a "New York" shirt this season.

Chicago had hard luck last year, too, and the weather was largely responsible. For an actual fact, from the opening of the season, early in April, up to July 4, it rained all or a part of every baseball day when the Chicagos were booked to play on their own grounds. Game after game was postponed or called on account of rain. This handicaps and discourages a team, and even "old Anse" lost heart, as well as temper. After July 4, however, they picked up and played great ball.

As to the salaries, I am in favor of a reduction all along the line. A few years ago, when a man got three thousand dollars a season he was the talk of the country. Now that is considered a meager sum. On account of the two associations last year the unsigned player could use one against the other in the matter of salary, and go with whichever offered the biggest pay. Now, with only one association to deal with, he will be glad to sign even at twenty-five per cent. reduction.

Doing away with the second championship series is another good move. Last year the season began in the middle of April, and lasted until October. This year it opens about May 1 and closes early in September. There were one hundred and fifty-four games last year; there will be one hundred and thirty-two this. That makes the season long enough to satisfy the appetite of the most desperate fan.

I cannot see why New York should not be a pennant winner this year, and why baseball in general should not prosper with old-time success.

P. T. POWERS.

Talcott at the Fair.

If my judgment does not go wholly wrong this is going to be the most prosperous season baseball has known in years. I don't speak altogether from a box-office standpoint, either, when I make this statement. I mean it will be, as the critics say of a new play, an artistic as well as a financial success. Better ball will be played this season and the contests will be more exciting, and fever heat will be the prevailing temperature.

There are several things that go to back up this bold declaration. In the first place the relative strength of the twelve teams will be more even than it was last year. During the season of 1892 there were a number of teams that were little better than amateurs. The election of a new president will have a good effect. A very important matter yet to be decided is the distance which shall separate the pitcher's box from the batter this season. Some are in favor of placing it in the center of the diamond. This suggestion was advanced by Mr. Richter, editor of the Sporting Life, Philadelphia, and he has won many over to his way of thinking. The theory of this is that it will lessen the speed of the ball, and give the batter a fairer show. In recent years the game has been between pitchers entirely, and much of the old-time excitement produced by hard hitting has vanished. Mr. Richter believes if there were more slugging, resulting in fewer 1-0 games, there would be more fun and deeper interest. Capt. John Ward of our team believes that the pitcher's box should not be immediately placed further back than five feet—or eight, at the most—from the present position.

As to salaries, I may say that Mr. Ward signed for a very small sum—much less than he has played for in many years. I cannot say how much it is, but it's a humble stipend for a man of Ward's worth. He has looked at the matter in the same sensible light that he views everything, and for this he deserves great praise.

The men whom he will engage will be asked to sign contracts at salaries that would have sent horrors over them last year. It's a case of fish or cut bait, however, this year, and I believe all of the men prefer to fish. I can say this much, two thousand four hundred dollars will be a fine salary. The season is only six months long, and four hundred dollars a month is not such a miserable sum after all. When I [illegible] Mike Kelly [illegible] and said: "[illegible] say, [illegible] wouldn't buy my cigarettes." But "Kel" was joking. I think he will be a Giant this year. He wanted to come to us last season, but we couldn't take him at the time he could come.

So far as I now can venture to predict, the Giants will, besides Kelly, be made up as follows: Pitchers, Amos Rusie, "Silver" King and Ned Crane; catchers, Boyle, McMahon, Ewing and Doyle, the last an emergency man; first base, Roger Connor, of last year's Philadelphia team, or, if we can't get him, a man equally as good; second base, Ward; third base, Kelley; short stop, Fuller; right field, Tiernan; center field, Lyons; left field, probably Burke of last year's team.

That would make a nine hard to beat. While Ward's loss will be keenly felt in Brooklyn, his place on the diamond will be well supplied by Dannie Richardson.

Speaking of low salaries, Tony Mullane, the pride of the Cincinnati team, has signed for twenty-one hundred dollars to play in that city again. This, with Ward's salary, shows how the star men in the business look at the matter. They realize that this year is to be a test one in baseball history, and that to make the game a success after the fashion of former years they must put their shoulders to the wheel and not let a matter of a few hundred dollars stand in the way of their labors for the upbuilding of the national game of America.

E. H. TALCOTT.

TWO QUIET LAWYERS.

The President and Postmaster General in 1879.

A Former Student in Their Office Describes Their Professional Life—They Worked Hard and Frequently Lunched on a Sandwich to Save Time.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

SOME one paid a most agreeable compliment to the whole world when he said of us all: "We are history." The statement is so flattering that we may be pardoned for wanting to hold it to be worthy of acceptation; and yet to March 4, 1893, and to the days immediately following March 4, some one's agreeable compliment, some one's acceptable statement, does not seem to apply with its customary force. The pages of history which are devoted to these passing days seem to be filled with one name and with the current incidents in one great career. It seems that in these passing days each American is less apt to say: "We are history," and that all Americans are more willing to say: "He is history."

Perhaps it is not a bad idea to turn back and in the earlier pages of the continuous public history to look for the same familiar name. At any rate I was so employed when the leaves fell apart at a period about fourteen years ago that was concerned with other careers of less happy presage. The familiar name was not there at all in the public history, but the man himself stood out the more distinctly—not a printed record of him, but a portrait; or, rather, as though a curtain had been drawn aside to afford a glimpse of the quiet lawyer and his environment.

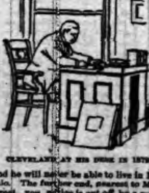
Up one flight, please, and then the first door on the left.

The flight of steps is on the outside of a building, the building is in Main street, Buffalo, and we, for the purposes of this brief visit, have gone back to the year 1879.

It is bitter weather in Buffalo at this season—this winter of 1879. Mind the ice on the steps and hold on to the railing. It's quite a journey, even to the second floor, and very much out of doors, isn't it? But this is the only way, if you want to get up to their law office—the office of Bass, Cleveland & Bissell.

Very much out of doors until we reach the landing. We have only to turn a knob, which is immediately at hand (the left hand), in order to find ourselves not less emphatically but much more comfortably within doors. We are in a large room, a notably long and spacious room, where calf-bound volumes in orderly rows confront each other from opposing walls. Not the greatest number of law books that we have ever seen in a private library—not that by any means; but, rest assured, that here are conflicts of authority upon every possible legal point, and that one may secure from these volumes the answer yes or the answer no, according to taste, in reply to almost any question one may have occasion to ask. So, then, the library may be fairly regarded as sufficient. It is so regarded by the two students, who, with increasing perplexity, read page after page whenever there is not a pleading to be copied or a summons to be served. This statement, so far as it relates to one of those students, may be received with the greater confidence inasmuch as it is made by the only person who is in a position to know.

The office is not of the bustling and commercial sort. It is distinctly serious and strictly professional. One has an apprehension of order, of long and unhurried hours, of scrupulously careful work in the quiet atmosphere. There seems to be plenty of room and plenty of time here. Ah, well, that's partly because the senior partner is away. Poor Mr. Bass (Hon. Lyman K. Bass) is in Colorado for the sake of his health, and he will never be able to live in Buffalo. The further end, nearest to Main street, you notice is cut off by a partition wall, and there are the two deep-thinking shops, private offices, call them what you will—the essential thing to notice is that two big, quiet-mannered men sit there ("planted" as the French say), keeping office hours that often measure the whole extent of the day. Probably they arrive before the students this morning; no doubt Mr. Bissell will, as usual, economize time by taking for luncheon a sandwich at his desk, while the students [illegible] are spending an hour in some restaurant; and when the students take their departure this evening perhaps both chiefs may remain "planted." How these chiefs may grow, being so securely planted!



CLEVELAND AT HIS DESK IN 1879.

Mr. Bissell when he graduated from Yale carried away with him from New Haven enough esteem and good will to make an ample garment even for his gigantic figure. He was covered with honor—with the respect that sterling qualities had won—and (a rarer and perhaps more valuable distinction) the popularity that had come as the unsought reward of a truly amiable nature. It is a tradition at the college still that the heaviest man in Bissell's class, for all his bigness, had not a mean cubic inch in his body; and "Big Bissell's" smooth face, with its conciliatory expression, is just as agreeable—and almost as provokingly boyish—in the year of grace 1879 as it was in 1869.

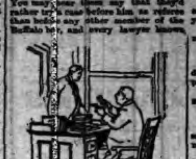
But this comment is a mere commonplace—in Buffalo, at least. Every one knows that much about Mr. Bissell, and I am not [illegible] repeat what every one has said—[illegible] commonplaces. There is something [illegible] here in an incident that characterizes the man.

He has called one of the two students into his private office and is giving him instructions in regard to the proper [illegible] of letters [illegible]

[illegible] "and you should so paste your stamps [illegible] the envelope that the recipient on opening the envelope in the usual way will have his letter not upside down or with its back turned, but right side up and facing him."

Could a postmaster general be more scrupulous? If Mr. Bissell ever becomes postmaster general that law student will no doubt recall the incident and say it was prophetic.

Mr. Grover Cleveland is a lawyer's lawyer, so to speak, most thoroughly appreciated by the members of his own profession and with a strong following, especially among the younger men. You may hear them say that they'd rather try a case before him as referee than before any other member of the Buffalo bar, and every lawyer knows how much that saying means. But again, it would be a mere commonplace—in Buffalo, at least—to assert that Mr. Cleveland has those admirable qualities which attract young men and lend weight to his opinions. Here is something not only more important, but infinitely more important.



MR. BISSELL GIVES AN OBJECT LESSON IN FOLDING LETTERS.

You will notice that he is a very quiet man. His voice is seldom heard in the office, and he is apt to go and come without a word. Yet somehow this quiet man quietly makes his personality felt in a most unusual degree, and when he does speak there is a quality in his voice that stirs and attracts. This sort of thing, this attractive force of a strong personality, would be a tremendous advantage in public life if at any time he should happen to become politically prominent. These three things that one can't help noticing in the man—the reputation for good judgment, the sympathy for generous enthusiasm that makes friends in the younger set and the personal magnetism—these three things in combination would equip him for a very great career, but he seems to be quite content in this office at the top of a flight of ice-covered steps.

The curtain's down again—to my great regret, but I can't help it. I was hoping that H. W. Box or Porter Norton, from their office on the other side of the hall, or John George Milburn, or Ansley Wilcox or S. S. Rogers, or, in fact, anyone who used to come in, would come into the old offices again once more and so make the man of the future talk.

And yet, after all, the interruption is characteristic, for it is rarely a characteristic of men who really lead that you want from them and of them more and more, and more than you can get at any one time.

He Saved His Life.

"Years ago I saved that man's life," said a well known business man in speaking of a certain bank official. "It's been fifteen years ago, I suppose," continued he, "when one day this fellow came to me in a frantic state of mind and told me a startling tale. He was teller in the bank then, the same position he now holds. 'Jim,' he said, 'I've got to have $3,500 to-day or I'm ruined for life. I am short just that much in my accounts and they are going to check me up to-morrow.' I was astonished, of course, but he had been a true friend to me and I got him the money and saved him from exposure for four years. He gave me a portion of his salary every month until the money was paid with interest. His honesty has never been questioned, and as the years have gone by he has grown in the esteem of his superior officers at the bank. I think when I helped him fifteen years ago that I saved him from dishonor and disgrace. It was as good a day's work as I ever did."—Louisville Commercial.

Expert Conjuring.

A corporal and two privates, having in their custody a deserter, were resting themselves at a country tavern not long ago. The deserter amused his guardians with several entertaining sleight-of-hand tricks, but, being encumbered with handcuffs, complained that he could not display his skill to advantage, and requested to have his hands at liberty, whilst he exhibited a trick which he described. This being agreed to, he proceeded to tie the hands of the three soldiers and his own together with a handkerchief, and he was to loose the four with one motion simultaneously. The magic knots were tied, but they all remained firm except the one which held the deserter. This came asunder with a touch, when he lifted up the sash and darted through the window, leaving his keepers raging at each other like ill-coupled hounds.—Yankee Blade.

How to Swear a Witness.

One of your contemporaries the other day spoke of a certain judge, not one hundred miles away from this city, who refused to swear a witness until he ejected "a chaw of terbacky." He must be a blood relation of that other judge in the new state of Washington, before whom an ex-soldier of our late civil war appeared as a witness.

"Hold up your right arm," said the judge.

"Can't do it."

"Why not?"

"Got shot in that arm."

"Then hold up your left."

"Can't do that neither—got shot in t'other one, too."

"Then hold up your leg. No man can be sworn in this court without holding up something."—Once a Week.

Her Life a Failure.

Mrs. Goldrequest—I have always been envious of your clear, beautiful complexion, Mrs. Jumpup.

Mrs. Jumpup—O, don't speak of my complexion! It always mortifies me. It's the only peculiarity I brought with me from the country that I haven't been able to overcome.—Chicago Tribune.

A Mean, Mean Man.

Mr. Crewell—If I had known you were going to have fried beefsteak I would have asked Bromley to dinner.

Mr. Ardup (paying for a half-peck of potatoes)—It costs a heap to live in a city!

Grocer—Yes, sir; but it costs a heap more to die in a city.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Late.

Stranger—I am a literary man, madam, and am looking for a room. Have you anything that will suit me?

Landlady—No, sir. I've just rented my last hall bedroom to a poet.—Jury.

Giving Them Their Rights.

"I notice in the paper," said Mrs. Barracks, pouring out Mr. Barracks' coffee, "that a clergyman says the women should be permitted to whistle."

"Yes," retorted Mr. Barracks, agreeably. "He is right. We should surely not deny to women a privilege we accord to tugboats and locomotives."—Boston Globe.

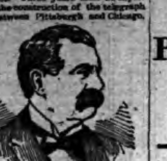
THOMAS T. ECKERT.

The New President of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Gen. Thomas T. Eckert, who has just been made president of the Western Union Telegraph company, has been vice president of the corporation since 1881 and has been acting president most of the time for the last five years.

Gen. Eckert's connection with the telegraph business dates from the year 1849, when he was appointed postmaster at Wooster, O. As he had learned telegraphy the wires were brought into his office. Three years later he supervised the construction of the telegraph line between Pittsburgh and Chicago, over the Fort Wayne route, and was offered the superintendency. When the lines under his management were made a part of the Western Union Telegraph company his jurisdiction became largely extended. In 1859 he resigned his position to superintend the affairs of a gold mining company in Montgomery county, N. C., where he remained until the civil war began, when he removed to Cincinnati. He was called to take charge of the military office at the headquarters of Gen. McClellan, and in 1862 accompanied that officer to the peninsula as superintendent of the military telegraph department of the Potomac, with the rank of captain and assistant quartermaster.



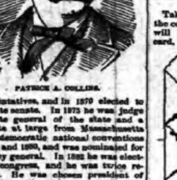
GEN. THOMAS T. ECKERT.

In September of the same year he was called to Washington to establish the military telegraph headquarters in the war department buildings and was promoted to the rank of major. From this time until the close of the war he was on intimate terms with President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton. In 1864 he was breveted lieutenant colonel and afterward brigadier general. The same year he was appointed assistant secretary of war, retaining the office until 1866, when he resigned to become general superintendent of the eastern division of the lines of the Western Union. In 1875 he became president of the Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph company, and in 1880 president of the American Union Telegraph company. On the consolidation of these companies with the Western Union in 1881 he returned to the service of the latter company as vice president and general manager.

PATRICK A. COLLINS.

The Massachusetts Man Appointed Consul General to London.

Patrick A. Collins, of Massachusetts, who declined to enter the cabinet in any capacity, has been appointed consul general to London, England. His nomination was one of the first sent to the senate. He was born in Fermoy, Ireland, in 1844. His family came to this country in 1848, and settled in Chelsea, Mass. He worked at the upholsterer's trade for eight years and gave his leisure hours to study, entering Harvard law school in 1868, and was admitted to the bar in 1871. He was a member of the Massachusetts house of representatives, and in 1870 elected to the state senate. In 1875 he was judge advocate general of the state and a delegate at large from Massachusetts to the democratic national conventions of 1876 and 1880, and was nominated for attorney general. In 1882 he was elected to congress, and he was twice re-elected. He was chosen president of the Irish land league at the convention held at Buffalo in 1884.



PATRICK A. COLLINS.

The Russian Wife.

The Russian woman now has more rights after marriage than she ever had before. Two hundred years ago she was little more than a slave, and the husband's horsewhip always hung over the bed of the married pair and was used freely. Women were then seldom seen upon the streets, and Peter the Great had a way of kicking them when he met them in Moscow or St. Petersburg, and telling them that their place was at home and they ought to be in it. The wife-beating of to-day is almost altogether confined to the peasants, and Countess Tolstoi tells us that even the peasants are improving in the treatment of their women. The peasant women have, in fact, many rights of which the women of the other parts of the world know nothing. In the communal systems by which the villages of Russia are governed the women stand on an equal footing with the men as regards the distribution of property, and they have their share of the property of the village according to their share in the work.

Rocks in a Tree.

While James Parlier, of Moravian Falls, N. C., was chopping down a large oak tree he claims to have found two rocks imbedded in the tree, which had evidently been placed there when the tree was young.

SALTED PEANUTS.

An Excellent and Toothsome Substitute for Almonds.

Perhaps all women are not aware that for "salting" the peanut is an appetizing substitute for the almond, and, as it is less expensive, it is worth while to know how to prepare it.

Being this moment flushed with triumph—my effort at the "salting" today having proved a shining success—I will, while the matter is fresh in my memory, "tell my experience," especially as some of the "things" I did were done by accident instead of "by directions," and are therefore discoveries.

I bought the green or unparched peanuts. This was an of-course procedure and would not be mentioned, except that already two housekeepers who have eaten of my salted nuts have asked if I started with the ordinary roasted peanuts.

I used the nut cracker, gently crushing the shell to avoid breaking the nut. By using boiling water the peas are readily blanched, the red envelope being easily rubbed off. In my first essay the water was not scalding hot, and that led to my first "discovery."

In order to bring to the requisite heat I set the dish containing water and peanuts in the oven. Then there was a short call on my attention, causing me to forget the nuts, and on going to the oven I found the water gently boiling—simmering. I feared the nuts were ruined by this parboiling. But after rubbing off the skins, I spread the nuts on a tin dish, treated them to butter and set them in the oven again. It was then at a baking or browning heat, but was not a quick oven. This, too, worried me, since the "directions" called for a quick oven. This second mistake, I was sure, would complete the failure.

The nuts were in that oven for a half-hour at least before they were browned or sufficiently parched, that is, until they had turned a light straw-color. Then I took them out and salted them hot.

Were they spoiled? They were superior to any salted almonds that I ever ate.

A similar verdict has been pronounced on them by a [illegible]

[illegible] moist and will, therefore, bear a long, thorough, slow cooking before scorching. Deep browning ought to be avoided, with both almonds and peanuts, since this renders the nut in either case bitter.

While the ordinary roasted peanut of the market is trying to weak stomachs the salted peanut is purely harmless and may safely become one of our common delicacies.—Mary Maxwell, in Chicago News.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.

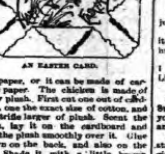
MAKING EASTER CARDS.

Pleasant Employment for Cold Winter Evenings.

Take a square piece of paper, bend the corners over as seen here, and you will have the pattern for the Easter card, which is made of rough water color paper, or it can be made of cartridge paper. The chicken is made of yellow plush. First cut one out of cardboard, one the exact size of cotton, and one a trifle larger of plush. Scent the cotton, lay it on the cardboard and draw the plush smoothly over it. Glue it down on the back, and also on the card. Shade it with a little brown paint. Do the lettering and grasses and also the turned-over corners with gilt.—American Agriculturist.



AN EASTER CARD.

Why Women Are Not Humorists.

A writer in the open-letter department of the Century asks why in literature there are no lady humorists. He then goes on to answer his question by explaining that from childhood man finds the sawdust dropping out of everything, and soon discovers the worthlessness of much that passes for valuable. Therefore he learns to smile and say: "Is it not absurd?" instead of allowing his passion for something to adore to override his growing desire for truth. But, on the other hand, a woman's idols are so much a part of her life that when they are broken she cannot snap her fingers nor seek mirth as an avenue of escape. Women may possibly grow satirical, but satire is only a form of humor. "When life ceases to be in some way holy, or at any rate ideal, then woman's creative faculty terminates," says the writer. "She ends where man's talent as a humorist begins."

To Pack Silk and Wool.

Whenever you have occasion to pack away silk or woolen goods which you are afraid may turn yellow break up a few cakes of white beeswax and fold the pieces loosely in old handkerchiefs that are worn thin. Place these among the goods. If possible, pin the silks or woolens in some old white linen sheets or garments. If it be inconvenient to use linen take cotton sheets. Of course, it's important that the clothing shall be perfectly clean when put away.

Dry Process for Cleaning Gloves.

Lay out the gloves on a clean table or board, then rub into them a mixture of finely powdered fuller's earth and alum in equal quantities. This will work a dirty color, and should then be brushed off; then sprinkle the gloves with dry bran and whiting. Lastly, dust them well. Those who have glove trees will do well to put their gloves on to them, instead of laying them out on a table.

[illegible] and Unhappy.

The star boarder shoved the eggs away from him.

Borrowing Trouble.

"Maddock and his wife are always worrying about their children. Mrs. Maddock had a fit of nervousness the other day over the thought that their boy Wilfred would grow up and become a drunkard."

"And what does Maddock worry over?"

OLD HOOP SKIRTS.

Historic Fancies in the Fashion of Dress Expansion.

The Truth About the Farthingale, Hoop Skirt and Crinoline of the Ladies and the Trunk Hose of the Men.

[Special Letter.]

Just at this time, with all the talking and writing about the suggested revival of the fashion of distended skirts in connection with the costuming of the fair sex, there is a great confusion of farthingale, hoops and crinoline, and a pretty general misunderstanding of the close similarity, and yet entire distinctness of these three fashions.

Their effects were similar enough to warrant this confusion, but they were produced in ways as different as the times to which they belonged were remote from each other.

The oldest of these three freaks of fashion is the farthingale, which is generally admitted to have had its beginning in Spain, and to have been introduced in England by Queen Mary as a compliment to her Spanish consort, Philip II. We know that the Catalonian women of Spain were leaders of the fashion of wearing the distended petticoat, securing the desired shape of expansion by means of wire hoops, but it is doubtful if they are entitled to the credit of inventing the farthingale.

In England, as early as the reign of Richard, in the fourteenth century, the ladies, not content with the contour nature had bestowed upon them, began stuffing and padding their petticoats at the hips, so that the dress stood out much in the shape produced by the farthingale of a later period. This seems to have been the beginning of a fashion that came into full vigor a hundred years later and continued, almost without interruption, but of course with modifications, until the edict of George IV. banished hoop and farthingale from England.

The house of Tudor was given to extravagances in all features of dress. Henry VIII. encouraged extremes, Mary brought the farthingale to its height of popularity and Elizabeth, in spite of her hatred of everything Spanish, maintained the ruff and farthingale to the end of her reign, dying with three thousand costumes in her wardrobe. And the name of the farthingale is vertingale, derived from vertu-garde, the French for virtue-guardian. It was made of wire, shaped to set upon the hips, a sort of bustle that went all the way round, and the dress fell over it and hung straight down, as shown in the accompanying picture of Queen Elizabeth, where she appears in ruff, stomacher and farthingale. It was not until many years after her death that the hoop came into use to inflate the drapery below the farthingale. It is said the ladies at first found the fashion inconvenient and unpleasant, but they remembered the adage: "One must suffer to be beautiful." So as the reign advanced the farthingale puffed out more and more over the hips, and the ruff about the neck grew more wide—extending to keep the dress company.

But the fashions of the Tudors were objects of reform during the Cromwellian supremacy, so that little was seen or known of ruff and farthingale up to the time of James II. They then revived, and along with them came the hoop, and for many years they reigned supreme, so that the fashion plates of those days contain groups of ladies, some in farthingale, some in hoops and some combining both. Gradually the hoop supplanted the farthingale, perhaps because of its greater possibilities, for we read: "They spread themselves across the whole pavement to the detriment of all honest men going upon business along the street."

There were various modifications of size and shape, and they expanded and contracted between the extremes of "the size of a butter churn and the circumference of three hogsheads;" and they sloped straight outward from the waist to the ground, or carried the convolution of an inverted bow, as the men of to-day remember the hoopskirts of the sixties and thereabouts.

We find this terse paragraph in the Spectator: "Since your withdrawing from this place the fair sex are run into great extravagances. Their petticoats, which began to heave and swell before you left us are now blown up into a most enormous concave. * * * What the ladies have lost in height by the reduction of their coiffures they make up in breadth, and, contrary to all rules of architecture, widen the foundation at the same time they shorten the superstructure."

One of the extremes of this period is illustrated in the Velasquez painting of Infanta Maria, of Spain, a photographic reproduction of which is presented here. Of this young queen it is remarked: "She was an attractive princess in spite of the most hideous costume ever invented."

It was humorously remarked that the reign of the hoop portended the downfall of the French king as the reign of its ancestor the farthingale preceded the ruin of the Spanish monarchy.

During the reign of George I. the hoop underwent important changes, ac-

[illegible]

George IV., who, with his tailor's good taste in all things relating to the toilette, banished hoop and farthingale as both being "cumbersome and inelegant." But he could not control it beyond his reign. A writer of the period says: "The opinion of so good a judge as King George sealed their death warrant, and they disappeared never, we may hope, to return, at least among the British fair, though anti-hoopists have had cause to tremble lately lest it should resume its place in the wardrobe of modern fashionables, for a certain crinoline, or horsehair jupe, has recently astonished the world by its marked resemblance to its ancestor of famous memory."

The crinoline was a petticoat woven of horsehair, and so stiff that it answered the purpose of the hoop. But it was expensive, and the expansion fashion coming again into vogue the hoops of the middle of this century came as an economical substitute.

There was a time in the past when the men vied with the ladies in the extravagance of dress, and the oddities of their costumes at different periods of history are familiar to all. But few know that they once imitated the ladies in the farthingale fashion, and that the historic "trunk hose" is but an affectation of that costume of the fair sex. The trunk hose came into vogue during the reign of James I., and some of the men used to stuff them so at the top with rags and other things as to extend them in compass in rivalry with the enormous and stately farthingale of the ladies. To so great an extent was this expansion about the hips of the men carried that had they donned the dresses of their wives they would have appeared much like them. Later the style disappeared, but in the reign of James II., when the hoops returned, after the protectorate, one writer remarked: "If men also adopt the old fashion of trunk hose, a man and wife would fill a whole pew in church." We have the fashion in the paintings of Raleigh, Bacon, Drake, Fairfax, Villiers and others. It never revived, but when the hoop was at the zenith of its influence the men could not resist the extravagance, so that during the first of the Georges they changed the doublet for a coat with tails, and expanded these with wires to rival the hoop petticoat, and this fashion remained a favorite with the men until the good sense of George IV. dismissed it with the hoop of the ladies.

A Scottish King's Park.

A novel idea for a park was that of King James V., of Scotland, who founded the palace of Holyrood about 1528, by building a house to reside in, with a circular turret at each angle. To accommodate himself with a park King James inclosed a large tract of ground in the neighborhood of this palace with a stout wall about three miles in circumference, which, as Maitland says, in his "History of Edinburg," "is nowhere to be paralleled; for, instead of trees and thickets for cover, which other parks abound with, I could not, after the strictest search, discover one tree therein, in lieu whereof, it is supplied with huge rocks and vast declivities, which furnish the Edinburgers with the best of stones to pave their streets withal; as do the other parts of the said park yield good pasturage and meadow grounds, with considerable spots of arable land." Two hundred years after, however, the level portion was covered with magnificent oaks.—Garden and Forest.

Costume Slang.

A paper before us says that Mrs. Blank was "gowned in mauve silk." We are not informed, however, whether Mrs. Jones was petticoated in ecru, and we are all left in the dark as to whether or not Mrs. Smith was hatted in cream color. While he was about it the writer should have told us that Mr. Snobb was caned in malacca, that Mr. Dudeleigh was ringed in sapphire, and that Mr. Dash was evening dressed in broadcloth garnished with satin.—Boston Transcript.

COUNCIL OF THE DEAD.

Nine Scouts Went Out, But None of Them Came Back.

The Kiowas Met Their Enemies, the Cheyennes, and Paid for Their Bravery with Their Lives—A Ghastly Scene.

We had sighted the Cheyenne village just before sundown, says a writer in the New York Herald, and ere the night became too dark the whole company had moved up to within half a mile of it so as to be ready for an attack when the moon rose. Between us and the village was a wooded hill, and as night fairly set in two of our Kiowa scouts were sent forward to spy out the strength and location of the village. The horses were corraled in a small valley, no fires were lighted and the 100 men looked to be blotches on the earth as they rested after the long march.

Half an hour after the first scouts were sent out two more were dispatched. The first two ought to have returned at the end of an hour, but neither was heard of. As none of the four had been heard of at ten o'clock the third pair were sent forward. We could hear the barking of the dogs in the village and catch the tinkle of the bells on the leaders of the herd of ponies, and we had the utmost confidence that our presence was unsuspected and unprepared for. We had but to pick our way carefully up the hillside, descend to the eastern base and there was the village before us. The moon would rise at 10:30. We would wait half an hour after that.

"Can it be that your young men are afraid and are hiding in the bushes?" asked the general of Red Fox, the chief of the scouts, as the latter crept up beside him in obedience to a message.

"A Kiowa afraid!" replied the chief. "Where is the enemy who dares charge a Kiowa warrior with knowing what fear is? The village is large and my scouts wish to bring you the full information. They will even tell you how many papooses there are in the village when they return."

"A KIOWA AFRAID!" SAID THE CHIEF.

Fifteen minutes later, as nothing had yet been heard from the scouts, Red Fox started out with two others, promising to send back word within a quarter of an hour. It did not come. The general waited for three-quarters of an hour and then we got the whispered command to move up the hill. Like shadows we followed in each other's footsteps—turning, twisting and climbing. At the crest we paused to listen. Here and there a dog bayed at the moon—now and then came the tinkle of a bell. It seemed as if every soul in the village was fast asleep. Now, as we descended, every man increased his caution, and the only sound a listener could have heard was a slight rustling as of a summer breeze moving twig and leaf. We cleared the pines at last and drew up in line beyond them.

"Where is the village?"

Each man asked himself the question as he stood staring at the spot where the village had been and still ought to be, but was not. A hundred men had seen it before sunset. Ten minutes ago we had heard the dogs and bells. The valley was clear of tepees. There was not a camp fire. The full moon showed us every blade of grass under our feet, and would have betrayed a pony a mile away. We stood aghast and appalled when we got the order to move forward. In five minutes we were among the ashes of the extinguished camp fires. Five minutes later we were looking in horror upon the fate which had befallen our scouts. There they were—nine of them—seated in a circle, each body propped up by a rock at its back. They faced inward, and their feet touched. Some had been stabbed, others killed by a blow of the tomahawk. Nine dead men sitting in council, as it were, with the blood still oozing from their mortal hurts, with their chins on their breasts, and their arms crossed! Around the dead were 100 living men, looking up and down and across the valley for trace of what had been. Five hundred people, 900 ponies, nearly 100 lodges—all had vanished off the face of the earth, leaving a council of dead men to point out the direction of their mysterious flight.

Arctic Explorations.

Frederick Jackson, who is planning to make an expedition to the north pole by way of Franz Joseph Land, has completed his preparations. He is going to take only ten men with him, and dogs, sledges and food for about three years. Jackson's belief is that Franz Joseph Land extends to the eighty-fifth degree, or within about three hundred nautical miles of the pole. This is based on the vast icebergs that are found in the adjacent seas and the continental size of the glaciers which have been observed upon it. This will make three expeditions which will start this spring for the north. Lieut. Peary will push on his work begun in Greenland. Dr. Nansen will try to float across the pole from the west to the east, and this of Jackson overland by Franz Joseph. It is a question with geographers whether much of general value will be obtained by any one of them.

THE HIGHEST HOUSE.

An Observatory to Be Erected on the Top of Mont Blanc.

M. Janssen, a distinguished French astronomer, is superintending the construction of an observatory at the top of the highest peak of Mont Blanc. The building was first set up at Meudon to make sure that it was perfect, and last spring it was taken apart, the pieces were carefully numbered and the material for the new observatory was carried up to the top of Mont Blanc on the backs of porters. [illegible]

[illegible] gunning [illegible] again in the spring, and if all goes well the observatory will be finished by October of this year. The cut shows the present stage of construction.

There are some queer things about this observatory aside from its elevation. Its dome will be made of aluminium, and its promoter, besides being seventy years old, is a cripple and has to be dragged up the mountain in a chair of his own invention. Consequently the journeys are accomplished at considerable personal risk to the astronomer. M. Janssen was one of those who escaped from Paris in a balloon during the siege. In his exciting aerial trip, which ended by the seashore near Nantes, he carried with him, carefully packed, a great telescope which he had had specially constructed for him.—Harper's Young People.

MILL FROM ONE STRAW.

A Man Who Can Make One in a Quarter of an Hour.

Straw has been used over and over again to play with. It has been plaited, twisted, woven, made into mats and pin-cushions, until it seemed as though nothing else could be done with it. But here is a worthy man with a mill made out of one rye-straw such as no one ever thought of before. We have had the prisoner who made a watch completely out of many straws; but who ever before thought of making a machine, however humble, out of a single straw?

He takes a rye stem, and from the bottom cuts off eight inches for his blowpipe. He then cuts off from the same end seven inches. This piece he cuts in half, and then proceeds to split and twist these so as to get the wheel.

He then cuts off a yard of the remaining stem, and folds it so as to obtain the isosceles triangle with a base of five inches, and this he closes by thrusting one end into the other for a depth of an inch. The two cross-pieces he takes out of the remainder of the straw and fits them in through slits; and on one of them he hangs his wheel. He then makes a slit in the base of his triangle, and in the first cross-bar, and slips in his blow-pipe; and then, proceeding to blow, he "merrily drives the wheel."

It will be remarked that from beginning to end he does all his work with the straw; he uses neither pin, nor card, nor thread, nor glue. His only tool is a sharp penknife, and he completes his task and gets the wheel on the spin within a quarter of an hour.

Perhaps our readers would like to copy him. Seven or eight boys, standing in a line, each with a mill in his mouth, all with cheeks puffed out, and waiting for the word to blow, would be a sight worth seeing.—Golden Days.

One Thing More.

Nothing promises so well for a student's ultimate success as a disposition to probe every subject to the bottom.

A lady passenger on board a Maine steamboat engaged the engineer in conversation, says the Lewiston Journal. He was very polite and attentive, feeling a little flattered, it may be, that a person so impressive in her manners should have come to him for information. One by one he answered all her questions—just where the steam went into the cylinder, where it escaped and how it was that the piston rod attached to the crank turned the wheels that propelled the vessel through the water.

She listened intently, and when he concluded she turned upon him a beaming face and said:

"Now, what is the object of the boiler?"

COMMANDER IN INDIA.

"Little Bobs" and the Soldier Who Is to Succeed Him.

Both Are Famous Generals—Affection Felt for Lord Roberts by His Men—Brilliant Record of Sir George White.

"Little Bobs," otherwise Lord Roberts, late commander in chief for India, is so ardently admired and approved by the rank and file of the Indian army that every private admits his superiority to be something more than that of rank. In military as well as in political fame personal popularity bears an important relation to the whole man.

The name by which Lord Roberts is familiarly known is an affectionate diminutive bestowed upon him by the army because of his small size and great valor, writes a London correspondent of the Chicago Post. Physically he is a little man, with affable manners; but he is the ideal British officer, with common sense, self-reliance, great endurance, a good seat in the saddle and unimpeachable honor. His devotion to unattractive duties is so great that it has been said of him that he would have been as good a private as he is an officer. No doubt some of his soldierly virtues are hereditary, just as is his close association with the Indian army. His father was one of the old East India company's best servants, and the traditional gallantry in the east was handed from sire to son. Moreover he is Irish, with an unfailing supply of geniality and with a sanguine spirit that readily communicated itself to the army and kept the soldiers hopeful even under the most trying circumstances. The efficiency of his subordinates is in some measure a reflection of his own.

To succeed such a man, who for so many years has been the idol of the Indian army, is no easy task. The authorities, however, have used excellent judgment in promoting to the place Maj. Gen. Sir George Stewart White, who, next to Lord Roberts, has the greatest practical knowledge and experience of military service in India. Entering the army in 1853 the last twenty years has been spent in India in high commands. He served in the Indian mutiny of 1859 and came out of it with a medal for gallantry in action. He wears the khedive's star and the Victoria cross. He won the latter by a feat of singular audacity at Charasiah, where, when the men he commanded had fallen back, he advanced alone, shot down the leader of the enemy with his revolver, rallied his people and led them to victory.

For three years during the annexation of Burmah he commanded the field force in that country and established a reputation as a general of the most distinguished ability. Thirty thousand men were under him—mixed troops drawn from every branch of the British and Indian services. Since 1889 he has held the most important military charge on the frontier—the Beloochistan command. His knowledge of impending questions on the Burmese and remote northwest is profound. He is, besides, one of the foremost of those who advocate the establishment of greater political liberty among the natives.

The policy of Great Britain, now that after 150 years the peninsula of Hindostan may be said to be subjugated, is to restore local self-government. Formerly pure despotism was used to govern the conquered country. Now the power exercised differs in different states according to the enlightenment of the natives. Hereditary sovereigns still reign under the control of the British governor general in many of the feudatory states.

There will still be opportunity for several generations of generals to exercise their military and political ability in the holding of the natives in check and for keeping a vigilant guard against Russia, who is again stretching her long cuttlefish arms toward the northern frontier of India. For the struggle between England and Russia for supremacy in Asia—a struggle which is inevitable, however long it may be delayed by forbearance, discretion and energetic preparation—the former will need men of the highest talent, and she may well congratulate herself upon the possession of two such soldiers as Lord Roberts and Sir George Stewart White.

Rain from a Clear Sky.

A remarkable phenomenon was observed in the town of Athens, O., lately, which has awakened wide interest, viz., continuous rain during a succession of clear, beautiful days. This was noticed extending for a considerable distance just below the crest of the hill, and lasted through the day, from soon after sunrise till about sunset. The drops of water were at no time large, but they reached their maximum size about two or three o'clock in the afternoon. It was soon determined that the phenomenon was due to the precipitation of vapor which had been discharged into the air from a number of brick ovens which had recently been operated. Hot air, laden with moisture, was carried up the hill until it came into contact with cold currents, causing the precipitation.

The Weeping Tree.

In the forests of Oregon, Washington, Montana and British Columbia there is a species of fir tree that has a continuous and copious dripping of pure, clear water from the ends of its leaves and branches. It is called the weeping tree.

PLAGUE OF ANTS.

The Busy Insects Reduce Australian Houses to Powder.

Australia has not quite so many plagues as Egypt once suffered under; but the plague of rabbits and the other plague of white ants are, in the opinion of Australians, quite enough for the country. The rabbits girdle all the young trees and destroy gardens and field crops. The ants finish what is left. They have the reputation of boring through corrugated iron, and sheet lead is no barrier to them. Houses and furniture are ruined in a few months, as the ant burrows in every kind of wood except Oregon pine, reducing it to a powder. This white ant is about three-eighths of an inch long and proverbially busy. In the San Francisco Examiner, J. Fletcher Watson, an English water-color artist, recently described the terra-cotta houses of these little creatures. "It is a masterpiece," he said, "this nest—pale chocolate in color and a mass of passages and cells. The ants moisten a certain clay into a fine paste, and then add the mouthful to the walls of the nest, repeating the operation until you have a piece of soft-baked pottery that no potter could reproduce." It all centers round the royal chamber, gallery after gallery, hall after hall; for it is in reality a palace for their queen. In the very center is the queen's chamber, the size of a duck's egg, built for her majesty, who is carefully inclosed on all sides, with only minute [illegible] through the walls to admit air, food and [illegible]. [illegible]

"Millions of these ants live within a single nest, but they have only one queen, who cannot be approached by the myriads of the working ants. The laborers are outside all day long, returning only at night; but the soldiers have a duty, so they must remain at home and protect her majesty. The nests vary from eighteen inches to five feet in length, and have an average circumference of two feet six inches."

THE PETREL'S HABITS.

He Can Make a Ball of Himself and Sit on the Water.

Little Peter, is the real name of the petrel, a bird that lives on the sea. The harder it storms, the better he likes it; and the more noise the sea makes, the louder he cries.

The sailors, who are all so jolly, never like to meet a petrel. They are so dismal in their coal-black coats, and seamen think they bring them ill luck, too.

You could not guess how the petrel sleeps. He first makes of himself a feather ball and sits on the water, just as your canary does on his perch.

PETREL ON THE WING.

Why doesn't he sink? Because his feathers are so oily he can't.

These birds grow so fat that to the poor islanders in very cold countries they are invaluable. After they are dead a wick is drawn through their bodies and set on fire, and you can hardly believe how well this queer kind of lamp lights up their simple huts.

The petrel never goes on shore except to build her nest, which is hidden snugly away between rocks or in the sand. There she lays her one egg and brings up her baby. All day the petrel lives on the water, but she never forgets at night to feed it.

Sometimes they are called "Mother Carey's chickens." If you ever go across the water you may see them some day.—Mrs. G. Hall, in Our Little Ones.

AN INTELLIGENT COW.

How She Rescued a Calf at the Risk of Her Own Life.

Col. I. D. McDonald, of Columbia City, Ind., as reported by the Indianapolis News, tells a good story of animal intelligence. He had bought a lot of stock, including a cow and her calf, which he was driving home. The cow's affection for its offspring had attracted attention more than once.

At length a river was reached, which, being unbridged, the cattle had to ford. The water was deep, and as the cattle plunged in they were swept off their feet, the mother cow among the rest.

The calf, meantime, was taken by the current several rods down-stream, and when the poor cow regained her footing and discerned this, her distress was apparent. Instead of making for the opposite shore, as the other animals had done, she swam down the stream below her calf. The current drove the young creature against the protecting bulk of the mother.

The cow, satisfied at this state of affairs, started for the shore, the calf swimming alongside of her. About midway of the river the swift current, striking the calf in the fore-quarter, swept it behind the cow, and again it floundered down-stream.

Once more the mother went to the rescue. She had to swim around to the other side of the calf, and, this done, she had to steady herself in the stream until the calf was against her side. Her efforts were this time successful, and cow and calf swam safely to shore.

The following story relates to Superintendent Daniels, of the Malden (Mass.) public schools: A few days ago one of the primary scholars in the Judson school came home and said: "Mamma, a real nice old gentleman came in to-day and heard us read. THE BANNER OF DEMOCRACY.

Thomas Jefferson was one of the most enlightened and patriotic statesmen this or any other country ever produced. He was a bold apostle of popular liberty, the stern opponent of aristocratic and exclusive privileges of every kind, and belonged to that noble class of public men who never falter in saying and doing what they honestly believe to be right.

Federalism hated Jefferson because he espoused the cause of the people.

Federalism died an ignominious death, but the Democracy of Jefferson remains a vigorous reality.

Profit abides in recalling to memory the grand Democratic creed of Jefferson as promulgated nigh unto a hundred years ago.

Its salient points read as follows:

"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political.

Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none.

The support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies.

The preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad.

A jealous care of the right of election by the people.

The supremacy of the civil over the military authority.

Economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened.

An honest payment of our debts, and sacred preservation of the public faith.

Encouragement of agriculture, and of commerce, as its handmaid.

The diffusion of information, and the arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public reason.

Freedom of religion.

Freedom of the press.

Freedom of person under the protection of the HABEAS CORPUS.

Trials by juries impartially selected."

That is the fundamental faith of the Democratic party now. It is as sound and practical as when first penned. It has ever been loyally maintained, and through its influence and governing effect the growth and success of the American Republic stands a living witness.

Since the Democratic party was founded by Jefferson various opposing organizations, some great and some small, some reputable and others grotesque, have strutted the political stage and then passed forever out of existence. The Republican party, shorn of its original strength, still lingers, but it, too, must finally succumb, and whoever or whatever may succeed it will discern advancing the old battle-scarred and unconquered banner of DEMOCRACY.

IS HE ONE OF THE CRANKS?

Evidently This Man Is of the "Rabid Prohibition" Stripe that Has n't Been Admitted to the Crusaders' Ranks.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Eureka! No saloons in Plainfield! Preparing to make ready to commence! The important crisis which was to have arriven has arroven! The leading citizens as well as clergymen, "no creed", "no cranks". The hundreds of citizens who have no political affiliation with the party of legal Prohibition, are now to move in grand phalanx on the enemy. LET US SEE! That noble company of martyrs who voted the rum power in and then prayerfully entreated by petition and otherwise that the dear city fathers would not do what they were virtually pledged to do, viz., license the saloon, is now about to voice itself. Consistency, the jewel of modern "moral and religious elements" so predominating at the present time in Plainfield, is about to speak, and then presto: it is done.

One opens his eyes with wonderment at the amount of humble-pie that must be eaten before the breaking in of that millennium morn foreshadowed by the coming of this virgin effort to clean out the saloon by a very select body of citizens assisted by the believers in the table use of wines, together with leading members of the W. C. T. U. and the clergy, ignoring the old line of solid prohibition. We wait impatiently the opening of the ball in this new and effective "organized warfare". Already we hear the rumbling of the wheels of that "machine" for the "rejection of cranks" which is in process of construction by the "committee of rare discretion".

This young Sampson is about to put shoulder to the pillars of the temple of rum and carry it away to the wilderness of forgetfulness. Already the consecrated hands are raised over the head of the scapegoat of the sins of the people, and invitations for the chosen few to witness the first working of the machine will soon be issued.

All of this is to be done quietly without the people and without disturbing the equilibrium of political parties!

Oh, gentlemen! can't you see in the light of the past, that nothing but open-handed and manly warfare can carry on to successful results any reform? That compromise never wins but always fails? That your immediate opportunity was lost when you failed to take the temperance tide at the flood in its palmiest days in our city and lead to victory the enthusiastic crowds who were ready to cry "Down with the saloon!"

A man once beheld in a dream a receding figure who beckoning said "My name is Opportunity: once neglected I never return". Then was your time to have marshaled your "prominent citizens" for "emphatic and effective temperance work". But no: you were afraid then, and you are afraid now, and think to win by other than open-handed warfare that lasts over election day. If you are afraid to trust the people in your counsels, the people will be afraid to trust you, and without their sympathy there is no success.

SHE WAS STONEWALL'S PRISONER.

Memorable Life of Mother Brittin, Plainfield's Ardent Volunteer.

Mrs. Margaret A. Brittin who died at the family residence in Plainfield, N. J., on Thursday, April 6, 1893, was born in Augusta, Maine, August 10, 1819. She was married three times: first to John D. Richards of Boston, Mass., on August 14, 1837, who died July 15, 1845; on Feb. 26, 1848, she was married to Thomas F. Gray of Old Cambridge, Mass., who died Sept. 26, 1855; on Sept. 10, 1858, she was married to Bennet Brittin, who now survives her. Educated in the best schools and academies of New England, Mrs. Brittin early in life developed strong literary tastes and was a frequent contributor in poetry and prose to a number of the leading papers of Boston and New York city. In later years she was a frequent contributor to the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, the readers of which are familiar with her strong and beautiful lines.

At the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, her husband enlisted in the First Regiment of New York Volunteer Cavalry, and Mrs. Brittin, being full of patriotism and faith in the Union, believed there was work for women to do and went to the front with her husband in the Army of the Potomac, where she remained for more than three years. In the hospital and on the field she assisted in nursing the sick and wounded, and many a soldier owes his life to-day to the kind and careful services of Mother Brittin. She witnessed many battles and skirmishes among others the battles of Antietam, Peach Orchard, the Wilderness, and the Seven Days' battle, at the last of which she was struck in the neck by a piece of shell which exploded near her while the Rebels were attempting to blow up the ammunition train. In connection with her army life it is told of her that when herself and husband were captured by Stonewall Jackson's troops, the General was puzzled as to what to do with a woman prisoner. He finally ordered that the man should be held prisoner and the woman paroled. But no, she said: "Both paroled or I don't leave my husband's side." General Jackson finally paroled them both. When the announcement was made her husband turned to her and said: "Where, now?" "Back to the boys,"—she replied, and back they went, with the knowledge that if caught again they would be hung.

After leaving the army, Mr. and Mrs. Brittin settled at Scotch Plains, N. J., and have ever since been identified with Plainfield and vicinity. She was a woman of firm opinions and a kindly heart, having hosts of friends. Four children survive her: Jas. A. D. Richards, now a representative in Congress from Ohio; Thos. F. Gray and Franklin F. Gray, and Mrs. Frances A. Haberle of Plainfield, N. J.

The funeral took place at Plainfield on Monday, the body being followed to the grave at Evergreen Cemetery by a large concourse of friends.

Good Music and Refreshments, Free.

The free concert in Hulett's piano warerooms last night was such an attraction that not all of those eager to attend could find room. The large ground floor was filled with chairs, every one of which was occupied; the aisles were filled, and on the sidewalk was a throng of those who could not find room to get in. The front of the warerooms and the large windows were filled with large ferns and potted plants, presenting a beautiful sight. An excellent orchestra (Hulett's own) rendered very good music. Miss Sumbatoff's opening selection was a very difficult one to render correctly, even by the most celebrated artist, being one of Liszt's Rhapsodies. She did very well, however, and was well received. Her second selection was also heartily applauded. Altogether the concert was a great success. A check for a glass of ice-cream soda was presented to everyone in the audience, by the liberal Mr. Hulett.

Everyone at the concert was warm in praise of Mr. Hulett's enterprise, in admiration of his elegant stock of first-class goods. He was congratulated on the great success he has achieved through strict attention to business and honest methods. He came to town a stranger, but has established, against heavy odds, a flourishing trade, and fitted up a store that is a great credit to the town.

PLAINFIELD'S GREAT EXHIBIT.

Walter Scott's Big Press Works to Be Fitly Represented at the World's Fair.

The Walter Scott printing machine works have just completed and shipped to the World's Fair at Chicago eight presses that are as fine as were ever turned out of a machine shop, not only in style and finish, but in the working parts. The first in order is known as a Y No. 11½, a large web-perfecting press, capable of printing 90,000 papers an hour. This press was erected by August Barclow and his gang of machinists. The others are: A U. N. No. 14, web-perfecting, and an A No. 5 Lythe, erected by Ed. Wolverton; an N. T. S. No. 5 drum; G. N. No. 3, two-revolution, front delivery; H. F. No. 5, two-revolution, front delivery; G. H. No. 8, two-revolution; K. R. No. 7, two-revolution, double cylinder; all by William Gicak. The machines have been gotten up regardless of expense, and reflect great credit on Alonzo Wassman, the genial and capable superintendent of the Scott Press Works. The painting was under the direction of Frank Templin and his able assistant Webster Grant, a son of Plainfield's chief of police, and the workmanship will show up in great style against all the world.

These machines will be placed in position at the fair under the direction of Jacob Sperling, assisted by Wm. Patterson and Wm. Mesmilier, who are now in Chicago. Patterson will stay during the fair to attend to them.

Another feature at the fair will be Mr. Scott's office, which is made of natural woods with ground-glass windows made to slide. All in all, Plainfield will be justly proud of this grand exhibit.

WANTS TO BE INCORPORATED.

The Newark Conference Willing to Become Incorporated to Get $8,000.

Yesterday's meeting of the Newark Conference of the Methodist church, held in Centenary church, Jersey City, would have been barren of interest if Presiding Elder Hammond of the Paterson district had not moved that the Conference be incorporated. The motion brought forty or fifty objectors to their feet, and it was on the point of being defeated when Mr. Hammond explained that J. W. Gillies of Haverstraw, who died last year, had left $8,000 to the Conference, and that the money could not be received because the body was not incorporated. It had to be paid to the General Conference in Philadelphia, whence it was paid back in driblets to needy churches in the Newark Conference.

That settled it. The thought of that $8,000 that never got into the hands of the treasurer made every minister get up and vote solidly for incorporation. As it was questioned whether the Conference could come in under the general law, the Rev. Messrs. S. P. Hammond, C. S. Coile, Daniel Halloron, and J. J. Morrow, and the Rev. Dr. S. VanBenschoten were appointed a committee to obtain legislative sanction of its incorporation next winter.

The only man to raise an objection was the Rev. J. D. Haynes, who wanted to know whether the Conference could be sued for what it did not have.

"Of course", said Bishop Fitzgerald, "the only trouble would be in collecting".

EVERYONE WILL MISS HIM.

Good Father Cushing About to Leave for Denver.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The fair at St. Joseph's church was a complete success from its conception to its close, both financially and otherwise. It was patronized not only by its own members but strongly by others of different Christian persuasions. It owes its good attendance principally to the indefatigable efforts and thorough Christian constancy of the assistant priest, the Rev. Father Cushing, who left no stone unturned to do good in whatever sphere it may please his Divine Master to place him. But the parishioners of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's, among whom he labored but for a short period, will regret to learn that he has received a call to another field of doing good to his fellow-man. Some say it may be to be parish priest of Dunellen, but the writer is in a capacity to know on good and reliable grounds that this most universally respected clergyman is very soon to start for Washington, D. C., to study for a short time, preparatory to his taking charge as assistant Bishop of the Diocese of Denver, Colorado. He was elected as such by a Bull of Pope Leo XIII last December, it being the second time the supreme pontiff called him to that charge of so heavy a responsibility. He has the heartiest good wishes of both the rich and poor, but the latter were his chief delight to be among, to console and advise them in all their trials and troubles; and may God speed our beloved soggarth aroon!

REGRETFUL.

Last Week of the Circus.

More than 5,000 sightseers went to the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth last night, and found the huge Madison Square Garden amphitheatre a mighty enlivening spot. It was the beginning of the fifth and last week in town of the huge entertainment, and the two hours of performance were filled with diversion well calculated to cheer spirits that were depressed by the execrable April weather.

The programme was freshened by the introduction of a score of new acts. Miss Emily Loyal, the French bareback rider from the circus at Moscow, who was injured on the steamer on her trip to this country, made her debut. Miss Margaret Allen executed a new bareback feat of horsemanship, too, and the spectators were startled by some exceedingly clever balancing on a pyramid of chairs by M. Nicholas, and of balancing on a hollow tube supported on the shoulders of Mr. Nelson. M. Duray did a number of risky things on a single trapeze.

Of feats heretofore popular, there were repeated last night the thrilling mid-air tumbling and flights of the four Silbons, the graceful and skilled high hurdle leaping by the thoroughbred horses, Queensbury and Maud, the bareback riding of Wm. Showles, and the picturesque horsemanship of Harry Amphlett and young Rose Dockrill. The entertainment, as usual, closed with Kiralfy's resplendent pageant, "Columbus". As this is the last week, Plainfielders who wish to see the greatest show on earth in all its glory should make arrangements to visit the Garden without delay.

ERRATIC EQUINE FLIGHT.

Jim Fribble Can Catch a Yellow Dog, But He Can't Hold a Samptown Horse.

Mrs. Keenan of Samptown drove to Plainfield this morning to do some trading. Her horse, attached to a covered two-seat wagon, was left tied in front of Rockfellow's grocery on North avenue while she went into Swalm's to buy some paint for a henecoop. A train of cars made so much noise that the horse yanked itself loose and went prancing about in a circle. Finally it made a dash for THE PRESS office, and those inside the office began to squeeze behind the safe to escape the expected crash of plate-glass and the tramp of iron-shod hoofs. But stalwart dog-catcher Fribble was on hand. He sprang for the trailing reins, and held them long enough to swerve the horse away from the sidewalk. He couldn't hold him, however, without getting smashed between the careening wagon and a United States express truck, and let go just as the two vehicles collided. The light wagon was smashed, but the U. S. stood as firm as a rock. The runaway horse darted across the street and swung the wrecked wagon against a heavy coal wagon of Boice, Runyon & Co. at the entrance to the coal yard. By that time the rear of the farm wagon was over on its side, and acted as a drag on the horse, which was caught just below the railroad bridge on Park avenue. Mrs. Keenan's oil can, eggs, butter, codfish, molasses, and other sundries, marked the horse's erratic course. The frisky critter was uninjured.

They'll Sing for the Y's.

Prof. Genung, of Amherst, says: "A college song is like nothing else in the world. * * * * * Under all the nonsense there is, in a true college song, a real lyrical skill, and the nearer it comes to seeming to be extemporaneous, the more truly it has crystallized in melody the emotions that vitalize our student days". Therefore you cannot afford to miss hearing the Rutgers College Glee club in All Souls' church, April 27. It will renew your youth.

Diphtheria.

THE MORAL CRUSADE.

A VETERAN PLAINFIELD NEWSPAPER MAN DISSECTS IT.

While Sympathizing with Their Motives, He Predicts Failure for the Anti-Saloon Men's Plans—Reasons Why the License-Bar System Should Not Be Abolished—Fortunate Table-Drinkers Ought Not to Interfere with the Private Rights of Less Favored Saloon-Consumers.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Those well-meaning reformers who are striving to promote a new anti-saloon league will of course be glad to have the project fully discussed. If it may not be examined from a broad standpoint, there is only one course left; that is, to condemn it offhand, a result which I am sure its advocates do not desire. The value of the scheme at this stage can be estimated only by its power to withstand criticism. No apology, therefore, is due if I venture to take the initiative in that direction.

Allow me to say at the outset that all my sympathies are and always have been with the cause of temperance and of a higher social development; if, therefore, I take exception to the alleged wisdom of this movement, it is not because I do not heartily approve of the motive which prompts it. As I understand it, the objective point of the league will be the ultimate closing of all saloons and the abolition of license to sell liquor. If I am right, I maintain that the plan is unjust, unnecessary, and certain to be futile; also that the energy which would put it in operation is misdirected and could be made more effectual by being differently applied.

It is said that the projectors of the crusade will restrict membership of the league to solid and substantial citizens only, who believe in morality, on the theory that such citizens alone should rule. Pity it is, then, that such people do not do their whole duty at the primaries, for their legislation might be more wise and legislators less corrupt. But that by the way. We are further told that these gentlemen believe in the use of liquors at home, and object only to their use in barrooms. Just so. They belong to a fortunate class which can afford to have its liquor at home and would not be affected by the league. But what about the masses who have not the same good luck? Are they to be deprived of their rights because they can exercise them only in another way? Let us not, I say, dishonor the high incentives of both morality and religion by using these as a cloak under which to initiate a system of injustice against the less favored of our neighbors.

It is not necessary to close saloons; nor is it expedient. The man who takes his beer or wine in moderation is the best exponent of temperance. He at least is practical. They who drink to excess are not to be cured by abolishing the license system. That end might, however, be possible if we would give them other things on which to rest their attention, and which would arouse their interest. Duty as a special correspondent once called me to a town in New England where local option prevailed. During part of my term of residence no licenses were granted, and drunkenness was a marked feature of the place. Families combined to lay in a stock of whiskey during the week, and on Saturday evening all got together, men and women alike, in the home of one of their number, and drank till the supply was exhausted. Sundays were characterized by the most shameless orgies, which, being carried on in private homes, were beyond the cognizance of the authorities, and Monday saw a majority of the operatives, for it was a manufacturing town, unfit for work. The system was changed while I was there, and with the granting of licenses those private co-operations ceased, drinking was open and public, less money was wasted, women were not involved, the police were able to exercise control, the town got its fees, and even strong prohibition advocates were heard to acknowledge that their theory had failed.

We may regulate the liquor traffic; by indirect means we can to a great extent limit it; but we can no more destroy the desire for stimulants than we can make men religious by forcing them into the churches. The taste for fermented drink is universal. I know of but one tribe of aboriginal man, and I write with some experience, which does not cultivate it, and that exception is only an incident of necessity. Prohibition does not prohibit. It is, however, a fact which cannot be too strongly accentuated that where the use of liquor has been forcibly prevented the consumption of opium and morphine has been so largely increased that it becomes a question whether the opium habit is not destined to stamp its impress upon a future generation over a large portion of our country.

I do not know as much as the name of any one of the gentlemen interested in the proposed league, but I have the utmost respect for their good intentions. I tell them nevertheless that their scheme is not practical. It will not check intemperance, but it will be a hardship and inconvenience to many equally well-meaning men; it will drive away from our town many good people who disbelieve in [illegible] and who are prone to resist interference with private right as being averse to the spirit of an age of freedom. Give the people public resorts where at all seasons they may find recreation, social intercourse, [illegible] and physical improvement free from any sectarian or theological atmosphere; deprive the saloon of its character as the only social and political assembly chamber; establish halls where public discussions may be held under liberal authority; encourage the taste for useful amusement; arouse a spirit of healthy rivalry in wholesome pursuits; and then people may safely be trusted to live as they please without much risk of overstepping the bounds of moderation and reason. All this can be done.

THE MARTINS ARE HERE.

They Have Again Licked the Sparrows in the Cortell Bird-House, Earlier Than Ever Before, and Spring is Finally Begun.

A surer sign of spring than hyacinths or green peas or Rockaway clams is the coming of the martins in the bird-house on Front street, opposite Music Hall. These little birds have reappeared each spring in Plainfield, and records have been kept of their coming for the past six years by ex-judge W. M. Stillman, whose offices are directly opposite the bird-house. They arrived this year sooner than ever before, as the first of the flock came on Sunday, the 9th. The sparrows occupy the bird-house all winter, and the coming of the martins is a signal for a battle royal between the contestants for the house. It is simply a matter of a few days, however, as the newcomers are determined fighters and invariably oust the sparrows sooner or later. Now that the martins have come, the town tradesmen can begin to lay in their spring stock with the certainty that the corresponding customer will appear desirous of bargains. The martins are small-bodied, long-winged birds, not unlike a swallow, and are carefully cared for by the kind-hearted merchants in the vicinity of their home. In five years past the martins never came later than April 21, nor earlier than April 12.

NEW JERSEY ELECTIONS.

The Democrats Win All Over Except in Rahway.

The charter elections throughout New Jersey on Tuesday, resulted generally in victories for the Democrats. They made gains everywhere, and won the majorities in Trenton, Paterson, Hoboken, Passaic, New Brunswick and Bayonne. In Essex the Democrats carry Newark by a majority of over 5,000. The Republicans elect their aldermen-at-large in Jersey City. In Elizabeth a very light vote was polled. The Democrats won in most of the wards. The board of aldermen will stand: Democrats, 8; Republicans, 6. But in Rahway, Oh, my! The Republicans swept the deck, and elected their whole ticket by over 300 majority. The Democrats elected just one councilman. The next board of freeholders of Union county will stand: Democrats, 7; Republicans, 8.

Your Painter

has often wasted time and material in trying to obtain a shade of color, and has even resorted to the use of ready mixed paints, the ingredients of which he knew nothing, because of the difficulty in making a shade of color with white lead. This waste can be avoided by the use of National Lead Company's

Pure White Lead Tinting Colors

These tints are a combination of perfectly pure colors, put up in small cans, and prepared so that one pound will tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead to the shade shown on the can. By this means you will have the best paint in the world, because made of the best materials—and pure colors. Insist on having one of the brands of white lead that are standard, manufactured by the "Old Dutch" process, and known to be strictly pure:

Strictly Pure White Lead

"Atlantic" "Bradley"
"Brooklyn" "Jewett"
"Ulster"

These brands of Strictly Pure White Lead and National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors are for sale by the most reliable dealers in paints everywhere. If you are going to paint, it will pay you to send to us for a book containing information that may save you many a dollar; it will only cost you a postal card.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—Two big are lights are to be put in operation at the North avenue station—one at each end of the building.

—The Old Folks' concert that was so well received in Vincent chapel last week will probably be repeated at an early date.

—Everyone was delighted with "Robin Hood" Saturday night. It was one of the largest and best houses Music Hall has had this season.

—A farmer's wagon had a wheel wrecked by a runaway accident at Front and Somerset streets Saturday night. No other damage was done.

—Vanderbeek & Battels, the reliable Park avenue music dealers, have placed one of their best upright pianos in the parlor of the Washington Park club-house.

—George Franze (better known as Fritz) is suffering from a bad felon in the palm of one of his hands. It is the result of a bruise.

—Six crates of carrier pigeons were released at Plainfield Monday for various fanciers of the American Homing Federation. Their flight was witnessed with interest by a large number of people. They circled in a thick cloud over the city for several minutes before getting their bearings.

BASE-BALL CHATTER.

All kranks will be glad that McIndoe is coming back to Plainfield. He is in better form than ever, and can be relied on for great work.

Leo Smith, who last year was with Providence, star short-stop of the Eastern league, will play short for Plainfield. He is a good steady man, headier than Bonner, and a better hitter. So Bonner, who goes to Paterson, won't be missed.

Edwin Bomer, who is highly recommended by Burke of the New Yorks and by Billy Keeler, will cover second or third for Plainfield. He is a quiet, gentlemanly fellow, of Daley's stripe.

Chic Hofford will meet to-morrow with the Plainfield managers, to confer about coming back to Plainfield.

Jones will play on first in his usual clever style.

Harry Fritz, catcher last year for the Ridgewoods, and a heavy hitter, will help pull down flies in the Crescents' outfield.

The Plainfield managers are considering three or four good men for pitcher.

The Veterans to Teach the Tyros.

The Plainfield cyclists of the gentler sex, being convinced that a number of women desire instruction in cycling, are making arrangements to form classes for private lessons. Anyone wishing such instruction will please communicate, at once, with Mrs. D. W. Pond, 211 West Seventh street, or Miss Lillian E. Fritts, 81 Park avenue.

JOHN TAYLOR JOHNSTON'S WILL.

It Disposes of Property Worth a Million and a Half.

The will of John Taylor Johnston, which disposes of $1,500,000, half in realty and half in personalty, was Wednesday filed for probate. It was executed on Dec. 21, 1889, and names as executors John Herbert Johnston, his son, and his sons-in-law Henry E. Coe and Robert W. de Forest.

He bequeaths $10,000 to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which he was the first president, and $10,000 to the University of the City of New York, of which he was a graduate. He gives $1,000 each to the following grandchildren: Johnston, Henry L., Ethel, and Frances Emily de Forest, children of his daughter Emily J. de Forest; and to Emily and Rosalie Coe, children of his daughter Eva Johnston Coe. The two little Tuesdays of whom The Press has told exclusively, are not likely, under the circumstances, to file any objections for not being mentioned in the will. Deceased gives his son, John Herbert Johnston, the books in his library at his late residence, 8 Fifth avenue.

The residue of his estate is to be divided in four equal parts and given to his four children, John Herbert Johnston of 20 Washington square; Emily J. de Forest, 7 Washington square; Frances Johnston Mali, 8 Fifth avenue, and Eva Johnston Coe, 5 East Tenth street. The Plainfield property is considered one-fourth.

And Lore Bragdon Is Their Star.

The Rutgers College Glee club, which is to give a concert April 27, for the benefit of the Y. W. C. T. U., though well-known throughout the United States, cannot be heard too many times. There is always something new and striking in their programme, and one always feel well paid for the slight expense incurred in hearing them. The members are well-known socially in Plainfield, especially the great and only Knickerbocker Bragdon, their leader.

"The Count" to Be Sold Out.

Sheriff W. H. Hicks advertises that on Wednesday, May 10, at 2 p. m., he will sell at public auction at the court-house in Elizabeth two tracts of land in Plainfield's outskirts owned by John K. Van Ness.

The first tract is 24½ acres adjoining Franklin Wiley's land, formerly owned by Samuel C. M. Allen and wife, and sold by them to Van Ness Dec. 27, 1890.

The second tract is of 10 acres, adjoining Mulford Cole's, and sold to Van Ness by Robert L. Harrison April 20, 1891.

The Plainfield Railway and the Somerset Bridge.

Before the Union county board of freeholders, Thursday, Mr. Hubbard of this city offered a resolution to the effect that the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway company to lay a side track over the Somerset bridge at Plainfield be granted. After some debate the resolution was withdrawn, and, on motion of Mr. Hubbard, a committee of five, together with county attorney W. K. McClure and county engineer F. A. Dunham, was appointed to confer with the Somerset board in regard to the matter, and report back at the next meeting of the board. The following members were appointed to serve on the committee: Freeholders Hubbard, Vanderbeek, Hunt, Moore and Kyte.

HALF AND HALF.

Three Committees Have a Republican Majority, and Three Democratic.

Mayor Saunders of the borough Monday appointed the following standing committees for the various departments of work under the new council:

Streets and Public Health—G. H. Neal, H. E. Needham, J. H. Howell.

Laws, Ordinances and Elections—L. A. Hummer, G. F. Edwards, M. L. Connolly.

Fire, Water and Lamps—M. L. Connolly, L. A. Hummer, G. H. Neal.

Auditing and Finance—H. E. Needham, G. H. Neal, G. F. Edwards.

Licenses and Marshals—J. H. Howell, L. A. Hummer, M. L. Connolly.

Printing and Stationery—G. F. Edwards, H. E. Needham, J. H. Howell.

Madame Gettl's New Parlors.

Madame E. Gettl has removed her dressmaking establishment to 27 East Fifth street, which has been entirely renovated and made a most convenient, private, and comfortable place for her patrons.

PERSONALIA.

Mrs. D. W. Pond has gone to Boston.

Miss Mamie Frenish has returned from Philadelphia.

Everyone will be glad to learn that Dr. Taylor's son is improving.

Misses Lilie and Lizzie Livesey are home from Lumberville, Pa.

That charming young schoolma'am, Miss Scudder, is back from Elmira.

Eugene A. Moore of East Fifth street is confined to the house with the grip.

William Lord of Netherwood registered in the New York Herald's Paris office, Saturday.

Mrs. J. W. Jackson and Mrs. Clifton Wharton left town to-day for a sojourn at Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. William Swaim, of 157 West Front street, are both ill with catarrhal grip.

A young daughter of the late J. E. Yose is very ill of diphtheria. The house is quarantined.

Mr. Shattle, near the Pond Tool Works, who has been ill of scarlet fever has had a relapse, and is seriously ill again.

Peter Schultz has taken the place of the late Edward Winter in the firm of C. Schepflin & Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sandford are home again from two weeks in Washington and Virginia.

Mayor W. L. Saunders came back from an important business trip to Philadelphia, yesterday.

Asbury Park has lost George Mahon and family. They are back in Plainfield, on Union avenue.

Robert Rushmore and family are back for the summer at 22 Grant avenue, from their winter home, 100 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn.

A. V. D. Honeyman returned Monday from a visit to Chicago, where he has been arranging for his World's Fair excursion.

Oliver B. Leonard has declined the election to the secretaryship of the Plainfield Citizens' league against race-track legislation.

Henry Thomas, of 18 Manning avenue, the faithful old colored gardener for many borough people, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Wm. Swaim is growing weaker with his illness, and as he is 86 years old it is feared he cannot recover. Mrs. Swaim is a little improved.

Miss Annie J. Sweeney was married Wednesday to Wm. T. Newman. Both are of the borough. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated.

A host of friends will mourn the untimely death of J. E. Yose, of Gazelle Engine company, who died after a brief illness of pneumonia.

Freeman Shotwell, father of ex-collector Wm. H. Shotwell of the borough, is very ill at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Garretson, Central avenue.

Miss Nellie Rockafellow, daughter of constable Rockafellow of West Second street, is very ill with pleuro-pneumonia. Dr. Tomlinson is in attendance.

The Monroe Avenue chapel of the M. E. church has made an engagement with the Rev. Herbert Munson of Drew Theological Seminary, for the coming year.

David Bowden of this city departed Monday for his future home at Olean, N. Y., where he will be engaged in street paving work.

Dr. Taylor's son is recovering rapidly of his mild attack of diphtheria, under Dr. Lowrie's excellent care and his own mother's faithful nursing.

Nellie, oldest daughter of George W. Rockafellow, is very ill with pleuro-pneumonia, at 68 West Second street. There is little hope of her recovery, though two skillful physicians are in attendance.

F. W. Runyon, wife and mother, left town Monday for Statesville, N. C., to be gone a month for Mr. Runyon's health. W. S. Angleman has charge of the Courier in his absence.

A Mr. Smith of Brooklyn has leased Messrs. Rice Bros' new house, corner of Emily and Duer streets, and will remove his family into it as soon as it is completed, which will be about May 1.

Two old citizens of the borough departed this life Saturday—Henry A. Weiss, of 90 Grandview avenue, age 87, and Joseph B. Rogers, of 109 Grandview avenue, age 70.

Among the graceful young women admired by all at the swell Jeffersonian club reception in Newark Wednesday night, were Miss Bertie Dunn and her guest Miss Fannie Rafferty of Plainfield.

J. P. Laire entertained a party of friends Saturday and Sunday at his house on East Fifth street. Among them were Mrs. Cooper and his brother, W. E. Laire of Belvidere, and Fred Schwartz of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs Henry Wheeler of Poughkeepsie spent Saturday and Sunday with George W. F. Randolph of West Front street, where Samuel J. Moore and father, of Poughkeepsie, and the Misses Bradshaw, were also guests during Sunday.

The funeral of John E. Yose Sunday afternoon was largely attended. Gazelle Engine company was present in a body, and marched all the way to the grave. There was a great number of carriages. Owing to contagious disease at the house, services were held only at the grave, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy officiating.

Margaret A. Brittin, the estimable wife of Bennett Brittin, died Friday at Evona, in her seventy-third year. She was widely known in this section, especially at Scotch Plains, where her husband so long kept the popular hotel now Lowe's. Mrs. Brittin was a woman of many admirable qualities, and will be greatly missed. She was for years a valued contributor to The Constitutionalist.

BABCOCK—LEWIS.

The wedding of Miss Eugenie L. Lewis to George H. Babcock, took place yesterday at Westerly, R. I.

GETTING BETTER OF THEIR TROUBLES.

I. D. TenEyck, now of Madison, Morris county, father-in-law of Wallace V. Miller of Hotel Granada, was in Plainfield yesterday, and reports that his wife is gradually recovering from her serious injury, a broken ankle, which occurred in Plainfield last winter. Mr. TenEyck, who is also crippled by a bruised knee, is daily improving from his misfortune.

MILLIKEN—PLUMMER.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Alice Plummer, daughter of John F. Plummer, formerly of Netherwood, to Charles S. Milliken of Tacoma, Washington. The marriage will take place on the 25th of this month at the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, at 4 in the afternoon, and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride at which only only relatives and intimate friends will be present.

A PLAINFIELD SCION HONORED.

The president of Uruguay has appointed Don Prudencio de Murguiondo of Baltimore and Washington, to be president of the Uruguayan Commission to the World's Exposition, at Chicago. Mr. Murguiondo is the son of Mrs. Murguiondo and brother-in-law of T. S. Hunn, both of this city. Besides this appointment, Mr. Murguiondo is Consul General of Uruguay at Washington.

HER GOOD MISTRESS WILL BURY HER.

Hildah Nelson, a servant girl who lived with Mrs. F. H. Willis of LaGrande avenue, was taken ill Saturday and removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where in spite of every effort she died during the night. The cause of her death was acute Bright's disease, resultant of the grip. She was a Swede, and the only relative in this country is a sister who lives at Cold Springs, N. Y. Mrs. Willis will give the girl a funeral, and the services will take place as soon as her sister arrives in Plainfield.

MOORE—BRADSHAW.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Bradshaw of this city was married at high noon to-day to Samuel J. Moore of Poughkeepsie, by the Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut. The bride, the beautiful niece of chief engineer T. O. Doane, was attired in a becoming traveling gown of gray broadcloth. There was a vast profusion of choice gifts. After their wedding trip to Albany, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, the bride and groom will reside in their new home, now building for them, at Poughkeepsie-on-the-Hudson. The groom is now one of Poughkeepsie's most honored merchants, and for some time was an esteemed resident of this city.

DOVE GERMAN AT THE GINNA HOME.

A dove german was given Monday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Broadway and Kensington avenue. It was a subscription affair, and was participated in by a number of the young ladies of Plainfield's 150, most of them members of the Sub Rosa club. Mrs. Daniel Ginna chaperoned the party, and dancing was indulged in until late in the afternoon. This form of amusement, from which the men are excluded, is becoming quite popular in the summer, when members of the sterner sex are scarce; but a dance for girls only at this season is unique even in Plainfield.

THE DIVINE AFFLATUS STRIKES A BOROUGHITE.

William Cushing Bamburgh, of 26 Jackson avenue, varies the monotony of the insurance man's life by indulging in flights of poetic fancy. These columns have previously noticed the efforts of Mr. Bamburgh at versifying, and now he announces that he is about to issue a new volume entitled "The Echo and the Poet, and Other Poems". The book will appear about April 25. There's no use for the public to rush after copies, for only a limited edition will be printed. Mr. Bamburgh is his own publisher, and as he does n't believe in a good thing being made too common he permits only private circulation of his works.

COULD N'T GIVE THE PLAINFIELD DOCTORS POINTS.

Three distinguished physicians from Plainfield, Drs. William H. Murray, George W. Endicott and Cornelius Paul, were eminent guests at the home of Dr. Charles J. Kipp, 534 Broad street, Newark, Saturday evening. The occasion was a large reception in honor of Dr. Hans Virchow, professor of histology in the University of Berlin, and representative of the German Minister of Education at the World's Fair. The rooms were handsomely decorated, and an elaborate collation was served. The guests numbered 200, and all were physicians, with the exception of Theodore Runyon, the newly-appointed Minister to Germany. It was a brilliant gathering, a rare assemblage of science scholars, and among them all Plainfield's representation was unsurpassed.

OBITUARY.

AGNES RODMAN'S FUNERAL.

Never before at any funeral in Plainfield was there a more marked unity of sorrow than at the grave of Miss Agnes Rodman, yesterday. The body of the dead girl was brought to Plainfield Saturday, and held at the Runyon undertaking parlors till the funeral, which was attended by an extraordinarily large number of people. The body rested in a white casket, which was literally buried in roses. The wardens of Grace church served as pall-bearers. The Rev. T. Logan Murphy officiated, conducting the services at the grave in Hillside cemetery. A sweetly solemn hymn, "God moves in a mysterious way", especially appropriate to the sad event, was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Freeman, Miss Bessie Morgan and W. B. Cook. There was a weight of affliction on every heart as the clods of earth shut the rose-strewn casket from mortal sight forever.

She Beat All the Men for Ten Years Back.

The News of Springfield, Ill., speaking of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, president of the W. C. T. U. of Michigan, who will speak on "The Home against the Saloon", in the Plainfield Congregational church, April 18, says:

"We do not hesitate to say that for literary style, rhetorical finish, elegant antithesis and logical grip, the speech of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop made at the First Congregational church, last evening, was a masterpiece. We doubt if a speech so well worth hearing has been made in Springfield by a man in ten years."

Plainfield Trade Encouraging.

The beautiful city of Plainfield can no longer be termed slow, as a visit to its enterprising stores will prove. Business everywhere is booming. Edsall, the leading dry-goods man in town, stated recently to a reporter that never before at this season of the year has his house done such a large trade as it is now enjoying. He says the people seem to appreciate more and more each year the advantages of buying goods at home, especially when they can do just as well. His salespeople are constantly busy selling new fresh goods that are sure to give the utmost satisfaction and thereby influence the purchaser back to his establishment when in need of goods again.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ORGANIZES.

John Vetterlein Made Clerk, and Benj. E. Garin Street Commissioner—A Fixed Salary for the Borough Marshal.

Mayor Saunders swore into office last night the new councilmen, Joseph H. Howell and George F. Edwards, and the council organized for business.

John Vetterlein was made borough clerk without opposition, at a salary of $250.

Charles A. Reed was unanimously reappointed corporation counsel, his salary being $250.

Benjamin E. Garin was elected street commissioner by the strict party vote of 4 to 3. Messrs. Edwards, Hummer and Needham voted for the retention of Horace W. Stout.

William N. Pangborn was continued in office as borough marshal, without a dissenting voice, at an annual salary of $720, he to transfer to the borough all fees to which he might be entitled under the old system.

The matter of appointing a borough magistrate was left to the mayor, whose personal selection such official is.

A long list of proposed special marshals was referred to the committee on fire, water and lamps.

The matter of finding out whether the mayor and council had the right to appoint a borough assessor was given into the mayor's charge, he to get legal opinion from corporation counsel Reed and Attorney-General Stockton.

The committee on licenses was directed to report at the next meeting on the proposition to tax dogs $2 each.

A large number of urgent petitions for streets and other public improvements were referred to the appropriate committees for investigation.

A communication from Warren Engine company recommending the reappointment of George H. Fairchild as chief of the department, was received and filed. Mr. Fairchild continues as chief till a successor is appointed.

$25 was appropriated for the joint use of Winfield Scott and Major Anderson posts in their Memorial Day observance.

George Schleroth was made an exempt fireman.

Andrew Love was unanimously confirmed as member of the borough board of health, to fill the unexpired term of T. Logan Murphy, resigned.

On invitation, Plainfield's esteemed mayor, Alexander Gilbert, made an instructive speech telling of the sewerage investigations of the Plainfield commission, and advocating the intermittent filtration system. A vote of thanks was heartily given him.

The council will meet again April 21.

The Way of the Bad Man.

There used to be sold in this town a sheet called the Phillipsburg Telegram, the proprietor of which is fast coming to the end of his rope. He was eminent as a traducer of character, and his end should be a terrible warning to those now in this city who malign their superiors. The Easton Express says:

"B. D. L. Stroope, who was editor of the now defunct New Jersey Telegram, was sent to prison for 20 days this morning by Mayor Field. He was charged with drunkenness and intent to commit suicide. When Stroope was arrested last evening the officers found a bottle of laudanum in his possession. He had intimated to several persons that he intended taking his life."

THE KATIES DID IT.

They Get the Costly Watches at St. Joseph's Fair.

St. Joseph's church fair, which was begun last Monday in the Saenger and Turner Hall, and continued all the week, was brought to a close Saturday night. If an overcrowded hall is a sign of success, the fair, judging from the crowd of Saturday night, must have been great triumph. There was a large display of articles, many of them costly and beautiful, all of which were disposed of. The list of successful competitors for articles is a long one—too long for publication. The winning contestants for the more valuable articles, however, were: Miss Katie Cullen, a gold watch; Miss Katie McDonough, another gold watch; Miss Lizzie Devver, diamond ring; Miss Kate Mahoney, a parlor suit.

A Fascinating Method of Education.

The great Auditorium of Carnegie Music Hall (Seventh avenue and Fifty-seventh street) was crowded Wednesday night, the usually large audience being increased by the presence of more than a thousand teachers from the public schools of this city, who took advantage of the special rates of admission offered to them by the directors of the "Urania" theatre through the liberality of the management of Music Hall. Garrett P. Serviss in his opening address made some special remarks to the teachers, explaining the nature and aims of the "Urania" enterprise, and stating the desire of Mr. Carnegie and his associates to secure the co-operation of all those who are engaged in the practical work of education. He explained that the object of the "Urania" lectures and exhibition is two-fold: First, to furnish a very high order of entertainment, or of intellectual recreation, such as people of refined and cultivated tastes would desire, and secondly to serve the cause of popular education. He said that there never had been such a combination of the magical powers of electricity with the ingenuity of stage craft as had been effected for the purpose of displaying the attractions and wonders of science—of science regarded as the twin sister of art. Astronomy, geology, and the wonders of the face of the earth, were the subjects thus far treated, but this was only the beginning of the development of this novel method of popularising science. In order that no teacher in the public schools should be uninformed as to the character of the new enterprise, "Urania", in popular education, it had been arranged that during the remainder of this season all teachers could, upon application, obtain tickets of admission at special rates; and a similar provision had been made for the benefit of children in the public schools to whom the ordinary prices of admission might be a bar to their enjoyment of these novel and splendid spectacles of science.

Would Want Pretty Typewriters Next.

Mr. Vanderbeek, as chairman of the committee on publication, informed the Union county board of freeholders Thursday, that he had been petitioned by the county clerk and surrogate to furnish them with typewriters, and that he did not know what to say regarding the question.

Mr. Moore said that if the county clerk, surrogate or any other official serving the county was in need of a typewriter he should buy and pay for it himself. The next thing they would be after would be for the county to hire someone to manipulate the machines. The others coincided with this view.

He's a Full-Fledged Pharmacist.

Hamley Barker, the pharmacist who has opened a first-class drug store at the corner of West Front and Grove streets, comes to Plainfield from Brooklyn particularly well recommended by residents of that city. Mr. Barker is a graduate of the English School of Pharmacy, and is a gentleman in every sense of the word. Those who live in that part of the city [illegible] wish to deal with a careful and [illegible] pharmacist, and those who want pure drugs and medicines should give him a [illegible].

LET THE MAYOR ACT!

And Patriotic Citizens, Here's Your Chance to Recover Plainfield from the Cesspool Reputation It Is Getting Abroad.

The good sense, and intelligence, and knowledge of good methods, of the people of Plainfield, may certainly be trusted to adopt a system that will turn from the town epidemics of infectious diseases, thereby adding to the common prosperity and security. This goes without the saying, just as does the fact that Plainfield is not a backwoods town, not in any sense retrogressive or lacking in proper enterprise.

Sewerage may therefore be said to be in sight, and the real question seems to be, Shall it be this or next year?

There is no good reason why the short-route system adopted by Council should not be completed this year. There is no reason, so far as work in the earth is concerned, why at Christmas time we should not be enabled to proclaim a clean city, no longer dependent upon the unutterable cesspools. But the work in the trenches cannot begin until certain necessary steps are taken, and there the trouble at present comes in.

After the consents of three-fifths of the taxpayers are obtained, an ordinance must be adopted, and the contract let. A month will be consumed in carrying an ordinance to passage. As much more time will be consumed in advertising for bids, and in concluding a contract. Thus, if no time be otherwise expended, May and nearly all of June will pass by before a shovel of dirt can be thrown out. At the best, much of the working season of the year will be consumed by preliminary proceedings.

We appeal in this emergency to the sewer commission to come once more to the front; to meet and apportion the city into fifty districts; to put a patriotic citizen in charge of each one of the fifty districts, furnishing him with a list of the taxable property in his district. In that way the consents can be obtained in two days, if they can be obtained at all. In that way the work may be progressed so that Christmas day will see it completed.

Will not mayor Gilbert call together the commission, and start the saving work?

What our excellent mayor and the commission, backed as they are by public sentiment, cannot accomplish, no one else need undertake; and The Press, speaking for the people, calls upon them to come vigorously to the front, and save to the work in hand an entire working season.

DARK DAYS DEFEATED THEM.

Under the Circumstances, the Crescents Made a Creditable Record in the Tournament.

(Elizabeth Journal.)

When the crescents entered the Journal Bowling league last fall they had bright prospects of bowling a winning series, but internal trouble in their athletic club caused their bowlers to lose interest in the contest. During the time when the club's future looked black and every game the boys rolled they expected would be their last, captain Davis experienced great difficulty in persuading members to meet the scheduled dates, but by dint of ceaseless work he succeeded in keeping the name of the Crescents' bowlers unsullied, and finished the season with a record which, under the circumstances, is a remarkably good one. Under other circumstances it is probable the Crescent league team would have made a much higher record.

Altogether the Crescents rolled fifteen games and made a total of 22,021 pins; an average of 1,468.1. Their highest game, 1,581, was rolled at home, and their lowest, 1,378, they made on the Rahway alleys.

Seven of their games were rolled at home with an average of 1,490.4, and they won four of them; away from home of the eight games rolled they won one and made an average of 1,448.6.

Their work was done by nine men, while during the season fifteen substitutes rolled at different times.

Teel captured individual honors. He rolled ten games with an average of 154.2. Then follows VanEmburgh, 10 games, 153.2; Captain Davis, 14 games, 151.0; Wood, 14 games, 150.1; VanAlstyne, 14 games, 149.6; Barnes, 6 games, 149.1; VanWinkle, 15 games, 148.5; Vail, 14 games, 147.9; Doane, 11 games, 147.4; Buckle, 7 games, 144.0, and Petrie, 13 games, 136.9. The others rolled but one, two or three games each.

Mighty Men in the First Presbyterian Church.

"The Mighty Men of David and of David's Greater Son" will be treated by the Rev. C. R. Herring in the following series of Sunday evening sermons:

April 16—Abishai. Nothing venture nothing have.
April 23—Shammah. One man's courage.
April 30—Ittai. Follow thou me.

The Unfeeling Courier Afraid He Would Get Well.

Yesterday's Courier contained the following statement, which is not only full of falsehood, but malicious in its error:

"The son of Dr. J. P. Taylor, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, who has been confined to the house with an attack of scarlet fever, is much worse and fears are entertained for his recovery."

THAT ABSURD "JOURNALIST".

He's Howling Against a Great Public Improvement.

In an article headed "The Trolley Extension", the Somerset street sheet states that the rails being used in laying the borough railway tracks on Somerset street are not those selected and approved by the Mayor and council. Mr. Passmore, superintendent of the road, said to a Press reporter this morning that the story was entirely false. "The rails" —said Mr. Passmore—"are exactly the same as the sample shown to the council and approved by them. They are a lighter rail than those on Front street, but they are according to contract in every respect. Whichever one of the family that runs the News is accountable for the howl as published last night, he would do well to come down from the office and get some information about the street railway by looking out of the window at the rails going by on trucks. The 'great number of injunctions' referred to in the News were evidently evolved from the fact that the family needed news for the paper. The article says 'the company is rich enough to give a decent road but may not do so if the people accept anything offered.' The people may trust the street committee to see that the company does just right."

Mr. Passmore also states that there will be no switch near Front street as charged, and that the only one on the extension will be midway between the Johnston drive and Front street, and that is simply to allow cars to pass. There will be no waiting at the end of the line longer than to permit passengers to step from one car to another. In [illegible]. The committees of the boards of freeholders of Somerset and Union counties met yesterday and reported favorably on laying tracks over the Somerset bridge. Work was not begun laying tracks until this morning, instead of yesterday as stated. The only opposition known is that of F. M. French against joining the borough and city tracks.

FANWOOD'S FRIVOLOUS 400.

They Celebrate the Passing of Lent by a Jolly Dance.

The North avenue assembly at the Fanwood club-house last evening was one of the most brilliant of all the Thursday meetings of the elite. This being the first after the Lenten season, was called the Easter dance and quite properly was it named and right royally carried out.

The gentlemen were in the regulation full dress, and the costumes of the ladies would require a Worth or a Redfern to describe. Mrs. Gibbs was pronounced the most charmingly attired, and as one of the promoters aided largely in making the assembly a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Anderson, of Brooklyn, who formerly lived at Fanwood, gratified their friends by their attendance and were heartily greeted. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Pentz, Mr. and Mrs. Leavy, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Wilstin, Wm. E. Gibbs, Edward Urner, and John P. Stevens, of Fanwood; Messrs. Pike, Stone, Collier, Vredenburgh, P. C. Pentz, and Gilbert, and the Misses VanPelt, the Misses Pentz and Miss Suydam of New York; Miss Vredenburgh of Freehold, Miss Ricketts of Elizabeth, the Misses Hagan of Plainfield, Miss Stevens of Uxbridge, and Miss Eloise Stettinius Urner of Cincinnati.

The music, by Boyle of Brooklyn, was finely rendered, and dancing continued until 1:30 a. m., with an intermission at 1 for supper, served by the ever-popular Stephenson, of Plainfield.

Excursion Tickets to the World's Fair via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company announces that the trunk line passenger committee has authorized the railroad companies to sell excursion tickets to Chicago on account of the World's Columbian exposition on a basis of $40 from New York by fast express trains, and $32 by express trains scheduled to make the run in thirty-five hours or more. Proportionate rates will prevail from all stations in trunk line territory. The round-trip rate from Philadelphia will be $38.50 by fast trains, and $30.20 by the thirty-five-hour trains, starting from New York. From Washington and Baltimore the rate will be $34.50 by fast express trains, and $27.40 by slow trains.

These tickets will not admit of a stop-off en route, and can be used for a continuous passage only. The tickets will be on sale from April 15 to Oct. 30 inclusive, and will be valid for return trip until Nov. 15, 1893.

All the lines leading to Chicago will sell tickets good for passage going by one route and returning by another, so that a person may go out by the Pennsylvania railroad, and, if he wills, return by the New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Erie, or any other trunk line, or go out by any other line, and return by the Pennsylvania.

John B. Scott.

John B. Scott, formerly of Plainfield, a retired dry goods merchant, sixty-one years old, died at his home, 286 West Twenty-fourth street, New York, Thursday, afternoon, from pneumonia. He leaves a widow and six children. His only other near relatives are three sisters, Miss Margaret J. Scott and Miss Charlotte E. Scott of New York city, and Mrs. G. B. Douglass, of Brooklyn. The arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but it is probable that the service will be held on Sunday. The burial will be at Greenwood.

Mr. Scott was born at 108 Hudson street, New York city, January 14, 1832. His father, Wm. Scott, who came to this country from England in 1812, was a member of the well-known dry goods firm of Scott & Leggat, which did business in Hudson street many years. John B. Scott, when only a young man, formed a partnership in the dry goods business with John B. Hall in Park Row. The firm prospered, but was dissolved in 1874. Mr. Scott then entered the banking house of J. & J. Stuart, No. 33 Nassau street, as cashier, and he held this place until January 1, this year, when he gave it up, owing to the retirement of Robert W. Stuart, the only surviving member of the firm. Mr. Scott was well known to the older residents of the city and had many friends in financial and business circles. He was a member of the Thirty-fourth Street Reformed church and of the St. Andrew's society. His house was filled with rare oil paintings, and his judgment was often sought by purchasers of works of art. Mr. Scott was very popular with many people in Plainfield, where he lived for years.

The Courier grew yesterday by the addition of a column to each page. The Press congratulates its younger sister, and trusts that she may become fully as prosperous as her big brother. The Press is still the largest daily, and The Constitutionalist the largest weekly, in Plainfield.

STAMP THEM OUT!

These Cesspools, Breeders of Disease, Must Go!

Two facts quite well known to people in the heart of this city need not be kept out of sight, namely: we have been on the verge of one infectious disease in epidemic form, and we are now in uncomfortable proximity to a like prevalence of another dread disease. We need not jar the nerves of readers with further particulars; the names of the two diseases do not look well in print; but it would be cowardly, and at this juncture very unwise, to veil or blink the truth.

The gravel bed that underlies Plainfield, the great hills of the setting sun, the clear mountain streams that flow through the town—are these natural breeders of disease? No, indeed: they are not. This was never intended to be the seat of infectious diseases. Up to a recent date Plainfield outranked all sister towns in the matter of health and life.

What has wrought the change?

Why are the authorities of New York hunting out and destroying as they would wild beasts, uncemented cesspools and vaults at Lake Mahopac, Carmel and Brewsters? These places are sixty miles away. We do not hesitate to cast house slops and excrementitious matter, loaded in cases of illness with countless germs of disease, into uncemented cesspools ten feet deep when we know that perhaps fifty feet away is a well in which the water stands at a like distance from the surface—all, bear in mind, in a stratum of sand and large stone possessing permeability in the highest possible degree—all communicating with the underground water-supply. Need we look farther for the cause of disease in this city? There is not a sanitary expert in the country who would hesitate a moment in pronouncing against us an opinion that, however harsh, would be wholly within demonstrated truths.

But sanitary experts are not needed. Let peppermint, or a bag of salt, or a few gallons of coal oil, be thrown into a cesspool in any street between Green brook and Ninth street, and some well will disclose the course of filtration. No one knows in what direction the underground water flows, but whatever the direction there will a new taste be developed.

Custom and usage of long standing breed credulity; else no one would expect anything but evil results from a confusion of wells and cesspools within filtering, if not smelling, distance of each other.

There is no evidence, not a particle, that the earth strains out disease germs, creatures so small that a thousand of them do not equal in length the head of a pin, invisible agents of death easily passing where water flows, and absolutely thriving and alarmingly multiplying in liquid filth. On the contrary recent investigations show that water, whether from the underground supply or from streams and lakes, is the chief purveyor of disease germs, possessing in fact almost a monopoly in the transfer of such germs to the throat or digestive tract.

Agnes Rodman.

Miss Agnes W. Rodman, 15 years old, second daughter of the Rev. Erskine M. Rodman of Grace Episcopal church, died at the residence of Mrs. Suydam, 14 East 121st street, New York, at 10:20 last night, of scarlet fever. Miss Rodman left her father's house in this city a week ago to visit her aunt, and was stricken the same day.

Miss Rodman was a young woman of lovely attributes, and the sad affliction is felt as a personal sorrow by all Plainfield. The entire clergy of the city will assemble at the grave in a body. The remains are to reach Plainfield at 5:24 this afternoon; to-morrow afternoon on the arrival of the 4 o'clock train from New York the funeral will take place.

Everything's Good from the Bonners' Press.

Delightful stories, more than enough to give one for each day of the month, are contained in the latest volume in the Bonner's "Choice Series". They are all from the pen of Amelia E. Barr, which is a guarantee of their interest and charm. Miss Barr is one of the most popular story writers of the day, and these selected writings are of her best. They are grouped under the leading tale's title, "The Mate of the 'Easter Bell'", and though the volume numbers nearly 400 pages it may be had for only 50 cents, of the local booksellers, or direct from the publishers, Robert Bonner's Sons, William and Spruce streets, New York. This book of fascinating Barr stories is a volume of choice literature that may make your rainy days or idle moments not only pass with great pleasure but considerable profit as well. The "Choice Series" is always wholesome.

Other recent notable issues from the Bonners' press are "Reuben Forsman, the Village Blacksmith", by Darley Dale; "Neva's Three Lovers", by Mrs. Harriet Lewis; "Em" and "Em's Husband", by Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth; "The Siberian Exiles", by Col. Thomas W. Knox; "The Spanish Treasure", by Elizabeth G. Winter; and "The King of Honey Island", by Maurice Thompson. That's quite an incomparable list. There is n't a dull page in any of them. The stories are healthfully exciting, and give a pleasant variety of styles and plots. They are all intensely interesting, and beautifully printed and illustrated. The Bonners could not afford to put such expensive works at a popular price were it not for their enormous circulation on their merits.

Better Look This Time.

State Census Superintendent Matthews is busily engaged in preparing for the taking of the annual school census of 1893, which will be done next month by census takers whom he will appoint for that purpose.

The principal object of the enumeration is to determine how much of the State school tax shall be allotted to the different districts. Five dollars is appropriated for each child. The State last year paid about $2,000,000 for this purpose, which was divided among some 1,400 districts. Plainfield was falsely represented last year, and got less money than she deserved.

Look on this picture, do, and see
A pattern sweet, of industry.
This little girl has had her play,
And learned her lessons for the day,
And carried grandmamma a note,
And now she sews a petticoat.

She wears a thimble, bright and new,
Upon her tiny finger, too.
In basket and in needle-case
She keeps her little tools in place;
For though she is so young, you know,
Mamma is teaching her to sew.

See how she pulls the needle through,
So each stitch may be smooth and true;
For, though the needle has an eye,
It could not see, if it should try,
The way to go: but oh! the eyes
Of this sweet maid are wondrous wise.

And can you guess for whom she makes
This little petticoat, and takes
Such careful pains—the pretty witch—
With every seam and hem and stitch?
Why, 'tis for Miss Malvina Grace—
Her doll with alabaster face.

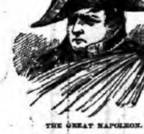
THE GREAT NAPOLEON.

His Remarkable Coolness in Times of Great Danger.

Maj. Gen. Yakovitch, of the Russian army, is one of the few men now living who saw the great Napoleon on a battle field. The old soldier saw the French emperor at Borodino. At that battle, Yakovitch, then a mere boy, served with a battery in the grand redoubt, which was the center of the Russian line. He gives a graphic description of the battle.

When morning broke a sea of gray mist shut out the field from view. The voices of the enemy were heard, the neighing of their horses, and the rumbling of artillery wheels. Then came the thunder of cannon, making the very earth tremble. Three times all the Russian gunners were killed, and three times new men took their places. Bullets flew thick as hail, and men dropped dead or wounded every moment.

At last a strange sound was heard in the distance, like rain pattering on withered leaves. It grew louder and louder, until it filled the air like the roar of a stormy sea. All at once a great wave of bright swords and helmets and horses' heads came surging up over the breastworks. It was the imperial guard. Before the shock of that mighty wave the Russian center crumbled away, shattered wrecks.



THE GREAT NAPOLEON.

When Yakovitch came to his senses and opened his eyes, he heard the trampling of hoofs, which called his attention to a group of gayly dressed officers, and Napoleon's staff came riding over the field. The young Russian peered anxiously into their faces, and thus describes what he saw:

"There were the hard faces of Rapp and Daru and broad-chested Sebastiani and Nansouth, with the saber scar across his cheek, and the low, broad forehead and bulldog jaw of grim old Ney, the bravest of them all. There, too, was Murat, with his white plumes and his braided jacket, his riding whip in his hand, just like a circus rider.

"And then the group parted suddenly, and there was the man himself in the midst of them, with his face hard and immovable as marble amid all that blood and agony, and a far-away look in those cold gray eyes of his, as if he saw Moscow somewhere up in the sky, but could see nothing between.

"'A glorious victory!' cried Murat, waving his hand. 'What a stir there'll be among the good folks in Paris when the bulletin arrives!'

"'We've lost half our army in doing it, though,' growled Ney. 'Hadn't we better fall back a little and wait there for reinforcements?'

"Then Napoleon turned his head slowly, just as the statue might do, and looked him in the face.

"'Thou advising a retreat, Michael? That is something new indeed! No—no falling back now. I must date my bulletin from Moscow. As for the army, you can't make an omelette without breaking a few eggs.'"

Yakovitch says when he heard that he knew that fortune had forsaken Napoleon, for no man save one doomed to destruction could have spoken so lightly of the slaughter of thousands of brave men. In three months from that day the French emperor was flying for his life across the border, with the Cossacks at his heels like hungry wolves.

The Needle and the Pin.

"I think it's too bad we needles haven't any noses," said the needle to the pin.

"What do you want noses for?" asked the pin.

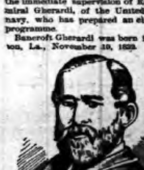
"Why, to hang glasses on, in case our eyes get weak," said the needle.—Harper' Young People.

ADMIRAL GHERARDI.

The Officer Who Will Have Charge of the Naval Review.

The grand naval review of the naval forces of the world will meet in April at Hampton Roads and proceed to New York, where the president of the United States and other dignitaries will review the various foreign and American vessels in the parade. Nearly every naval power is to be represented, and all those people who are fortunate enough to be present on this occasion will probably witness the grandest marine display that has ever taken place. All the arrangements of the parade will be under the immediate supervision of Rear Admiral Gherardi, of the United States navy, who has prepared an elaborate programme.

Bancroft Gherardi was born in Jackson, La., November 10, 1832. He entered the navy from Massachusetts as midshipman, 1846, and served on the Ohio, of the Pacific squadron, till 1850, entering the naval academy in 1850. He became master and lieutenant in 1855, and at the beginning of the civil war was on the Lancaster, of the Pacific squadron. He was made lieutenant commander in 1862, and took part in the engagement with Fort Macon in that year. In 1863-4 he successfully commanded the gunboat Chocorua and the steamer Port Royal, of the west gulf blockading squadron. In the latter vessel he took part in the battle of Mobile bay, and distinguished himself for coolness and courage. He was promoted to commander in 1866, to captain in 1874, [illegible] for promotion. In 1880 he was made commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, and in 1887 he became rear admiral.

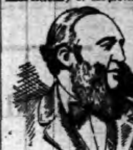


REAR ADMIRAL GHERARDI.

THE DEATH OF FERRY.

The President of the French Senate Expires Suddenly.

Jules Francois Camille Ferry, the recently elected president of the French senate, died suddenly a few days ago. He was born at St. Die, in the Vosges, April 5, 1832. He studied law in Paris, was admitted to the bar there in 1854, took part in journalism and joined the opposition to Napoleon III., being one of those condemned in the trial of the thirteen in 1864. In 1869 he was elected to the corps legislatif and sat with the left. He quickly made himself conspicuous, proposing the abolition of the court that acquitted Prince Pierre Bonaparte and also the dissolution of the corps legislatif as no longer representing the people. He voted against the declaration of war with Prussia. When the empire fell in 1870 he was made secretary of the provisional government of the national defense, and since then has held several high public offices.



M. JULES FERRY.

In 1880 he became prime minister, but his ministry fell a victim to its Tunis expedition policy. In 1883 Ferry again became prime minister, but his ministry was ended through the mishaps of the Tonquin campaign. The unpopularity he then acquired was a potent element in his defeat for the presidency on M. Grevy's resignation. More than one attempt has been made on his life.

Children in Africa.

A lady who has been traveling in China writes very interestingly to the New York Commercial Advertiser of the different treatment which boys and girls of that kingdom receive. "When a son is born he sleeps upon a bed. The bed is richly draped and the little fellow is clothed with robes as gorgeous as his parents can afford to buy. His playthings are pearl, and if he be the only boy in the household everyone obeys his princely cries. But when a girl is born very little notice is taken of her. She sleeps upon the ground and is merely wrapped up in a big piece of cloth. When old enough to play with anything she is given a piece of tile, and she is not considered capable of acting either right or wrong. As she grows up she is taught to prepare food and make wine. Beyond that she knows nothing except to obey her parents."

Ukraine Courting.

All the courting is done by the women in the Ukraine, Russia. When a woman discovers a man she would like to marry, she visits him at his house and tries to charm him. If he does not like her, he leaves her, and lives elsewhere until she deserts his home.

Tom's Copybook.

Tom Anjerry, a student at the Columbia college, blots his copybook whenever he attempts to write in it.

GOOD THING TO KNOW.

Illustrated Directions for Making a Paper Box with Handles.

Take a piece of good thin linen paper about six inches square; fold it diagonally from A to B and then C to D; then, turning it over, fold it from E to F and G to H; open it out, and the folds will be as in Fig. 1. Take A in the left and B in the right hand, and bring the four points E, F, G and H together, as in Fig. 2. Press it flat, and you have a triangle (O, K, L,) having four free ends, K, L, M and N. Fold the corner L on dotted line to meet at O, then fold K to meet at O; turn over the paper, and fold M and N to meet at O. The result will be Fig. 3, with four free flaps. Fold the flaps (on dotted lines) so that the points R and Q will meet at the exact center; turn over the paper, and make the other two points meet at the center of the other side. The result will be Fig. 4. Now unfold S, T, U, V, W, and the paper will look as in Fig. 5. The dotted lines show the creases, and the same points are lettered as in Fig. 4.

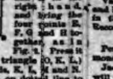

FIG. 2.

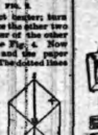

FIG. 4.

Now comes the only difficult fold. Bring T, V, T, S over to the left, allowing the old folds, or rather creases, of T V and V T to remain. The old crease U V is not allowed to remain, but is smoothed down, and a new fold is caused by smoothing down the paper made necessary by allowing the old folds T V and V T to continue just as they were made originally. The result is Fig. 6. The dotted line is the new fold. If T, U, T, S, Fig. 5, were folded over to the left on the line T V, down to the bottom, the figure would then look like Fig. 7, keeping the same points lettered as in Fig. 5. But the crease T V is not continued to the bottom. The projecting ear, S, T, V, is turned over from the bottom on the crease T V. This makes the ear as in Fig. 6.

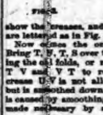

FIG. 5.

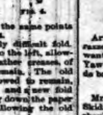

FIG. 6.

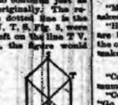

FIG. 7.

Now fold back the flap to the right at Y Z; then fold the remaining three flaps in the same way as T, U, T, S was folded, and the result looks like Fig. 4, except that there are four "ears." Take hold of the two ears on the same side with the right hand, and of the other two with the left hand. A little opening is seen, into which blow quickly and sharply, at the same time slightly pulling at the ears with each hand. If your paper was square in the first place, and if your folding was accurate, the result will be a perfect box with handles, like that shown in Fig. 8.—Harper's Young People.

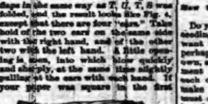

FIG. 8.

Matter-of-Fact Dog.

"There are prosaic men and women, and there are matter-of-fact dogs," says a writer in the London Spectator. "For purely business purposes they are often the best," he adds, and tells a little story to prove the fact:

"We once owned an excellent retrieving spaniel of the simple order of mind, without a grain of humor. This dog accompanied us unasked when we wanted to shoot a bullfinch in the garden to stuff. The gun went off, and the poor bullfinch dropped. Now this dog had been used, when the gun was fired, to go and look for a dead or wounded rabbit. So, instead of looking under the apple tree, he disappeared into the hedge, and in a few minutes he returned with a rabbit in his mouth. So much for the value of a matter-of-fact dog."

His Reflection.

"Mamma," said Jamie, mysteriously, "did I ever have a little brother that fell into the well?"

"No," said his mamma. "Why?"

"Why, I looked into the well this morning, and there was a little fellow down there looked just like me."—Harper's Young People.

Simply Rolling in Wealth.

"That isn't all. He feeds 'em on potatoes."

"Great Scott!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Precautionary Measure.

"And do you have vigilantes here?" inquired Miss Easton on her first night at Gore Gulch.

"Yes," said Uncle Dick, "the boys strung up a bad Dago that came in from Santa Fe this morning."

"O, how terrible! Isn't that murder?"

"Murder? Bless ye, no. It's just suppression of immigration."—Detroit Tribune.

A Hint.

FOR LITTLE WOMEN.

How to Make a Pretty Little Box for Miss Dolly's Jewels.

Do you not think this little box is exceedingly pretty? It is just what you want to hold Miss Dolly's jewels, or, perhaps, all the little trinkets of your own, and it will prove a dainty ornament wherever it is placed. Now let each one of my little friends try to make a box of this kind. First you must cut a triangular section of cardboard or very heavy writing paper exactly like figure No. 3, and fold it as shown by the dotted lines, then lace baby ribbon through the holes made at the edges, as indicated by the tiny circles, and you will have a box like figure No. 2. To close the box turn down the three corners and the box will look exactly like the picture at figure No. 1. Is it not easy to make? You can make one for each of your little friends of different colored cardboard, and decorate it with a fanciful design painted with gold or with some color that contrasts prettily with the hue of the box; and I feel confident if you make a particularly nice one for your mamma to keep her hairpins in she will feel very proud of her little daughter's skill.

Did you ever hear of a peanut party? Well, I will tell you how to give one. The first thing to do is to hide a number of peanuts in every place you can think of—behind chairs, sofas, curtains and doors, and in sand in everything that is within reach of the shortest of your guests. Next decide upon the length of time to be devoted to searching for the nuts; and when your company have removed their wraps start them on the hunt, and give the one who finds the largest number of nuts some pretty little prize as a reward. There may be a first, second and third prize, if you like; and hazel and hickory nuts, chestnuts, almonds or any other small nuts may be used instead of the peanuts, if preferred. Give a peanut party, and see if it doesn't lots of fun.—Butterick's Delineator.

DANGEROUS RAINDROPS.

Conditions in Which They Would Render Human Life [illegible].

Of course we all know that it would be an utter impossibility for storm clouds to form and rain to fall were it not for the forty odd miles of atmosphere that rises above our heads. But, supposing it were possible for human beings to exist in an atmosphere that only rose to a level with their mouths, and that storm clouds could form in the region outside such a low-grade atmosphere, then every raindrop would prove as fatal to earthly creatures as if it were a small bullet fired from a [illegible] gun.

All falling bodies, whether they be [illegible] [illegible] acquisition of [illegible] speed at a uniform rate throughout the whole course of its fall.

Careful experiments have shown that the rate at which a body acquires velocity in falling through the air is thirty-two feet per second at the end of the first second from starting. At the end of the next second it is going at the rate of sixty-four feet per second, and so on through the whole time of falling. Where the velocity is known the space through which the body has fallen may be ascertained by multiplying the velocity at that period by the number of seconds during which it has been falling, and dividing the result by two.

This rule applies, however, only to bodies falling through a vacuum. The resistance of our atmosphere materially retards raindrops, hailstones, aerolites and all other bodies which fall through it, and were it not for the resistance it presents every rainstorm would be disastrous to the human race, as each drop would fall with a velocity great enough to penetrate the full length of a man's body.—Golden Days.

THE MILLER'S PLEA.

It Was So Flattering That It Softened Frederick the Great.

When Frederick built his famous palace of Sans Souci, there happened to be a mill which greatly hampered him in the execution of his plans, and he asked the miller for how much he would sell it. The miller replied that for a long series of years his family had owned the mill, which had passed from father to son, and that he would not sell it for any price. The king used every solicitation, offered to build him a mill in a better place, and pay him besides any sum he might demand; but the obstinate miller still persisted in his determination to preserve the inheritance of his ancestors.

Irritated at last by his conduct, the king sent for him, and said, in an angry tone: "Why do you refuse to sell your mill, notwithstanding all the advantages I have offered you?"

The miller repeated his reasons.

"Do you know," continued the king, "that I could take it without giving you a penny?"

"Yes," rejoined the miller, calmly; "if it were not for the chamber of justice at Berlin."

The king was so flattered by this answer, which showed that he was incapable of an act of injustice, that he dismissed the miller without further entreaty, and changed the plan of his garden.—Wide Awake.

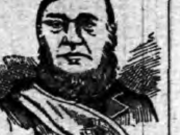
STEPHANUS KRUGER.

The Popular President of the South African Republic.

One of the Prime Movers in the Organization of Offensive Measures Against the British Government—His Remarkable Frugality.

Mr. Stephanus Johannes Paulus Kruger, recently reelected state president of the South African Republic, is in his sixty-eighth year, but is still active, vigorous, and apparently, possessed of great vitality. Born in Colesberg, Cape Colony, his earliest years were occupied in farm work, and he had but little education, as we understand the term. In 1836, when Paul was but ten years old, he accompanied his father and relatives in the great trek from the Cape Colony to the regions beyond, which have since been given the names of the Free State and the Transvaal. In all the principal conflicts with the natives the youth had to take a part, and long before he had reached the age of twenty years Paul had obtained a high reputation among the Boers for pluck, physical strength, and effective shooting. After the republic had been established at Potchefstroom, in 1841, Mr. Kruger received his first official appointment as assistant field cornet, a mixed civil and military duty. Later, he was appointed commandant of a district, and in that capacity had much active work in quelling native revolts. All this time Mr. Kruger was also active in religious work, and won a high reputation as a lay preacher. The branch of the Dutch Reformed church of which he is an adherent term themselves "Doppers," and affect simplicity in dress and frugality in living. It was not, however, until 1876 that Mr. Kruger became intimately associated with the government of the country. In that year he was appointed vice president, and consequently a member of the executive council. He and President Burgers protested most energetically against the annexation of the country by Great Britain, and in 1877-8 Mr. Kruger came to England as one of a deputation from the Boers to the imperial government requesting the restoration of the country. They returned disappointed, however, but it was not till he and Gen. Joubert visited the Cape Colony in 1879 that any organized resistance against the British was contemplated. In December, 1880, the first definite steps were taken in preparing to resist English rule, and in all the preparations for the campaign Mr Kruger was a ruling spirit. In 1883 he was chosen president, and since that time the personal history of Mr. Kruger has been interwoven with that of the state. With the older and middle-aged Boers he is immensely popular for his services to the state and his patriotism; the younger Boers and the foreign population do not generally regard him as sufficiently progressive. President Kruger has been twice married, and has a family of ten sons and daughters. His ordinary daily life at the presidency, in Pretoria, is simple and frugal in the extreme. His political opponents accuse him of parsimony, and charges of corruption are frequently heard, but they do not appear to have any serious foundation. He appears to dislike the English language and rarely tries to speak it, but in the landsraad he is eloquent and impressive and has great influence in the volksraad. Those who know him intimately say he is far more progressive than he obtains credit for in this country, and that he is a remarkably astute ruler. President Kruger is extremely abstemious in reference to alcoholic liquors, but is an inveterate smoker, and, away from official cares, is a most genial and jovial gentleman.



PRESIDENT KRUGER.

Defeated by a Joke.

"The danger of being a little facetious at another man's expense is well illustrated in the case of Hannibal Hamlin, who was defeated for election to the United States senate on account of a little joke," said Henry B. Harris, of Portland, Me., in the Washington News. "When Hamlin was speaker of the Maine house of representatives there was an old up-country member whose head was as bald as a billiard ball. Two or three long hairs sprung up from the back of his neck, however, and the old fellow used to plaster these up over his shiny pate. One day Hamlin stopped him as he was passing the speaker's chair, and, with an air of serious gravity, said: 'Mr Campbell, I desire to inform you that two of your hairs are crossed.' The victim smiled a rather sickly smile but said nothing. Years afterward Hamlin ran for senator. The decisive vote was cast by this man. He elected Hamlin's opponent, Morrill, I think it was. Hamlin always maintained that a joke cost him a senatorship."

Disease Spread by Pencils.

Now they say that the free lead pencils furnished the school children of Detroit by the board of education are responsible for the epidemic in that city. The children get a different pencil each day, all the pencils being dropped into a box at the close of school. The average child using a pencil will put the point in its mouth very frequently, and it is not difficult to see that the practice might become very dangerous.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

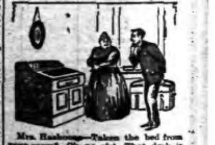
MORE COMPACT THAN COMFORTABLE.



Mrs. Hashouse—Taken the bed from your room? Oh, no, sir! That desk is your bed—the very one you slept in last night. But, really, you would never suspect it was a bed, would you?

New Lodger—No-o-o; not after sleeping in it.—Puck.

Men Couldn't Do It.

"You may talk all you like about women being the weaker sex," said Mrs. Snipps, "but the women of this country did something last year that men could never do."

"And that was—?" inquired Mr. Snipps.

Future Vengeance.

"You'll be sorry for this some day!" howled the son and heir as his father released him from the position he had occupied across the paternal knee.

"I'll be sorry? When?"

"When I get to be a man!"

"You will take revenge by whipping your father when you are big and strong and I am old and feeble, will you, Tommy?"

"No, sir," blubbered Tommy, rubbing himself, "but I'll spank your [illegible] till they can't [illegible]."—[illegible]

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, held on Thursday, April 6, 1893, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director [illegible] and Freeholders [illegible], Donahue, Hubbard, Howard, [illegible], Kyte, [illegible], Vanderbeek and [illegible].

Absent—Freeholders [illegible] and Winans.

The minutes of last meeting, except bills ordered paid, were read, and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Plainfield Street Railway Company:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—The undersigned, on behalf of the above company, most respectfully make application to your most honorable body for permission to construct, operate and maintain a single track on the bridge at Somerset street at the point dividing North Plainfield township and the city of Plainfield.

Respectfully submitted,
J. H. [illegible], Gen. Supt.

On motion of Freeholder Sauter received and placed on the minutes.

From Union County Standard:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—We respectfully offer the Union County Standard as a medium through which to publish the official reports of the meetings of your board. The basis upon which we make the offer is that of comparative circulation; the Standard reaching a wider number of readers than any other newspaper published in this region.

Respectfully,
C. E. [illegible], Manager.

On motion of Freeholder Moore received and filed.

From Board of Health of Linden township:

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—Complaint has been made to the Board of Health of Linden township of a nuisance on [illegible] avenue, west of Locust street, in [illegible], caused by a large pool of disease-breeding, stagnant water lying in the street, caused by the [illegible] position of pipes (being too high) running into [illegible] Brook. You are hereby requested to give this your immediate attention.

Respectfully,
WM. H. [illegible],
Sec. Board of Health.

On motion of Freeholder Hubbard received and referred to Freeholder Winans, of Linden township.

From Rahway Electric Street Railway Co.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—The petitioners, the "Rahway Electric Street Railway Company," respectfully show that they have been duly incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey and have obtained a franchise from the mayor and common council of the city of Rahway for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a street railway, through and upon certain streets and avenues within the city of Rahway, and that by said franchise so granted to your petitioners as above said, they are allowed to use electricity as a motive power.

And your petitioners further show that they propose to construct, build and operate said street railway by electricity as soon as possible in said city, and in constructing and operating said street railway through and upon the streets and avenues so designated by the ordinance granted by said city of Rahway to your petitioners, it will be necessary to build, construct and operate said railway over and upon several bridges in said city, over which you have control, as follows: One crossing Robinson's branch in Irving street near Main street and two on Hazelwood avenue, crossing south branch of Rahway river and a small creek, between Main street and Woodbridge road, all of said bridges being constructed of stone and mason work, and it being deemed advisable to ask the consent of this board for the privilege of passing over said bridges.

Your petitioners would, therefore, respectfully request that your honorable body pass a resolution granting unto your petitioners the privilege of constructing, building and operating an electric street railway upon and over the aforesaid bridges, as long as the same are not in any way broken or injured.

Dated April 6, 1893.

RAHWAY ELECTRIC ST. RAILWAY CO.,
By C. D. WARD, Att'y.

On motion of Freeholder [illegible] received and placed on the minutes.

A petition, signed by one hundred and twenty citizens of the city of Rahway, asking the Board not to grant any more track license in Union county, was read, and on motion of Freeholder Moore received and filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From Committee on County Roads:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—Your committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Co., asking permission to lay its tracks upon Westfield avenue from Grove street to Magie avenue, and across West Jersey street in the city of Elizabeth; to cross Central avenue from [illegible] to the Boulevard, in the township of Westfield; and across the bridge on South avenue over the Rahway river in the township of Cranford, would respectfully report and recommend that the Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Co. be granted permission to lay its tracks upon the streets and bridge as specified above; provided the said company agrees to lay the tracks where the same run along Westfield avenue in the centre of said street [illegible] and before laying the said tracks said company shall pave with Belgian pavement the said Westfield avenue from [illegible] [illegible] and that the said company will [illegible] the said South avenue bridge [illegible] any weight that they may intend to run over said bridge [illegible] also to keep said bridge in good repair, and assume all responsibility for any accident that may occur on or at said bridge. That all of the above work to be done under the supervision of the county road inspector and under the direction of and to the satisfaction of the county engineer.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN E SAUTER,
A. H. SWAIN,
M. M. [illegible],
GEORGE KYTE

On motion of Freeholder Sauter received and laid on the table.

Freeholder Moore, of Committee on Railroad Extension, reported progress.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Sauter:

Resolved, That the bills of Adolph [illegible] $12.79, of William T. Day for $36.50, and of E. King for $12.50 be paid when approved by the road inspector and audited by the county road committee.

On motion of Freeholder Donahue adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Howard:

Resolved, That the consent of this board is hereby given and privilege granted unto the Rahway Electric Street Railway Company to build, construct, operate and maintain an electric street railway over and upon the following bridges in the city of Rahway: One on Irving street crossing Robinson's branch, near Main street and one on Hazelwood avenue, crossing the south branch of the Rahway river, near Main street, and one on Hazelwood avenue, crossing a small creek near Woodbridge road. This consent is given on condition that the said bridges are not in any way to be injured or broken, and the work done under the supervision of the Chosen Freeholders representing the city of Rahway in this board.

On motion of Freeholder Sauter referred to the Chosen Freeholders from the city of Rahway and the county engineer, to report on at the next meeting of the board.

By Freeholder Sauter:

Resolved, That the County Attorney be and is hereby instructed to draw an agreement between the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union and the Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Company, allowing the said railway company to lay its tracks on certain streets and over South avenue bridge, said agreement to be drawn according to the intent and conditioned in accordance with the report of the county road committee in reference to said matter, and report back to the board at the next meeting.

On motion of Freeholder Howard adopted.

Freeholder Hubbard moved that a committee of five and the county engineer and the county attorney be appointed on the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Co., to report at the next meeting, which was carried, and the Director appointed Freeholders Hubbard, Vanderbeek, [illegible], Moore and Kyte as the committee.

Freeholder Sauter read Assembly bill No. [illegible] passed by the late Legislature, which was on motion referred to committee on publication and county attorney to report at the next meeting.

The following bills audited and approved were read and ordered paid:

[illegible]

Freeholder Hubbard moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, May 4, 1893.

ALFRED H. COOK, Clerk.

[illegible] Babcock's Wall Falls Down.

Some time during Saturday night, probably on account of the rain, the twenty-inch wall, at the North East corner of the new Babcock building on West Front street, fell in. The weight of a heap of lumber piled up near the brick [illegible] helped to cause the wall to cave in. Masons on the spot say it will cost at least $100 to clear up the wreckage and it will cost $200 more to rebuild the wall.

The Proper Thing to Do.

During the siege of Vicksburg, an incident occurred which was a source of amusement at the time. An important artillery position had been assigned to a battery commanded by Maj. Schwartz, a German, attached to Gen. Grant's command. Late in the day, while Grant was in his tent receiving dispatches from the front, a German orderly made his appearance, earnestly inquiring for "Shineral Grant." After much parley his hearers, being convinced that his business with the general was important, admitted him to the latter's tent, where he made the announcement: "Schwartz' battery iss took!"

"Well," said the general, calmly, "did you spike the guns?"

"What!" shrieked the little German, "schpike dem guns? Dem new guns? Vy, it would schpoil 'em!"

"Well, what did you do?" said Grant, impatiently.

"Vy, we took 'em pack again, py Golly!"—Life.

Wonderful.

"This is indeed a wonderful country," wrote Pat to his father a week after his arrival in New York. "While I was standing on Broadway before a deposit company a poor-looking drayman drove up, and on his dray he had twenty-five heavy bricks made of silver. I was told by a bystander that he had picked them up in the street, and was about to sell them to a merchant prince for the walls of his seaside cottage."—Harper's Bazar.

ON A MAN HUNT.

Fielding Joins a Country Searching Party and Roams the Wildwood.

The Value of Crimes and Casualties as Means of Recreation to People Living in the Rural Districts.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

The crimes and misfortunes of our neighbors are far more numerous in the city than in the country, but we do not get anything like so much fun out of them. For instance, the man who lives in No. 11½, right across the street, comes home intoxicated five nights in the week, but what satisfaction do I get from that? I do not know the man. He may be squandering his patrimony and bringing his wife and their two interesting English pug dogs to beggary, but not even Maude can find out whether he is or not. He could reform to-morrow without doing us any injury. But in the country a man like that would be worth something to us. We should know all about his wife and his debts and any other follies or afflictions that might have helped drive him to drink. I could pity his wife, while Maude pitied the pug dogs; and then she could go over to his house and tell him about it, thus furnishing him with an additional sorrow to drown in the cup. But in the isolation of a crowded city these joys are denied us.

I recently had an opportunity of estimating this great advantage which the country offers. Jimmy Carter invited me out to his suburban residence, about sixty miles up the state. The invitation surprised me, for we are not intimate friends. I know Jimmy well enough to cut the pack when he deals, but otherwise we have little in common, and I expected no great pleasure from my visit. He said that we might possibly go hunting; but I had no idea that we should pursue such interesting game as Rev. Cyrus Truesdell of the First church in Somesville. Yet we had that pleasure. Mr. Truesdell was kind enough to disappear on the very day of my arrival. If he hadn't I might have lived all my days without finding out how much fun there is in a country searching party.

The papers have been full of this amusement recently. An unusual number of persons have taken it into their heads to wander away from their homes, to the deep and real sorrow of their families and the delicious excitement of all their friends and acquaintances. But the thing should be seen to be appreciated.

The news of Mr. Truesdell's disappearance was brought to Mr. Carter's house by a fat and cheerful youth, who was called only Bob in my hearing. He burst in upon us so unceremoniously that it was evident he brought news of great importance. By the expression of his rubicund visage I was prepared to hear that a gold mine had been discovered in his father's back yard.

"Mr. Truesdell's disappeared," he cried. "Nobody knows where he's gone. They're goin' to drag Hot Hole pond. I thought you might want to come an' —an'—"

He hesitated for an expression. I thought he was going to say "see the fun," but he didn't. He left the sentence unfinished.

"I've got to go over home for a rope," he added, and turned to go.

"But hold on," Carter called after him. "Tell us some more about this thing. When did Truesdell go away? And what's he supposed to be doing in Hot Hole pond?"

"He didn't come home las' night," said Bob. "Mis' Truesdell thought he was up to her Uncle John's, an' she sent 'round there this mornin', but, by Jimmyneddy, he hadn't been there at all." Bob's eyes stuck out of his head with excitement at this climax. What a pity it would have been if Mr. Truesdell had been at Uncle John's! It would have spoiled everything.

"We dunno exactly why he went away," Bob continued. "Ma's gone up to their house now to see if there's anything she can do for Mrs. Truesdell, an' to ask her if she thinks there's any other woman in it. But most people think it's awwrside."

Meanwhile Carter had sent for hats, coats and rubber boots. He looked younger than I had seen him in ten years. Life had taken on an interest. When Mills—of Dunning & Mills, who are right alongside of Carter on Warren street—skipped for parts unknown a month or two ago, Carter was only a little more cheerful than his ordinary. The police were after Mills, and whether they caught him or not made very little difference to Carter. But here in Somesville things were different. The police force consisted of a man with small authority, less ability, and no "wand" at all. If Mr. Truesdell had left his earthly tenement on this officer's doorstep, it would not have been discovered unless the ghost rang the bell. The whole town would have to unite in the search and there would be great excitement.

Carter informed me of these facts while we were getting into our rubber boots. He also threw out dark hints as to what he had always suspected that Mr. Truesdell might do. As for myself, I could not speak of the unfortunate gentleman from personal acquaintance, because I [illegible] him; but I made some deeply philosophical remarks about the dark, sinful secrets which very pious men carry under their red flannel chest protectors. I have some knowledge of the world and I never hesitate to give other people the benefit of it at such a time. I showed Carter in a few forceful sentences how probable it was that Mr. Truesdell's bosom had for years been loaded with remorse.

We hurried to Hot Hole pond. It is a round and lead-colored pool, which derives its name from its reluctance to freezing. Only the severest cold can skim it over, and so it offers to suicides the great convenience of a guarantee that there need be no postponement on account of weather. After a few days' residence in Somesville, I wondered that more people did not avail themselves of this offer.

The pond is neither large nor deep, and more than half of it had been dragged when we arrived. A veteran fisherman was superintending the operations, and the instinct of his class would not be repressed by the tragic nature of the business in hand. Every time his grappling iron failed to bring up what was expected, he was visibly depressed by the toughness of the luck, and this would start him telling some entertaining story of an occasion when he had dragged for missing people and had got a boat-load in less than half an hour. But Hot Hole pond yielded him nothing, and he was at length forced to "reel up." I judged from the tone of his conversation that he held Rev. Mr. Truesdell to be much to blame for his disappointment.

Meanwhile, I had done all that I could to help in the search. I had run around the pond ten or a dozen times and had given much valuable advice to everybody who would listen. About a hundred Somesville people had assisted me in this useful occupation. When we were not advising we were discussing Mr. Truesdell. I learned that he had had trouble in his church, and also that he had none. I was told on good authority that a scandal had crept after him from his last place of residence, and that he was thought to have eleven wives in different parts of the country. It was rumored that a few of these neglected women had traced him to his lair in Somesville, and that he had probably gone up into the woods to die. As a man of the world, I was disposed to accept the theory of the eleven wives. It is a curious coincidence that the Somesville people—who were certainly not men of the world—favored the same view. Of course, no one expressed this view openly. But we decided to scour the woods with a unanimity which showed our belief that Mr. Truesdell had hidden his guilty secret there.

It would be an inaccuracy to say that a searching party was organized. It is true that we heard plans outlined by various leading citizens, after which we all went off and did as we pleased. On one subject alone were we agreed, that if Mr. Truesdell were found alive he would be suffering from cold (for it was one of those raw and clammy spring days which are so much colder than winter), and therefore every man of us put a quart bottle of ancient and honorable "red-eye" whisky into his pocket before starting out on his melancholy errand. This provision was made entirely for the comfort of the missing man, but when we all got out into the cold woods, with the last remnants of the winter's snow slopping around our ankles, we decided not to save all the warming fluid for Mr. Truesdell. The chill was too personal for our generosity. We had recourse to the "red-eye" on our own account. The consequence was that as the shadows of evening began to fall sixty or seventy inebriated citizens of Somesville might have been seen straggling about the woods, totally oblivious of their errand, though dimly conscious that something out of the ordinary had happened.

As for me, in the earlier hours of the day I had come to the conclusion that I was the man to find Mr. Truesdell. A person experienced in the crimes and mysteries of a great city should certainly be far better able to solve this simple affair than the rustics of Somesville. With this idea in mind, I separated myself from the others almost as soon as we struck into the woods. My plan was to make my way across to a little way station on a railroad that avoided Somesville by a mile or two, and there make some inquiries about the object of our pursuit. Whether the "red-eye," to which I was wholly unaccustomed, or my general lack of familiarity with the country, interfered with my plan, I am unable to say, but the fact is that within one hour I was a dozen times more lost than Mr. Truesdell. This possibility had not occurred to me. I had supposed that with the woods full of men I should only have to lift up my voice to bring immediate assistance. So, when I perceived that I was advancing along the circumference of a circle, and had climbed the same rail fence four times, I decided that it would be wise to yell once or twice by way of experiment. It was a disastrous failure. I got scared at the vastness of the silence around me, and, starting up, I plunged ahead through the slimy underbrush. Twenty minutes later I was sitting on a small but very cold stone, which I remembered having passed several times before. I was chilled so thoroughly that the separate pieces of my spinal column knocked together with a sound like a boy learning to play the "bones." There was no doubt that I was lost, and in the new light which that day's events had thrown upon searching parties, I had no hope that I should ever be found. I recalled the disgraceful things which had been said about Mr. Truesdell, and reflected with pride that my character was beyond reproach. I pictured the deep and poignant sorrow of my many friends and admirers. It was too much. I could not bear the thought of their grief. I arose, and clearing my throat with a little "red-eye," I yelled again.

This time it was not in vain: a voice [illegible] me. It came from beyond a [illegible] of trees and I lost not a second in plunging through. On the other side a tall man stood in a fairly well-beaten path. I fell on my knees and thanked him as my preserver. I told him that he had laid an eternal debt of gratitude upon me. I assured him that all my debts were practically eternal, and that I would save his for the very last. Also, I said that gratitude was due him from the entire country, which would have mourned my loss. He assured me that the matter was of no consequence whatever; and then he asked what I was doing out in the woods. My spirits had revived so much at the sight of rescue that I was able to give him a vivacious account of the disappearance of Rev. Mr. Truesdell.

"Of course," said I, "the man has skipped. I saw that at a glance. He is evidently a bad egg, from all that I can find out from those who know him."

"I grieve to hear it," replied the stranger. "What have you learned about him?"

I thereupon related all the disagreeable things which had been whispered around the shores of Hot Hole pond. He appeared to be deeply moved; so deeply, indeed, that I asked if he had known the missing man particularly well.

"Quite well, young man," said he. "I am Mr. Truesdell!"

I nearly fell dead in the wet grass.

"I have been to Jonesville," he continued, "and I sent word to my family of my intention to remain over night. It seems that they did not receive it, but they must by this time have been relieved by a telegram I sent from Jonesville. I am just returning from the station at Waycross."

The remainder of our interview consisted of feeble attempts at apology from me, and as they did not appear to impress Mr. Truesdell they probably would not interest the reader.

An hour later I hired a horse and wagon and set out for a roadhouse at the north end of the woods, where I was told that most of the searchers would assemble. I found about thirty men there, including Carter, and I lost no time in telling them the news. I said: "Rejoice with me, for our worthy friend has returned."

They did not rejoice. I never saw so disgusted a set of men in my life. They appeared to regard Mr. Truesdell's conduct in remaining alive as a base injury and an attempt to cast ridicule upon Somesville.

"So he's been warm and comfortable while we've been tramping our legs off," said one.

"Perhaps he thinks it's funny to make me pull the bottom out of Hot Hole pond on a day like this," put in the fisherman. I showed them conclusively that Mr. Truesdell was in no way to blame; but they shook their heads, and the sentiment of the party was expressed by a gray-haired farmer from Somesville Center. "If Truesdell thinks this is the way to make himself pop'lar in our town, he's more darned badly mistaken than any man since the feller who told Noah it wasn't goin' to rain."

Moral Suasion.

The neighbors of Mrs. Maria Smith agreed among themselves that she had very peculiar ideas about the training of children. She had gone to the normal school for one term before her marriage, and it was commonly supposed that some of her oddities were due to that cause.

"Well, now," said Reuben Day, as he came home to dinner, "Maria Smith is a queer one, and no mistake. She is bringing up that boy of hers on mighty original principles. What do you suppose I heard her say to him this morning?"

"I'm sure I dunno," said Mrs. Day. "There's no guessing—she says so many queer things. What was it?"

"Why, you know Joe Smith cut his forefinger half off yesterday with his new fangled hay cutter, and this morning, as I was going by, I heard Maria say:

"'Now, Joseph,'—she always calls the little scamp Joseph, though the old man has never been anything else but Joe—'now, Joseph,' says she, 'you must be a very good boy, for your father has hurt his hand, and if you are naughty he can't whip you!'"—Youth's Companion.

FOR REFORM GOWNS.

A Congress of Women to Legislate on the Subject of Dress.

For Ugliness and Comfort—Some Reasons Why the Reform Gown Never Has Succeeded and Never Will—One of the Features of the Coming Fair.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

Of enterprises spelled by the women of the world's fair with a capital E there is no end. There are councils and boards and clubs and federations and congresses of women, for women, by women, which are each and every one, it is solemnly asserted, conducted under parliamentary laws and strictly business principles. This is well, for schemes already achieved are wondrous beyond the fancies of man, while the national council continues to debate portentously concerning embryo feats with which to astound the hard and level-headed American, who has been emancipated so long that he has forgotten the intoxication of being able to do remarkable things with his rights.

So, with all innocence of purpose, it is possible to record perhaps the most novel of all the schemes mothered by the national council. This body is nothing less than a coalition of leagues, unions and societies from every quarter of the states. These have been pursuing primary purposes of their own, which, it is said, are to be laid aside when they merge at the fair into the single grand federation for woman's further glory.

Thus, upon the councils' day of the congress, a month hence, the members of the body politic will turn from the tenets of the W. C. T. U., the kindergarten, the franchise and the status of the eternal feminine to the common ground upon which women, from the day of Eve to this, have met with eager sympathy. They are going into session upon their clothes. They are going to shackle fashion, that divine despot, and legislate themselves and their absent sisters into a gown created by committees and cut on principle. It is, as befits its origin, reformatory, and serves other purposes than to beautify a pretty woman, mitigate a plain one, or inspire the Chicago poet to tell us how—

BELOVED BY POET AND PAINTER.

> Sweet disorder in the dress
> Kindles in clothes a wantonness—and about the grace of "tempestuous petticoats."

But none of these things moves the committee, for Chairman Russell tells us that its aim is simply to attain a degree of looseness and a degree of shortness which will allow every part of the body its natural action.

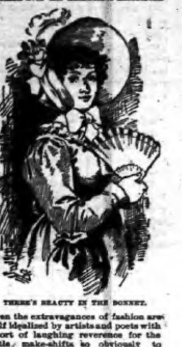
And this the reform dress, as submitted by its prime promoters, Jenness Miller and Mrs. Foster Avery, undoubtedly accomplishes. It is so loose, so shuffling, so awkward, that every motion, though allowed, is concealed effectually, and it is, in Mrs. Miller's gown, and a college gymnasium dress recommended, so startlingly short that a long stretch of sturdy overgaiters with difficulty proves it to be reform and not frivolity.

Having explained the motive, it is suggested that entertainments be given in Chicago to introduce the new dress and modify the stiffness of scant skirts which have no waistbands, and rub the awful newness off the emancipated leggings. These entertainments will encourage the doubters and organize hosts who have hesitated to lay their gospel of beauty in dress upon the altar of appalling ugliness.

Mrs. Russell naively states her case thus: "Experience and observation have taught us that a perverted taste, constantly strengthened in its perversity by a multitude of false ideas, cannot be corrected by a few solitary examples of something better."

She offers us the "something better," claiming as multitudes of false ideas the arts and plots of pleasing which women have pursued through the ages. She forgets that beauty and grace [illegible] and that legislation cannot force a woman who knows the ways of man into a hideous "comfort." There is no such condition of being.

The greatest power, despite clubs and federations of clubs, is the power of a well-dressed, daintily original woman over her immediate associates.



THERE'S BEAUTY IN THE BONNET.

Even the extravagances of fashion are half idealized by artists and poets with a sort of laughing reverence for the little make-shifts so obviously to please the lords and masters. Marie Stuart is famous and remembered because she created a headdress which marked her perfect features, and has been adopted by her sisters ever since. Marie Antoinette won the pity of a Paris mob as she left the Tribunal with her proud throat bared "bravely to the kisses of the guillotine" above the simple peasant kerchief tied upon her breast. Elizabeth's courtiers were divided in their admiration for her masculine genius in political rule, and the feminine ruses with which she concealed her scrawny neck and bent shoulders. Elizabeth in a reform dress would have found her genius incompetent to save her kingdom. But she reigned by indomitable masculine qualities hidden in an emphatic feminine garb. And the artists humored her faces by painting ideal maiden faces above her ruff. Later they took the huge poke bonnet of Queen Anne and put a dainty girl within it to show that they appreciated the misplaced efforts to attract. Sweet Di Vernons cracked whips in gowns, touched up with lace and roses; peasant maids, in the artist's eyes, were gowned in bright stuffs and sureoles of snowy muslin as they went about their homely tasks.

A SWEET DI VERNON.

Always, from high to low, it is the woman expressed by the gown she wears in poetry and picture. Ah, well! let the poet scribble and artist sketch the national council in its new universal gown. Then, perhaps, after many years, we shall be reconciled.

THE FLAG.

Commissioner Blount promptly ordered the American flag to be lowered as an emblem of sovereignty in the Sandwich Islands.

He acted wisely.

Some Republicans, hard pushed for sensible criticism, exclaim "It was treason to haul down the stars and stripes".

So it would be on American soil or the deck of an American vessel.

But bear in mind—

Our national flag could only rightfully wave over the Sandwich Islands by virtue of one or the other of two accomplished facts—honorable conquest, or annexation sanctioned by the popular will.

Neither of those events has transpired.

Who raised it in Honolulu ?

A parcel of sugar and other spoils-seeking speculators, aided by a pliant American minister.

When the people of the Sandwich Islands, through their own judgment fairly expressed and registered, desire to become a part of the American Republic, it will be time enough to give them the governing protection of the flag.

To subjugate a people without provocation is not the mission of the United States.

That has been the arbitrary course of England, whose title to the vast East Indian domain was wrenched by might and not acquired by right.

To keep the American flag free from like dishonor is patriotic duty.

REWARD HONESTY.

The confirmation of Patrick Sheridan as Postmaster at Elizabeth, N. J., was proper action.

There appears to have been some local opposition for the office, but upon what just grounds we cannot imagine.

Mr. Sheridan is not only practically intelligent, but of proved honesty and respectable standing in the community where he has long resided.

He is an honest straightforward man, and that fact speaks volumes in his favor.

The country needs official integrity.

NOTES OF THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

What Is Happening of Note on Plainfield's Peerless Road.

[From The Railroad Employé.]

There are 301 passenger trains which come in and go out of the Jersey Central each day in addition to the freight and coal trains.

The management propose to put on more trains between Jersey City and Philadelphia on the next change of schedule, which will be about May 1.

The company will shortly put in a new bridge over the Newark bay on the main line. The work will last nearly all summer. They have already commenced hauling lumber, preparatory to starting the work.

The freight house and fences at Dunellen have been undergoing a fresh coat of paint, which materially adds to their appearance. The landscape gardener is busily engaged at present in clearing up the parks at different stations along the line.

The company are having considerable trouble filling in the "Y" to connect the Ogden branch, formerly known as the "snake-chasing" road, with the High Bridge branch, and have, after a year and a half, succeeded in making a satisfactory agreement with the King estate.

The Easton, the new ferryboat, made her trial trip on April 1, and gave eminent satisfaction. All the officials were on board. She is to run from the Blue Line trains to the new ferry. The other new boat is looked for in about two weeks.

Brakeman William Conley received $1,000 from the B. of R. T. on March 19, for the loss of his left arm while coupling cars at Ashley about two months ago. Here is a practical illustration of the benefits derived from belonging to the Brotherhood.

First Aid to the Injured.

The emergency lectures which have already been announced in these columns will be by Drs. Murray and Hedges, in the Irving school in May. The subjects will be:

First aid to the injured.

What to do until doctor comes, in case of accident.

Practical talks for every father and mother.

How to treat scalds, burns, wounds and fractures.

The lectures will be free, but admission will be by ticket. Further announcement will be made of the dates of lectures and distribution of tickets.

Frisbie After the Mayor's Cat.

James Frisbie, minister "plotentiary" to the dog pound, was notified on Saturday, through captain Grant, that mayor Gilbert's cat was missing, and Frisbie says he traced it to councilman See's residence on Sandford avenue. Frisbie is the authority for this item. He says when he went looking for the cat it was gone, but a promise was made to him that the feline would be returned in good shape.

The Auctioneer and Others Took the Balance.

It was hoped that, as THE PRESS stated Saturday, the $70 or so over the mortgage, realized at the sale of the property of the late John Yose, would go to the unfortunate widow. But after the auctioneer's fee of $36 and other incidental claims had been met, there was a shortage of $4.17. However, a lot of miscellaneous articles in the barn were sold for Mrs. Yose, and brought $44.

Disgraceful Row.

There was a free-for-all fight in a hotel at Scotch Plains, Saturday night. One young Plainfielder, who had more money than brains, got slapped, so that "the claret run". The gang was fired out, and the fight was resumed at a place near the Baptist church.

GERMANY'S FLEET COMES

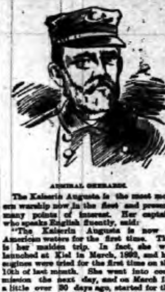
More Booming of Cannon in Hampton Roads.

NO MONEY WASTED FOR POWDER

The Triple-Screw Cruiser Kaiserin Augusta Now the Centre of Admiration—Description of the Most Modern Ship in the Harbor—Admiral Gherardi Talks.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 19.—The German squadron steamed into the harbor very late in the afternoon, and if the Kaiserin Augusta had not begun to boom her cannons some distance down the Roads she would have had to slip into her anchorage officially unnoticed until 8 o'clock the next morning. She saluted first the United States flag and the flags of the American and English Admirals as she steamed slowly to a place near the Russians.

Behind her came the Zeadler, a small gunboat of 1,800 tons.



ADMIRAL GHERARDI.

The Kaiserin Augusta is the most modern warship now in the fleet and presents many points of interest. Her captain, who speaks English fluently, said:

"The Kaiserin Augusta is now in American waters for the first time. This is her maiden trip. In fact, she was launched at Kiel in March, 1892, and her engines were tried for the first time on the 10th of last month. She went into commission the next day, and on March 13, a little over 30 days ago, started for the United States. This is the third port she has entered, for she stopped at Queenstown and Halifax on her way here."

The Kaiserin Augusta is not only one of the most modern ships in the harbor, but she is the only vessel here with three screws, one on each side of the rudder and the third extending some distance out from the centre of the stern. The engine for each screw is independent of the others and is built in watertight bulkheads. With these screws she has made a record of 23 knots an hour.

Even with nine more men-of-war to arrive the naval rendezvous has already resumed proportions which entitle it to rank as one of the greatest aggregations of floating batteries which the world has ever witnessed. It does not, to be entirely accurate, compare with the naval review of the British navy off Spit Head on the occasion of the jubilee celebration in 1887, when over a hundred ships were gathered together. Since that time, however, there have been enough improvement in the construction and armoring of naval fighters to make the exhibition here thoroughly unique.

Admiral Gherardi paused a moment as he stood upon the deck of the Philadelphia when he was asked how many million dollars would be represented upon the water when all the ships assembled in the Roads.

"Ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-five," he said, making a mental calculation. "Yes, fully $25,000,000. And do you know," he added, "how many men there will be on board the ships? No? Well, there will be 9,000 men. There are 3,000 men on my own ships."

"And how are all these men to be provided with food?"

The Admiral laughed. "With Baltimore under our lee," he said, unconsciously dropping into a nautical expression, "and with New York and even Chicago not very distant, I do not think any of us will want for anything to eat.

"But what interests me is the point of view from which landsmen look at us. You ask questions about things which do not concern me at all—matters to which I would never give a moment's thought. For instance, you ask me how my men are to get enough to eat, and how they wash their clothes; whether one set of officers eats with another set of officers; and the next thing, I suppose, you will want to know how much money we waste in firing salutes."

"Most assuredly," immediately replied the correspondent.

The Admiral threw all his dignity to the four winds and actually chuckled.

"Well," he said, "as a matter of fact, all the powder we use has been condemned and is really not good for anything else."

The Lick Eclipse Trip Successful.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Director Holden of the Lick observatory has just received a telegram from Prof. Schaeberle that the Lick observatory expedition to observe the solar eclipse in Chile has been successful in every respect. Fifty photographs were secured by the professor and his assistants.

Blind Boy's Body Found.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 19.—Frank Hutchins, a blind boy, disappeared from Passaic on Jan. 11. Yesterday his dead body was recovered from the Passaic river. It was found near Lyndhurst. Justice Haywood, of Rutherford, impaneled a jury, who decided that death was due to natural causes.

Rev. Vrooman Again Blackballed.

AGAINST THE DIRECTORS.

Attorney-General Olney Decides that Congress Can Take Back the $2,500,000.

CHICAGO, April 19.—It is said that Attorney General Olney has ruled against the World's Fair on the important questions recently submitted by the exposition authorities, and in turn submitted by Secretary Carlisle to the Attorney General for a legal opinion.

The principal point raised was that as Congress had made an absolute gift of $2,500,000 of souvenir coins to the World's Fair, it was not within the province of a subsequent Congress to attach a condition to this absolute gift by withholding part of the appropriation until security had been given for the repayment of a part of the appropriation.

According to the information received from a leading Treasury official, Mr. Olney holds that one Congress can qualify acts of a previous Congress by attaching conditions to gifts and appropriations.

SENATORS LEAVING TOWN.

Cleveland Has Broken Harrison's Record in the Number of Appointments.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The adjournment of the Senate has been followed by a general exodus of Senators from the city and the Capitol building has a very deserted look.

A number of Senators are hidden in their rooms behind locked doors attending to correspondence and seeking to avoid visitors and office-seekers.

Contrary to the generally prevailing opinion, it is found that Mr. Cleveland in the session just closed has broken the record and made more appointments to office than any of his predecessors, exceeding the appointments of Mr. Harrison during the same time by more than 20.

It is noticeable that two of the important places—Russia and Italy—have not been filled, nor did Mr. Cleveland fill the former during his first term, until after the recess had begun.

THE LAND UNDER US.

Why Some Wells Afford No Security Against Sewage Contamination.

Do driven wells or deep wells of any kind afford security against sewage poison in this city?

There is a very strong popular belief that they do, but it is a belief that is not upheld by authenticated facts relative to the particular formation beneath our feet. Cook's Geology of New Jersey and the various annual reports of the State Geologist are standard authorities, and in these works the earth we tread on is fully and explicitly described.

We have at the surface a thin stratum or layer of loam, varying in thickness, but rarely exceeding four feet. This stratum is not very permeable. Next there is a stratum of sand, gravel, clay and bowlders, extending to the depth of fifty feet more or less, highly permeable, and resting upon the red sandstone rocks of this section of the State. Here and there will be found in this water-bearing stratum non-continuous seams of clay, but as a rule the underground water flows in it unchecked. We have, in other words, a thick, permeable, water-bearing stratum sandwiched in a thin superincumbent loam stratum, and the underlying rocks.

The thin upper crust offers doubtless very good natural filtration against organic impurities; but we have pierced it in thirty-five hundred places for the purpose of placing that number of cesspools in the soil—going entirely through it in every instance, employing no little skill to keep organic impurities from it in order to lodge them in the great water-bearing stratum beneath it. We have turned into that stratum thirty-five hundred streams of sewage—steady streams of foul matter, some doubtless bearing disease germs; the great majority, let us hope, just plain, common everyday filth.

As there is a strong, though slow, current in the underground water, it certainly does not matter, as against sewage, whether a well is fifteen or fifty feet deep; whether the enclosing wall be of stone or iron; whether its circumference be large or small; for in any case it taps the one underground reservoir, which poisoned in one part, may on account of its current, be poisoned in every part. "In Plainfield and its vicinity", says the State Geologist in one of his annual reports, "A large number of wells have been bored for a few feet into the red sandstone, which underlies the sandy earth of that town. The water in them does not differ materially from that in the common dug wells" The State Geologist further expresses the opinion that such wells "are necessarily liable to surface contamination when they have be drawn upon for large quantities."

If the opulent water-seeker could tap a private or deeper reservoir he might render himself secure against sewage. That he cannot do. There is one underground reservoir for all, no matter what the method of tapping be, and the water in that reservoir is steadily kept in motion by a sea-ward current.

A driven well offers no advantages over an open well. Into an open well organic impurities could be thrown or could flow; but will any one say that such impurities are not led along the exterior of the driven pipe to the reservoir formed at the foot of it? Water, it should be remembered, seeks subterranean channels at every opportunity.

Let not the deep-well proprietor exalt himself, but let him the rather join his humbler brethren in demanding pure water for all through the filling up and annihilation of the pestiferous and rascally cesspools.

From the Earth to the Moon.

That wonderfully popular and attractive entertainment, "A Trip to the Moon", is to be presented again, for the first time this season, at Carnegie Music Hall, tomorrow evening. Since the scenes were exhibited here a year ago very great changes and improvements have been made in them, and Garrett P. Serviss has added many interesting things to his accompanying lecture. The "Trip to the Moon", when given in Boston last winter, proved a magnet of irresistible power, and the Tremont theater was crowded week after week, both afternoon and evening, with the most fashionable and intellectual people of the New England metropolis. New Yorkers have not yet seen this entertainment in its improved and enhanced form, but eager to do so. One of the most brilliant of the novel effects is the sight, which the audience gets from the moon, of the earth hanging in black space 240,000 miles away and slowly turning upon its axis, presenting in turn its various continents and oceans to view.

The whole character of the entertainment is so realistic and interesting that the audience actually feels that it is visiting another world. The beautiful lunar landscapes shining in such a blaze of sunlight as the earth never experiences; the sight of the sun going behind the earth and of the vast, ruddy shadow of the latter creeping slowly over the face of the moon; the jet black skies glittering with tens of thousands of stars; the huge volcanoes; the wonderful ocean beds lying with their secrets all exposed; these things make an impression on the imagination that can never fade away. To those who have thus navigated celestial space and visited the moon, astronomy becomes henceforth a most fascinating subject.

Beginning on Thursday night, the "Trip to the Moon" will be presented on each succeeding night this week, at the Saturday matinée, and on Sunday evening. All should be in their seats promptly at 8:15, in order not to miss the opening scene, the wonderful eclipse of the sun, which is one of the most beautiful of this picturesque astronomy series of scientific spectacles.

An advertisement in the Courier is a great thing. Pay for an advertisement in that paper for one issue, and you are always represented in its columns, though you may die, go out of business, or move out of town. Everyone in Plainfield but the astute advertisement chaser in the Courier office knows that Dr. Tucker and his famous diploma are separated, and that Plainfield is no longer graced by him, yet his blistering ointment and colic remedy advertisement is still spread before the Courier's hackmen readers day after day. Dr. Tucker's blistering ointment needs lots of advertising—to sell it—but it doesn't seem strong enough to draw a check for Mrs. Neighbour or for the Courier. This is only a sample of the many dead, unpaid-for ads. in the Courier's columns.

Revelry at the St. Club-House.

The baked beans at the Bicycle club-house Saturday night were a "Howling Success." Only, there were no beans! but instead there were coffee, sandwiches and what one member facetiously, if not appetizingly, called "Dead-fly crackers fastened with Martin's best tire cement". They were "fly" crackers, sure enough. Everything flew. The edibles flew, the smoke flew, time flew, and the notes flew from the ruby lips of the ever-ready Will Benyon. The curtain fell near the midnight hour, on a set-to between the club janitor and a sable fellow-citizen—an exceedingly funny performance.

Hulett furnished the piano for the occasion.

The post bonds were on hand. The Patriarch filled the board with "scratches", and our own and only David, clad in his perennial life-insurance smile, made several brilliant runs of two.

YES It's PALATABLE EFFECTIVE SAFE

TO PUT DOWN THE SALOONS.

Only the Church Men by Their Votes Can Suppress Them, Says Mrs. Lathrop.

From The Press of April 19.

The pews of Trinity Reformed church were filled last night with those interested in the cause of temperance, who had assembled to hear Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, the famous president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan, speak on "The Home Against the Saloon".

The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the church. The lecturer was then introduced, and spoke for an hour and a half in a most interesting manner, exhorting church members to individual work against legalized liquor-selling.

Mrs. Lathrop said in part:

"There are two kinds of temperance—Gospel temperance and Political temperance. The experiments of the last fifteen years have shown conclusively that Politics is unable to cope with the problem alone. No progress has been made in the cause; in fact, the amount of intoxicating drink sold per capita per annum is increasing steadily. The church has done nothing in this time. It has saved individuals, but has put no satisfying check on the liquor-traffic. What, then, is the trouble? This is a moral question, to be discussed in churches, and not in the halls of legislation. The trouble lies with those men who think rightly about the matter, who believe that the liquor-traffic should be abolished, but who do not carry their consciences to the ballot-box. Some say that the national sin is drunkenness. This is not so. The sin lies with those who, believing that the licensed dramshop is wrong, still vote for officials who they know, will not expend one bit of energy in the right direction but permit the continuance of the licensing of saloons under the very doors of the church. No progress will be made in the cause until these men, pillars and supporters of the church, will carry their principles with them to the polls, when they vote and with one voice put down the evil which stares us in the face."

The Rev. Mr. Goodrich spoke in behalf of the W. C. T. U., and said that as the saloons were kept up by money it would take money to put them down. He therefore begged that a liberal collection might be given to help the good cause. Several young ladies passed the plates, and no one refused to contribute.

BLASPHEMY AND BEER.

During her remarks Mrs. Lathrop said: "The good man leaves his home in the morning where he has had family prayers because he is a Christian, and goes to cast his ballot, and he, with his lips dewy with prayer, stands next to and casts the same ballot as the saloon-keeper with his lips stained with blasphemy and beer."

PLAINFIELD CLERGYMEN HONORED.

Mr. Newell Elected Moderator, and Dr. Richards Makes a Report.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth, began its Spring session in that city yesterday morning at Westminster church. The retiring Moderator, the Rev. William Hoppaugh of Springfield, preached the opening sermon; the Rev. G. Kennedy Newell of Hope chapel, Plainfield, was elected Moderator; the Rev. W. C. Cattrington of Elizabeth, temporary clerk; the Rev. S. Parry of Flemington, stated clerk, and the Rev. J. T. Kerr of Elizabeth, permanent clerk.

The afternoon session was taken up with the reading of the narrative of the state of the churches by Rev. J. M. Nourse of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. The reports showed advancement in all lines of church work.

In the evening a popular meeting was held and addressed in the interest of the missionary boards by Rev. Dr. Richards, of Crescent Avenue church, Plainfield, and Rev. Dr. Stimson of the Phillips church, New York. The Presbytery will be in session to-day. The ladies of Westminster church provided luncheon in the lecture room during the noon and afternoon adjournments.

IN TIME TO SAVE THE MANSION.

Two Men, Supposed to Be Tramps, Had Set the House Afire.

While John S. Collins was riding home to Westfield from Rahway on his bicycle about midnight yesterday, he came upon two men who had apparently just run out of the old Bird homestead, half a mile out of Westfield on the county road. Mr. Collins's approach had been noiseless, and the men did not see him until he almost ran them down, when they made off across the fields. He noticed a light about the house, and, knowing the place was unoccupied, dismounted and made an investigation. He found that one window just off the piazza had been smashed in and kerosene poured on the floor inside and also outside. He could detect the smell of the oil as soon as he approached.

The men had evidently just applied the match, but the fire was making rapid headway along the oil-soaked sill and floor. Mr. Collins hastily summoned aid, and after some difficulty the flames were extinguished. No trace of the two men could be found, nor has any one the slightest clue to their identity, but it is believed they are tramps, a dozen or more of whom have established a camp a mile below here in the woods.

Early this morning one of the railroad flag-houses was broken into, but nothing of value was taken.

Our Strategists.

The Brooklyn edition of the New York Mail and Express speaks of the next Music Hall attraction (Thursday evening, 20th inst.,) as follows:

"The comedy of 'Our Strategists', at the Brooklyn Academy, as presented by the Gilbert Society, was well staged, and went off with a vim. 'Our Strategists' is from the pen of Dr. Sayres, and was first presented at the Madison Square theater under the management of A. M. Palmer. It was afterwards staged for a starring by J. B. Polk, for several seasons. Dr. Sayres is also the author of 'Mixed Pickles'. Mr. Harris as the irascible old Major Blizzard was inimitable. It was a forceful and finished personation, and in the 'drunk scene' in the second act suggested John Havens's interviews in 'Olivette'."

I suffered for more than ten years with that dreaded disease catarrh, and used every available medicine without any benefit until I used Ely's Cream Balm. [illegible]

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,

Manager. 8 11 tf

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—Bonner has been taken on trial as shortstop for the Wilkes Barre team in the Eastern league.

—The earth taken from the Y. M. C. A. excavation is being utilized to fill in the proposed new extension of Peace street, over-the-brook.

—Dickinson, the jeweler, has been compelled again to postpone his auction sale of watches, jewelry, etc., to next Monday evening, April 24.

—The Old Folks' concert which choirmaster Miner made such a success in Vincent chapel, will be repeated next week Tuesday night.

—Manager Leggett's new light on the Park avenue side of the Central pharmacy, is a great benefit to that part of the street which has been very dark.

—There is but a slight raise in prices for Herrmann's appearance at Music Hall Saturday evening, and that only in the box seats and front rows of the orchestra.

—Keeler, formerly of the Crescents, hasn't been playing third base for the New York league team lately. He is, however, to be given a trial in center field.

—Miller Bros., the enterprising proprietors of Hotel Grenada, have put a new attraction in their cafe—a gripping machine where one can test the strength of his hand grasp.

—Several large fish of the sucker variety were caught from Tier's dam, on Thursday. The lake is filled with German carp, black, and other fish, but they are yet hard to get.

—A shoot at live birds and blue-rocks is being arranged to take place at the road-house on South avenue, early in May. There will be shooters there from many parts of the State.

—It is not generally known, but said to be a fact, that by actual measurement the Netherwood station is 200 feet nearer the Plainfield station than it is to Fanwood. The distance was generally thought to be just the same.

—Terrill road is in a deplorable condition. It is the dividing line between the city limits and Fanwood township, but little or no work has been done by either municipality on the railroad for several years. Some work should be done there, and that very soon.

—The many admirers of Rosa Nouchette Carey will be gratified to learn that the complete novel in the May number of Lippincott's is from her facile and well-tried pen. Its title is "Mrs. Romney". The issue is full of good things, as usual with that popular publication.

—In the works of the Scott Printing Machine company of this city, is an old press which is kept as a curiosity. It was made about sixty years ago in England, and lay fifteen years in the custom house before being released. It is said to have been made for Henry Ward Beecher but was never used by him.

—Messrs. Pierson & Pendleton, honorable business men of Elizabeth, will manage an excursion to the grand naval review, April 27, as announced in another column. The excursion will be a select one, and the number of tickets limited. The round trip from Plainfield is $1.55. The steamship will be in choice position to witness the imposing ceremonies.

—Kilpatrick & Betts, 745 Broad street, Newark, tell the readers of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST to-day of the low prices and superior goods they are offering in spring overcoats and dress suits. We have personally examined the goods advertised, and can truthfully say they are just as advertised. They are honorable men to deal with and we cheerfully recommend them.

Plainfield's Part in the Great Liberty Bell.

Mrs. William Halsey Guerin, of 1189 Broad street, Newark, chairman of the New Jersey Columbian Liberty Bell committee, writes to THE PRESS that she is constantly receiving beautiful and touching souvenirs to be cast into the bell. The first contribution sent in from the churches of New Jersey was from a Hebrew congregation in Trenton.

The Plainfield schools are not likely to contribute to the most worthy cause. Superintendent Maxson, when applied to, said that his teachers were heartily sick of the sound of "the Chicago fair", because of their great efforts in rending maps and "sich like" thereto. He no doubt did not fully understand the application.

But if Plainfield's schools will not contribute, that's all the more reason why the contributions from other Plainfielders should be most liberal. Write to Mrs. Guerin about it, and send in your money or your metal relic, or your filing, or what not, as soon as possible.

The Exempts' New Officers.

The Exempt Firemen's association at their sixth annual meeting Saturday evening elected the following officers:

President—A. Saltzman.
Vice-president—T. J. Gillies.
Secretary—G. Thorn.
Treasurer—Jos. A. Hubbard.
Board of Trustees—D. W. Littell, Alex. Titsworth, Jos. A. Hubbard, Wm. H. Harding and Lewis E. Barkalew.
Representatives to Relief Association—A. Saltzman and G. Thorn.
Representatives to State Association—A. Saltzman, Jos. L. Moore, H. W. Force, J. E. Flannery and G. Thorn.

The seventh annual State convention of the Exempts will be held at Morristown, Wednesday, May 17.

Borough Property Changes Hands.

The following transfers of North Plainfield real estate have recently been recorded:

Edward Shepherd to Justus H. Cooley, $2,500.
Henry D. Morrison to Justus H. Cooley, $400.
Jacob Vochl to Catharine Goodman and others, $4,500.
Abel V. Shotwell to Martin Maris, $2,300.
Zachariah D. Wilson to Martin Roth, jr., $775.
Martin Roth, jr., to Isabella Wilson, $775.
Sarah Wilson Finney to Isabella Wilson, $775.
Charles Pressner to Herman and Augusta Klineman, $800.
Annie L. Wiegel to Ann Powers, $1,200.
Joseph A. Blatz to Alfred I. Smalley, $1,100.

Sheridan Confirmed as Postmaster.

All objections were withdrawn against the nomination of Patrick Sheridan as postmaster of Elizabeth, and the Senate Thursday confirmed his nomination. Without doubt Mr. Sheridan will make a competent official.

A New Church to Spite Jennings.

The Newark News and Westfield Leader say that steps are now being taken to organize another Episcopal church at Westfield and let Mr. Jennings have possession of the one that he seems to have such a firm grip on.

They Never Fail.

J. N. HARRIS, 3 Fulton Market, New York City, says:

"I have been using BRANDRETH'S PILLS for the last fifteen years. There is nothing equal to them as blood purifiers and liver regulators. But I wish to state how remarkably they cure rheumatism, and how easily; I was affected by rheumatism in the legs. My business (wholesale fish dealer) naturally leads me to damp places. I could not walk, and at night I suffered fearfully; I tried Balsams, Sarsaparilla and all kinds of tinctures, but they did me no good and I was afraid of being a cripple. I finally commenced using BRANDRETH'S PILLS. I took two every night for ten nights, then I began to improve. I continued taking them for forty days and I got entirely well. Now, whenever sick I take BRANDRETH'S PILLS. They never fail.

Miss Alice G. Spangenberg, of Netherwood, will speak at the East Third street mission Sunday evening, April 23, at 7:45, on the subject of Christian Endeavor. A society will be formed on the same evening, if possible. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Among the talent at the coming entertainment of the Elizabeth Wheelmen are Clarence Eick, formerly organist of the Plainfield First Presbyterian church, pianist, J. E. Pucci of the Postal Telegraph company, tenor, and T. W. Pucci, his brother, humorist.

Major George Boyd, father of Mrs. E. A. B. Bowers, for so many years a resident of this city, is dead at Hasbrouck Heights. He was in the 83rd year of his age, and revered by a large circle of life long friends. Burial services will be held at Hillside cemetery, to-morrow, after the arrival of the noon train from New York.

Philip Finley, also known as Philip Green, adopted son of Edward Green of Scotch Plains, died in New York Saturday of consumption, aged 23. He was buried from the residence of James Connolly this morning, interment being made in St. Mary's cemetery. He served mass in St. Mary's church, under Father Morris, years ago.

A WORLD'S CONGRESSMAN, ANYWAY.

The Hon. James E. Martine of this city who was robbed of election to the United States congress, has just received his certificate as a member of the "Advisory Council of the World's Congress on Farm Culture and Cereal Industry, and member of the World's Agricultural Congress".

SUCCESS TO HIM.

Theodore Gray, for many years a resident of Plainfield, has pulled up stakes, and sold and rented his real estate, and on Monday he and his family will leave for Portland, Oregon. Mr. Gray will follow his trade, that of mason and builder in his new home. THE PRESS commends him to the people of Portland as an honorable and capable man.

'TWAS A VIOLET AND WHITE EVENT.

Miss Minnie L. Force of Bound Brook charmingly entertained her friends, including a number from this city, at progressive euchre Wednesday afternoon. It was a violet and white event, those colors predominating from the ribbon on the tally cards to the costumes of those who assisted the hostess. Refreshments were gracefully served; and the prizes, which were unique, were won by Miss Jennie VanWinkle, first prize, and the Misses May Stelle and Emma Gillam second prizes.

AFTER THE MILKMEN, NOW.

The Plainfield Board of Health Proposes to Inspect the Cows and the Stables.

According to an order just issued under the authority of a law just passed, the Plainfield Board of Health require that all milkmen must register with the board where they live, where they keep their cattle, whether they sell their own milk, or whether they buy it and where they buy it, in order that the board may inspect the cattle and see if they and their stables are clean.

THAT BEAUTY-SPOT TO GO.

Everything to Be Sacrificed for the Sake of the "Official Grade".

It seems that the elevated sidewalks on East Front street are to be cut down, and all the loveliness of the promenade and fine old shade trees destroyed.

The beauty-spot is a landmark which will be sadly missed. It has been the admiration of all, and a special source of delight to mothers who with their children felt secure above the reach of runaway horses.

By the abolition of the elevations, people are to be depressed below the beautiful lawns of the adjoining private residences.

All this is to be sacrificed to the relentless "official grade" of maps which have been deemed obsolete. The adornments acquired at the sacrifice of much time and money are to be abolished in a twinkling. Natural beauty is to be supplanted by stiff artificiality. The finest fresh-air spot in town is to "go"!

The street committee and the property holders interested met Saturday night. All but Mr. Hyde seem to have been converted to the street commissioner's idea, which is that the change is a necessity and will be an improvement.

MR. GIESE'S GREAT VICTORY.

The Stalwart Policeman Takes a Big Prize Away from Somerset County Germans.

Policeman Charles Giese has proved himself the most popular German in this section, and has as proof of his popularity a handsome souvenir.

Mr. Giese was in the race for the costly set of Schiller's works offered by Der Somerset Bote to the most popular German, the ballots to be cut out of the Bote. All along, H. Reimer of Somerville, who is ambitious to be a consul to Germany, led in the number of votes, but Mr. Giese had a winning card up his sleeve in the shape of many hundreds of votes, which he played at the last minute, winning easily. Here's the record:

C. Giese, Plainfield	[illegible]
H. Reimer, Somerville	[illegible]
Geo. Kunts, Bound Brook	[illegible]

HE'S THE LADIES' PET.

Handsome Officer Kiely Very Popular for His Vigilance and Gallantry.

Those who have to cross North avenue in the morning or late afternoon, when the throngs of carriages going and coming from the station make the crossing difficult if not dangerous, are sure of a safe and easy crossing if they accompany officer Kiely. This popular policeman has recently been transferred from the night force, and all those who have anything to do with him are delighted with his alertness and polite manners.

Sergeant Lynch, who was formerly day officer on this beat, has been transferred to the night force and proves himself quite as efficient after dark as he did bossing the crossing.

MR. HYDE FLOPS.

Mad at His Neighbors, He Leaves Their Church.

It is stated to be a positive fact that Charles Hyde, president of banks, has changed his church because of his East Front street grass-cutting fight.

Mr. Hyde's reason for changing is said to be because he got so disgusted with East Front street neighbors who approve the proposed mutilations. They are members of the Crescent Avenue church, and so he deserts that church and goes over to the First Presbyterians. He's a valuable acquisition for the Rev. C. E. Herring's congregation.

To Run Through Plainfield.

The 100-mile road race of the Atalanta wheelmen is scheduled for June 17. It will be from Newark to Princeton and return by way of Plainfield and Somerville. The club has applied for membership to the Metropolitan Association of Cycling clubs.

WHAT WILL PLAINFIELD SEND?

Get Out Your Treasures of Metal, and Help Build This Great Liberty Bell.

It has been determined by good New Jersey women to create a Columbian Liberty Bell to be placed in the World's Exhibition at Chicago.

Then it will go to Bunker Hill or Liberty Island, to the battle-field of New Orleans (1815), to San Francisco, to the place where any great patriotic celebration is being held, until 1900, when it will go, if permitted, first to Jerusalem, then it will be sent to the next World's Exhibition, which takes place at Paris, France. There it will continue until that Exhibition closes. After the close of the Exhibition this bell will pass from place to place throughout the world as a missionary of freedom.

When not in use in other places, it will return to Washington. Washington will be its home, and from there it will journey from place to place, fulfilling its mission throughout the world.

The following is the proposed use of the bell: It shall ring at sunrise and sunset; at 9 in the morning on the anniversaries of the days on which great events have occurred marking the world's progress toward liberty; at 12 on the birthdays of the "saviors of liberty"; and at 4 it will toll on the anniversaries of their death. By this means the bell will keep continually in the minds of those within reach of its sound, the memories of the men and women who have led in the work for liberty and peace, and the anniversaries of the great events resulting from their efforts.

In creating the bell it is particularly desired that the largest number of persons possible shall have a part in it. For this reason small contributions from many persons are to be asked for, rather than large contributions from a few. They are to be of two kinds:

"Material that can be made a part of the bell; articles of historic interest will be particularly appreciated—gold, silver, bronze, copper, tin and nickel can be fused.

2. Of money with which to pay for the bell. In order that the bell shall be cast April 30, the anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as the first president of the United States, everyone is asked to act at once.

In forwarding material to be melted into the bell, the fullest historical description should be sent. This will be entered carefully in a book which will accompany the bell wherever it goes.

Persons having historical treasures too sacred to be sent as a whole, can send the smallest filing. In illustration, the committee have applied to the Regents of Mount Vernon for the smallest filing from the key of the Bastile, which was presented by General Lafayette to General Washington.

As the motto has not yet been decided on, any ideas on this subject will be gratefully received. The committee will also welcome suggestions of events to be celebrated and names to be commemorated.

Contributions of money should be sent to the Liberty National Bank, corner Liberty and West streets, and a duplicate letter written, as a notification of the same, to Mrs. William Halsey Guerin, 1189 Broad street, Newark, N. J. Contributions of material should be packed in packages not to exceed ten pounds in weight and marked: Clinton H. Meneely Bell Co., Troy, N. Y., for Columbian Liberty Bell, and delivered to U. S. Express company, when they will be transported by their courtesy free.

Anyone from this section sending contributions is requested to notify THE PRESS so that it may keep a record of Plainfield's representation in the great bell. It would be a good idea for every school child to give a cent.

THE PROFIT DECREASED.

Little Use Was Made of Their Income, to the Shareholders' Loss.

W. R. Strythers, secretary of the Home Building and Loan association, reports:

The last six months have been the least profitable in our existence, principally for the reason that but little use has been made of our income.

Our loan account is now	[illegible]
At last statement	[illegible]
An increase of	7,[illegible]
of which were taken in March	[illegible]
showing an increase for four months of only	1,[illegible]

To counterbalance this lack of demand it has been necessary to request large withdrawals of funds. We have paid during the six months to withdrawing members, $14,[illegible]. Another result of the slack demand for money is seen in our premium account. Not only has the rate bid on new loans, materially decreased, but old borrowers have been able to lessen their premiums, and our premium account showed a decrease instead of its usual gradual increase.

This reduction of premiums however, inasmuch as it tends to equalize the burdens of borrowers is rather healthy than otherwise, and should result in a larger demand for money at the cheaper rate. During the whole term, the rate bid has not reached seven per cent.

The net gain is $[illegible] and is at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum.

Expenses were $[illegible] averaging [illegible] cents per share.

Entrance fees	$114.[illegible]
Fines	[illegible]
	$[illegible]
Taken from Premiums	$[illegible]

Net cost for six months 4 4-10 cents per share. Our present membership is 300, of whom 44 are borrowers on real estate. 407 shares were taken in the Tenth Series.

Mayor Saunders's Live Industry.

The Ingersoll-Sergeant Rock Drill company will, on May 1, remove its business offices from 10 Park place, New York, to a handsome suite of seven rooms on the tenth floor of the new Havemeyer Building, Church, Cortlandt and Dey streets. This company has the most extensive manufactory of rock excavating machinery in the world. It has made over fourteen thousand rock drills, in addition to air compressors, coal mining machines, channeling machines for quarries and tunneling machinery. The Ingersoll-Sergeant company has supplied complete plants for working mines and quarries and driving tunnels in every country on the globe. One of their patrons is the British Government, which buys machinery for mining in its Anglo-Indian possessions. The company has branches in England, Africa, Mexico, Australia and South America. The company's head and front is the brilliant engineer, Mayor Saunders of North Plainfield.

Arbor Day, April 28.

Governor Werts has designated Friday, April 28, as Arbor Day, and it is hoped that the observance will be general and lead to larger knowledge of the great subject of forest culture. It shows little knowledge of trees or regard for their comfort to plant them within fifteen feet of each other, where they starve and deprive one another of light, air and nutriment, and eventually are cut down, having done more harm than good.

A PLAINFIELD GIRL IN GREEK.

Miss Cooley Will Play the Important Role of Teiresias.

The Greek department of Vassar College will give the long talked of representation of the Antigone of Sophocles in the original Greek at the Poughkeepsie opera-house Friday evening, May 26, at 8. The parts will be taken entirely by students of the college, and the play will be performed as nearly as possible in the manner of an Athenian tragedy of the time of Sophocles. Mendelssohn's Antigone music has been adapted for the choruses, and will be sung with full orchestral accompaniment by a regular chorus of fifteen, assisted by a supplementary chorus, all made up of students of the college.

The play has been chosen chiefly because the interest centers around one of the noblest types of womanhood in all literature. Throughout all time the devoted Antigone will stir all hearts with admiration and pity as she goes to her doom, beautiful and strong in her deep and tender love for her brother, and her courage to dare and do and die for the right.

The simplicity of the plot but heightens the tragic grandeur of the play. The king, Creon, has forbidden anyone under penalty of death, to bury Polynices, that his spirit may wander, a hopeless outcast in the realms below. Nevertheless Antigone, the sister of Polynices, buries him, having sought first but in vain, to enlist the help of her sister Ismene. She is discovered and brought before the king. She fearlessly avows her deed. By his order she is entombed alive, and she hangs herself in her rock-hewn tomb.

But the righteousness of her deed is vindicated. It was a sacred duty for the nearest of kin to bury the dead, and because Creon had set his will above the will of the gods, and stubbornly resisted even the warning counsel of the seer Teiresias, he is brought down to the depths of anguish. His son Haemon, the betrothed of Antigone, slays himself and Eurydice, his queen, dies by her own hand when she hears of Haemon's death. Desolate and broken-hearted, Creon learns too late that "Great words of prideful men are ever punished with great blows" and that "Reverence towards the gods must be inviolate".

The important part of Teiresias will be taken by Miss Cooley of this city.

OF INTEREST TO MUSICIANS.

An Exhibition of Ability to be Sent to the World's Fair.

The board of lady managers of the World's Columbian Exposition, of whom Mrs. David P. Hall of this city is one, propose to have among the many other features at the Exposition an exhibition of ability in music, both vocal and instrumental. The expert juries to be appointed in Chicago will not hear applicants until the opening of the Exposition on and after May 1, 1893, and will hear no one without a letter of recommendation from her State advisory committee on music. Such committees will be appointed in each State and Territory, and will consist of the resident musicians in different sections of the State, so that candidates for vocal and instrumental examinations may not be obliged to traverse great distances. The artists who are considered worthy of distinction by the Chicago expert juries will receive the honor of an invitation to perform in the small concert hall or in the Woman's Building during the Exposition. Considerable interest is shown in the matter in this State, and in Newark, April 18, at 2 p. m., at 1060 Broad street, a musical contest will be held and medals given by the New Jersey State board of lady managers to the ladies showing the greatest proficiency in the art of vocal and instrumental music. All lady musicians in the State are cordially invited to take part. Violin playing will receive the same attention as piano playing. This contest will be held to decide whether the performance of the musicians is sufficiently good to entitle them to a letter of recommendation to the expert juries above alluded to.

It will also be the duty of the State advisory committee to decide whether applicants are artists, amateurs or professionals.

THE CRESCENTS OF '93.

Captain Hofford's Team All Complete Except the Pitcher.

The Plainfield Amusement company has not yet found a pitcher good enough for this year's Crescents, although a number of highly recommended twirlers have been given a trial. One of three or four in view, will be signed in a few days, however. The team as now engaged is composed of:

Hofford, catcher; Jones, first base; Romer, second base; Smith, short-stop; Heckman, third base; McIndoe, left field; Leidy, center field, and Fritz, right field.

Reservations of Pullman Accommodations for the World's Fair on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company announces that arrangements have been perfected whereby passengers intending to go to Chicago may reserve their Pullman car accommodations in advance. Passengers taking a train at New York may reserve the requisite Pullman space one month in advance of departure, those from other points on the system two weeks in advance. This arrangement may be made upon application to ticket agents of the Pennsylvania railroad, who, after securing the space, will deliver a reservation slip to the passenger. Passengers thus reserving space in advance will be required to purchase their tickets seven days before the date of departure, otherwise the reservation will be considered as forfeited.

Accommodations in Pullman cars for the return trip may also be secured upon application to ticket agents of the Pennsylvania railroad.

This arrangement will prove a great benefit to visitors to the World's Fair.

Rough Walking in the Borough.

The planking from the sidewalk to the roadway on the east corner of Grove street and Craig place, is in a dangerous condition. The Somerset county freeholders or the borough street commissioner should look after it.

The best builders use only the best materials—lumber, brick, lime, cement, sand—whatever goes into the construction of a building; they employ only the best workmen and pay the best wages; they get better prices for their work than their less careful competitors, and always get the best contracts; they paint their work with

HYMENEAL.

Bornman—Newmiller.

The many friends of John Bornman, member of the township committee of Warren, also the postmaster of Warrenville, are congratulating him on his marriage to Miss Kate Newmiller, daughter of Peter Newmiller, the town clerk.

J. B. Cheever, formerly of Plainfield but now of Bound Brook, tied the nuptial knot, at the home of the officiating clergyman, Easter Sunday.

His friends soon found it out, and a night or two later gave him a serenade at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple entertained their friends in royal good style.

The young men had brought their women friends with them, and all soon were dancing the evening away, after which supper was served. The best wishes of their friends were bestowed on bride and groom, and amid cheers for the "ever genial John" the guests started for home.

Minton—Laing.

The following is taken from the Red Bank Standard of this week. The groom is a grandson of Isaac W. Laing of this city, and has a host of friends here. THE PRESS extends congratulation to the newly-wedded couple.

"Miss Cecelia C. Minton, daughter of James Minton of Red Bank, and Isaac W. Laing of Dunellen, N. J., were quietly married yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage of the First Methodist church by the Rev. George L. Dobbins. Mr. and Mrs. Minton, the parents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith W. Laing, the parents of the groom, were the only witnesses to the marriage. After the ceremony the couple departed for the bride's home where a reception was tendered them. The bride and groom went to Dunellen yesterday afternoon, where they make their home. The groom is well known to the people of this town, he having lived here for several years. He is an excellent fancy skater, a good bicyclist and an accomplished young man in many ways. He is in the wholesale drug business in New York.

"The bride is a blonde, slightly below medium height, and with a good figure. She wore a light-colored traveling dress with hat and jacket to match. The couple received a large number of handsome and useful presents."

Somerville's Base-Ball Season.

(From The Harlingville Democrat.)

Oh, yes; we are going to have base-ball this year, but of a somewhat different sort than in '92. It will be for blood, not for pecuniary gain. Last year the people were disgusted with the closing exhibition and vowed never to support a professional team again. In this they were right, as here in town there is the available material to make a corking team. Perhaps the scores will be a little larger, and the base-hit column more filled up, but what of that, no one likes to see a game played by a battery and seven men do nothing. When the players are known, people take much more interest, and when a player is working for glory alone how grand it is to win.

For the past month Manager Louis C. Mack has been doing a great deal of hustling in getting the fellows interested and arranging games with other teams of a like class. At last he has succeeded in getting the ball-tossers awakened, and for the past two weeks the ball field has been torn up and trampled on by the men getting in training. On two occasions the whole team was out, and the general make-up seems very good.

Manager Mack has not decided fully where he will put the men, but now the general idea seems to be that the men will play as follows: Harkins and Francis, battery; L. C. Mack, first base; E. Decker, second base; C. Pool or W. W. Major, shortstop; H. Major, third base; outfield, Frelinghuysen, Conkling, Hoffman, Speer, F., Speer, T., Garretson. These, of course, may be changed at the discretion of the manager. All of the men cannot play at once, but all who get in trim will be given the chance to play now and then. Like the New Jersey Athletic Club, more men than needed will be kept in training, so that there will always be a full team on hand.

The games arranged so far by Mr. Mack are with Flemington, Washington, Stevens, Rutgers, Pennington, Westfield, College of the City of New York, New Jersey Athletic Club and Staten Island Athletic Club. Others will be arranged. The season will open with Stevens Institute on May 6.

Senator McPherson Ill.

A Jersey Democrat writes to a New York paper under date of April 11, as follows:

"United States Senator Smith came home to vote to-day, like a good citizen, and after casting his ballot he returned to his duties in Washington. I failed to see in any of the papers the slightest reference to Senator McPherson in the same connection."

Senator McPherson has been very ill with the grip and at times could not even attend the meetings of the Senate. It was impossible for him to travel in such a state of health, else he would have been home to vote along with senator Smith.

$1,000,000 ON PLAINFIELD STREETS.

Magnificent Free Show to Be Given Next Month, with the Coming of the Circus.

THE people of Plainfield will be treated to an absolutely new and magnificent free street exhibition in connection with the coming of the Barnum & Bailey circus May 3. With their usual disregard of expense and with the energy that has characterized every effort of Barnum & Bailey, they have designed an entirely new street parade—"a million-dollar pageant"—for the pleasure of the people, and when it is stated that it is freely offered upon the same generous scale as the performances within the tents, one can easily imagine its magnificent splendors. All the principal events in American history are illustrated by living figures on costly chariots, and Arabian Nights stories, nursery rhymes, children's fables and childhood's dreams are likewise beautifully pictured by living tableaux. As the bills on the fences say, "it is worth coming miles to see, and once seen is never forgotten." The following order of march will tell the story of its magnitude. The parade will take place about 9 in the morning of May 3.

DOCTORS CHOOSE THEIR LEADERS.

A Plainfield Physician to Preside, and One From Scotch Plains to Handle the Funds.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Union County Medical Society was held at Elizabeth, Wednesday evening, and on the invitation of the retiring president, Dr. William A. M. Mack, the gathering was at Ross's. After the business Dr. Mack gave a dinner to the society. It was an elaborate affair, and the physicians and surgeons from all parts of the county were the participants.

At the meeting several papers were read, and Dr. Mravlag presented an interesting post-mortem case.

The new officers of the society, who were chosen Wednesday night, are: President—Dr. M. B. Long, of Plainfield; vice-president—Dr. H. Page Hough, of Rahway; secretary—Dr. Norton L. Wilson, Elizabeth; treasurer—Dr. F. W. Westcott, Scotch Plains; reporter—Dr. Dayton Decker, Woodbridge.

WILLABALD EPILEPTIC.

He Has Twenty Violent Fits in Jail.

Fred Willabald of this city, a prisoner in the Union county jail, was attacked with epilepsy Wednesday night and had twenty violent fits between midnight and yesterday morning. Warden Blore and his deputy, Mr. Smith, and Dr. Miller were up all night with the patient. It took six men to hold him. He was better yesterday.

Willabald is charged with grand larceny. It is alleged that he stole over $160 from the American News company and Central railroad agent Nelson of this city. Willabald will be tried at the May term.

WHO'LL BE DIRECTOR?

A Possible Struggle in the Union County Board.

There may be a contest for the directorship of the Union county board of freeholders at the annual meeting in May. The candidates named are freeholders Sauer, Moore and Trahon. The struggle is likely to be between Moore and Sauer, both good Democrats.

It's Only Another Fake.

The Plainfield correspondent of the New York Recorder draws his material from the Courier office, and this is the sort of stuff it is:

"The Plainfield hackmen are becoming piratical in their charges for services. As soon as they spot a stranger they swoop down upon him, and, if possible, hustle him into their cabs without allowing him to inquire the fare. Upon arriving at the destination they spring an outrageous price upon him. Several cases have come to light where parties from New York have been charged $1.50, when the city ordinance only allows a fare of 25 cents. Complaints are to be made against several of the hackmen."

FAITHS OF PRESIDENTS.

They All Seemed to Have Believed in God.

Lincoln Was Not an Infidel—Declared His Intention of Making a Profession of Faith Before His Assassination—"Old Hickory's" Conversion.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

Everybody in New York has heard of the remark recently made by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll to the effect that Abraham Lincoln was no more a Christian than Voltaire was. This has given rise to a discussion of the religious views of the martyr president which promises to have a long run.

It is a remarkable fact that of the twenty-three presidents of the United States very little is recorded by the biographers of the majority of them as to their religious faith. It is further remarkable that as to all of the greatest of them, Washington excepted, there was much doubt during their lives and much discussion after their deaths as to whether they were Christians at all; and, if they were, to what classification of Christians they properly belonged. By common consent the greatest presidential names are those of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant.

Everybody knows that Washington was a member of the Episcopal church of Virginia, in good and regular standing; that he resorted to prayer at all the critical moments in his career, and attributed to Almighty God direct personal interposition in his behalf and that of the American people. Early in 1776 he wrote to the Continental congress earnestly asking for chaplains for the army. "The blessing and protection of Heaven are at all times necessary," he wrote, "but especially so in time of public distress and danger. The general hopes and trusts that every officer and man will endeavor to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier."

In August of the same year he issued the following notice to his army at New York: "The general is sorry to be informed that the foolish and profane practice of cursing and swearing, a vice hitherto little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes that the officers will by example as well as by influence endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little hope of the blessing of Heaven on our cause if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it."

When Lord Cornwallis had capitulated and the cause of independence was won Washington issued this order to the army: "Divine service is to be performed to-morrow in the several brigades and divisions. The commander-in-chief earnestly recommends that the troops not on duty should universally attend with that seriousness of deportment and gratitude of heart which the recognition of such reiterated and astonishing interpositions of Providence demands of us."

Next came President John Adams. He was a Congregationalist, the descendant of a long line of Puritan ancestors. He was baptized October 26, 1735, in the First church of Quincy, Mass., not unfairly called "The Church of Statesmen," because within its walls have worshiped the Adamses, the Quincys and the Hancocks. But John Adams was by no means a Puritan of the Calvinistic type. The First church of Quincy was a Unitarian church to all intents and purposes long before Channing preached his famous Baltimore sermon, which brought about the separation of the Unitarians from the Trinitarian Congregationalists in New England.

When we come to Thomas Jefferson it is not so easy to define his religious status. He was freely denounced during his lifetime, especially from the pulpits of New England, as a "godless man," and was very commonly classified, as Col. Ingersoll has just classified Abraham Lincoln, with the great French philosopher and skeptic, Voltaire. There can be no sort of doubt now, however, that Mr. Jefferson was a profoundly religious man. His morality was never questioned, and if he were alive to-day, leading the same life that he led and expressing the same opinions which he expressed in his own time, he would be a welcome member of any liberal Christian church. When Mrs. John Adams died in November, 1818, President Jefferson wrote to her husband in these words: "I will not by useless condolences open afresh the sluices of your grief, * * * nor will I say a word more where words are vain, but that it is some comfort to us both that the time is not very distant at which we are to deposit in the same cerement our sorrows and suffering bodies, and to ascend in essence to an ecstatic meeting with the friends we have loved and lost and whom we shall still love and never lose again. God bless you and support you under your heavy affliction." Imagine the hidebound bigotry of an age in which such a man could be widely denounced as an infidel.

[Where John Adams had a pew near the pulpit.]

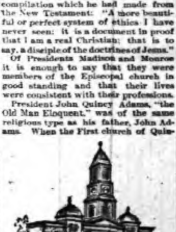
Thomas Jefferson records in his diary that it was his nightly habit to read over a collection of passages which he had himself compiled from the four Gospels, composed entirely of words that came directly from the lips of Christ. He wrote to a friend as to this compilation which he had made from the New Testament: "A more beautiful or perfect system of ethics I have never seen: it is a document in proof that I am a real Christian: that is to say, a disciple of the doctrines of Jesus."

Of Presidents Madison and Monroe it is enough to say that they were members of the Episcopal church in good standing and that their lives were consistent with their professions.

President John Quincy Adams, "the Old Man Eloquent," was of the same religious type as his father, John Adams. When the First church of Quin-



FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, WASHINGTON.

[Where many presidents have worshiped, Mr. Cleveland among them.]

cy held its two hundredth anniversary in 1839 John Quincy Adams wrote a special hymn for the occasion, and we get some idea both of his quality as a poet and his faith as a Christian from its lines:

"Alas, how swift the moments fly,
How flash the years along!
Scarce here, yet gone already by—
The burden of a song.
See childhood, youth and manhood pass,
And age with furrowed brow;
Time was, time shall be—turn the glass—
But where is time to be?

Time is the measure but of change,
No present hour is found;
The past, the future fill the range
Of time's unceasing round.

Where, [illegible]
With God's atoning Lamb,
In regions of eternal love,
Where sits enthroned I AM.
Then, pilgrim, let thy joys and tears
On time no longer lean,
But henceforth all thy hopes and fears
From earth's affections wean.
To God let votive accents rise;
With truth, with virtue live,
So all the bliss that time denies Eternity shall give."

It is said of President John Quincy Adams that when his hair had been whitened by the frosts of four score winters he was still accustomed to repeat every night before he slept the prayer which his mother had taught him in infancy, the familiar "Now I lay me down to sleep." He died, like England's great earl of Chatham, from a stroke of paralysis while he was speaking from his place in the national legislature.

A far different figure in the presidential panorama is that of Andrew Jackson, whose wild boyhood filled his good Presbyterian mother with the darkest fears both for his temporal and spiritual welfare. His early manhood and his mature life were admittedly unchristian. His profanity was marvelous. He swore great, strange oaths, such as were never heard before or since, and he kept it up until he was quite an old man. At Salisbury, N. C., where he lived as a youth, it is recorded that he was "the most roaring, rollicking, game cocking, horse racing, card playing, mischievous fellow that ever lived in the town."

At a series of revival meetings held near "The Hermitage" after his retirement from the presidency Gen. Jackson was converted and made a public profession of repentance and faith in Christ. In the modest little church near his mansion, buried in the forests of Tennessee, Old Hickory knelt humbly at the altar and was baptized and became a member of the Presbyterian church. After that he conducted family prayers in his home every day. On June 8, 1845, he felt that death was near and summoned his family around him. He took leave of each member of it separately and then spoke for nearly half an hour with great earnestness on the subject of religion, closing with these words: "My dear children and friends and servants, I hope and trust to meet you all in Heaven, both white and black."

As to President Martin Van Buren's religious status his biographers are singularly silent. They all say of him, however, that he was a man of irreproachable morality. President William Henry Harrison was of the old aristocratic stock of Virginia and an Episcopalian. On sundry occasions he placed himself upon record as a man of strong Christian convictions. He declined to fight a duel because, he said "a sense of higher obligations than human laws or human opinions can impose" had determined him never to do so.

President John Tyler was another of the old Virginia school of statesmen, and he, too, was an Episcopalian. Then came President James K. Polk. He made no profession of faith until he was stricken with death. On his way to his home in Nashville, Tenn., he was seized with the cholera and rapidly sank. Before the end came he received the rite of baptism at the hands of a Methodist clergyman. Of his successor, President Zachary Taylor, nothing definite is said by his biographers, and it seems tolerably certain that he was not a regular communicant of any church. His wife was a devout Episcopalian, and it seems that he gave a general assent and support to the same faith. He was, as is well known, a thoroughly illiterate man, and it is not likely that he ever troubled his mind to inquire into the difference between the creeds of the various religious sects. Gen. Scott says of him that "he had a contempt for learning of every kind," but nevertheless "had the true basis of great character—pure, uncorrupted morals, combined with indomitable courage."

When he came to die, after a brief sickness of only five days, he had no misgivings, but calmly said: "I am not afraid to die. I am ready. I have endeavored to do my duty." What more than this can any Christian say?

President Millard Fillmore, who followed him, was a man of unostentatious piety. He always showed great reverence for the Bible, and by affiliation, if not by actual membership, was a Baptist. His wife was the daughter of a Baptist clergyman. President Franklin Pierce, who followed Fillmore, was a communist of the Episcopal church, and Nathaniel Hawthorne, in his biography of him, says that he had "a wide-embracing sympathy for all forms of Christian worship and a reverence for individual belief as a matter between the Deity and man's soul with which no other has a right to interfere."

President James Buchanan was all his life a man of reverent and pure character, but it was not until after he had retired from the presidency that he made a formal profession of faith and became a member of the Presbyterian church.

Now we come to President Lincoln, whom Col. Ingersoll says held religious views akin to those of Voltaire. It is no doubt true that he never at any time in his life was a member of a church in good and regular standing. Yet from his earliest youth and all through his great career he is on record as holding and expressing convictions which are essentially Christian, tinged, perhaps, with a shade of spiritualism. Writing about his father's death, he affirmed his belief that the broken family circle would be reunited beyond the grave. He spoke often and most reverently of his "angel mother." Both his parents, by the way, were members of the Baptist church.

He never would touch intoxicating liquor and never was heard to use a profane word. He believed in dreams and omens and thought his wife had the gift of prophecy. One dream that he had shortly after his first nomination was interpreted by Mrs. Lincoln to mean that he would be twice elected but would not live through his second term—a prophecy that was sadly fulfilled. Time and again he declared his belief in the teachings of the Bible and in the intervention of the Almighty in the affairs of nations as well as of individuals. He held that slavery was wrong, because Christ and the New Testament taught liberty.

When he was leaving Springfield in March, 1861, to take his seat as president, he spoke to his neighbors and said: "A duty devolves upon me which is perhaps greater than that which has devolved upon any other man since the days of Washington. He never would have succeeded except for the aid of Divine Providence, upon which he at all times relied. I feel that I cannot succeed without the same Divine aid which sustained him. In the same Almighty Being I place my reliance for support; and I hope that my friends will all pray that I may receive that Divine assistance, without which I cannot succeed, but with which success is certain."

While one of the great battles of the war was in progress he retired to his room with his Bible and was overheard praying with as much earnestness and faith as the most devout church member could show. Yet on one occasion he is reported as saying positively he was not a Christian, though he wished he could be. To a lady connected with the Christian commission he frankly said at a later day that he hoped he was a Christian and that it was his intention at a suitable opportunity to make a public religious profession. He died, however, without making it, but clergymen of nearly every denomination stood around his coffin and eulogized him with a warmth which showed that they were certainly far from classifying him with the great French skeptic, Voltaire.

President Andrew Johnson was at times fervidly pious, and many of his speeches on occasions of great public excitement were freely embellished with references to the Deity and quotations from Scripture, but if he ever was a member of any particular denomination of Christians his biographers do not say so. He seems to have had Methodist leanings. On one occasion, while he was governor of Tennessee, he is reported to have asked Col. Moody, a Methodist clergyman serving with the union army in that state, to pray with him. The chaplain prayed and Mr. Johnson said to him: "I don't [illegible] [illegible] you to pray. I am sorry to say it, but I am not and never pretended to be religious. But, Moody, there is one thing about it. I do believe in Almighty God and I believe also in the Bible, and I say d—n me if Nashville shall be surrendered!"

This anecdote doubtless affords a fair index of President Johnson's religious character. He believed in God and in prayer, but made no formal declaration of his faith.

President Grant, as is well known, was affiliated with the Methodist church. He was a man who always spoke reverently of sacred things, and in many of his public utterances acknowledged his faith in God. When accepting his commission as lieutenant general of the union armies from President Lincoln he used these words: "I feel the full weight of the responsibility now devolving upon me. I know that if it is properly met it will be due to the armies and, above all, to the favor of that Providence which leads both nations and men." Many similar expressions came from his lips on like grave occasions.

President Hayes was a devout member of the Methodist church. President Garfield was a member of the Church of Christ, or the Campbellite church as it is otherwise called. President Arthur was an Episcopalian, and our two last presidents, Mr. Harrison and Mr. Cleveland, both belong to the Presbyterian fold. And this exhausts our brief religious review of the presidents.

JAMES W CLARKE, A. M.

AMERICAN DIPLOMACY.

Two Gentlemen Who Will Reflect Honor on Their Country.

Ex-Senator James B. Eustis, the New Ambassador to Paris—The Career of Hon. Theodore Runyon, Minister to Germany.

There are few men in the country better fitted by nature and training for the French mission than ex-Senator James B. Eustis, whom Mr. Cleveland has just appointed to the post. Mr. Eustis, says Harper's Weekly, is a man of various accomplishments. He is a lawyer so learned in his profession that he has been professor in the state university of the civil or French law, which prevails in Louisiana. While he was in active life he was a leader in a bar that numbers some very acute minds. He has been especially a student of international law, and is thoroughly acquainted with the diplomatic history of this country. He has lived many years in Paris, and speaks the French tongue as well as his own. He is rich, agreeable, cultivated and popular. He will transact the business between the United States and France with ability, and personally and socially will more than maintain the reputation which our recent ministers have won in Paris.

Mr. Eustis was born in New Orleans fifty-nine years ago. He was graduated at Harvard college law school in 1854. During the war of the rebellion he first served on Gen. Magruder's staff as judge advocate general, and afterwards until the end of the war on Gen. Johnston's staff. He was a member of the state legislature, and in 1872 he was nominated for congressman at large. A fusion ticket was made after this nomination, however, and Mr. Eustis' name was dropped. After serving in both houses of the state legislature, he was elected to fill a vacancy in the United States senate. His service here was for two years, from 1877 to 1879. When he retired he became professor of civil law at the University of Louisiana, and occupied the chair until 1884, when he was again elected to the senate. During this term he was a member of the committee on foreign affairs. He retired in 1891, but continued to reside in Washington, where he had built a handsome house. Soon after Mr. Cleveland's inauguration Mr. Eustis became dissatisfied with the president's appointments. He was not a believer in civil service reform that kept republicans in office, and was one of the first, perhaps the very first, of the democratic senators, who believed in "turning out the rascals," to break with the president. He authorized an interviewer to say for him that, in his judgment, "Mr. Cleveland, thus far, from a democratic standpoint, has been a conspicuous and humiliating failure." In 1892, however, Mr. Eustis was the first to recognize the necessity of Mr. Cleveland's renomination, and appeared as a speaker at the Tremont temple ratification meeting which was held in Boston immediately after the convention.

Theodore Runyon, who has been named as minister to Germany, has long been looked upon as one of the state's best and ablest democrats. That he has not been in active politics during recent years is due to the fact that the democratic party of New Jersey has been under the control of men who have been unable to appreciate Mr. Runyon's sterling character. He is the kind of American who increases respect for this country in Europe, an American who believes in the country and its institutions, and whose character and abilities make him equal to any position in which he may be placed. Mr. Runyon was born at Somerville, N. J., in 1822, and was graduated at Yale college in 1842. He was admitted to the bar in 1846, and has practiced his profession at Newark continuously with the exception of the years during which he served in the army and as chancellor. He was a brigadier general of militia when the war broke out, and took his brigade to Washington at once. It is said that this New Jersey brigade was the first fully equipped and organized brigade to reach the capital. Mr. Runyon was candidate for presidential elector in 1860, and was mayor of Newark for two years. He ran for governor in 1865 against Marcus L. Ward and was defeated. In 1873 he was appointed chancellor, and was reappointed in 1880. Gov. Abbett refused to reappoint him because he declined to take the stump while he held a judicial position.

WRESTLING FOR LIFE.

Fitzhugh Lee's Encounter with an Indian Brave.

Two Sturdy Men Locked in Each Other's Arms in a Death Struggle—The White Man Saved by the Back Heel Trip.

One of the best stories heard in the hotel corridors for a long time was told by Capt. Jack Hayes, the Indian fighter and friend of Col. "Bill" Cody, to the Washington Star representative. Capt. Hayes is from Cleveland, O. He is the brave and lifelong friend of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

"It was in the winter of [illegible] at Camp Colorado, Tex.," said Capt. Hayes. "Our scouts reported a body of Indians that had massacred settlers and driven off their stock. Gen. Van Dorn —then major—was in command. Gen. Lee was a lieutenant and I was a bugler. It was night and snowing hard. We started after them, made eighteen miles that night, fifty miles the next day and camped. It happened that the Indians we were pursuing had camped but three miles ahead of us. As I said, it was very cold and the Indians had their blankets up over their heads, so they did not hear us, as the next day we came upon them suddenly, and they would not have discovered us until we would have been right on top of them had not one of our men accidentally discharged his revolver. We charged. The Indians scattered. There was a ridge of timber a few miles away. Two of the braves made for the timber. Gen. Lee and I pursued them. We killed one. We pursued the other fellow through the timber for several miles, his trail being visible in the snow. When we reached the open plain he had disappeared. We knew that he was hiding in one of the gulches. In a few moments we discovered his pony. Turning, we saw him on the other side of an undulation in the prairie. As he reached the top of the divide he waved his shield and yelled defiance at us. We put after him, but could not find him in the ledges of rock. Lee then proposed that we separate, which we did.

"It seems that the Indian was but about thirty feet from Gen. Lee at the time hiding behind a ledge of rocks. As Lee came upon him he fired an arrow at him. Lee saw him in time to dodge and the arrow went through his arm, breaking off. The Indian was a chief—a big, tall, powerful, muscular fellow, over six feet in height. Gen. Lee was then a small man, but he is the bravest and pluckiest man in the city to-day. In a moment more they were locked in each other's arms in a death struggle. The general was carrying his revolver in his right hand. The Indian grasped the barrel and the weapon was discharged, but he was not hit. The pistol dropped to the ground. Lee knew that his only salvation was to hug the Indian; for the latter had his knife in his hand, and as they swayed to and fro packing the snow beneath their feet he was unable to plunge his knife in his adversary's body. I started to his rescue, but did not dare to shoot as I advanced, as they were twisting and writhing so [illegible] afraid of killing my comrade.

"In another minute they were on the ground and Lee on top. As [illegible] it they fell near the revolver. In a second of time allowed Lee [illegible] pistol and discharged it; the ball going through the cheeks and mouth of the savage without even knocking out a tooth, for his mouth was open in a yell. In another second, however, the next ball crashed in his brain. The general disengaged himself from the tight embrace of the savage, and getting to his feet he shook himself [illegible] of his body to see whether he was wounded, for the knife had cut his coat. I was fearful lest he had been injured, and asked him how he felt. He replied: 'Oh, I am all right; I'm getting my muscle up,' raising his arm as if he were tightening [illegible] 'When I went to college,' he [illegible] 'I used to be very fond of [illegible] and it came in very good play to-day. At the last moment I threw in the "Virginia back heel" trip, and down the redskin went.'"

The Extinct Northern Sea Cow.

In the year [illegible] the Behring explorers discovered gigantic sea cows, rytinae, or "northern sea cows," enormous manatees [illegible] general habits to those of [illegible] American coast and were from [illegible] feet in length and from 10 to [illegible] in girth. They were very stupid, harmless beasts, and lived by browsing on sea-weeds and other marine [illegible] near the land. The fellows were slow in finding out that a [illegible] steak beat seal meat "all hollow." From 1754 until 1768 they were the principal food of the sailors and explorers on our western coast. [illegible] ing the case, it is not at all surprising that the northern sea cow, a very numerous species, should become extinct in the short space of [illegible] The last of the giant manatees was killed in September, 1768, a few years less than 14 years after the discovery of the first one.

CHARLOTTE YONGE.

One of the Most Popular Writers of [illegible] Years Ago.

Thirty years ago the most popular work of fiction in the English [illegible] was "The Heir of Redclyffe." It appeared in 1853, and by 1868 [illegible] a seventeenth edition. It has been responsible, says the Illustrated American, for many tears shed over the heroine's appearance at her husband's funeral in her [illegible] dress. We own to having had a good cry over that churchyard scene.

The author, Charlotte Mary Yonge, is the only daughter of an army officer and magistrate of Hampshire, England. She was born at Otterbourne, in that county, fifty-[illegible] years ago. She was brought up in what was called in those days the high church, but which to-day would be considered almost broad church. When [illegible] twenty-one years old she [illegible] "Abbey Church; or, Self-Control and Self-Conceit," which was followed by several novels in the interest of high church doctrine and [illegible] volumes of history for youth in England, entitled "Kings of England," "Landmarks of History." Then appeared "The Heir of Redclyffe," and Charlotte M. Yonge became a household name.

"Heartsease," "Dynevor Terrace," "The Daisy Chain," "The Young Stepmother; or, a Chronicle of Mistakes," "Hopes and Fears, or Scenes from the Life of a Spinster," "The [illegible]," "Lynwood," "The Little Duke," "The Dove in the Eagle's Nest" followed in succession.

Out of the profits she made from "The Daisy Chain" Miss Yonge gave $10,000 for the building of a missionary college at Auckland, New Zealand, and she devoted a great portion of the proceeds of "The Heir of Redclyffe" to the fitting out of the missionary schooner, Southern Cross, for the use of Bishop Selwyn.

In 1863 Miss Yonge published an interesting work called a "[illegible] Christian Names," and "The[illegible]" [illegible] lish Missionary Workers," "[illegible] "Life of John [illegible] [illegible] tory for the [illegible] to History, a Story of the Captivity of Mary of Scotland," "Stray Pearls, Memoirs of Margaret de Ribaumont, Viscountess of Bellaise," "Nettie's [illegible]," the "Reputed Changeling."

Miss Yonge is not a great writer. She is not a George Eliot, a Jane Austen, nor a Charlotte Bronte, but she is a charming author.

Cows Who Wear Blue Spectacles.

Cows that wear blue spectacles just like Boston schoolma'ams! Here's a topic for Bill Nye to exercise his wildest hilariousness upon. A story comes from Moravia to the effect that all the cows in that part of the country are "humped in the rail fence corners chewing their cuds with great blue spectacles fastened before their eyes." It seems that the ground in that country has been covered with snow since the latter part of October. Nearly every day has been clear and cold, the reflection of the sunlight from the snow being very disastrous to the eyes of both man and beast. Thousands of cattle went entirely blind before the attention of the government director of agriculture was called to the fact. That gentleman, Dr. Verimourt, recommended blue spectacle glasses, set in wooden or wire frames, and the result is that thousands of cows are now roaming about over the Moravian pastures looking too sedate and learned for anything.

Return of the Earring.

The returning wave of early Victorian incongruity has brought the revival of that relic of barbarism, the earring, which the common sense of the last years had almost stamped out. During the last two seasons even the insignificant earstud had ceased to find favor with the fashionable, but now the ominous presence of ornaments in the jewelers' windows for that feature which nature never intended for adornment suggests that while the heavy pendants with which our grandmothers disfigured their ears may not again challenge public favor the revived earring will exceed the dimensions of the single stone, simply set, now worn.

A Miracle of Wood Carving.

One of the greatest works of Henry Verbruggen is the carved pulpit of the grand parochial church at Brussels. The whole design is an allegorical scene. At the base are Adam and Eve, life size, expelling the angel, while grim Death himself may be seen hovering in the rear. The first pair bear upon their shoulders a hollow globe, the cavity being the place where the preacher stands while delivering his sermons. From the globe rises a tree sustaining a canopy, which in turn supports two figures, one of an angel and the other a female representing Truth. Above all this is the Virgin and the infant Jesus crushing the serpent's head with a cross.

FOURTH STREET.

WILLIAM N. ROACH.

The New Democratic Senator from the State of North Dakota.

The people of North Dakota watched with interest the battle of the state legislature at Bismarck while they endeavored to select a United States senator to succeed Lyman R. Casey on March 4. The battle raged fiercely for several weeks, until February 20, when, upon the sixty-first ballot, William N. Roach (democrat) was chosen to represent the state as senator at Washington. His election was brought about by a combination of populists and republicans, who sided with the twenty-three democratic members. Ten republicans came over to the democrats, who had been joined by the populists, and gave the coveted prize to Mr. Roach, who is described as a "clean-cut democrat," in full sympathy with Mr. Cleveland. The republicans held a majority of thirteen on joint ballot, but there were rival candidates in the field, representing different factions of the party, and after a long struggle the dissenting republicans decided to end the contest by electing Mr. Roach. The result was a general surprise to every one, and particularly gratifying to the democrats. Beyond this, it insures the democrats full control of both houses in Washington for two years.

William N. Roach is fifty-three years of age, having been born in Virginia in 1840. He was educated in Georgetown college, Washington, D. C., and engaged in business until 1879, when he went to the then territory of Dakota. He settled in Grand Forks county, and proved himself a man of strength and progress. He assisted in laying out the town of Larimore, where he now lives, and served four terms as mayor of the place. He was sent to the Dakota legislature in 1884, being the only democrat in the assembly. After this he was twice appointed regent of the University of North Dakota, and twice has been the democratic candidate for governor of the state. Mr. Roach is a large wheat-grower and deeply interested in the development of his adopted state. He is a widower, with a family of four children.

HENRY T. THURBER.

Sketch of President Cleveland's Affable Private Secretary.

Henry T. Thurber, who has accepted the place of private secretary to Mr. Cleveland, is the law partner of Don M. Dickinson. He was born in Monroe, Mich., about thirty-eight years ago. He comes of good old democratic stock, his father being the late Jefferson G. Thurber, at one time speaker of the Michigan house.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Immediately after leaving college he entered Mr. Dickinson's office at Detroit as a law student. That was eighteen years ago. His progress was rapid, and soon after his admission to the bar he became Mr. Dickinson's partner. Mr. Thurber's present income from his practice is said to be between $10,000 and $15,000 a year.

Mr. Thurber has traveled and studied abroad, and is regarded as among the foremost members of the bar in Detroit. His wife, a daughter of the late Gen. Hugh Brady, is one of the most popular and accomplished women in Detroit society.

Mr. Thurber made the acquaintance of Mr. Cleveland at Washington while Mr. Dickinson was postmaster general. The president was very favorably impressed with Mr. Thurber's ability, tact and knowledge of public affairs, and the friendship which was then begun has continued up to the present. The new private secretary has never held any political office.

Some Queer Notions of Women.

There is no accounting for tastes in this topsy-turvy world. A New York woman wears a ring in which is set in a circle of diamonds her first baby's first tooth. A London lady of high degree wears set in the jewels of her bracelet a tooth extracted from the mouth of her pet poodle. Another affectionate creature uses the skin of a once favorite horse as a hearth rug for her boudoir, and has a defunct pet pug mounted in a life-like attitude by the taxidermist for an ornament on her writing table.

Not Yet in the Soup.

When Mauritius was ceded to Great Britain in 1810 there was a gigantic turtle in a court of the artillery barracks at Port Louis which is still there, although almost blind. It weighs 330 pounds and stands 2 feet high when walking. Its shell is 8½ feet long and it can carry two men on its back with ease. It is believed to be at least 200 years old.

THE ENGLISH PREMIER.

William Ewart Gladstone, His Home and His Family.

All the world knows of Mr. Gladstone, premier of England, who has just passed his eighty-third year, having been born in Liverpool, December 29, 1809. Mr. Gladstone is called by his friends and admirers the "Grand Old Man," and he has fairly won his title in many ways. He was sent to the famous school of Eton when a boy, and graduated in 1831 at Christ church, Oxford, taking a double first-class, which means that he took the highest honors both in classics and mathematics.

Rt. Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, M. P., P. C., to give him his full name and titles, is the fourth son of the late Sir John Gladstone. In 1832, when only twenty-three years old, Mr. Gladstone entered parliament, ever since which he has been a member of the house of commons. He was made prime minister in 1868, and remained in power six years. Last summer he took the office for the fourth time, and now the sturdy old man of eighty-three is at the head of England's cabinet.

Mr. Gladstone lives in Hawarden castle, which means "the hill fort on the projecting ridge." That at least was the meaning of the original British name, [illegible], which in Saxon became [illegible], and in [illegible] ing. But there are two castles of that name, and Mr. Gladstone occupies the modern one, which is only a hundred and forty years old at the most. The old and new, however, face each other —one, a massive ruin occupied by bats and owls and memories of the past, and the other the residence of England's premier. William the Conqueror, when he came to England, found the old castle occupied by Edwin of Mercia and its history goes back to the first or second Edward. Mr. Gladstone, however, does not keep this historical ruin to himself, but admits anybody to the park. He only requests visitors, says a writer, to keep to the gravel walks, and refrain from writing their names on the walls of the old castle.

When relieved from the affairs of state, Mr. Gladstone finds no pleasure so great as his home life at Hawarden. There his family are gathered together, and the great man romps and plays with his grandchildren as though he never knew what it was to be blamed for everything that went wrong in all Great Britain and her colonies. Mr. Gladstone is a wonderful scholar, a busy writer and speaker, but the little Gladstone children know him best as a good, kind-hearted grandfather who is fond of fun. He, too, would prefer to enjoy their company rather than to be surrounded by England's great men at an all-night session of parliament. His other recreations are walking, and—this is really very funny—chopping down trees. Our great George Washington, according to tradition, had a like fondness in his youth, but by the time he became president he had probably outgrown such fancies. Mr. Gladstone, however, is an expert woodman, and though he doesn't destroy valuable cherry trees, he goes out with his ax and takes the keenest pleasure in felling trees in Hawarden park. A visitor to his castle one day noticed an ax behind the door in the great hall, where it had been left by the statesman after one of his chopping expeditions. A curious ornament for such a place it seems. It may be out of compliment to the boy George Washington and his hatchet that the "Grand Old Man" prefers to use an American ax.

There are few men that have such a memory as that which Mr. Gladstone is said to possess. It has been stated that he can go at once to his library, and amid the 10,000 books there find in a moment the volume he desires. As for quotations from the classics, he knows just where they are to be found, and any number of other wonderful things are related of him.

It is a truly great thing to be a scholar of this advanced age, it is fame to be a premier of England, and pleasant to be the "Grand Old Man" of his country. But far more impressive do these honors seem when we think of him as a loving man and father, and see him with his little grandchildren on his knee.—Harpers' Young People.

In the Same Language.

Many great men have written illegibly, and it was suspected that this was the reason that Judge [illegible] cultivated a hopelessly bad handwriting.

A hint that ought to have a good effect was given the judge by a client who called and found that the lawyer had left a note for him.

The client sat down and studied over the note for awhile. He could make nothing out of the hasty scrawl. Then he wrote beneath it four or five lines that looked as if they might have been meant for writing, followed by this sentence in a plain hand:

"This is in reply to yours of the 15th."

Returning the Compliment.

It is related that at the opening of a boys' school in North London, after the holidays, the rector said: "Now, boys, I wish you all a happy New Year, and hope you will be better boys this year than you were last." Whereupon quite a chorus of voices replied: "The same to you, sir."

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

THEIR DEBT CREMATED.

TRINITY CHURCH HAS A DAY OF GREAT REJOICING.

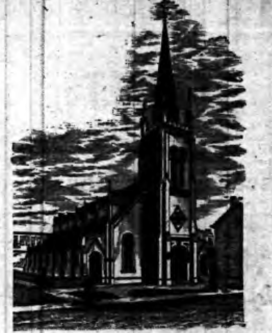
Mortgages for $12,000 Destroyed, and the Long-Standing Debt Entirely Obliterated—The Fire-Gong Salutes the Joyous Event.

THE sounding of the fire-gong at noon yesterday was exactly coincident with the cremation in Trinity Reformed church of documents representing $12,000. Just as the pastor, in celebration of the extinction of the church debt, had set the cancelled mortgages ablaze, and the congregation had heaved a sigh of satisfaction, the sonorous trumpet sounded forth its deep bass tone, and announced to the world that the obnoxious bonds were reduced to ashes. The coincidence was purely by accident, and all the more interesting for that.

The destruction of the mortgages was a part of a special service of praise and thanksgiving, held in Trinity church in the morning. The sanctuary was well filled with worshipers, and the pulpit was adorned with nature's choice floral tributes, tastefully arranged.

On the platform were the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the Rev. A. F. Todd of Dunellen, and the Rev. Herman Francis Frederick Schnellendreessler, all honored clergymen of the Reformed denomination.

The order of service that had been arranged was smoothly carried out, to the credit of the committee in charge, pastor Schenck and Messrs. T. E. Hazell, O. W. Dunham and E. E. Anthony. The music was led by the expert organist A. L. Titsworth and an efficient choir composed of



TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Miss E. Krymer, soprano, Miss E. Gilbert, alto, T. E. Hazell, tenor, and A. J. Moore, bass. They rendered the anthems in beautiful style, and the congregation joined with them heartily in the hymns. There was a joyous spirit in all the services, over the glad day of deliverance from debt.

After the organ voluntary, Thomas's Offertoire in B flat, the congregation opened the services by singing the doxology, followed by the Lord's Prayer. The pastor then delivered his salutation to the people, and the choir sang Thayer's anthem "Sing to the Lord". The commandments were read, and Psalm CXXII responsively. After the Gloria came scripture reading, Hebrews XIII: 5 on. Hymn 139 was followed by prayer by the Rev. A. F. Todd, and after hymn 174 the offering was made, preceding the anthem "Make a Joyful Noise" by Simper.

George L. VanEmburgh as chairman of the committee made an interesting financial statement, as follows:

It is not the purpose of your finance committee, nor will the time this morning allow us, to present any detailed statement. We shall only report a few facts and figures which may be of interest at this particular time. After the purchase of the church property in the month of June, 1880, we found ourselves with a debt upon us as follows:

Bond and mortgage Mutual Life Insurance company, N. Y.	$8,000
Bond and mortgage Lansing estate	4,000
Chattel mortgage assumed with the purchase of the property	2,800
Making our total indebtedness at that time	$14,800

Not very long after the property had been purchased, the church succeeded in paying off the chattel mortgage of $2,800, but no special effort was made looking towards the liquidation of the whole debt until the year 1887. During that year and two or three that followed enough was subscribed and paid in to reduce the amount to about one-third of what it had been, and we found ourselves April 1, 1892, with a debt of $4,362.67. At that time, (now about one year ago) the consistory felt that an effort should be made at once to raise the amount required to pay off the remainder. So they went to work, and their efforts, aided by the blessing of God, and a willing and generous people, have been realized, and to-day we are rejoicing over the work accomplished, with our beloved church freed completely from the burden of debt.

The only additional report that we shall make at this time is to give the amounts which have been raised by the different organizations of the church during this last year for this purpose. These are as follows:

Whatsoever Circle "King's Daughters"	[illegible]
Cross Bearers "King's Daughters"	[illegible]
Ladies' Christian Work Society	[illegible]
Sabbath-school	[illegible]

The balance by individual subscriptions.

On Easter Sabbath by special offering $672 was subscribed, paying the balance of the floating debt.

Mr. Van Emburgh paid glowing and deserved tribute to the pastor, for his energy and perseverance in pushing to such triumphant end the work of raising funds to pay the debt. He was followed by the Rev. Mr. Todd, who related an interesting experience of his own in the arduous work of securing funds for a struggling church, and exhorted the Trinity congregation to even more commendable duty than that of the past. In conclusion, he earnestly shook the hand of pastor Schenck, and warmly congratulated him and his people for their great accomplishment. This was a most eloquent and touching incident. It was wholly a surprise to Mr. Schenck, who was visibly moved by this affectionate greeting.

Responding to the warm words of congratulation, the pastor acknowledged his sense of appreciation and that of the people of all that had been said and thanked the brother for his kind wishes for the church's future growth and prosperity. He also took occasion to correct an error into which some might have fallen by adding that the chattel mortgage was paid in 1882 and not in 1887 and that the credit of its payment was in no wise due to himself but to his honored predecessor, the Rev. Dr. Raymond. Hymn No. 507 was then sung, and the pastor delivered the following address:

Very naturally on this occasion of praise and thanksgiving we seek for some passage of Scripture in which to voice the joy which we possess. In the 126th Psalm and at the third verse we read these words: "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad". This psalm was written with reference to some great deliverance of the people of God out of bondage and distress, most likely their return out of Babylon in the time of Ezra. It is a beautiful description of the circumstances which it represents. The liberation of the the captive Hebrews was a type of the redemption of the human race, and the return to Zion of such as improved their opportunity a figure of the salvation of believers.

The greatness and goodness of God as seen in His works of creation; in his providential superintendence and control may well evoke our praise. But when the power and love of God in the redemption of the world are viewed, the sacrifice of Christ and the application of it to individual human need by the Holy Spirit, we are constrained to exclaim with intensest fervor: "The Lord hath indeed done great things for us whereof we are glad". The poet was right when he said "'Twas great to speak a world from nought; 'twas greater to redeem".

Great things hath God done for us as congregation. Thirteen years ago this vine was planted, this church was organized. In this time 770 persons have united with the church: 349 on confession of faith in Christ and 421 by certificate. 354 were received by my honored predecessor, the Rev. A.V.V. Raymond, D. D., and 361 during the present pastorate. The number of charter members was 55. The sum of $5,157.23 has been raised for domestic missions and $4,280.05 for foreign missions. The total benevolent offerings for boards and funds of the denomination have been $8,222.86. The Sunday-school has increased from a membership of 64 in 1880 to 425 in 1893.

The Y. P. S. C. E. organized in Oct. 1885 has grown from 41 to 130 the largest in the county of Union.

The Ladies' Christian Work society, the Junior Endeavor society, the circles of King's Daughters have had a like advance in numbers and efficiency.

Truly "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad".

But that which especially calls forth our praise this morning is the liquidation of our indebtedness. At the time of the purchase of this property mortgages were assumed amounting to $14,800. In Jan. 1882 this was reduced by the payment of $2,800; and in the year 1885 by the payment of $500, leaving a mortgage indebtedness of $11,500. In Oct. 1887 the mortgage due the John A. Lansing estate was paid. Since that time there were frequent reductions, until on April 1, 1892, the debt was $4,362.87. The efforts of the past year to pay off the remaining debt were successful and the special Easter gifts sufficient to meet every obligation. So that, under God, we stand to-day a liberated people, and celebrate with praise and thanksgiving our complete deliverance from this bondage.

THE REV. CORNELIUS SCHENCK.

The extinguishment of the debt shows us at least three things. First, What concerted action can do. What one or a few might not have been able to accomplish, has been done by the hearty, united, co-operative effort of this people.

Second, It shows what constant, continuous effort can do. The shackles which bound us were not broken with one blow: it was the repeated hammering that at last severed the chains and set us free. All at it and always at it, is the secret.

Third, It shows the power of combination. It is the aggregation of all the gifts, of all sizes, from all sources which makes this result possible.

In behalf of the consistory of the church I now make acknowledgement first of the goodness of God and next of the kindness of all who have aided us in our deliverance. To all within the church and to all without the church we give our hearty thanks. We bear in grateful remembrance the gifts of the living and of the departed.

While there is much in this occasion to evoke our praise, there is nothing in it to excite our pride. The responsibilities of the present, the possibilities of the future are too great to admit of self-complacency. It is a time, too, for fresh consecration to the Master's service. God forbid that now we should settle down in apathy and indifference. "Offering to God the sacrifice of praise, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to His name; let us not forget to do good and to communicate, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." And now, having been delivered from bondage let us annihilate the signs of our servitude; having liquidated the debt let us destroy the mortgages!

Mr. Anthony brought in a jardiniere in which a wick soaked in alcohol was blazing. Into this Mr. Schenck consigned the mortgages, and in merry flame they soon were consumed. A smile went round as the fire-gong blew, and then in sober thanksgiving all hearts and tongues joined in the doxology. The anthem "Praise Be to God" and the hymn No. 692 preceded the benediction by the Rev. H. F. F. Schnellendreessler. The postlude on the organ was Mendelssohn's "War March of the Priests, from Athalia". While the organ pealed, the happy worshipers crowded around their beloved pastor, grasped his hand, whispered words of congratulation and cheer, and took the ashes of the mortgages, in envelopes to preserve as souvenirs.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

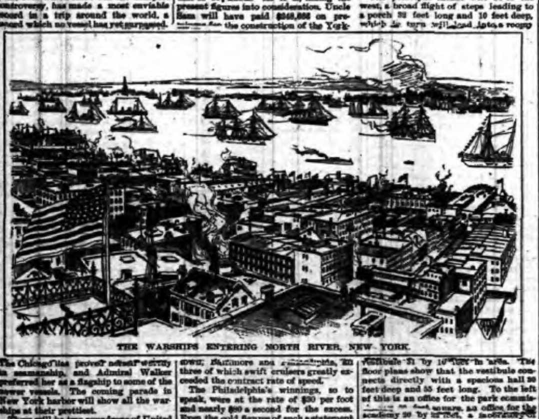
HOW IT COMPARES WITH OTHERS IN THE GREAT REVIEW.

In 1886 the United States Stood Nineteenth Among Naval Powers—Now the Fifth. The New Ships Contrasted With British Boats.

Our reproach is taken away. The United States now has a navy to proudly compare with that of England in the coming review at New York. The latest vessels are from American designs by native American designers, built entirely in American yards of American materials. The Newark was the first result of all these combined, and her sponsors claim that she is in many respects the best of the unarmored cruisers in the navy. And the extraordinary advance in the science of naval warfare is shown by the fact that, though the Chicago is but three years the older, the Newark is accounted 25 per cent the more efficient as a warship.

For a dozen years after the war the "Decline of the American Navy" was the burden of continued plaint and a standing headline in the great city dailies. The funny paragraphers assumed that the climax was reached when President Hayes appointed the "Ancient Mariner of the Wabash," newspaper Homeric for Richard W. Thompson, as secretary of the navy. It was taken for granted that he was to let the concern die of inanition, but he did not. He at least stopped the decline where it was, and in the next administration some signs of improvement were visible. Under Secretary William C. Whitney the rebuilding began in earnest, and Secretary Benjamin F. Tracy carried it forward to glorious results.

The so called Roach boats are the Chicago, Atlanta, Boston and Dolphin, the pioneers of the new navy. They were begun by Secretary Chandler and finished by Secretary Whitney. They were the subject of much controversy because they failed to reach the required horsepower. All were accepted finally, and they have shown abundantly that they were serviceable and far more efficient than was originally hoped for. The Dolphin, over which there was the sharpest controversy, has made a most enviable record in a trip around the world, a record which no vessel has yet surpassed.



THE WARSHIPS ENTERING NORTH RIVER, NEW YORK.

The Chicago has proved herself worthy in seamanship, and Admiral Walker preferred her as a flagship to some of the newer vessels. The coming parade in New York harbor will show all the warships at their prettiest.

There will be two squadrons of United States vessels in the review, each commanded by an admiral and each headed by a flagship. The commanding officer in charge of the first squadron will be Rear Admiral Benham, and his flagship will be the Newark, protected cruiser with a tonnage of 4,098 and carrying 12 heavy guns. She was built by the Cramps at a cost of $1,480,351.78 and was known as Cruiser No. 1 for a long time, but the Cramps did not finish her until after they had turned the Yorktown, Vesuvius, Baltimore and Philadelphia over to the government. By that time this country could stand alone in naval shipbuilding.

The commanding officer of the second squadron will be Rear Admiral Walker, and his flagship will be the Chicago, which for three years had been the flagship of the squadron of evolution, and in which Admiral Walker has journeyed from Bar Harbor to the Mediterranean and thence to South America. She is also a [illegible] cruiser, of 4,500 tons, carrying 14 guns, and was built at a cost of $1,[illegible]. Though she has almost 600 tons more displacement than the Newark, she is four knots slower. They draw the same amount of water, but the Chicago is 15 feet longer. In horsepower the Newark is 40 per cent better than the Chicago.

By far the best known vessel in the review, because of her experience in the Chilian waters, is the Baltimore, protected cruiser of 10 guns and 4,600 tons displacement. Her hull and machinery are of English design, and she is far from [illegible], being very [illegible] and crowded with machinery. American builders ad-[illegible] lines as affording good targets for the enemy. But she is a wonderfully stout and reliable vessel and went into commission under Captain Schley, who asked to be reduced from the rank of commodore to that of captain to take charge of this vessel. She took Ericsson's body to Sweden and then participated in the row with Chili. The Baltimore has been very fast, and on one burst of speed the patent logs, which have been used as data for speed, but which are not trustworthy, showed a record of more than 20 knots. Her real speed is about 19 knots.

Another very interesting vessel is the Yorktown, cruiser, of only six guns and 1,700 tons displacement, and built at a cost of $694,410.79. Two other vessels of the same displacement and number of guns and nearly the same cost are the so called sisters, Bennington and Concord.

These vessels are gunboats. They are stocky and sturdy little craft, especially serviceable for river use. The Yorktown was launched on the same day with the Vesuvius, and it was a proud day indeed for Secretary Whitney. Commander Chadwick first took charge of the vessel. She was on one of the evolution squadron's junkets to Europe, and then Commander "Fighting Bob" Evans took her. Under him she participated in the Chilian row, and once "Fighting Bob" cleared her decks for action. Since then she has done duty in the Behring sea in connection with the seal troubles.

In command of the whole parade will be Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, who has been in the naval service of the United States 47 years and attained the first rank not only by seniority, but by brilliant services. He was born in Louisiana Nov. 10, 1832, and entered the navy as midshipman from Massachusetts just before reaching the age of 14 and at the beginning of the Mexican war. After 12 years of active service he entered the naval academy at Annapolis, reversing the usual process. In 1855 he was commissioned a lieutenant and in 1862 a lieutenant commander. He bore a conspicuous part in the capture of Mobile as well as in other actions, was made commander in 1866, captain in 1874 and commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard in 1884 as commodore. In 1887 he received his present rank.

His flagship is the cruiser Philadelphia. She is a twin screw steel vessel of 4,300 tons displacement. The contract was let to the Cramps in October, 1887, and her contract time of construction was two years, the contract price being $1,350,000 and her contract speed 19 knots an hour, with a premium of $50,000 for each quarter knot in excess of that rate of speed.

The logs used on the Baltimore had recorded a speed of 20 knots, but calculations for a "slip" reduced this somewhat. In July, 1890, tried by the same logs, the Philadelphia recorded a fraction over 21 knots. Allowing the same "slip" as on the Baltimore, the new cruiser was certainly going at the rate of 20½ knots. As it is, taking the present figures into consideration, Uncle Sam will have paid $848,868 on premiums for the construction of the Yorktown, Baltimore and Philadelphia, all three of which swift cruisers greatly exceeded the contract rate of speed.

The Philadelphia's winnings, so to speak, were at the rate of $30 per foot and nearly $80 a second for the excess. Even the cold figures of such a statement produce a thrill of excitement, and it is little wonder that Edwin Cramp was reported as "wild with excitement at the result" and exclaimed exultingly: "Naval warfare is again revolutionized! The United States now has the nucleus of the fastest navy afloat." On July 28 of that year the Philadelphia went into commission as a warship, with Captain Robert L. Bradford as commander.

The summary of America's rapid progress may be given in a few words. When the vessels authorized and now hastening to completion are once afloat, the reconstructed navy will contain 42 warships. They are in the following classes:

Armored cruisers, protected cruisers, monitors, battleships, gunboats, and one, the Vesuvius, which is a type of itself, combining the functions of harbor defender, ram and torpedo cruiser. When the 42 are completed, the United States will rank as the fifth naval power in the world. In 1886 we were but the nineteenth. The nations that still surpass us are England, France, Italy and Russia, in the order named.

It is not easy to present in a few figures the comparative size and fleetness of the foreign vessels which will be in the review, but as Great Britain confessedly leads and has presumably sent over her representative ships, let them be taken as samples. Her best and the flagship of Sir John O. Hopkins, K. C. B., the admiral commanding, is the Blake. She is also the largest, fastest and heaviest of the heavily armored cruisers now afloat, except her sister ship recently launched. Her dimensions are: Length, 375 feet, breadth, 65 feet; draft of water, 25 feet 9 inches; horsepower [illegible]; coal capacity, 1,800 tons; speed, [illegible] knots; [illegible] tons displacement.

She is briefly described as a 12 (big) gun, twin screw cruiser, and is a veritable floating battery. She has two magazines for every gun, and every magazine cased in the finest tempered steel. Observe the supreme importance of this casing over the ordinary war vessels, inasmuch as if a bomb struck the vessel near any such department the men in that particular inclosure only would be killed, whereas if the ship were open, like an ordinary man-of-war, hundreds might be killed and immense damage done to the vessel.

The superiority in fighting end on is a very important feature in a cruiser which may be expected to do a great deal of her fighting in pursuit or retreat. In either position the Blake can discharge 604 pounds of metal. From either broadside she can send 1,284 pounds, and some of the guns being equally for side and bow or side and stern her total all around fire at the best is 1,898 pounds.

Now for contrast (though it is, as aforesaid, not easy to make a contrast of differently classed vessels) take the Columbia, one of America's latest, launched from Cramps' shipyard on the Delaware July 26, 1892. She is briefly described as a protected sea going cruiser and has attained an ocean speed of 21 knots.

She is run by three sets of triple expansion engines, driving three sets of screws, all the machinery in different compartments, so she can be run slowly with the center screw, faster with the outer two and fastest with all three. But the pride of the new navy is, or is to be, the new speedy cruiser New York. She is a monster indeed, with displacement of 8,150 tons and good for 20 knots an hour of sustained speed.

Her cost is $3,500,000. Her length on the water line is 380 feet 6 inches, her molded breadth 64 feet, her main draft 23½ feet and her coal capacity enough to run her 13,000 miles without a fresh supply. Contrast this with the Kearsarge, which sank the Alabama, the little "cheesebox on a raft" (pet name for the Monitor), which won the most noted naval victory of the war—contrast all these vessels, in fact, with those of any former war—and there is no chance for other emotion than amazement.

ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

An Elegant Building to Be Erected in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

Just east of the Center street entrance in Lincoln park, Chicago, the Academy of Science will build its home.

The building will be constructed of pressed brick and buff Bedford stone. When the red tiled roof is put on the effect will be very picturesque and in keeping with the landscape. The exterior dimensions will be 123 by 60 feet, and the apex of the roof will be seventy feet from the ground. The building will have three stories over a high basement and will be Romanesque in treatment.

The principal facade will be to the west, a broad flight of steps leading to a porch 32 feet long and 10 feet deep, which in turn will lead into a roomy vestibule 31 by 16 feet in area. The floor plans show that the vestibule connects directly with a spacious hall 30 feet deep and 55 feet long. To the left of this is an office for the park commissioners [illegible] feet square, an office for the academy 20 by 18 feet, a laboratory of the same size, a business office 18 by 20 feet with a private office connecting. To the right of the center hall is a large room to be used for museum purposes, 42 by 55 feet.

The second floor will be given up to the museum. Its area will be 117 feet by 55 feet. Supported on pillars an 18-foot gallery will be carried around on a level with the third floor, the whole lighted by a domed skylight. The combined floor area of all the museums will be 15,000 square feet. The basement will be taken up by a tool-room for the park, a work-room for the academy and the steam-heating plant. With five foot window openings generously provided the problem of light has been solved to the satisfaction of the members and the architects.

RECTOR AHLWARDT.

The Most Vindictive Jew-Hater in the German Empire.

For a man of simple ordinary force and ability Ahlwardt, the leader of the anti-Semitic movement in Germany, has achieved extraordinary notoriety. It is not, however, his personality, but the personality of the men whom he attacked which has made his name known throughout two continents. He first attracted worldwide attention by openly charging that the gun-makers who supplied the German army with rifles had grossly swindled the government and that the fighting weapons of the army were absolutely useless.

These statements caused a profound sensation, but Ahlwardt was unable to sustain his position and was convicted of libel and imprisoned. A few days ago he again made himself conspicuous by declaring in the reichstag, of which he is a member, that large sums of money belonging to the government had been dishonestly paid to certain Hebrew speculators during Bismarck's occupancy of the chancellorship. The explosion of this bombshell fairly shook the German empire, but Ahlwardt again failed to sustain his rash statements and was laughed and hissed out of the reichstag. In the judgment of many the man is slightly unbalanced.

First Lady of France.

Mme. Carnot, wife of the president of the French republic, is a brunette, with dark-blue eyes, a pale complexion, delicately molded features, and hair as black and glossy as black satin. Her expression is at once intellectual and charming, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. Outside her official duties, which are many, Mme. Carnot leads a very quiet and domestic life. The ordering and superintending of her toilets absorbs a good deal of her time and is really one of her official duties, the dress of the wife of the ruler of state exercising a widespread influence over the commercial interests of France. Then she is interested in a number of charities and drops in from time to time to see how her proteges are progressing.

King Oscar and the Pope.

An amusing story of the manner in which his holiness was greeted by King Oscar of Sweden when he visited Rome is told by one of the returned pilgrims. On approaching the pontiff King Oscar extended his hand. A good son of the church would, of course, have knelt and kissed the pope's extended ring—Protestant monarchs have before now bent the knee to the pope. But King Oscar, grasping his "brother monarch's" hand, shook it warmly, and then, stooping down, embraced his holiness, kissing him effusively on the cheek. The pope was as much amused by this irregular form of greeting as the bystanders were horrified.

CHICAGO'S NEW MAYOR.

Carter H. Harrison Elected for the Fifth Time.

A Condensed Biography of the Newly-Made Chief Executive of the World's Fair City—A Few Words About His Opponent.

Carter Henry Harrison, who has just been elected mayor of the city of Chicago for the fifth time, was born in Fayette county, Ky., February 15, 1825. He was graduated at Yale in 1845, read law, engaged in farming, traveled for two years in foreign countries, and, after receiving his degree from Transylvania law school, Lexington, Ky., settled in Chicago, where he engaged in real estate speculations and acquired a fortune. After the great fire of 1871 he served as county commissioner for three years. After returning from a second journey through Europe, in 1874, he was elected to congress, as a democrat, by a close vote. He was reelected, and when his second term was ended, in 1879, was chosen mayor of Chicago, in which office he was continued for four biennial terms. After settling up his private affairs he started for a journey around the world, returning to Chicago just in time to run as an independent democratic candidate against DeWitt C. Cregier, the regular nominee, in 1891. He was defeated, but dragged his opponent down with him. A few months ago Harrison again became a candidate for mayor, received the regular democratic nomination, and was elected for the fifth time to rule the destinies of the greatest city in the west during the period of the world's fair.

Mr. Harrison's principal opponent during the recent campaign was Samuel Waters Allerton, the republican and citizens' candidate, who received almost 95,000 votes to Mr. Harrison's 115,000. Mr. Allerton was born in Armenia, Dutchess county, New York, sixty-four years ago come May. His stock is the sturdy stock of an old New England family founded by an emigrant—one Isaac Allerton who came over here in the Mayflower. Mr. Allerton spent his boyhood in the country, and when he was only thirteen years of age began to develop the remarkable business shrewdness that reached its height in his career as a Chicagoan. With money he had saved he and his brother bought a farm in Yates county, N. Y., and later Sam went into farming on his own hook. He raised cattle, made more money and came west in 1856. His health broke down and he returned home. But the east was no place for the young man who had sniffed the prairie air and he soon struck out again for Illinois. He began his second western career in Fulton county as a dry goods merchant, but in 1860 left that county and business for Chicago and the cattle trade. He was one of the founders of the famous Chicago stock yards, and soon became a leader in the commercial world.

WELCOME! THRICE WELCOME!

The assembling of war ships of many nations in the harbor of New York is an eloquent tribute to peace.

They come fully equipped as fighting machines, yet their guns echo the jubilee of national fraternity.

They are not here to commemorate martial renown, but rather to join in honoring the memory of a new world discoverer, an adventurous mariner.

It is an inspiring event, and from it the glorious boon of amity may derive conquering strength.

When men of war clasp hands as friends what lover of human kind will fail to rejoice.

The stars and stripes with proud acclaim greets the ensigns of England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Holland, Spain, Brazil and the Argentine Republic.

Welcome, thrice welcome, ye messengers from over the briny sea.

SOUND POLICY.

"The President and his Cabinet are absolutely harmonious in the determination to exercise every power conferred upon them to maintain the public credit, to keep the public faith, and to preserve the purity between gold and silver and between all financial obligations of the Government."

Such is the emphatic and right position in regard to financial affairs assumed by President Cleveland and it is in strict accord with business prosperity.

In spite of all mercenary interests, and regardless of the many difficulties bequeathed by the late Republican Administration, the public credit must and shall be maintained.

In doing that financial health will pervade the land.

An able commander is now at the helm.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST has again been designated as one of the official papers of the State, in which to publish the laws of the State. This is but a just recognition of a staunch Democratic journal, which has for over twenty-five years fearlessly advocated the principles of the party, and assisted in fighting its battles. We shall commence the publication of the laws next week.

ANOTHER WILL CASE.

The Alleged Last Testament of James Maynard to Be Contested.

George W. DeMeza, counsel for John B. Maynard of Boston, one of the sons of the late James Maynard of this city, has filed a notice of appeal from the decree of the surrogate of Union county, admitting to probate the alleged last will of James Maynard.

The trial on the appeal will be heard at the next term of the Orphans' court.

John Maynard alleges that his father was in the last stages of pneumonia when the paper purporting to be his will was executed, and that his eldest brother Edward F. used undue influence in inducing his father to leave almost all his property to him and none to his other children.

Edwin B. Maynard, the Park avenue barber, threatened to contest the will on the same grounds, but dropped his suit on receipt of a share of the estate in settlement.

A GREAT ATTRACTION.

Westward the Course of Empire Takes Its Way, and Anchors in Bound Brook.

An incandescent electric lamp of twenty-five candle-power has been placed over the ladies' entrance to the Mansion House, at Bound Brook, with power furnished from the electric light plant at Seabring's Mills, below Dunellen. The lamp was lighted for the first time last evening, and while putting to shame the public street lights furnished by the Somerville plant attracted many spectators to the locality.

New York's Vaudeville Attractions.

New acts, new artists and new songs are offered this week at Tony Pastor's theater, New York. Of the old favorites retained are Lydia Yeamans-Titus and James F. Hoey, the jester, reinforced by such popular entertainers as Billy Carter, banjoist; Sheffer and Blakely, black-faced comedians; Ward and Lynch, Irish character actors; the Burt sisters, soubrettes, and Hanson and Field, a musical team. The novelties are Delavoge and Fritz, in a pantomine act that is a whole Humpty-Dumpty show in itself, Zarmo, from the Alhambra, who juggles while standing on his head; the Brunelles, in a new specialty entitled "Tintammarresque", and Scott, the man frog, in a unique contortion act.

The Diamantine French dancers, Imogene Comer, vocalist; Fleurette, dancer, and other established Imperial Music Hall favorites, in New York, remain there for another week. The newcomers that are expected to please and entertain are: The Stewart sisters, burlesque artists; James McAvoy, parodist; Richmond and Glenroy, sketch team; Al Reeves, banjoist; the Du Bell brothers, Frank Burt, Frank White, Lillian Granger, Jules Keller, the Ali brothers and Delhauer. On May 1 Lottie Gilson, the little magnet, will begin a return engagement.

The excellent programme of last week, with one or two changes, is to be continued at Koster & Bial's for the present. The newcomers are the Braatz Brothers, clever gymnasts. Delaur and Debrimont have become firm favorites, and the two operettas, "La Fille de Mme. Angot" and "The Rehearsal", are performed with lots of dash and spirit. The quarrel scene between Madge Lessing and Christine Blessing is thoroughly realistic. Paquerette, eccentric, comical and altogether unique, is now never allowed to go until she has exhausted her budget of laughable chansons.

PERFORMING ANIMALS.

How They Are Trained—Interesting Description of Methods.

People who go to the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth in this city May 2, and see horses, elephants, monkeys and the like perform wonderful tricks, must often ask themselves how the animals are taught to do them. A writer having interviewed several circus celebrities undertakes to satisfy their curiosity. One of the trainers of that show, who has had charge of animals for thirty-two years, supplies interesting information concerning horses.

"The horse", he says, contrary to general belief, "is the most stupid animal on earth. He has only one faculty, memory. You must teach him his exercises with the cavesson and the long whip. Having forced them into his head you must use the short whip when he resists and give him a carrot when he obeys. Whips and carrots form the secret of the trainer. The horse must be from five to seven years old; before that age he is too spirited; after it his muscles are not elastic enough.

"The first thing you do is to accustom your horse to the ring, to make him run round regularly and then stop at a given signal. To accomplish this the animal is brought into the ring. The trainer holds in his left hand the tether, which is passed into the cavesson, a kind of iron crescent armed with sharp points fixed on the nose of the horse; in his right hand he holds the long whip. Behind the animal an assistant, with a stout, short whip, is posted. The trainer calls on the horse to start, and, pulling the tether and smacking his long whip, forces him to gallop round. If he refuses the assistant uses his whip also; if he is obedient he is rewarded with a carrot. To make him stop short the trainer cracks his long whip again, while the assistant, with his short whip, throws himself in front of the animal and the result is obtained."

The same authority tells us "that the horse had a great objection to kneeling or lying down at any moment. This feat is taught by means of iron bracelets placed on his ankles and attached to a tether held by a trainer, who, by sudden jerks or pulls as he is moving, makes him fall or kneel. The animal remembers the lessons, and by dint of whip and carrot ultimately performs them at the mere command of the trainer. The horse is taught to dance to music in the same way, with the foot bracelets." As regards the learned horse, who opens boxes and takes things out of them, here is how the animal is trained to do it:

"I first get a carrot," says the trainer. "I place it in a box. I then lead the horse to the box. He smells the carrot, lifts up the lid of the box with his nose and takes out the vegetable, which he is allowed to eat. The next day, before setting the horse free, I show him a handkerchief full of bran. He takes it and tries to eat it. I then let him loose. He runs to the box, but, by bitter deception, it is empty. The day after I resume the exercise, but this time the horse finds the handkerchief with the bran in the box. He takes it out, and I reward him with a carrot. I decrease the amount of bran in the handkerchief every day until, in the end, I put merely the handkerchief in the box. The horse brings it to me and gets his carrot. I then reduce the size of the carrot every day, until at last I give him nothing. The horse continues to perform with the handkerchief in the hope of getting the carrot."

With respect to dogs, and there is a troupe of them with the show, their education is a work of time and patience. Sometimes it takes two years.

"I use neither sugar nor whip. I take my dog in my hands, talk to him, and try to make him understand what he is to do. I perform the trick myself, and the dogs follow and imitate me." At present he is showing a carriage dog which performs on the single wire.

"I will tell you how I taught him to become an equilibrist. I made him first of all walk on a plank, which was balanced to and fro. The plank was gradually reduced in width every day, and the movement accelerated. At length the plank dwindled down to a narrow slip; this was replaced by a long round stick, and ultimately he found himself on the single wire."

Strange to say this dog is blind. Scent, however, is the great quality which enables dogs to perform some tricks. For example, the poodles who play at dominoes are taught by their scent. Their trainer touches the dominoes which the dogs has to play, and the animal smelling them picks them out from the rest and plays them. The pig is said to be the most difficult animal to train. They are to be taught only by their weak point—their gluttony.

"When I have got my young pig", he says, "I begin on the principle that I shall obtain nothing from him without satisfying his appetite. I feed him myself, and during a few days I vary his food in order to find out what he likes best. As soon as I have discovered his favorite dish I deprive him of it completely. This dish is my great talisman. The chief pig I am now performing with prefers beef fat. I put a piece in my pocket. I jump over hurdles and the pig follows me, doing likewise. In this way he learns his exercises and gets his fat. I decrease the piece of fat every day, and at last I give him nothing. Should he refuse to work I thrash him till he does, and, having completed his performance, I recompense him with his favorite meal."

The elephant, on the contrary, is very intelligent, and his education would be easy but for his cumbersome weight which forces the trainer to have recourse to cruel means. For instance, to make him raise and hold out his foot an iron ring, with sharp points, is placed on it, and, being drawn by a rope, the points enter the flesh. The elephant, feeling the pain, lifts up his foot and keeps it in the air until the pain ceases. After a few repetitions he remembers the pain, and at the sight of the iron raises his foot. His instruction, thanks to his intelligence, is soon completed. Some elephants are taught in less than a fortnight to play on a drum, work a tricycle and beg on their hind legs. This year the show contains trained cats, storks, bears, wolves, an orang, and many other animals, all of which perform many clever tricks.

A Worthy Order of Workingmen.

The Pond Tool Works Beneficial Association is a society which should be encouraged. Since its organization, sixteen months ago, it has now grown to 200 members. Up to the present time, $2,369 has been expended for funeral and sick benefits. The assessments have also been light—only three dollars for each member. During the sixteen months four of the members have died, and three others have been buried. The organization is simply one for charity, and is confined strictly to the employes of the shop. In case an employe is maimed while at work the association guarantees him $5 for twelve weeks, and $3 for twelve weeks more. The officers of the association are:

THE LOVELIEST SPOT ON EARTH.

All the Charms of Seashore and Inland Gathered Together, with the Thermometer Averaging 54 in Winter, and Oysters, Game and Strawberries Always in Season.

All good things on the face of the earth seem to be clustered in and about the Princess Anne hotel at Virginia Beach. There is the grand old ocean rushing and roaring on the broad sands; there is the scent and the singing of the lofty pines; there are the long rides with the scenes changing from the beds of the early strawberry to the beds of the Lynnhaven oyster the juiciest and finest flavored of them all; there are the private game grounds where the guests alone are privileged to hunt over 300 acres full of game; ponds full of terrapin and bays full of duck; within walking distance; and all this and more within less than an hour's ride of the stores of Norfolk, and but little farther from Old Point Comfort, and Fortress Monroe and Hampton.

And then, while the surroundings embrace all the natural attractions of Long Branch, Lakewood and the Adirondacks, the hotel itself is the most charming imaginable and its service and entertainment, most perfect and beautiful. S. E. Crittenden is the proprietor, and every detail from the prodigal glow of the enormous fire places, to the glisten of the glass and silver on your table or the gloss of the coat of the handsome horse you order from the stables, he knows of.

Now's the time to experience all this in its fullness. You can go by the Blue Line to Washington from thence by the picturesque Chesapeak & Ohio down through the battle fields of Virginia and the city of Richmond; or you can go all the way by steamer on one of the Old Dominion's comfortable passenger ships. Yet any season is full of pleasure at the Princess Anne, for Virginia Beach is but thirty miles from the Gulf Stream, whose influence in producing equable temperature makes warm and balmy the fiercest winter months. The average winter temperature is fifty-four degrees, the summer average seventy-eight; the extremes being only thirty-four degrees, producing an ideal climate.

The hotel will accomodate three hundred guests, and has perfect drainage and all modern sanitary appliances. In winter glass-enclosed balconies and verandas, sunny rooms, and open wood fires, make summer comfort everywhere. It has electric lights in all its rooms, spacious entertainment rooms, billiard room, tennis court, hot and cold sea-water baths, elevator and every other feature of a first-class hotel. The pavilion adjoining the hotel is two hundred and fifty feet long, one hundred feet wide, and affords delightful and ample opportunity for outdoor sports of every kind.

RARITAN RIVER SHAD FISHING.

The New Law Does Not Hinder Fishermen from Catching Shad as of Old—Keep Nets Away from the Dam.

There has been a good deal of needless talk recently over the new game and fish law enacted by the last legislature, a section of which seemed to affect the shad fishing in the Raritan river. From time immemorial the residents along the river between New Brunswick and the Delaware and Raritan Canal company's dam below Bound Brook have always had the privilege to catch the toothsome shad in the spring as these fish ascended the stream—that is, under proper restrictions of the law. And so these same citizens have the same right now. The new law does not change the old, as far as tide water in the Raritan river is concerned. Farmers and others have the same rights now as they had previously. All they have to do is to keep away from the dam a distance of 900 feet with their nets. The law distinctly says that no person shall "set, place or haul" a net within that distance of the dam, where the State fish commissioners have caused to be placed a fish way, at a considerable expense, whereby the migratory fish may ascend the stream in their proper season. Government surveyors are reported as saying that the tide water makes up to the point above named, and to settle a question which never ought to be a vexed one, the State game and fish protector, Thomas Maskill, in company with fish warden Force, visited the scene on Monday, and from evidence received by old residents along the river, decided that the old law was right, but the protector insists that it is illegal to fish with net of whatsoever kind, or with any device, beside that of hook and line, within 900 feet of the dam. This we think ought to be to the satisfaction of all right-thinking people, and from expressions received from residents along the river is satisfactory. Game and fish protector Maskill has made many new friends by his decision as to the proper distance to fish with nets below the dam, but if the laws of the State would only allow him to stop the indiscriminate fishing with seines below New Brunswick, in tide water, whereby thousands of young fish are destroyed, and larger ones caught before they could ascend the river to their spawning places, it would be a good thing in the interest of fish protection. In conclusion, THE PRESS earnestly hopes that all law-abiding citizens along the Raritan river at the points above named will see that the decision of the fish protector is regarded. He is determined that all violators of the law in the respect above stated shall be prosecuted. He says: "Keep all nets and devices away from within 900 feet below the dam, or suffer the penalty."

PLAINFIELD'S TWO JAILS.

Sanitary Condition of the Institutions that Receive City and Borough Prisoners.

Dr. A. Clark Hunt of the State board of health, having completed a system of thorough institutional inquiries, reports as follows for this locality:

UNION COUNTY JAIL.

Located at Elizabeth. Number of inmates, 21. The water is obtained from the Elizabeth Water company. The cellar is dry and well lighted and is used for coal storage and steam boilers. Heated by steam. Ventilation is by windows and ventilators in the rooms. Compulsory bathing is insisted upon each week, and oftener if necessary. The examination of this building was very satisfactory. The discipline is excellent, and the condition of the whole jail showed cleanliness and good management. If separate hospital facilities could be supplied it would be of great advantage.

SOMERSET COUNTY JAIL.

Located at Somerville. Number of inmates, 8; 230 during the past year. Inside closet arrangements are provided, and the [illegible] from these empty into a cesspool. There is an opening in each cell, connected with two ventilators at the top of the roof, and in this way a change of air is provided for. Heating is by steam. No bathing facilities. Water supply is from wells and city water, which is taken from the Raritan river. The visit to this institution showed that the men's side was well lighted, the closet arrangement is a trough with a pipe, which is lifted out for emptying. The rooms were carefully examined, and with the exception of the bedding were in good order. At the time of the visit the [illegible] was under way [illegible]. The female part is an exact duplicate in construction of the male portion of the jail. The sanitary condition of the jail throughout was excellent.

DR. LEWIS'S INJURY.

His Right Eye Still Seriously Affected, But It's Sight Probably Saved.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis returned Tuesday night from the West, and everyone in Plainfield will rejoice that his injury, exclusively reported in these columns, is less dangerous than was at first feared.

The good doctor was able to walk as firmly as ever from the station to his house, and this morning went to New York on business, but his right eye is still bandaged from the light.

To a PRESS reporter Dr. Lewis said that the accident occurred while he was gunning in the country near Chicago. The touch-pin of his gun was loose, and the breech flew open as he pulled the trigger. The flame and powder flashed back in his face, causing a serious and painful burn. The clergyman was dazed by the shock, and felt an almost irresistible inclination to lie down. Being alone, however, he knew that might be attended with serious results, so he managed to get to the edge of a near-by river, where he laved his burns with water. The powder and burned skin came off in flakes in his hand, and he felt that his right eye was in a terrible condition. He managed to reach the nearest farm-house, and was conveyed to his mother's home. As soon as possible he was taken to Chicago, where the best of special treatment was administered. His eye is still closed and very sore, the ball being more seriously affected than the lids. But by constant and careful treatment it will be saved from permanent injury.

ON DANGEROUS GROUND.

Good Plainfield Women Handle a Delicate Subject in All Souls' Church.

The fourth in the series of afternoon lectures under the auspices of the women of All Souls' church was given at the church Tuesday. The subject was "What can the more fortunate do for the less fortunate?" and Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lowell of New York was the lecturer.

Mrs. Lowell first spoke, at the request of the ladies, on "Associated Charities", advocating some head to which all the charitable organizations and persons of Plainfield could refer. On the subject of the day Mrs. Lowell said:

"In every community there are people who are in need of everything, spiritual as well as temporal. In trying to alleviate these needs one should go to the root of the evil. Temporary alleviation is often worse than nothing. Education in its largest sense is the only help. Of all uncharitableness the discrimination between the worthy and the unworthy is the greatest. The unworthy are the ones who need help more than any other class. The only method that has been successful is that of Tolstoi's. Learn first to look upon life from the correct standpoint yourself and then impart your knowledge to the ignorant and needy. The sins of the aristocracy in enjoying all the benefits of life and giving nothing in return are luckily restricted in this country to a very few, chiefly women. Those, who have the means, should be the ones to lift the less fortunate and direct their erring footsteps into the right path."

WHAT QUARTETTE IS THIS?

After the lecture, a short discussion took place, in the course of which Mrs. Lowell said that she thought the removal of children from their families was wrong and should not be done except in rare cases. Someone cited a case in town of a woman who was living with three men to the everlasting disgrace of her four children, and asked what should be done in such an instance. To this Mrs. Lathrop replied promptly "Remove the woman," which for some reason afforded the audience considerable amusement.

PARK CLUB'S GREAT VICTORY.

They Reach High Water Mark and Beat Their Own Record as Well as the Roseville Team.

When the Park club went over to Roseville a few weeks ago and suffered ignominious defeat, they came home vowing vengeance, but when it was learned that captain Matthews had arranged Tuesday night's game there was some murmuring about not having practised and the team having gone to pieces. Nevertheless, the Park boys went in last night to win if they could, and succeeded in piling up a score that was not thought possible so late in the season and practically after the team had given up work for the year. The game was rolled in halves, and it was apparent from the first that Roseville would have to work to come anywhere near its opponents. The first half showed a visible lead for the Park club, Hageman making top score with 210. The second half was almost identical with the first, there being only a difference of 2 pins for the Parks and 4 for Roseville.

When it became apparent that the Park club was nearing the highest score they had ever rolled, the interest in the game grew intense. Men left the billiard tables and swelled the crowd at the end of the alleys, while every chair at the sides was filled. As the column of scores was added up and the grand total of 1680 pins (being the highest the Parks have ever rolled), to their adversaries' 1485, was read off, the club was loud with applause.

Roseville men suddenly became very anxious to catch the train, and the coat room was besieged by the visiting team. They did not get away, however, until captain Matthews and his men had given them three rousing cheers.

This game practically ends the bowling season as the few more games that are left will have to divide their interest with [illegible], which is rapidly coming in for the year, for the Park club courts with their new tapes and nets look very inviting.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

CHAPTER I.

An Act ceding to the United States of America jurisdiction over a lot of land situate in the city of Paterson, and exempting the same and its appurtenances from taxation.

Whereas, the United States of America have recently appropriated money for the erection of a building in the city of Paterson for the accommodation of the post office and other government offices of the United States; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That jurisdiction of the land and its appurtenances which have been purchased in said city of Paterson for the erection of the aforesaid building, be and the same is hereby ceded to the United States of America; provided, that all civil and criminal processes, issued under the authority of this state, or any officer thereof, may be executed on said land in the same way and manner as if jurisdiction had not been ceded as aforesaid.

2. And be it enacted, That the said land, with its appurtenances, and the building and other proper thereon, shall forever hereafter be exempt from all state, county and municipal taxation and assessment so long as the same shall remain the property of the United States of America.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 28, 1893.

CHAPTER II.

An Act in relation to warrants drawn to meet disbursements and expenditures made by boards in cities of the first class in this state in certain cases, and giving the common council or other governing body power in relation thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body in any city of the first class of this state to provide by ordinance for the form and manner in which warrants upon the treasury of the said city for the purpose of meeting and discharging obligations incurred by the expenditure and disbursements of other boards therein shall be drawn, signed and paid, and all warrants made and signed for such expenditures and disbursements in accordance with an ordinance duly passed for that purpose in any such city shall be deemed and taken to be in all respects regular and lawful.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 31, 1893.

CHAPTER III.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act to facilitate proceedings in the prerogative court," approved February eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the fifth section of an act entitled "An act to facilitate proceedings in the prerogative court," approved February eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, which fifth section reads as follows:

5. And be it enacted, That the vice-ordinary or vice-surrogate general shall receive as compensation for the performance of the duties which shall be imposed upon him under this act, an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars, in addition to his compensation as vice-chancellor, to be paid to him by the treasurer of the State in equal monthly or quarter yearly payments, as he shall from time to time elect," be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 31, 1893.

CHAPTER IV.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the court of chancery," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the vice chancellors of this State shall each be entitled to receive an annual salary at the rate of nine thousand dollars and no more; said salaries shall be paid in equal monthly payments by the treasurer of this state on the warrant of the comptroller of the treasury, and it shall be in full of all services to be rendered by said officers respectively, and neither of said officers shall be entitled to any per diem or other allowance over and above said salaries.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 31, 1893.

CHAPTER V.

An Act to amend an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act respecting the orphans' court, and relating to the powers and duties of the ordinary and the orphans' court and surrogate,'" approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section twenty-six of the act to which this act is a supplement, as the same was amended by a supplement to said act, approved March seventeenth, anno domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and as further amended by a further supplement to said act, approved May eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, be and the same is hereby further amended, so as to read as follows:

26. And be it enacted, That when any will shall have been proved and recorded in any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in any foreign state or kingdom, and any person shall desire to have the same recorded in this state, for the purpose of making title to lands or real estate in this state, it shall be lawful for any surrogate of any county in this state, upon an exemplified copy of such will and proof thereof being filed in his office, exemplified and attested as a true copy according to the provisions of the act of congress for exemplifying and certifying judicial record of any state, if it be the record of any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in the manner required by the laws of the foreign state or kingdom in which such will shall have been proved and recorded, to make it legal evidence in such foreign state or kingdom, if it be the record of a foreign state or kingdom, to record such will and proofs and file the said copy in his office; and any such will and proofs and certificate, upon being so recorded shall have the same force and effect in respect to all lands and real estate whereof the testator died seized, as if said will had been admitted to probate and letters testamentary or of administration, with the will annexed thereon, had been issued in this state; and all conveyances of such real estate, heretofore or hereafter made, by any executor or executors, or administrator or administrators, with the will annexed, or the survivor or survivors of them, or by any devisee or devisees or their heirs, shall be as valid as if said will had been admitted to probate in this state, and such record or certified copies of said will and proof and certificate shall be received in evidence in all courts of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 6, 1893.

CHAPTER VI.

A further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to enable incorporated towns to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved March fifth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, and enlarging the powers and authority of the commissioners appointed under said act.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all incorporated towns in this state, wherein a system of water works has been or shall be erected and put in operation under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to enable incorporated towns to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved March fifth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, and commissioners have been or shall be appointed and acting pursuant to the terms of said act, and in which a system of sewers has been or shall hereafter be constructed and put in operation under the laws of this state, it shall be lawful for the board of commissioners or other governing body of such incorporated towns to provide by ordinance or resolution, that the water commissioners appointed under the provisions of the act above recited shall take the control, charge and management of the sewer system of said town, and upon entering upon the discharge of their duties under this act, shall have power to authorize connections to be made therewith, and to establish rents for such connections, and for the use of said sewer system, and the time of payment thereof, as they may deem proper; and in their care and management of the said sewer system shall be governed by the same rules and regulations as are provided in the act above recited for the care and government of the water system of said town, so far as the same shall be applicable thereto.

2. And be it enacted, That said water commissioners, after the passage of such ordinance or resolution, shall have authority to prescribe such rules, regulations, conditions and restrictions as to the connections with and use of the said sewer system, as in their opinion may be proper or necessary, and shall have power to employ suitable and proper laborers, workmen, clerks, collectors and assistants in the conduct, management and care of said sewer system upon such terms as they may deem reasonable; provided, that no regular salaries shall be allowed or paid by said water commissioners to any employee, until the agreement therefor shall have been first submitted to and approved by the board of commissioners or other governing body of said towns.

3. And be it enacted, That the rents for connections with and use of the said sewer system so fixed by the said water commissioners, shall draw interest from the time they become due, and shall be and remain, until paid, a lien upon the premises with which such sewer system shall be connected; and said water commissioners shall have similar remedies for the collection of said rents, with interest and costs, as the said towns have by law for collecting the expense of paving sidewalks in front of lots required to be paved in said towns, which remedies it shall be the duty of said water commissioners to enforce in all cases where the sewer rents shall be more than two years in arrears.

4. And be it enacted, That the said water commissioners shall cause a careful estimate to be made of the cost of managing, keeping in repair and operating the said sewer system once in each and every year, and estimate approximately the rents to be collected therefrom, for the ensuing year, and shall report the same in writing to the board of commissioners, or other governing bodies of said towns on the first Monday of April, each and every year.

5. And be it enacted, That in case of any deficiency from the revenue of said sewer system to meet the expenses thereof and the principal and interest on the bonds issued to construct the same, as they may become due, then it shall be the duty of the board of commissioners or other governing body of said towns to add to such deficiency so reported, three per centum of the cost of managing and keeping in repair and operating the said sewer system, to cover losses and contingencies, and to assess such deficiency and said three per centum so added as aforesaid, upon all the taxable property in said town in the same manner as other taxes are assessed, and said sums shall be collected by the collector and other officers of said towns, who are by law required to collect taxes, and if not paid by the time required by law for the payment of other town taxes, shall be collected by warrant, and by and in the same manner as other taxes are collected in said towns, and shall be a lien upon the property whereon the same are assessed in like manner as other taxes of the said towns.

6. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said water commissioners to keep all funds which may come to their hands on deposit with one or more of the banks located in said towns and they shall draw said funds by checks to be signed by at least two of their members, which said checks shall specify briefly the purposes for which the same are drawn.

7. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said water commissioners to keep an accurate account of the receipts and disbursements connected with said sewer system in proper books to be provided for that purpose, and which shall always be open for the inspection of the board of commissioners or other governing body of said town, and their authorized agents, and which accounts shall be annually, in the month of March, audited by a committee of said board of commissioners or other governing body and a short abstract thereof shall be published with the annual statement of the town finances.

8. And be it enacted, That in addition to the amount which the said water commissioners are now entitled by law to receive, they shall receive and be paid as full compensation for all time, attention, trouble, and labor bestowed by them upon said sewer system, the sum of fifty dollars each, per year.

9. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

10. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 8, 1893.

CHAPTER VII.

An Act concerning the location and erection of buildings for a city hall and the accommodation of the different offices and departments of the city government in cities of the first and second class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all buildings, hereafter erected for a city hall and the accommodation of the different officers and departments of the city government in cities of the first and second class in this state, shall be so located and erected that there shall be an open and vacant space of ground of at least twenty-five feet in width on all sides of the same; provided, that this act shall not apply to the alteration and erection of additions to buildings now in use for such purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for the common council, board of aldermen, board of commissioners or other governing body having charge of the locating and erecting of any such buildings as are mentioned in section one of this act, in any city of the first and second class in this state, to expend any moneys for the erection and completion of the same unless the said buildings are located and erected as provided for in section one of this act.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, in so far as their operation may conflict with this act.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 13, 1893.

CHAPTER VIII.

An Act to authorize the boards of managers of cemetery associations to pass by-laws.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of managers, directors, or trustees of any cemetery association, company or corporation of this state organized under any general or special law or laws, or the body having the management of any such cemetery, by whatever name such body may be known, may ordain, pass and put into execution such by-laws as they may judge to be necessary and convenient for carrying into effect the objects of the association and for regulating such association; and may amend or repeal any by-laws already in existence; provided, however, that no such change shall be made except by a vote of three fourths of the total number of such managers, directors or trustees at a meeting thereof specially called to consider changes in the by-laws.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1893.

CHAPTER IX.

An Act to provide for the compensation of certain officers of the legislature.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the second assistant engrossing clerk of the senate and the two assistant engrossing clerks of the house of assembly shall each receive as compensation, for the legislative session, the sum of six hundred dollars; the second assistant sergeant-at-arms of the senate, the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the assistant private secretary of the president of the senate the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the assistant bill clerk of the senate the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the clerks of the committees on judiciary, corporations, municipal corporations, revision of the laws and railroads and canals, of the senate, the sum of three hundred dollars each for the legislative session; and to each assistant doorkeeper of the senate the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars each, and to each one of the assistant sergeant-at-arms of the house of assembly whose salary is not provided for by law, the sum of five hundred dollars; to each of the two assistant bill clerks of the house of assembly the sum of five hundred dollars; to the assistant private secretary of the speaker of the house of assembly the sum of four hundred dollars; the postmaster of the house of assembly five hundred dollars; the officer assistant to the clerk of the house of assembly, four hundred dollars; to the clerks of the following committees of the house of assembly, viz., judiciary, corporations, bill revision, banks and insurance, boroughs and townships, commissions, revision of the laws, railroads and canals, labor and industries, towns and townships, fisheries, ways and means and municipal corporations, the sum of three hundred dollars each.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately and shall apply to the present session of the legislature only.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER X.

An Act in relation to the manner of paying teachers in the public schools of certain cities in this state, and giving the common council or other governing body power in relation thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body in any city of the first class of this state to provide by ordinance for the manner in which payments shall be made to teachers of the public schools in such cities; and for the form and manner in which warrants upon the public treasury of any such city shall be drawn and signed for this purpose; and all payments and disbursements made, and all warrants drawn in accordance with the terms of an ordinance duly passed for that purpose, in any such city, shall be deemed and taken to be in all respects regular and lawful.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act respecting conveyances" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section seventeen of the act to which this is amendatory be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

17. And be it enacted, That all such powers of attorney, being so acknowledged or proved and certified, shall and may be recorded with the clerks or registers of the several counties of this state, in suitable books to be provided for that purpose; and that the record of any such letters of attorney, heretofore made and executed, and acknowledged or proved, and certified and recorded as aforesaid, or hereafter to be made and executed, and acknowledged or proved, and certified and recorded as aforesaid and the transcript thereof, duly certified by the proper officer, shall be received in evidence in any court of this state, and have the same effect as if the original letter of attorney were then and there produced and proved.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XII.

An Act in relation to the state house and adjacent public grounds.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the state house and adjacent public grounds be and are hereby put under the care and safe keeping of some suitable person to be superintendent of the same, who shall be nominated and appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, and commissioned by him, and shall continue in office for the term of five years from the date of his commission and until his successor is appointed and qualified.

2. And be it enacted, That the doorkeepers of the two houses of the legislature, immediately after the legislature shall have adjourned, shall deliver to the said superintendent all the keys of their respective houses, which shall be safely kept in his office until the next meeting of the legislature; and when the courts held in the state house are not in session the keys of the respective court rooms shall be deposited with the said superintendent for safe keeping; that it shall be the duty of said superintendent to have the general supervision and care of the state house and said grounds, to preserve them from injury and to provide for their being kept in proper order; he shall also take care that the occupied parts of the state house be kept warm, ventilated, swept and cleaned, and he shall employ so many necessary assistants for that purpose, at such prices and upon such terms as the governor, attorney-general and state treasurer, or a majority of them shall approve; and he shall render monthly accounts to the state treasurer, and the state treasurer shall certify the same, and they shall thereupon be paid by the state treasurer on the warrant of the comptroller.

3. And be it enacted, That hereafter the said superintendent shall have the distribution of the laws, law reports, equity reports, the minutes, journal and proceedings of each house of the legislature and all other documents published under the authority or patronage of the state, and he shall transmit such copies to such persons, or persons as is now provided for by law, and he shall have the same supervision and control over such documents as the superintendent of the state house and adjacent public grounds now has.

4. And be it enacted, That the superintendent shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, to be paid by the treasurer upon the warrant of the comptroller out of the treasury of the state in monthly installments, to be computed from the day of the appointment of said superintendent.

5. And be it enacted, That the said superintendent before entering upon the execution of the duties of his said office, shall take and subscribe the following oath, to wit: I, A. B., being appointed superintendent of the state house and adjacent public grounds, do solemnly promise and swear that I will justly and honestly keep the books, papers and writings to me committed, and to be committed by virtue of my said office, and that I will faithfully and honestly perform all the duties of the said office according to the best of my ability and understanding, so help me God.

6. And be it enacted, That this oath, required by the preceding section of this act shall be administered by a judge or justice of any court of record of this state.

7. And be it enacted, That the said superintendent, before entering upon the performance of the duties of his said office, shall enter into a bond to the state of New Jersey, with at least two sufficient sureties, being freeholders of this state, in the sum of five thousand dollars conditioned for the faithful and honest performance of the duties of said office, the said bond to be approved by a judge or justice of any court of record of this state, and when so executed and approved, together with the oath or affirmation of office duly taken and subscribed, shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state and filed in the same, to be by the secretary of state safely kept among the public papers of his office.

8. And be it enacted, That the act entitled "An act in relation to the state house and adjacent public grounds," approved February eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

9. And be it enacted, That this act shall be a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XIII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act in relation to the appointment of sergeant-at-arms and criers to the several courts of the counties and fixing the salaries for the same," approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the above entitled act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the justice of the supreme court to whom a judicial district has been or may be assigned, and which judicial district comprises counties of the first class, is authorized to appoint in their respective judicial district a suitable person as sergeant-at-arms and also a suitable person as crier of the circuit court of said judicial district, to hold office during the pleasure of said justice, whose duties it shall be to attend daily upon the said courts in the county wherein appointed during the several terms thereof, for which services the said sergeant-at-arms and said crier, in all counties of the first class having a population within their territorial limits exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants shall each receive and be paid an annual compensation or salary of nine hundred dollars in lieu of any per diem compensation, such annual compensation or salary to be paid monthly by the county collector upon the certificate of the county clerk of said county; provided, however, that whenever it shall seem to be proper and advisable, under all the circumstances, to do so, the said justice of the supreme court may be and is hereby authorized to order and fix, in lieu of the annual compensation herein provided for, for said sergeant-at-arms, such per diem allowance to him, not exceeding five dollars per day, as shall appear to said justice in the exercise of his discretion to be fair and reasonable to allow, but said per diem allowance shall be made and taken in lieu of all fees, perquisites and allowances whatever; same to be paid on certificate made as aforesaid, after a claim for the service rendered or claimed to be rendered by the claimant, verified by his oath, shall have been presented to such clerk.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XIV.

An Act providing for the appointment of county collectors in the several counties of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That at the annual period meetings of the board of chosen freeholders of the several counties of the first and second class of this state, the said board shall appoint some fit person, being a freeholder and resident in such county, and not a member of such board, to the office of county collector, who shall hold his office for a term of three years and until his successor shall be appointed and shall have given bond as required by law; provided, that the term of office of any person now holding the office of county collector of such county, shall continue until the expiration of the time for which such person was elected or appointed and no longer.

2. And be it enacted, That in case any vacancy shall occur in the office of county collector, by death, removal, resignation, failure to give satisfactory bond or otherwise, the said board of chosen freeholders shall appoint a fit person as aforesaid to be such county collector, who shall hold said office until the next annual meeting of said board, and the appointment and giving bond by his successor.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 21, 1893.

CHAPTER XVI.

An Act concerning the maintaining of race courses in this state, and to provide for the licensing and regulating of the same.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of chosen freeholders of any county in this state, or the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or other body having general charge of the affairs of any city, township or municipal division of this state in which there is situated and maintained a race course for the racing, running, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing to be run, paced or trotted for by such horses, mares or geldings, shall have power and is hereby authorized to license the owners of such race course to maintain and use the same for any running, racing, pacing or trotting of any horses, mares or geldings for any purse or stake, plate or other thing; such license shall be for a period of not more than five years, and no license shall be granted for the maintenance or use of a race course within the corporate limits of any city having a population of more than one hundred thousand people, according to the census last taken.

2. And be it enacted, That the licenses provided for in this act shall be granted only upon the expressed condition that the owners and managers of the race course so licensed shall allow all owners, jockeys and trainers of horses, mares and geldings all the privileges of entering, racing and training horses, mares and geldings which shall be allowed to any other owners, jockeys or trainers, unless such owners, jockeys or trainers, or such horses, mares or geldings shall have been ruled off another race course within this state for fraudulent practices, or under some rule or regulation adopted by the owners of a majority of the licensed race courses in this state.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall be unlawful for any person or incorporated body or association to maintain or use a race course in this state for the racing, running or trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, or to permit such running, racing, trotting or pacing upon any grounds owned or leased or controlled by such person or incorporated body or association unless a license for that purpose shall have been granted as in this act provided; any license granted under this act shall become void upon any breach of any condition upon which it shall be granted.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or incorporated body or association to maintain or use in this state for the running, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing to be run, paced or trotted for by such horses, mares or geldings any race course which was not used for such running, trotting or pacing prior to the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, unless such person or incorporated body or association shall first file with the secretary of state a certified copy of a resolution adopted by three-fourths of the members of the board of chosen freeholders of the county in which such race course is proposed to be maintained, which resolution shall declare that the maintaining of such race course is a public necessity.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XVII.

An Act to provide that betting and the practice and betting, commonly known as bookmaking, upon horse races within the enclosed grounds of any incorporated association or body in this state, or the keeping of a place or places within such grounds to which persons may resort for such betting, shall not constitute any misdemeanor or criminal offence when such association or incorporated body is not indictable for the carrying on of said races therein.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the practice, habitual or otherwise, of betting upon horse races, commonly known as bookmaking or any of the acts of either betting or book-making upon horse races, or the keeping of a place or places to which persons may resort for such betting, shall not constitute a nuisance or the keeping of a disorderly house or a conspiracy or any other misdemeanor or criminal offence whatever, or the persons engaged therein be indictable when such betting or book-making is carried on or done within the exterior enclosure of the grounds of any race course of any agricultural society or other incorporated body of this state, and wherein for the running, racing, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, the said society or incorporated body is not indictable; and provided, further, that such betting or book-making is carried on or done only on the days of the races of said society or body, and upon the races within said enclosure.

2. And be it enacted, That all laws and parts of laws, both statutory and common, inconsistent with this statute, are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That if any person or persons, or corporation or association shall within the exterior enclosure of the grounds of any race course of any licensed agricultural society or other licensed incorporated body of this state wherein, for the running, racing, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, the said society or other incorporated body is not indictable, shall in an indictable manner practice, habitually or otherwise, the betting upon horse races commonly known as book-making or any of the acts of either betting or book-making upon horse races within such enclosure or in an indictable manner keep a place or places within such enclosure to which persons may resort for such betting or book-making, such person or persons or corporation or association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars, but such person or persons, corporation or association shall not, for such practice, habitual or otherwise, of betting or book-making, or of keeping a place or places within such enclosure to which persons may resort for such book-making or betting, or for authorizing or permitting such book-making or betting within such enclosure, be deemed guilty of maintaining a disorderly house, or maintaining a nuisance, or of conspiracy or of any criminal offence whatever, except as in this section provided.

2. And be it enacted, That all parts of the act to which this is a supplement, and all laws and parts of laws, both statutory and common, inconsistent with the provisions of this statute are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act authorizing the establishment of hospitals in the cities of this state," approved February twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, the management and control of all hospitals established under the authority of the act to which this is a supplement, and all those either established, shall pass to and be vested in the board of health of the city or cities wherein any such hospital has been or may be established, and the term or terms of the present board of control or direction shall thereafter cease and determine.

2. And be it enacted, That all the power and authority given by the said act, or any act supplementary thereto, to such board of control or direction, shall thereafter pass to and be vested in such board of health, and such board of health shall be charged with all the duties by the said act or acts imposed upon such board of control or direction.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate elections,'" approved April eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, which supplement was approved May 9th, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any township or borough in this state where the election districts have been renumbered, or the boundary lines of the same have been changed, or wherein new election district or districts have been formed by the township committee of any such township, or the governing body of any such borough, it shall be the duty of the county board of registry to immediately appoint, in the manner provided in section two of the act of which this is a supplement, a registry board for each election district in such township or borough, and said registry board so appointed shall hold office until the first day of June next ensuing, when their successors shall be appointed; and said board of registry, so appointed in each election district, shall proceed in the manner prescribed in the act to which this is a supplement, except that when the next election shall be an election for township or borough officers, then such board shall proceed to make a new register in the same manner as provided in the act to which this is a supplement, for the making a register of the voters at the election held for the members of the general assembly, which registry, when made, shall be used at a township or borough election.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the government and regulation of the state prison," approved April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the secretary of the board of inspectors of the New Jersey state prison shall receive an annual salary of five hundred dollars for his services as secretary of said board, to be paid to him by the treasurer of this state, by warrant of the comptroller.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XXII.

An Act respecting the fees and compensation of the clerks of the several counties of this state, and repealing all acts providing for the payment of a fixed salary in lieu of fees.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That hereafter the clerks of the several counties of this state, and the clerks of the civil and criminal courts therein, shall be entitled to demand and receive such fees and compensation as are now established by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall only apply to those clerks of the several counties of this state and the clerks of the civil and criminal courts therein whose term of office shall hereafter commence, or to those now in office who may file their assent in writing, under their hands, to the provisions of this act, in the office of the clerk of the county in which he is such clerk.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts which requires or permits the payment of a fixed and stated salary to any of such clerks in lieu of fees, whether such acts be general, special or local, or which are in conflict with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning the government of certain cities in this state and constituting a municipal board of public works and other officers therein and defining the powers and duties of such boards and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities placed under the control and management of such board and providing for the maintenance of said board," approved March twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section three of the act to which this is a supplement be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

3. And be it enacted that the board of public works of any city herein authorized shall have power by ordinance to lay out, open, grade, pave, repave, improve and vacate the streets and alleys within the corporate limits of any such city in like manner as the same are now laid out, opened, graded, paved, repaved, improved and vacated in any such city by existing laws, and to make all sewer constructions, connections, alterations, repairs and improvements in like manner as the same now are constructed, connected, altered, repaired and improved in any such city by existing laws, and to construct, repair, maintain, control and operate all public works, and to control the public water supply and the distribution, sale and use of the water, and of the collection of water rents and charges of such city in like manner as the same now are constructed, repaired, maintained, controlled and operated, and said board shall have the power to make, alter and amend rules, regulations and ordinances to regulate, prevent and remove obstructions and encumbrances in and upon the streets and sidewalks; to enforce the removal of snow and ice from the sidewalks and gutters thereof by the owners and occupants of the premises fronting thereon; to regulate and prevent the throwing and depositing of ashes, offal, dirt, garbage and other refuse and material in the streets; to regulate and prevent the erection and construction of any stoop, step, platform, cellar, area, sign, post or any obstruction or projection in, over and upon any street or avenue, and to remove the same at the expense of the owner or occupant of the premises; to provide for and regulate street improvements, crosswalks, curbstones, gutters and sidewalks; to regulate and prevent the tearing up of streets for the purpose of laying water, gas and sewer pipes, and making house connections therewith, and the laying of conduits for electric wires; to regulate the speed of vehicles; to grant franchises and licenses relating to the use of streets; and said board shall and may enforce obedience to all such ordinances relating to the above enumerated powers by the imposition of fines not exceeding fifty dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both; any ordinance of the city now in force relating to any of the above enumerated objects shall continue in force and operation until repealed or modified by said board.

2. And be it enacted, That section seven of the act to which this is a supplement be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

7. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body or board having charge of the finances of the cities subject to the provisions of this act, each and every year hereafter, to levy a tax of two and one-eighth mills on each dollar on all the taxable property in such city, such tax to be levied and collected as and with the general taxes of the city, and to be known as the fund for the board of public works, and shall be used by said board of public works for the purpose of repairing, cleaning and improving streets, the repairing and cleaning of sewers, the repairing and building of receiving basins, for drains and sewers for sanitary purposes; and all repairing and cleaning of such other property entrusted to the care and custody of said board under this act and the supplements thereto, and said fund shall be in lieu of all other appropriations for the purposes aforesaid, to be made by such body or board, except that in case the public water supply for the city is leased or obtained from a private corporation, then a sum equal to the amount paid for such supply for the fiscal year shall also be inserted in the annual tax ordinance, and shall with the said fund be placed to the credit of said board of public works, and expended by them as provided in this act.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIV.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act for suppressing vice and immorality" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be unlawful for any person or corporation, on the christian sabbath or first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, to print, publish and sell newspapers, to sell and deliver milk, or to walk, ride or drive for recreation, and to hire horses and carriages or other conveyances for riding or driving; provided, however, that the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or other governing body of municipalities or incorporated camp meeting associations of this state shall have the power to adopt such ordinances and rules as they may deem necessary and proper to regulate or prohibit the acts hereby made lawful, and may prescribe fines and penalties for the violation of the same, which shall be enforced and collected in the same manner as is now provided by law for the violation of other ordinances and rules of such municipalities or associations.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXV.

An Act to amend an act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate fishing with seines in Barnegat Bay,'" passed February seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-two, passed April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate fishing with seines in Barnegat Bay,'" passed February seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-two, which said supplement was passed April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows, to wit:

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to set or use any net or nets, or stationary device whatever, for the purpose of taking fish from the aforesaid waters of Barnegat Bay, and its tributaries below a line across said tributaries two hundred and fifty yards from the mouths thereof.

2. And be it enacted, That section three of said act shall read as follows, to wit:

3. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to haul any seine, or other moving net or device for the purpose of taking fish from the aforesaid waters of Barnegat Bay and its tributaries below a line across said tributaries two hundred and fifty yards from the mouths thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXVI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for sewerage in and from certain towns in this state," approved April twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section five of an act entitled "An act providing for sewerage in and from certain towns in this state," approved April twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, be amended so as to read as follows:

5. And be it enacted, That after the filing of said report and map or maps, said town council or other governing body shall cause a notice of the filing of said plans, maps, estimates and report to be given by publication in one or more daily or weekly newspapers circulating in the neighborhood of the lands in the said drainage area, for at least three weeks, once in each week, and posting a like notice in ten conspicuous places in the said drainage area for the same period; and that the owners of the lands in said town lying within said drainage area may or can within thirty days after the date of said notice, file with the clerk of said town their written dissent to said proposed sewer or sewers, laterals and appurtenances, and unless the owners of a majority of the lands in said town lying within said drainage area shall dissent thereto as aforesaid within said thirty days, the said town council or other governing body of said town shall have the right, if deemed for the best interests of said town or any portion or portions thereof, and all the necessary power and authority is hereby granted to make and enter into a contract or agreement in the name of said town, either with said owner or owners, or jointly with the said land owner or owners, with any other person or persons for the construction, by said land owner or owners or such other person or persons, of such sewer or sewers and necessary laterals and appurtenances, upon such conditions, in such manner and of such style, size, dimensions and details as set forth in said plans and maps, mutually determined upon as aforesaid and at such cost as may be agreed upon, and for the payment by the said town to said land owner or owners, or such other person or persons of such proportionate part of the cost thereof as may also be agreed upon; provided, however, that the amount agreed to be paid by said town shall not exceed the proportion of the estimated cost which should be borne and paid by said town, as set forth in the aforesaid report made by said commissioners; and provided, further, that if in the progress of said work a change in the line of said sewer, as originally set and laid on the map and plans filed as aforesaid, be considered advisable by the unanimous consent of all parties in interest, who shall have executed and delivered the said contract or agreement for the construction of the sewer or sewers therein specified, the town council or other governing body of said town shall have the necessary power and authority to agree to the change in the line of said sewer and in the terms and condition of the contract or agreement aforesaid theretofore entered into, and shall have power and authority to enter into such further or additional contract or contracts, agreement or agreements, for the additional expense incurred by such change in the line of the sewer, as set out on said maps and plans so filed, and in the name of the town to enter into such additional contract or agreement, either with the land owner or owners, or jointly with the said land owner or owners, with any other person or persons, for the completion of said sewer originally contracted for on a line different from that originally proposed and set out in the plans theretofore filed, and upon such terms and conditions and in such manner and of such style, size, dimensions and details as to the work and material additionally to be contracted for and such costs as may be mutually agreed upon between the parties to said original contract or agreement and for the payment to said land owner or owners, or other person or persons contracted with, of such proportionate share thereof as shall have theretofore been fixed by the commissioners aforesaid; and provided, that said additional work and material shall not increase the proportionate share of the expense thereof to be borne by said town beyond thirty per centum of the amount agreed to be paid by the original contract or agreement; and provided further, that a map and plans of such intended change and the terms, conditions, details and price intended to be paid for such additional work and material, be filed in the office of the clerk of said town, there to remain at least thirty days and that public notice of the filing of the map and plans, showing such intended change, and of the details, conditions, price and terms for which such additional contract or agreement is to be entered into, be given in one or more daily or weekly papers circulating in the neighborhood of the lands in the said drainage area, and for at least three weeks, once in each week, and that the owners of the lands in the said town within the drainage area may or can, within thirty days after the date of said notice, file with the clerk of said town their written dissent to said proposed change in the plans and contract, and unless the owners of a majority of the lands lying within said drainage area shall so dissent thereto within said thirty days, the said town shall have the right to enter into such contract or agreement for such additional labor and materials upon the terms, conditions, details and at the prices specified in said plans and specifications so filed as aforesaid as it may deem advisable, and may agree thereto jointly with the said land owner or owners, or other person or persons, jointly with them, anything in any law contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and provided, that the expense of preparing the plans and specifications and other necessary expenses attending the said additional contract or agreement and change therein, be borne and paid by all parties interested, in the same proportion as payments are made to the contractor or contractors under said original contract or agreement aforesaid; and provided further, that any such sewer shall not be constructed so as to at any time empty into or discharge any of its contents into any creek, stream, lake, pond or water course, the waters of which are used for or connect with the waters of any river, creek, stream, lake, pond or water course used for the supply of water to any aqueduct, watermain or reservoir of any city, town, township or municipality in this state.

2. And be it enacted, That section six of said act be amended so as to read as follows:

6. And be it enacted, That no contract, as provided for in section five of this act, shall be made and entered into between said town and said land owner or owners, jointly of the one part, and any other person or persons of the other part, excepting upon advertisements in one or more newspapers printed and published in the county wherein said town is located, for proposals for furnishing all the materials and doing all the required work, but said town and said land owner or owners shall be under no obligation to award the said contract to the lowest bidder, and may, if deemed for their best interests, reject all bids; and provided further however, that no advertisement for proposals for furnishing such additional labor and material, caused by said change to the lines of the sewer, and in the plans and specifications for said sewer, as provided for in the preceding section, shall be necessary, but that the filing of said plans and specifications under said additional contract intended to be made, and the notice provided for by publication in the preceding section, shall be sufficient to authorize and hereby does authorize said town to enter into such additional contract for said additional work and material according to said change and plans and the specifications filed.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that the provisions of this act shall apply to contracts or agreements made before this act takes effect, under which work has been partially performed.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXVII.

An Act for the protection of certain kinds of birds, animals and fish, and to provide a procedure to recover penalties for the violation hereof.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful to pursue, take, kill or have unlawfully in possession any buck, doe, fawn or wild deer, except only between the fourteenth day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of one hundred dollars for each buck, doe, fawn or wild deer so killed, pursued or had unlawfully in possession.

2. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any gray, black or fox squirrel, except only between the fourteenth day of September and sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each gray, black or fox squirrel so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

3. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any quail or any hare (commonly called rabbit) except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each quail or rabbit so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

4. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any ruffed grouse (commonly called partridge), except only between the last day of September and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each ruffed grouse so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

5. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any woodcock, except only during the month of July and between the last day of September and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each woodcock so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

6. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any Wilson snipe (commonly called English or gray snipe), except only during the months of March and April and also between the twenty-fifth day of August and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each Wilson snipe so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

7. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed any reed bird, rail bird or any marsh hen, except only between the twenty-fifth day of August and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each and every bird so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

8. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any upland or grass plover, except only between the last day of July and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each upland or grass plover so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

9. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any pinnated grouse (commonly called prairie chickens) or any wild turkey, except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each pinnated grouse (commonly called prairie chickens) or wild turkeys so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

10. And be it enacted, that hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any hen European partridge, hen European grouse or hen European pheasant within five years after the passage of this act, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each hen European partridge, grouse or pheasant so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

11. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any male English pheasant, European partridge or grouse, except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each male bird aforesaid so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

12. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, or to trap or to expose for sale, any night hawk, whip-poor-will, thrush, meadow lark, finch, martin, barn swallow, wood-pecker, robin, oriole, red or cardinal bird, cedar bird, tanager or any other insectivorous bird, under a penalty of twenty dollars for every bird so killed, trapped, exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prevent individuals from taking or killing English sparrows, cranes, hawks, crows, ravens, crow-black birds or king fishers; and this section shall not apply to persons killing birds for scientific purposes; provided they shall first have obtained a permit as hereinafter provided.

13. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time, either on his own property or on the property of another, to kill, take or capture any doe, buck, fawn or other sort of deer whatsoever, or any partridge, quail, pheasant or grouse of any kind whatsoever, or any snipe, reed bird or rail bird by means of any blind, trap, snare, net or device whatever, or to set the same for the purpose herein mentioned, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every animal or bird so trapped snared or taken or for any trap, snare or net so set; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent incorporated associations from gathering alive with nets or traps any animal or animals, bird or birds for the purpose of propagating or preserving them alive during the winter, providing that they be released again in this state the following spring, not later than the fifteenth day of April.

14. And be it enacted, That no person or persons shall kill, shoot or hunt any of the birds or animals mentioned in this act on his own property or the property of any other person, except during the season and at such times and in such manner as provided in this act, and any person or persons so doing shall be liable to the penalties provided for by said act for violation thereof.

15. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to have in possession, sell or have for sale any hare, rabbit, squirrel, quail, pheasant, woodcock, reed bird, rail bird, plover or duck, after the same has been caught or trapped by means of any snare, snoods, trap or device of any account or description whatsoever, under the penalty of twenty dollars for every animal or bird had in possession, sold or exposed for sale.

16. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to hunt for rabbits with ferrets, or to capture or kill any rabbit or hare by means of any ferret or ferrets, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each hare or rabbit so hunted or killed.

17. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to hunt with a gun, or with a dog and gun, or with any fire arms or weapons, or to fish with hook and line, or in any manner whatsoever on the Sabbath day (commonly called Sunday), except those who observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, hunting upon their own property, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

18. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to rob or destroy the eggs or nest of any wild bird whatever, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

19. And be it enacted, That the fish and game commission of this state may issue permits to any properly accredited person of eighteen years or upwards, permitting the holder thereof to collect birds, their nests or eggs for strictly scientific purposes only; such permits shall be in force for one year from the date of issue and shall not be transferable.

20. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons hunting or gunning after geese, duck or brant, to place the boat or sink box or other floating vessel in which he lies in wait to kill said geese, duck or brant at a distance of more than one hundred feet from ice, or from marsh, or meadow, or heaped seaweed, or sand bank not covered with water at high tide; neither shall it be lawful for any person with intent to capture or kill geese or ducks to hunt after or pursue them with a light at night, and every person so offending against the provisions of this section shall for each and every offence forfeit and pay the sum of twenty dollars.

21. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to sail for, to shoot or shoot at any goose, brant or duck from any boat or boats, vessel or vessels, propelled by steam or sail, or from any boat or boats, vessel or vessels or similar structure or structures anchored or staked upon the waters of this state under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

22. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to kill any goose, brant or duck with any device or instrument known as a swivel or punt gun, or with any other gun than such guns as are held at arms' length and fired from the shoulder without other rests, or to use or set any net, device, instrument or gun other than such gun as aforesaid, with intent to capture or kill any goose, brant or duck, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

23. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take, kill, shoot at, or expose for sale or have unlawfully in possession any goose, duck, brant or other web-footed wild fowl, except only between the first day of August and the first day of May in each and every year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for every goose, duck, brant or other web-footed wild fowl so taken, killed, shot at, exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession.

24. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to catch, kill, take or have unlawfully in possession any black bass, or Oswego bass, except only between and including the thirtieth day of May and the first day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, taken or had unlawfully in possession.

25. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to catch, kill or have unlawfully in possession any brook trout, except only between the first day of March and the fifteenth day of July in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, taken or had unlawfully in possession.

26. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time to catch, kill, sell, expose for sale, or have in possession, any black bass measuring less than nine inches in length, or any trout measuring less than six inches in length, except for the use of stocking waters of this state therewith, and on license in writing first obtained for that purpose under the hand of one of the fish and game commissioners of this state, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, sold, or exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession.

27. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, either on his own land or the land of any other person, at any time whatsoever, either by day or by night, to put, place or haul any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any other contrivance whatever for the taking or catching fish in any of the waters of this state above tide water, or to keep any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets, or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any contrivance whatever for the taking or catching of fish in any of the said waters mentioned, or to catch or assist in taking or catching any fish in manner aforesaid, or to put, place, haul or keep, or assist in putting, placing, hauling or keeping in any of said waters any of the aforementioned contrivances therefor, or to spear any game fish in any of the aforesaid mentioned waters, or sell or expose for sale, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been killed, any fish caught by any contrivance prohibited by this section, or to place, keep or use any set line or lines in waters inhabited by bass, pickerel, pike or trout, under a penalty of not less than twenty dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom said conviction is had; provided, that said penalty shall not apply to the legitimate catching of fish commonly called minnows for bait with a sein not over sixteen feet in length, if the young of bass, pickerel, perch, trout and other species of fish known as game fish be not destroyed thereby, or to the catching of fish at any time by or under the orders in writing of the fish and game commissioners of this state; or to the legitimate catching of minnows for bait with a net over sixteen feet in length, provided a special permit in writing be first obtained from the fish and game commissioners; and provided further, that this penalty shall not apply to the owners or lessees of private ponds which are in no manner runways for migratory fish; and provided further, that this section shall not apply to the river Delaware.

28. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall be found making use of any boat or boats, vessel or vessels, or of any seine, gill, drift or anchor or sink nets, fixed nets, trap, pot, pound, set line, fyke, weirs or other apparatus for the unlawful taking of fish in any waters within the jurisdiction of this state contrary to the intent and meaning of this act, he, she or they shall in addition to the penalties prescribed, forfeit the boat or boats, vessel or vessels, seine or seines, net or nets, gill or gills, drift or drifts, draw net or nets, fyke or fykes, trap or traps, pot or pots, pound or pounds, weir or weirs, set line or lines or other apparatus so unlawfully used; and it shall be the duty of any constable, sheriff, fish and game protector, deputy fish and game protector or fish warden, or it may be lawful for any other person or persons to seize and secure any of the aforesaid apparatus unlawfully had, and immediately thereafter to give to some justice of the peace, district court or other magistrate of the county where said seizure shall have been made, and said justice of the peace, district court or other magistrate is hereby required and authorized at such time and place as he shall appoint, to hear and determine in a summary manner whether the same was so unlawfully used, and if it shall appear to his satisfaction that the same was used unlawfully, to make an order directing that the same be declared confiscated and forfeited to the use of the game and fish commissioners of this state, who may destroy the same or sell the same at public outcry; the proceeds of such sale, after deducting all legal costs and charges, shall be paid one-third to the fish and game commissioners, one-third to the person making the complaint, and one-third to the person furnishing the necessary evidence.

29. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take or catch with hook, line and rod or with spoon or snell in the manner usually known as trolling, or in any other manner, from any lake, pond or stream, any fish of the kind with which such lake, pond or stream of this state is or may hereafter be stocked by the fish and game commissioners of this state or by private individuals, for three years from the time such stock fish are introduced into such lake, pond or stream, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught or taken.

30. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to place in any pond, lake, river, stream or in any of the waters of this state any dynamite, giant or electric powder or any explosive substance whatever or any drug or medicated ball for the purpose of taking or killing fish, under a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom said conviction is had.

31. And be it enacted, That no person or persons, company, corporation or association shall allow any dye stuff, coal tar, saw dust, shavings, tan bark, lime, refuse from gas houses or other deleterious or poisonous substance to be turned or allowed to run into any of the waters of the state, either private or public, in quantities destructive of the life of or disturbing the habits of fish inhabiting the same, under a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each and every offence at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom such conviction is had.

32. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful to shut off or draw off the water of any pond, stream or lake in this state for the purpose of taking, capturing or killing the fish therein, under the penalty of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom such conviction is had.

33. And be it enacted, That nothing in this act shall prevent any licensed or established dealer in game to dispose of such game or fish mentioned in this act for ten days after the expiration of the periods in which the same may be killed or caught; provided, that said game or fish shall not have been killed or caught in this state within the periods prohibited in this act, or shall have been purchased outside the limits of this state.

34. And be it enacted, That in all prosecutions of game carriers under this act, it shall be competent for them to show that the prohibited article came in possession in another state or from beyond the United States at some place where this act did not apply.

35. And be it enacted, That hereafter justices of the peace, district courts and police magistrates in any city shall have jurisdiction to try and punish all persons or persons guilty of violating any of the provisions of this act, and all the different penalties in this act prescribed for violation thereof may be enforced and recovered before any justice of the peace, district court or police magistrate, either in the county where the offence is committed, or where the offender is first apprehended or where he may reside.

36. And be it enacted, That such justice of the peace, district court or police magistrate in any city, upon receiving proof by affidavit or affidavits of one or more persons, of the violation of any of the provisions of this act is hereby authorized and required, unless the accused is then before him, to issue a warrant under the hand and seal of said justice or police magistrate, or under the seal of such district court, as the case may be, directed to any constable, police officer, fish warden of the county, the fish and game protector of the state, or deputy fish and game protector, to cause such person or persons to be arrested and brought before such justice, district court or police magistrate, and shall thereupon in a summary way hear and determine the guilt or innocence of the person or persons so charged, and upon conviction of any such person or persons upon such hearing, the said justice, district court or police magistrate is hereby authorized and required to impose upon the offender and offenders so convicted, the penalty or penalties prescribed together with the costs of prosecution for such offence, and if any person or persons shall fail to pay the penalty or penalties so imposed, together with the costs of prosecution, the said justice, district court or police magistrate is hereby authorized and required to commit such offender to the common jail of the county for a period of not less than ten or more than thirty days, or until said penalty and costs are paid.

37. And be it enacted, That for the violation of any of the sections of this act done in the view of any constable, police officer, fish warden, game and fish protector, or deputy fish and game protector, such officer is hereby authorized, without warrant, to arrest the offender or offenders and to carry him or them before a justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court of the county wherein such arrest is made; and the justice, district court or police magistrate before whom such offender shall be taken shall have jurisdiction of the case, and is hereby authorized and required summarily to hear and determine the same, after receiving from the said officer an affidavit in writing of the commission of the offence for which the person or persons was or were arrested.

38. And be it enacted, That all actions commenced for violation of this act shall be entitled and run in the name of the person making the complaint, and the prevailing party shall recover costs against the other; the same fees and costs shall be allowed therein as in trial before justice of the peace holding court for the trial of small causes.

39. And be it enacted, That any case begun under this act may be for good cause shown adjourned by the justice, district court or police magistrate not exceeding thirty days from the date of arrest of the defendant, but in such case it shall be the duty of the justice, district court or police magistrate to retain the defendant in custody unless he shall enter into bond unto the person making the complaint with at least one sufficient surety in double the amount of the penalty prescribed for the offence complained of, conditioned for his appearance at the adjourned day of trial, and thence from day to day until the case is disposed of, and then to abide by the judgment of the justice, district court or police magistrate or otherwise to demand and perfect an appeal to the court of common pleas of the county within ten days after rendering final judgment and such bond if forfeited may be prosecuted in the name of the person making the complaint in any court of competent jurisdiction; all sums of money recovered for the violation of this act or the forfeiture of such bonds shall be paid, one-third to the person making the complaint, one-third to the game and fish commissioners and one-third to the person or persons furnishing the evidence necessary to secure conviction.

40. And be it enacted, That any party to any proceeding instituted under this act may appeal from the judgment or sentence of the justice, district court or police magistrate to the court of common pleas of the county in which the said trial shall take place; provided, that the party appealing shall within ten days from the rendering of judgment serve a written notice of appeal upon the person making the complaint and pay the costs adjudged against him, and deliver to the justice, district court or police magistrate a bond to the opposite party in double the amount of the penalty imposed, with at least one sufficient surety, conditioned to prosecute the appeal and to stand to and abide by such order or judgment of the court as may be made against him in the premises.

41. And be it enacted, That whenever an appeal shall be taken as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the justice, district court or police magistrate to send all the papers in the case to the next court of common pleas of the said county, which court shall receive and try and determine all such appeals in the same way and manner that appeals from the courts for the trial of small causes are now tried and determined in in that court, except that on the trial of such appeals no notice of the production of any new evidence on behalf of either party shall be required.

42. And be it enacted, That in cases under this act no state of demand or other pleading shall be required, but the preliminary affidavit shall specify among other things the section of this act claimed to have been violated.

43. And be it enacted, That the duly appointed fish and game protector, deputy fish and game protector and fish wardens of this state shall have the same powers and be entitled to the same fees for the services or process in cases instituted under this act that constables have and are entitled to receive in the courts for the trial of small causes.

44. And be it enacted, That no person shall be excused from giving evidence in any action or proceedings taken or had under this act on the ground that the evidence might tend to convict such witness or to establish the liability of such witness under any provisions thereof, but such evidence shall not be received against such witness to recover any of the penalties mentioned in this act.

45. And be it enacted, That an act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the several acts relating to game and game fish," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the several supplements or further supplements thereto, approved respectively March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; March sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six; April fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six; March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven; April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight; March third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; March tenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five; March first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; March twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; February twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act to authorize the boards of chosen freeholders of the respective counties of this state to issue bonds to raise money for state or county purposes in anticipation of the arrearages of state or county taxation" [Supplement to Revision], approved March eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first section of the act to which this is a supplement, and which section reads as follows (vide Supplement to Revision, page ninety-two) shall be amended so that the same shall read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That if in any county of this state there shall now exist, or hereafter shall exist, arrearages of state and county taxes owing and unpaid to the county collector, by the different cities, town or townships in said county, by reason of any appropriation and levy of taxes for state or county purposes or for errors in the apportionment or assessment of state school tax, heretofore made or hereafter to be made, that it shall be lawful at any time, or from time to time, for the board of chosen freeholders of any county of this state to borrow such sum or sums of money as they may deem necessary for the payment of any floating debt of such county, or for the payment of any temporary loans based upon such arrearages or for the payment of any state or state school tax which may be due from such county to this state, and to cause, by resolution, the bonds of such county, in the name of the board of chosen freeholders of such county, to be issued for the same in such sums each as they may deem proper; provided, that said board of chosen freeholders of such county shall not, in all, borrow to an amount exceeding the amount of arrearages of taxes owing to the county collector by the different cities, towns and townships in such counties, and such loans shall be made and such bonds issued only in anticipation of the collection of such arrearages of taxation; provided also, that the first moneys realized from such bonds shall be paid into the state treasury in payment of such state taxes as may be then due.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to enable counties which have no county hospital to assist in maintaining hospitals located in such county," approved April twenty-sixth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the act to which this is a supplement be amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for the board of chosen freeholders of any county of this state which has no hospital located therein maintained by such county, other than the hospital or sick ward of the county poorhouse, to make an appropriation of a sum of money not exceeding five thousand dollars each year in the same manner that appropriations for other county purposes are made, which sum so appropriated shall be included in the annual tax levy of such county, and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other county taxes, and shall be applied to the purpose of supporting and maintaining such patients as may be sent to any hospital or hospitals supported by private charity and located in such county; provided, the sum so appropriated be used and applied for the benefit, comfort and maintenance of such patients, inmates of such hospital, as are residents of said county at the time of being sent to said hospital; provided, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to counties of the first class.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER XXX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act concerning legacies" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section eight of the act above mentioned, to which this act is amendatory, be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

8. And be it enacted, That whenever personal property is bequeathed to any person for life, or for a term of years, or for any other limited period, or upon a condition, or any contingency, the executor or administrator cum testamento annexo shall not be compelled to pay or deliver the property so bequeathed to the person having any such life interest, or other interest as aforesaid; until security shall be given to the orphan's court having jurisdiction of such executor's or administrator's accounts, in such sum and form as in the judgment of the said court shall sufficiently secure the interest of the person or persons entitled in remainder, whenever the same shall accrue or vest in possession; but where the person or persons next immediately in remainder shall be the lineal descendant of any such life tenant, or person having any limited estate as aforesaid, and such executor or administrator shall not have filed any security, such life tenant or other person having such limited interest or estate as aforesaid shall not be required to give security in a greater sum than fifty thousand dollars; provided, however, in every case where the executor or administrator is the person to whom any such life interest, or other interest as aforesaid, is bequeathed, then such executor or administrator before receiving into his possession such personal property, notwithstanding that by the will it is or may be provided that no security shall be required of the executor, shall file with the surrogate of the county in which the will shall be or has been proved, or letters granted, a bond to the ordinary of this state in double the amount of the money or the value of the property to be received, with two sufficient sureties, to be approved by the orphans' court, conditioned for the faithful conservation of said property, and until such a bond shall be filed it shall not be lawful for such executor or administrator to receive such money or personal property, but the orphans' court may, upon petition presented by any person in interest, and upon ten days' notice in writing to such executor or administrator, appoint some other fit person to receive and administer such property as trustee upon such security being given for the faithful discharge of his duties as to the said court shall seem proper.

2. And be it enacted, That the aforesaid provisions of this act shall be held to apply as well to all cases where any will has already been proved as to where it shall be proved; provided, however, that any such executor has not already received such personal property into his possession.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts, general, special or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXI.

An Act authorizing the payment to the Helm Printing Company of the sum of two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for work done for the state.

Whereas, the House of Assembly, on the first day of March, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That the Helm Printing Company be authorized to print the following reports in the German language for the use of the members of this House: One thousand copies of the report of the bureau of statistics, one thousand copies of the report of the board of agriculture, one thousand copies of the report of the state geologist, all for the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, to be paid at the same rate as the preceding year;" and whereas, the Helm Printing Company, in compliance with the aforesaid resolution, proceeded with the aforesaid work, and expended thereon the sum of four thousand dollars for the purchase of maps, drawings and printing; and, also, delivered a portion of said work to the state, when the said company discovered that the resolution was not such an authorization to do the work as required by law in order to make the state responsible for the payment of said work, and has received no pay for said work; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the treasurer of the state, upon the warrant of the comptroller, is hereby authorized and required to pay to the Helm Printing Company the sum of two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for such work and disbursements.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation and government of boroughs," approved April second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a majority of legal voters of any borough incorporated under the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement, voting at a special election held for the purpose, pursuant to the provisions of any law of this state, shall or may hereafter have authorized the issue of "improvement bonds" for the construction of a system of water works and a sewage system, or any other public improvement of said borough it shall and may be lawful for the mayor and council of said borough to issue bonds of the said borough, under the signature of the mayor and borough clerk, with the corporate seal affixed, to be styled "improvement bonds."

2. And be it enacted, That the aggregate amount of the "improvement bonds," authorized by section one of this supplementary act, shall not at any time exceed ten per centum of the amount of the assessed valuation of the property in the said borough, as shown by the assessor's duplicate for the preceding year, and the said bonds shall be issued in such sizes, payable at such time or times, not longer than twenty years, and bear interest, payable semi-annually, at a rate not exceeding six per centum, as the mayor and council of said borough shall by ordinance direct.

3. And be it enacted, That the said bonds hereby authorized shall be negotiated or sold at public or private sale, at not less than the par or the face value thereof, and the proceeds of said bonds shall be appropriated, by the mayor and council of said borough, only to the payment and cancellation of such indebtedness as shall or may be incurred for and in the erection and construction of the said system of water works and sewage system of said borough, and for such other necessary public improvements as shall be within the power of the mayor and council of said council, by virtue of the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement, or such other and further acts applicable thereto as may be now or hereafter enacted.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the creation of a police department in cities of the second class in this state whose population now exceeds, or may hereafter exceed, fifty thousand, and vesting in such police department certain powers of management and appointment vested in other departments or officers in said cities," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section second of the act to which this is an amendment, which section reads as follows:

"2. And be it enacted, That the commissioners of police appointed under this act shall be and they are hereby invested with and shall possess all the powers heretofore given to and perform all the duties now required of or imposed upon any board of aldermen or common council or other governing body, by whatever name called, in any such city of the second class in this state, concerning and appertaining to the appointment, powers, government and other matters relating to the police of such cities; they shall also adopt such rules and regulations as to the appointment, control, duties and dismissals of the members of the police force as to them shall seem expedient, and may alter the same at pleasure; provided, however, that no member of the said police force shall be removed except for cause and after trial therefor before said commissioners of police; the police force of such city shall not exceed one for each one thousand of population of such city unless said commissioners by unanimous vote shall determine that a greater number is required," shall be amended so that said section shall read as follows:

2. And be it enacted, That the commissioners of police appointed under this act, together with the police justices of said cities, who shall be a full member of said board ex-officio, and entitled to a full vote on all proceedings therein, shall be and they are hereby invested with and shall possess all the powers heretofore given to and perform all the duties now required of or imposed upon any mayor or any board of aldermen or common council or other governing body, by whatever name called, in any such city of the second class in this state, concerning and appertaining to the appointment powers, government and other matters relating to the police of such cities; they shall also adopt such rules and regulations as to the appointment, control, duties and dismissals of the members of the police force as to them shall seem expedient, and may alter the same at pleasure; provided, however, that no member of the said police force shall be removed except for cause, and after trial therefor before said commissioners of police; the police force of such city shall not exceed one for each one thousand of population of such city, unless said commissioners by unanimous vote shall determine that a greater number is required; provided further, that said police justice shall not receive any additional compensation for his service as such commissioner.

3. And be it enacted, That section four of the act to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby repealed.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall be a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

An Act concerning public roads and parks, and creating boards for the control and management of the same.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the state of New Jersey, That the township committee in the respective townships of this state, or a majority of such committee, may at their first regular meeting or at a special meeting, after this act shall have become a law, divide their respective townships into convenient road districts, cause maps thereof to be made and filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which said township is located, with the clerk of such township, and with the clerk of the road board to be organized as hereinafter provided, with a copy of their resolution making such division.

2. And be it enacted, That the said committee shall, by resolution adopted at said meeting so held as aforesaid, submit the question of the acceptance or rejection of this act to the voters of such township at any general or special election to be held therein, whereof at least ten days' notice shall be given, in the manner now directed for the giving of notice of the annual township elections or town meetings; and if a majority of those who shall vote for the acceptance or rejection thereof shall be in favor of the acceptance of this act, then this act shall go into effect immediately, and the grant of power herein made to any such township shall be deemed accepted by such township, and such township shall be bound by the terms of this act; persons entitled to vote at any township election or town meeting where this question is submitted to them shall express their assent or rejection of this act by depositing ballots at such election in the election district of any such township; and those who are in favor of the acceptance of this act and the grants and powers therein contained, shall deposit a ballot containing the words "road act of 189 (with chapter number of same) accepted," written or printed thereon, and those who are opposed, shall each deposit a ballot with the words "road act of 189 (with chapter number of same) rejected," written or printed thereon; and this acceptance or rejection may be endorsed upon the ballot on which are the names of the township officers, and no separate ballots shall be required for the purpose of this vote, if had at the general election; there shall be a canvass on the return of the votes upon this question of such acceptance or rejection made by the election officers, in the same way and manner as for officers voted for at such election; and if a majority of the ballots on which there shall be either the word "road act of 189 (with chapter number of same) accepted," or "road act of 189 (with chapter number of same) rejected," shall be found to be for the acceptance of this act it shall then, but not otherwise, take effect and be binding upon such township wherein such vote shall have been taken. If a special election be held under the provisions of this act, the same shall be conducted in every respect as is now provided for the conduct of the general township election or town meeting.

3. And be it enacted, That the said town clerk [illegible] in each of said townships in which said act shall have been accepted in manner aforesaid, shall thereupon call an assembly in each of said districts into which said township has been divided as aforesaid, of the freeholders in said district, at such convenient place in said district, and within three weeks after the acceptance of this act as aforesaid, at four o'clock in the afternoon, as the said [illegible] shall deem expedient, upon ten days' notice by printed hand bill or hand bill partly printed and partly written, to be posted conspicuously in at least ten public places in said district, and published in a newspaper printed and published in the said township, or where there is no such newspaper then in one printed and published in the county and circulating in said township, at which assembly, after being duly organized, the said freeholders so assembled shall elect by ballot a suitable person, who shall also be a legal voter in the township and a freeholder and resident in the district for which he is nominated, as road commissioner for said district for the term of three years; and the said freeholders so assembled shall also have the same powers and authority in relation to the voting and raising of money for the making, maintaining and repairing the public highways within such district as the inhabitants of the said township now have or had in relation to the roads and highways therein when assembled in town meeting, and in addition thereto they shall also have the power of appropriating such sums of money as they may deem proper for keeping in repair or improving any public parks in said township now acquired or that may hereafter be acquired under any of the laws of the state, and also to appropriate moneys for the laying and constructing of sidewalks and keeping the same in repair, the said voters having the option of designating where said money so appropriated for sidewalks shall be expended; and they and their property, both real and personal, shall be in all respects liable for the same, in like manner as the inhabitants of the said township and their said property are now liable in respect to the roads therein; provided, that in making assessments for the purposes mentioned in this act, no deductions shall be made for debts owing by the owners of the real estate assessed, or for any mortgage thereon; and provided, that each of the said districts respectively shall make, maintain and keep in repair under the direction of the board to be organized as hereinafter provided, the public highways within their respective limits, in the same manner, to the extent of such district respectively as the said townships are now authorized and required to make, maintain and keep in repair the highways within its limits; and provided further, that all moneys so voted and raised by any district shall be applied by the said board to the use of the public highways and sidewalks in such district, and not in any other district; that no decision, vote or appropriation shall be valid unless at least twelve freeholders of said district shall be present and take part therein; and if twelve freeholders of said district are not present on the day appointed as aforesaid, the said meeting shall be adjourned from day to day until said number of freeholders are present, and a majority of those present shall be necessary to give validity to a decision, vote or appropriation; that a minute of the proceedings of said meeting shall be made by the secretary of said meeting, to be entered in the book of minutes of said district, which minute shall specify the names of at least twelve freeholders present at the assembly.

4. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners when so elected as aforesaid, and their successors to be thereafter elected, are hereby constituted a board of commissioners to be known as the "public road board" of the respective townships in which the same may be elected; that the said commissioners or a majority of them shall within five days after their election, at two o'clock in the afternoon, assemble at such place as may be designated by said township committee by a resolution adopted for that purpose and of which written notice shall be given to each of said commissioners, and proceed to the organization of said board by the election of a president and such other officers as they shall see fit, who shall hold their offices for one year or until their successors are elected, and annually thereafter, on the first Monday in May, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon, said commissioners shall meet for such organization as aforesaid, and the said officers who are so elected shall hold their offices for the period of one year, or until their successors are elected as hereinbefore provided.

5. And be it enacted, That the term of each commissioner elected after the expiration of the term of office of the commissioners heretofore provided for shall be three years; and that he shall be a legal voter of the township and a freeholder and resident of the district for which he is nominated and elected and shall be elected as hereinafter provided; that all vacancies in said board arising from death, resignation, removal from the township, or any cause other than the expiration of the term of office, shall be filled by the said board, within thirty days from the occurrence of the same, with a person who is a legal voter of the township and a freeholder and resident of the district for which he is named; that when any vacancy shall arise from other cause than the expiration of the term of office, then the remaining members of the board shall discharge the duties of the retiring member or members until his or their successor or successors shall have been appointed; and each commissioner shall, before he enters upon the performance of the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation before any officer of this state authorized to take the same, faithfully, fairly and impartially to exercise and perform the duties of said office, which oath or affirmation shall, within five days after taking the same, be filed with the clerk of said township.

6. And be it enacted, That the commissioners herein provided for shall within the limits of the district to which each shall from time to time be assigned, have the same duties, and be subject to the same penalties as overseers of the highways in the said township now have or heretofore had, perform or performed or are or were subject to within and for the said township; and that the board hereby created shall in addition to the other powers and duties conferred and enjoined by this act have the same powers, perform the same duties, and be subject to the same obligations and penalties as the township committee now have had, perform or performed or are or were subject to, in relation to the public highways; and in addition thereto shall have a general and exclusive supervision, control and management of the public highways and sidewalks in said township and of their repair or regulation, and of all parks and other lands in such township which have been or may be dedicated to the public or which may be acquired as now provided by law, and shall from time to time prescribe by the vote of the majority of said board the manner in which the public highways shall be worked, repaired, kept in order, regulated and cleaned, and the time when the same shall be worked and repaired; and if any person shall desire to dedicate to public use, as a highway, any portion of his or her land, and twelve freeholders of the district in which said lands so proposed to be dedicated are situated, shall petition the said board to accept the same for public use, then upon grading the same and putting it in good condition as a highway and the execution of a deed of the same to the inhabitants of the said township with an acceptance in writing signed by a majority of the said board, endorsed thereon and recorded with the same in the office of the clerk of the county wherein such township is located, the land so dedicated and accepted shall be a public highway from the time of so recording said deed, with like effect as if the same had been opened under the provisions of an existing law.

7. And be it enacted, That the said board shall once in every year call an assembly in each of said districts of the freeholders in said district, in the manner provided for in section three of this act; that at said assembly the commissioner of said district shall preside, and the said freeholders so assembled shall have the same powers and authority particularly enumerated and set out in said last named section, and they and their property shall be subject to the like liability therein particularly stated; that the assessment in the said section shall be subject to the three provisos in said last named section particularly set out, and that no vote or appropriation shall be valid unless under circumstances detailed in said section, and that a minute of such meeting shall be kept and entered as therein provided.

8. And be it enacted, That the said assembly shall be conducted according to such general rules as the said board may from time to time prescribe, and shall decide, vote and appropriate such sum or sums as they shall deem necessary and proper for the use of the public highways, sidewalks and parks in the district, and the tax so voted shall be assessed by the township assessor and collected by the township collector in the manner provided by law for the assessment and collection of taxes in the said township, and shall be paid by the collector or officers receiving the same to the president of said board, to be by the said board applied to the purposes prescribed by this act.

9. And be it enacted, That the said board may appoint, employ and discharge from time to time such surveyors, superintendents, engineers and laborers as they may deem necessary in order more effectually to carry out the intentions of this act, and pay them such compensation or wages as they may deem fair and reasonable; also to purchase or hire and to use for the said township such horses, carts, implements and materials as they may deem proper.

10. And be it enacted, That the said board shall (subject only to the right of appeal and review hereinafter provided) have the full and exclusive power and authority to lay out, open, widen, alter, straighten, grade and vacate public highways in such township; that whenever the said board, upon the written application of twelve freeholders in any of the said districts, shall deem it expedient to lay out, open, alter, widen, straighten, grade or vacate any public highway, or any number of connecting public highways in any such township, the said board shall cause a map of such proposed measures to be made and filed in their office, which map shall be open to inspection at all reasonable times by any person desiring to inspect the same, and shall thereupon cause notice to be given, as provided in section three of this act, and by printed hand bills or hand bills partly printed and partly written, posted conspicuously in ten or more public places in such district, stating that such map is open for inspection and requiring all persons interested therein to appear before said board at a convenient time and place, to be specified in said notice, when and where the said board shall hear and weigh all arguments for or against said improvements; and if, at said time any one or more parties interested desire an adjournment of the said hearing, and give notice in writing to said board of such desire, said hearing shall be adjourned to such other time as may be determined upon by said board; that after said hearing the commissioners shall appoint a committee of their number to examine the route of the proposed road and to report upon the feasibility and advisability of the same, and what changes, if any, should be made therein, and thereupon the said board shall decide and determine upon the necessity of such proposed improvement, and if the said board shall decide and determine in favor thereof they shall make their decision in writing and shall award such damages as they may deem just to each and every person affected thereby, and assess such lands as may be benefited in proportion to the benefit received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that within five days after making such assessment as aforesaid, a printed or written or partly printed and partly written notice shall be addressed and mailed to each individual or party so assessed, directed to him or her at his or her post office address, if the same can be ascertained, stating the amount of said assessment against said individual or party for said improvement, and that said assessment will remain open at the office of said board for examination and inspection by all persons interested therein, at all reasonable times during the fifteen days next succeeding the mailing of said notices as aforesaid, and that said board will attend at their office on a day subsequent to the expiration of said fifteen days, and also on one or more evenings, not exceeding three evenings in all, if so required by any party or parties interested, to hear and weigh all objections thereto; that said board shall thereafter reconsider said assessment and make any alterations therein they may deem just, and thereupon they shall confirm said assessment, and within ten days after such confirmation file a map of the said improvement as finally determined on by them, with their aforesaid written decision and said assessment as confirmed and award so made, in the office of the clerk of the county in which such township is located; that the said board shall give notice of such filing by publication in a newspaper printed and published in the said township, and where there is none published in said township then in one printed in the county in which said township is located and circulating in said township, once a week for four weeks, and the determination of the said board shall be final and conclusive in the premises, unless an appeal is taken to the court of common pleas in and for such county, within the time and manner provided for in this act, or in case of a proposed new road, a petition against the making of the same shall be presented to the board within twenty days from their determination in the matter, signed by the owners of a majority of lineal feet fronting on the proposed new road.

11. And be it enacted, That all property taken under any provisions of this act shall be deemed taken for public use, and in estimating any award or assessment hereunder the said board shall estimate for benefits as well as for damages as aforesaid.

12. And be it enacted, That the said board shall (subject only to the right of appeal and review hereinafter provided) have the full and exclusive power and authority to construct sidewalks and gutters of such material as they shall deem proper along any public highway in said township, upon the application in writing of the owners of a majority of the lineal feet of lands fronting upon both sides of the highway whereon such improvement is to be made; that whenever the said board, upon receiving such written application as aforesaid, shall deem it expedient to construct such sidewalks and gutters as aforesaid, they shall proceed to a determination of said question in the same formal manner particularly enumerated and set out in section ten of this act; and if the said board shall decide and determine that said improvement is necessary, and shall decide in favor thereof, they shall make their decision in writing, and shall assess such land as may be benefited in proportion to the benefit received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that thereupon the said board shall give notice of said assessment in manner provided in said section ten of this act, and shall proceed in all things to the final determination thereof as is particularly provided in said last-named section; that upon such final determination the same shall be final and conclusive unless an appeal be taken as provided for in this act.

13. And be it enacted, That said public road board shall have full power and authority, upon the application in writing of twelve freeholders of any such townships for that purpose, to excavate, build and construct in any road, street or avenue, and with the consent of the owner in any private lands, such sewer or sewers as they may deem requisite or proper for purposes of drainage, and for the preservation of the public health; that whenever said board shall deem it advisable to construct such sewer or sewers, they shall proceed to a determination of said question in the same formal manner particularly prescribed and laid down by section ten of this act; and if the said board shall decide and determine that said improvement is necessary, they shall make their decision in writing and shall assess such lands as may be benefited in proportion to the benefits received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that thereupon the said board shall give notice of said assessment in manner provided in said section ten of this act; and shall proceed in all things to the final determination thereof as is particularly provided in said last-named section; that upon such final determination the same shall be final and conclusive unless an appeal be taken as provided in this act.

14. And be it enacted, That any person feeling himself or herself aggrieved by the action of said board under the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth sections of this act may, within twenty days from the filing of the decision of the board in the office of the clerk of the county in which said township is located, appeal to the court of common pleas of such county by serving a notice in writing upon any member of the said board, and the said court shall have full power to hear, determine and review the proceedings of the board in the premises, and to confirm, alter, modify, set aside or reverse in whole or in part for errors, either of fact or law, and the said court shall have power to hear and try the same in a summary way, and may summon a jury to determine any question of fact, and the said court may proceed in due course according to the power of the court in other cases, and the determination of the said court shall be final and conclusive in the premises and not subject to appeal or review, and the said court or any judge thereof may, until such determination, stay all proceedings in the matter, in reference to which the appeal may be taken until such final determination, and the like fees and costs shall be paid to the judges, jury, officers of the court and parties as are allowed in other causes of which the court has or may have jurisdiction, and the said court shall have power to make and prescribe all necessary forms, rules and regulations in the conduct of any proceeding to be taken under this act.

15. And be it enacted, That if no appeal shall be taken within the time and in the manner prescribed herein the action of the said board shall take effect, and the said board may proceed to carry out the same under this act, and any assessment laid by virtue hereof shall be a lien on the lands on which it is laid, and the said commissioners shall procure a certified copy of their award and the judgment of the said court of common pleas, if any appeal shall have been taken, to be placed in the hands of the collector of taxes for the time being of any such township, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the collector to collect the said assessment within sixty days from the time of placing such copy in his hands, and to pay the same over to the president of the said board; and the said collector shall, in the collection of the assessment, be liable to the same pains and penalties and entitled to the same fees as in the collection of the annual township taxes, the said fees being reserved by him out of the amount so collected; provided, that the said collector, in each and every year before proceeding under this act, shall enter into bonds to the said board with such sureties and in such sums as the said board shall approve, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties under this act; and the said president, before receiving any money from said collector, shall enter into bonds to the inhabitants of such township in their corporate name, with such sureties and in such sum as the said board shall approve, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as such president.

16. And be it enacted, That in case any owner or owners of lands assessed for any of the purposes as aforesaid shall fail to pay the assessment laid thereon, within three months from the time of placing the certified copy of the award in the hands of the collector, then the lands upon which the said assessment is a lien shall be sold in the same manner as land is now authorized by law to be sold for unpaid taxes in any such township upon a warrant issued by said board of like character and form as that issued for the collection of said taxes, so as to raise a sufficient sum to pay the said assessment and interest, at the rate of twelve per centum per annum, from the expiration of sixty days from the time of placing such copy in the hands of the collector, and the lawful costs and fees of collection and sale.

17. And be it enacted, That notwithstanding any mistake in the name or names of the owner or owners of any lands, tenements and real estate, in the said township in making awards or assessments, or in giving or addressing notice of the same, in pursuance of the tenth section of this act, such awards and assessments shall be valid and effectual in law against such lands, tenements and real estate, and the same may be proceeded against and sold in the manner prescribed in the sixteenth section of this act.

18. And be it enacted, That the said board is hereby authorized to borrow money in anticipation of the sums to be raised annually by tax for road purposes, in the several districts of said township, and thereupon if the commissioner of any district shall in writing require the said board of his township to advance the sum voted in such district, such board shall proceed to raise the same within thirty days after such requisition; the money so advanced to be repaid by the president of said board when he shall receive the amount levied by tax from the township collector.

19. And be it enacted, That this act shall be construed so as to give the commissioners a general and exclusive supervision, control and management of all sidewalks and gutters along the public highways within their respective road districts, and to pay for their repair and regulation out of the moneys voted by the annual assemblies and raised by tax, as in this act provided.

20. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners shall receive two dollars a day for each and every day's attendance upon and about the duties imposed upon them by this act, which shall be paid to them by the township collector upon the order of the president of the board, and there shall be levied and collected in each and every year, at the time and in the manner provided for the collection of taxes in such township, a sum sufficient to defray such fees, advertising expenses and such other general expenses, costs and charges as the said board may become liable for in performing their duties under this act, the amount of which shall be annually determined by said board and certified under seal to the assessor of said township; and that wherever the word "board" is used in this act it shall be considered as meaning a majority thereof.

21. And be it enacted, That at each annual meeting or assembly, held as provided in this act, the commissioner presiding shall present his accounts, which shall give in separate items a statement of work done, the location of it and the amount paid therefor and to whom paid, and also in separate items a statement of all other expenditures for the past year, which accounts shall be read to the meeting and be examined by it or by a committee of three persons appointed by said meeting, and within two weeks thereafter the commissioner presiding shall cause the said accounts to be published in full in a newspaper printed and published in the township, if there be one, and if not, then in a newspaper printed and published in the county in which such township is located.

22. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall apply to or affect any street, avenue or highway under the charge or control of any county public road board in this State.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXV.

An Act concerning bailments.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful in cities, towns or other municipalities of this state where there is located any corporation expressly authorized to receive on deposit for safe-keeping valuable property, for the officers or directors of any incorporated bank, savings bank, trust company, life or fire insurance company (not so expressly authorized) to take or accept for safe-keeping, stocks, bonds, jewelry, plate, money or other valuable property of any kind, unless such officers or directors shall have been specially authorized to take the same on such deposits by a vote of the majority in interest of all the stockholders of such bank or corporation, at a meeting of the stockholders of such bank or corporation called for the purpose of vesting such authority in such officers or directors.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section sixty-eight of the act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, which now reads:

"68. And be it enacted, That all murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or by lying in wait, or by any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any arson, rape, sodomy, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder of the first degree, and all other kinds of murder shall be deemed murder of the second degree, and the jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, designate their verdict whether it be murder of the first or second degree, but if such person shall be convicted on confession in open court, the court shall proceed by examination of witnesses to determine the degree of the crime and give sentence accordingly;" be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

68. And be it enacted, That all murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or by lying in wait, or by any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any arson, rape, sodomy, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder of the first degree, and all other kinds of murder shall be deemed murder of the second degree, and the jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, designate by their verdict whether it be murder of the first degree or second degree; and in no case shall the plea of guilty be received upon any indictment for murder, and if, upon arraignment, such plea of guilty should be offered it shall be disregarded and a plea of not guilty entered, and a jury, duly empaneled, shall try the case in manner aforesaid; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the accused from pleading non vult or nolo contendere to such indictment; the sentence to be imposed, if such plea be accepted, shall be the same as that imposed upon a conviction of murder of the second degree.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

An Act concerning assessments for benefits and awards for damages in the opening of streets in cities of this state, and providing for a new assessment and award.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cases where writs of certiorari may be brought to review assessments for the costs and expenses of laying out or opening any street in any city of this state, it shall be lawful for the supreme court or one of the justices thereof, in term or vacation, on the application of the city, to appoint three commissioners to make a new assessment of the costs and expenses thereof, and a new award of damages for the land taken in such improvement, and the commissioners so appointed shall proceed to make a new assessment and award upon the same principle and in the same manner as if they had been the original commissioners, and shall give such notice of a hearing before them, and of the time when they will present their report to such court or justice, when objections may be presented to such report, as the court or justice may direct, and said commissioners shall present their report in writing, signed by a majority of them, to such court or justice, and such court or justice, after hearing the parties to such certiorari, if they appear, and such other parties in interest as shall appear at the time fixed for the presentation of said report and hearing thereon, may modify and confirm such report as to the court or justice shall seem just, and such report, when so confirmed, shall be filed, both as to the assessments for benefits and awards for damages therein contained, and shall be in lieu of the original report; and all such assessments shall be collected and awards for damages paid in the manner provided in the charter for collecting such assessments and payments of awards for such improvements, and such assessments shall be due from the date of the confirmation of such report, which shall be filed, together with the other papers, with the person charged with the duty of the collection of such assessments in the respective cities.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cases where awards for damages are made for land taken in the opening of any street in any city of this state, there shall be, at the time of the making of such award, unpaid taxes and assessments due to such city on the lands so taken, the amount so due for such unpaid taxes and assessments, with all interest, shall be deducted from the award at the time of payment or tender thereof by the officer charged with the payment thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That such commissioners shall receive such compensation for their services as such court or justice shall order, to be paid by such city.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An Act concerning evidence," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the printed statute books and pamphlet session laws or other laws of any foreign country or of any province or subdivision thereof, printed and published by the direction or authority of such foreign country, province or subdivision thereof shall be received as evidence of the public statutes or laws of such foreign country, province, or subdivision thereof in any and all courts of this state, and the court may determine whether any such book or pamphlet offered in evidence was so printed or published either from the inspection of such book, or the knowledge of the court, or from testimony in support thereof, and no error shall be assigned for the rejection of any such book or pamphlet so offered, unless it be proven on error that such book or pamphlet offered as such in evidence is what it purports to be; nor shall any error assigned for the admission of such book or pamphlet be sustained unless it be shown in support thereof that the statute or law offered in evidence or some material part thereof was not in force in such foreign country, province, or subdivision thereof at the time of the transaction or matter to which it was offered as pertinent or material.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

An Act to enable villages in this State to acquire lands and erect buildings for municipal uses and purposes.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the governing body of any village having a population of three thousand or over to purchase a suitable lot or tract of land within such village, and to erect thereon a building for a public hall for the use of the people thereof, to hold their public meetings and have their public offices located therein, and for such other purposes as the said governing body may deem for the interests of said village, the cost of which said lot and building shall not exceed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the governing body of such village to raise money for the purposes aforesaid by the issuing of the bonds of such village, which bonds shall be denominated "public building bonds," and shall state upon their face the purpose for which they were issued; and the term for which said bonds shall run shall not be longer than thirty years, and they shall be redeemable any time after the expiration of five years, at the option of the said village; and shall be of denomination of not less than five hundred dollars, and shall bear not exceeding the legal rate of interest, and shall not be sold at less than par.

3. And be it enacted, That for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of said bonds as the same shall become due, and for the further purpose of maintaining such building and for the general improvement of the same, said village is hereby authorized to lease, rent or hire, for any specified time, any part of said building not necessary for public uses exclusively, as in the judgment of the governing body thereof may deem proper, for such sum or sums of money as they may deem for the best interests of such village; that the money received from such leases shall first be applied in payment for such necessary improvements and repairs as the governing body of such village shall have made from time to time, and the balance shall be applied to the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds as the same shall become due.

4. And be it enacted, That at least one-twentieth of the principal sum of said bonds shall be raised each year by tax on all the taxable property in said village, and shall be applied in payment of the principal and interest of said bonds as the same shall fall due, and for no other purpose; that should no bonds or interest be due on which to apply said money as the same shall be raised, then in that case the governing body of such village shall appoint three responsible persons as sinking fund commissioners, who shall give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties; that such commissioners shall have power and authority to invest said money in such manner and for such time as they shall deem for the best interests of such village, subject however, to the approval of the governing body of such village.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XL.

An Act in relation to assessments of taxes in cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all incorporated cities of this state that now have or may hereafter have block maps, it shall be the duty of the taxing officer or officers in all cases, in making their assessments for taxes upon real estate, to describe the same by block and lot numbers as shown upon the assessment maps of the city.

2. And be it enacted, That when any change occurs in the ownership of property in any such city, it shall be the duty of the new owner to present his deed, or other evidence of title, to the officer, officers or department having charge of the assessment of taxes therein, that the change of ownership may be properly noted on the books or maps kept by the said taxing officer or officers.

3. And be it enacted, That no register of deeds, county clerk or other officer whose duty it shall be to record deeds, shall record any deed which conveys any property in cities of this state that now have or may hereafter have block maps, unless it shall be duly certified thereon that the same has been presented at the office of the officer, officers, or other department having charge of the assessment of taxes, for the purpose of recording or noting such changes as may have been made thereby in the property lines and ownership of the property; provided, that nothing in this act shall prevent the recording of such deed in case a fee of twenty cents is paid at the time any such deed is deposited for record to the register of deeds, county clerk, or other officer whose duty it is to record the same, upon which payment having been made it shall be the duty of said register of deeds, county clerk or other officer, within five days thereafter to present such deed or an abstract thereof to the officer, officers or department having in charge the assessment of taxes, for the purpose of having such changes in lines of ownership as may be made thereby, recorded or noted.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLI.

An Act to provide for the regulation and licensing of keepers of employment agencies and intelligence offices.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the common council or the legislative body in any city of this State be and is hereby authorized and empowered to make, establish, publish, modify, amend and repeal ordinances, rules and regulations to license and regulate keepers of employment agencies or intelligence offices; to fix the rates of compensation to be allowed to them; to require them to furnish bonds to such city for the faithful observance by them of all the requirements and provisions of such ordinances, rules and regulations of such city; to prohibit unlicensed persons from keeping or maintaining any such employment agency or intelligence office; and to provide for the proper inspection and supervision of the said agencies or offices.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLII.

An Act to provide an efficient fire alarm in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities of the first class in this state the board of fire commissioners or board having charge of the department or branch of the city government to whose custody is committed all apparatus for the extinguishment of fires shall have power and it is hereby made its duty to provide and maintain a perfect system of alarm in case of fire.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cities wherein the present fire alarm system is uncertain or inadequate and the ordinary appropriation for this purpose is insufficient to meet any extraordinary expenditure in changing the present system or substituting the latest improved system the said board having charge as aforesaid may, with the concurrence of the board of finance or board having charge of the finances of any such city, expend for the purposes of this act such sum not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars as said board may determine.

3. And be it enacted, That for the purposes of this act the said board of finance or board having charge and control of finances as aforesaid shall be authorized to borrow the amount necessary for the purpose aforesaid and to issue bonds of the city therefor.

4. And be it enacted, That the bonds to be issued under the provisions of this act shall be made payable in not exceeding thirty years from the date of issuing the same, and shall draw such rate of interest not exceeding five per centum per annum, and to be in such sums as the board having charge and control of the finances of said city shall determine, which bond shall be executed under the corporate seal of said city and the signature of the mayor, comptroller or other proper financial officer thereof, and may be either registered or coupon bonds as said board may direct; provided, that said board may dispose of the bonds hereby authorized at public sale for the best price that can be obtained for the same but not less than par; and provided further, that in order to redeem the bonds issued under the provisions of this act at maturity it shall be the duty of the board having charge of the finances as aforesaid to establish a sinking fund, which shall be created by a special tax of not less than three per centum on the bonds herein provided for to be raised in each annual tax levy.

5. And be it enacted, That the interest on the bonds hereby authorized to be issued shall be raised and paid by a special appropriation to be annually levied and collected, as other taxes in such city are now or may hereafter be levied and collected, and the whole of each year's interest shall be so raised, levied, collected and paid within each year.

6. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of associations for the erection and maintenance of hospitals, infirmaries, orphanages, asylums and other charitable institutions," approved March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any training school organized or to be organized under the act to which this is a supplement, or any supplement thereto, may confer the degree of medical and surgical nurse upon any of its graduates, under such rules and regulations as such training school may prescribe; provided, that instruction be given in anatomy, physiology, hygiene, dietetics and medical, surgical, obstetrical and gynecological nursing.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIV.

An Act to amend a supplement to an act entitled "An act for the preservation of clams and oysters" [Revision], approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, which supplement was approved March twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, chapter CCXXV.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the supplement to an act entitled "An act for the preservation of clams and oysters" (Revision), approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, which supplement was approved March twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, be amended to read as follows, to wit:

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLV.

An Act to authorize the acquisition by the United States of a tract of land in the township of Middletown, in the county of Monmouth and state of New Jersey, to be used for the purpose of erecting and maintaining thereon fortifications and accessories for the defence of the southern entrance to New York harbor.

Whereas, the United States has acquired, by purchase, a tract or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the township of Middletown, in the county of Monmouth and state of New Jersey, and which is more particularly described as follows: Beginning at the government stone monument in southwest corner of the United States light-house reservation for Bayside beacon, on the south shore of Raritan bay and southeast of Point Comfort; running thence north eleven degrees and forty-nine minutes west (N. 11° 49' W.) in a straight line, passing through a monument two hundred and two and eight-tenths (202.8) feet from the point of beginning, a distance of three hundred and sixty-seven and sixty-two hundredths (367.62) feet; thence, south nineteen degrees and fifty-three minutes west (S. 19° 53' W.), three hundred and eighty-five and five-tenths (385.5) feet; thence, north sixty-six degrees and forty-five minutes west (N. 66° 45' W.), thirteen hundred and seventy-six (1376) feet; thence, south eleven degrees and fifty minutes east (S. 11° 50' E.), fourteen hundred (1400) feet; thence, north seventy-eight degrees and ten minutes east (N 78° 10' E.), seven hundred and forty-three and three-tenths (743.3) feet; and thence, north thirty-three degrees and fifty-nine minutes east (N. 33° 59' E.), eight hundred and sixteen and five tenths (816.5) feet to the point or place of beginning, containing twenty-five and seven hundred and thirty-four thousandths (25 734-1000) acres; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the consent of the state of New Jersey is hereby given to the acquisition by the United States of the tract or parcel of land above described, and the same is hereby ceded to the United States of America; upon the said land so acquired the United States may erect fortifications, barracks, and other public buildings, for the defence of the southern or main entrance to New York harbor, and the United States shall have, hold, occupy and own said land thus acquired, and exercise jurisdiction and control over the same and every part thereof subject to the restrictions hereafter mentioned; the same, however, not to be used for quarantine purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That the jurisdiction hereby ceded shall vest when a plat and description of the land thus acquired shall have been filed in the office of the secretary of state of the state of New Jersey; such jurisdiction shall continue no longer than the United States shall own such land, and such consent is given and jurisdiction ceded upon the express condition that the state of New Jersey shall retain concurrent jurisdiction with the United States in and over such land so far as that all civil processes in all such cases, and such criminal and other processes as may issue under the laws or authority of the state of New Jersey against any person or persons charged with crimes, misdemeanor or criminal offences committed within the state may be executed thereon, in the same way and manner as if such consent had not been given or jurisdiction ceded, except so far as such process may affect the real or personal property of the United States.

3. And be it enacted, That so long as such land thus acquired shall remain the property of the United States, and no longer, the same shall be and continue exonerated from all taxes, assessments and other charges which may be levied or imposed under the authority of the state.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act incorporating the inhabitants of townships, designating their powers and regulating their meetings," approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the overseers of poor and town clerks of the respective townships of this State elected after the passage of this act shall hold their office for the term of three years.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVII.

An Act concerning the constitution of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of certain cities in this State.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities in this State that now have, or hereafter may have, a population of fifty thousand inhabitants or over, the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body thereof, shall consist of two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where there now are or hereafter may be three or more members of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, the office, as well as the term of office, of every member of such common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of such wards or aldermanic districts, saving and excepting the oldest and next oldest members thereof, in point of service, having regard to the service of the now or then present terms only of all the members, shall immediately cease, determine and end, and then and from thenceforth the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of such cities shall consist of but two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities.

3. And be it enacted, That in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where there are now or hereafter may be one member of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, a second member thereof from each of such wards or aldermanic districts shall be chosen in like manner as though a vacancy existed in the office of members of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body from each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities; or, if there be no provision for an election to fill a vacancy in such an office in any of such cities, then at the next succeeding annual city election in such cities.

4. And be it enacted, That hereafter in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body thereof, now or hereafter shall consist of two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, all members of such common council, board of aldermen or other governing body shall be elected for terms of two years each, and in any ward of any city subject to the provisions of this act, where there is or may be more than one vacancy, one member of council or board of aldermen thereof shall be elected for one year only.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special, public or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning mortgages," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That every mortgage, bill of conditional sale or conveyance hereafter made upon, or for any household goods and furniture in the use and possession of any family in this state, not given to secure the purchase money for such goods and chattels thus in use and in possession, shall be absolutely void and of no effect or validity, unless such mortgage, bill of conditional sale, conveyance or instrument in writing intended to affect such household goods and furniture, shall be first duly signed, sealed, executed and acknowledged according to law, by the husband and wife of the family, and be duly recorded as provided by law, in the county where such household goods and furniture may be situated at the time of the execution of any such instrument intended as a lien or conveyance of or upon such goods and chattels as herein above specified.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section fifty-five of the act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That section fifty-five a. of said act be and the same is hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That section fifty-seven of said act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

57. And be it enacted, That each county shall be entitled to at least six times as many pupils in the school as it has representatives in the Legislature; and in case any county is not fully represented, additional candidates may be admitted from other localities on sustaining the requisite examination; the applicants shall give on admission a written declaration signed with their own hands, that their object in seeking admission to the school is to qualify themselves for the employment of public school teachers, and that it is their intention to engage in that employment in this State for at least two years, or refund to the State the cost of their tuition.

4. And be it enacted, That section sixty of said act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

60. And be it enacted, That for the support of the normal school and to carry out the purpose and designs of this act, there is appropriated hereby the annual sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars, to be paid out of the income of the school fund upon the warrant of the comptroller.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER L.

An Act authorizing the state board of education to erect a suitable building on the grounds of the state normal school, for providing additional class-rooms, etc.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the state board of education be and they are hereby authorized to erect upon the grounds of the state normal school a suitable building, of such size as the said board may deem proper, for providing additional class-rooms, rooms for instruction in manual training and for such other purposes as in the opinion of the said board may be necessary to increase the accommodations and facilities of the school; and the said board are hereby authorized to procure for the said building such furniture and apparatus as in their judgment may be necessary and requisite for the above-named purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That the erection and furnishing of the said building shall be done by contract or otherwise, as the board shall deem for the best interest of the state, and the said board shall have power to employ architects, superintendents and mechanics, to advertise for proposals, to make a contract or contracts for the whole or any part of said work, and to incur all necessary expenses to carry out the provisions of this act, and for those purposes the sum of twelve thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated from the income of the state school fund, the same to be paid by the treasurer of the state, on a warrant of the comptroller, from time to time, as payments shall become due, said payments to be made upon proper vouchers approved and duly certified by the said board or such officers thereof as they may designate for that purpose.

3. And be it enacted, That the said board shall make to the legislature, at its next session, and at each succeeding session until the said building is completed, a full and detailed report of their proceedings and expenditures under this act.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LI.

An Act providing for a chief clerk or secretary to the board of tax commissioners or board of assessment and revision of taxes in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities of the first class the board of tax commissioners or board of assessment and revision of taxes shall have power to appoint a chief clerk or secretary for a term of three years from the date of his appointment, at a salary to be fixed by such board at the time of such appointment, not less than eighteen hundred dollars, nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, payable monthly.

2. And be it enacted, That such chief clerk or secretary shall, in addition to such other duties as may be imposed upon him by said board, have charge of the records, books and papers of said department, subject, however, to the direction of said board.

3. And be it enacted, That should there be no appropriation or fund for the payment of such salary, then and in such case the board or other authority having the charge and control of the finances in any such city shall make provision therefor in such manner as they may deem proper, and if money is borrowed for such purpose, the amount so borrowed shall be placed in the next tax levy of such city.

Passed March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

Whereas, doubts have arisen whether the legal voters, residents of boroughs formed under and by virtue of the act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the several supplements thereto, are entitled to vote in the township out of which or from which the several boroughs were formed, or in the borough of which they are residents; now, therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the legal voters of all boroughs existing within any of the townships of this State, and incorporated under the provisions of the act of which this is a supplement, shall hereafter in all elections vote within their several boroughs.

2. And be it enacted, That at the annual elections for borough officers which are held on the same day that the town meetings are held in the various townships of this State, the legal voters of said boroughs shall not only be entitled to vote for such officers or appropriations as are authorized by the act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments" approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the several supplements thereto, but shall also be entitled to vote for a chosen freeholder for any township within which such borough is situated, and of which it forms a part.

3. And be it enacted, That the several county boards of registration shall appoint boards of registry and election, and registry or poll clerks, for the said boroughs of their respective counties, and that all elections held within the said boroughs shall be conducted under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate elections," approved April eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and the several supplements thereto and amendments thereof.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LIII.

An Act relating to cities of the third class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be lawful in cities of the third class of this state, having a mayor and council, for said mayor and council of said cities, to elect a clerk, to fix his compensation and his term of office, and by resolution define the duties to be performed by said clerk.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY

CHAPTER I.

An Act ceding to the United States of America jurisdiction over a lot of land situate in the city of Paterson, and exempting the same and its appurtenances from taxation.

Whereas, the United States of America have recently appropriated money for the erection of a building in the city of Paterson for the accommodation of the post-office and other government offices of the United States; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That jurisdiction of the land and its appurtenances which have been purchased in said city of Paterson for the erection of the aforesaid building, be and the same is hereby ceded to the United States of America; provided, that all civil and criminal process issued under the authority of this state, or any officer thereof, may be executed on said land in the same way and manner as if jurisdiction had not been ceded as aforesaid.

2. And be it enacted, That the said land, with its appurtenances, and the building and other property thereon, shall forever hereafter be exempt from all state, county and municipal taxation and assessment so long as the same shall remain the property of the United States of America.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 18, 1893.

CHAPTER II.

An Act in relation to warrants drawn to meet disbursements and expenditures made by boards in cities of the first class in this state in certain cases, and giving the common council or other governing body power in relation thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body in any city of the first class of this state to provide by ordinance for the form and manner in which warrants upon the treasury of the said city for the purpose of meeting and discharging obligations incurred by the expenditure and disbursements of other boards therein shall be drawn, signed and paid, and all warrants made and signed for such expenditures and disbursements in accordance with an ordinance duly passed for that purpose in any such city shall be deemed and taken to be in all respects regular and lawful.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 21, 1893.

CHAPTER III.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act to facilitate proceedings in the prerogative court," approved February eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the fifth section of an act entitled "An act to facilitate proceedings in the prerogative court," approved February eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, which fifth section reads as follows:

"5. And be it enacted, That the vice-ordinary or vice-surrogate general shall receive as compensation for the performance of the duties which shall be imposed upon him under this act, an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars, in addition to his compensation as vice-chancellor, to be paid to him by the treasurer of the State in equal monthly or quarter yearly payments, as he shall from time to time elect," be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 23, 1893.

CHAPTER IV.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the court of chancery," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the vice chancellors of this State shall each be entitled to receive an annual salary at the rate of nine thousand dollars and no more; said salaries shall be paid in equal monthly payments by the treasurer of this state on the warrant of the comptroller of the treasury, and it shall be in full of all services to be rendered by said officers respectively, and neither of said officers shall be entitled to any per diem or other allowance over and above said salaries.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 31, 1893.

CHAPTER V.

An Act to amend an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act respecting the orphans' court, and relating to the powers and duties of the ordinary and the orphans' court and surrogate,'" approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section twenty-six of the act to which this act is a supplement, as the same was amended by a supplement to said act, approved March seventeenth, anno domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and as further amended by a further supplement to said act, approved May eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, be and the same is hereby further amended, so as to read as follows:

26. And be it enacted, That when any will shall have been proved and recorded in any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in any foreign state or kingdom, and any person shall desire to have the same recorded in this state, for the purpose of making title to lands or real estate in this state, it shall be lawful for any surrogate of any county in this state, upon an exemplified copy of such will and proof thereof being filed in his office, exemplified and attested as a true copy according to the provisions of the act of congress for exemplifying and certifying judicial record of any state, if it be the record of any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in the manner required by the laws of the foreign state or kingdom in which such will shall have been proved and recorded, to make it legal evidence in such foreign state or kingdom, if it be the record of a foreign state or kingdom, to record such will and proofs and file the said copy in his office; and any such will and proofs and certificate, upon being so recorded shall have the same force and effect, in respect to all lands and real estate whereof the testator died seized, as if said will had been admitted to probate and letters testamentary or of administration, with the will annexed thereon, had been issued in this state; and all conveyances of such real estate, heretofore or hereafter made by any executor or executors, or administrator or administrators, with the will annexed, or the survivor or survivors of them, or by any devisee or devisees or their heirs, shall be as valid as if said will had been admitted to probate in this state, and such record or certified copies of said will and proof and certificate shall be received in evidence in all courts of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 8, 1893.

CHAPTER VI.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to enable incorporated towns to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved March fifth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, and enlarging the powers and authority of the commissioners appointed under said act.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all incorporated towns in this state, wherein a system of water works has been or shall be erected and put in operation under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to enable incorporated towns to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved March fifth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, and commissioners have been or shall be appointed and acting pursuant to the terms of said act, and in which a system of sewers has been or shall hereafter be constructed and put in operation under the laws of this state, it shall be lawful for the board of commissioners or other governing body of such incorporated towns to provide by ordinance or resolution, that the water commissioners appointed under the provisions of the act above recited shall take the control, charge and management of the sewer system of said town, and upon entering upon the discharge of their duties under this act, shall have power to authorize connections to be made therewith, and to establish rents for such connections, and for the use of said sewer system, and the time of payment thereof, as they may deem proper; and in their care and management of the said water system shall be governed by the same rules and regulations as are provided in the act above recited for the care and government of the water system of said town, so far as the same shall be applicable thereto.

2. And be it enacted, That said water commissioners, after the passage of such ordinance or resolution, shall have authority to prescribe such rules, regulations, conditions and restrictions as to the connections with and use of the said sewer system as in their opinion may be proper or necessary, and shall have power to employ suitable and proper laborers, workmen, clerks, collectors and assistants in the control, management and care of said sewer system upon such terms as they may deem reasonable; provided, that no regular salaries shall be allowed or paid by said water commissioners to any employee until the agreement therefor shall have been first submitted to and approved by the board of commissioners or other governing body of said towns.

3. And be it enacted, That the rents for connections with and use of the said sewer system so fixed by the said water commissioners, shall draw interest from the time they become due, and shall be and remain, until paid, a lien upon the premises with which such sewer system shall be connected; and said water commissioners shall have similar remedies for the collection of said rents, with interest and costs, as the said towns have by law for collecting the expenses of paving sidewalks in front of lots required to be paved in said towns, which remedies it shall be the duty of said water commissioners to enforce in all cases where the sewer rents shall be more than two years in arrears.

4. And be it enacted, That the said water commissioners shall cause a careful estimate to be made of the cost of managing, keeping in repair and operating the said sewer system once in each and every year, and estimate approximately the rents to be collected therefrom, for the ensuing year, and shall report the same in writing to the board of commissioners, or other governing bodies of said towns on the first Monday of April, each and every year.

5. And be it enacted, That in case of any deficiency from the revenue of said sewer system to meet the expenses thereof and the principal and interest on the bonds issued to construct the same, as they may become due, then it shall be the duty of the board of commissioners or other governing body of said towns to add to such deficiency so reported, three per centum of the cost of managing and keeping in repair and operating the said sewer system, to cover losses and contingencies, and to assess such deficiency and said three per centum so added as aforesaid, upon all the taxable property in said town in the same manner as other taxes are assessed, and said sums shall be collected by the collector and other officers of said towns, who are by law required to collect taxes, and if not paid by the time required by law for the payment of other town taxes, shall be collected by warrant, and by and in the same manner as other taxes are collected in said towns, and shall be a lien upon the property whereon the same are assessed in like manner as other taxes of the said towns.

6. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said water commissioners to keep all funds which may come to their hands on deposit with one or more of the banks located in said towns, and they shall draw said funds by checks to be signed by at least two of their members, which said checks shall specify briefly the purposes for which the same are drawn.

7. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said water commissioners to keep an accurate account of the receipts and disbursements connected with said sewer system in proper books to be provided for that purpose, and which shall always be open for the inspection of the board of commissioners or other governing body of said town, and their authorized agents, and which accounts shall be annually, in the month of March, audited by a committee of said board of commissioners or other governing body and a short abstract thereof shall be published with the annual statement of the town finances.

8. And be it enacted, That in addition to the amount which the said water commissioners are now entitled by law to receive, they shall receive and be paid as full compensation for all time, attention, trouble, and labor bestowed by them upon said sewer system, the sum of fifty dollars each, per year.

9. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

10. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 8, 1893.

CHAPTER VII.

An Act concerning the location and erection of buildings for a city hall and the accommodation of the different officers and departments of the city government in cities of the first and second class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all buildings, hereafter erected for a city hall and the accommodation of the different officers and departments of the city government in cities of the first and second class in this state, shall be so located and erected that there shall be an open and vacant space of ground of at least twenty-five feet in width on all sides of the same; provided, that this act shall not apply to the alteration and erection of additions to buildings now in use for such purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for the common council, board of aldermen, board of commissioners or other governing body having charge of the locating and erecting of any such buildings as are mentioned in section one of this act, in any city of the first and second class in this state, to expend any moneys for the erection and completion of the same unless the said buildings are located and erected as provided for in section one of this act.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, in so far as their operation may conflict with this act.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 13, 1893.

CHAPTER VIII.

An Act to authorize the boards of managers of cemetery associations to pass by-laws.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of managers, directors, or trustees of any cemetery association, company or corporation of this state organized under any general or special law or laws, or the body having the management of any such cemetery, by whatever name such body may be known, may ordain, pass and put into execution such by-laws as they may judge to be necessary and convenient for carrying into effect the objects of the association and for regulating such association; and may amend or repeal any by-laws already in existence; provided, however, that no such change shall be made except by a vote of three fourths of the total number of such managers, directors or trustees at a meeting thereof specially called to consider changes in the by-laws.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1893.

CHAPTER IX.

An Act to provide for the compensation of certain officers of the legislature.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the second assistant [illegible] clerk of the senate and the two [illegible] engrossing clerks of the house of assembly shall each receive as compensation, for the legislative session, the sum of six hundred dollars; the second assistant sergeant-at-arms of the senate, the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the assistant private secretary of the president of the senate the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the assistant bill clerk of the senate the sum of five hundred dollars for the legislative session; the clerks of the committees on judiciary, corporations, municipal corporations, revision of the laws and railroads and canals, of the senate, the sum of [illegible] dollars each for the legislative session; and to each assistant doorkeeper of the senate the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars each, and to each one of the assistant sergeant-at-arms of the house of assembly whose salary is not provided for by law, the sum of five hundred dollars; to each of the two assistant bill clerks of the house of assembly the sum of five hundred dollars; to the assistant private secretary of the speaker of the house of assembly the sum of four hundred dollars; the postmaster of the house of assembly five hundred dollars; the [illegible] assistant to the clerk of the house of assembly, four hundred dollars; to the clerks of the following committees of the house of assembly, viz., judiciary, corporations, bill revision, banks and insurance, boroughs and borough commissions, revision of the laws, railroads and canals, labor and industries, towns and townships, fisheries, ways and means, municipal corporations, the sum of three hundred dollars each.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately and shall apply to the present session of the legislature only.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER X.

An Act in relation to the manner of paying teachers in the public schools of certain cities in this state and giving the common council or other governing body power in relation thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body in any city of the first class of this state to provide by ordinance for the manner in which payment shall be made to teachers of the public schools in such cities, and for the form and manner in which warrants upon the public treasury of any such city shall be drawn and signed for this purpose; and all payments and disbursements made, and all warrants drawn in accordance with the terms of an ordinance duly passed for that purpose, in any such city, shall be deemed and taken to be in all respects regular and lawful.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act respecting conveyances" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section seventeen of the act for which this is amendatory be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

17. And be it enacted, That all such powers of attorney, being so acknowledged or proved and certified, shall and may be recorded with the clerks or registers of the several counties of this state, in suitable books to be provided for that purpose; and that the record of any such letters of attorney, heretofore made and executed, and acknowledged or proved, and certified and recorded as aforesaid, or hereafter to be made and executed, and acknowledged or proved, and certified and recorded as aforesaid and the transcript thereof, duly certified by the proper officer, shall be received in evidence in any court of this state, and have the same effect as if the original letter of attorney were then and there produced and proved.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XII.

An Act in relation to the state house and adjacent public grounds.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the state house and adjacent public grounds be and are hereby put under the care and safe keeping of some suitable person to be superintendent of the same, who shall be nominated and appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, and commissioned by him, and shall continue in office for the term of five years from the date of his commission and until his successor is appointed and qualified.

2. And be it enacted, That the doorkeepers of the two houses of the legislature, immediately after the legislature shall have adjourned, shall deliver to the said superintendent all the keys of their respective houses, which shall be safely kept in his office until the next meeting of the legislature; and when the courts held in the state house are not in session the keys of the [illegible] court rooms shall be deposited with the said superintendent for safe keeping; that it shall be the duty of said superintendent to have the general supervision and care of the state house and said grounds, to preserve them from injury and to provide for their being kept in proper order; he shall also take care that the occupied parts of the state house be kept warm, ventilated, swept and cleaned, and he shall employ so many necessary assistants for that purpose, at such wages and upon such terms as the governor, attorney-general and state treasurer, or a majority of them shall approve; and he shall render monthly accounts to the state treasurer, and the state treasurer shall certify the same, and they shall thereupon be paid by the state treasurer on the warrant of the comptroller.

3. And be it enacted, That hereafter the said superintendent shall have the distribution of the laws, law reports, equity reports, the minutes, journal and proceedings of each house of the legislature and all other documents published under the authority or patronage of the state, and he shall transmit such copies to such person or persons as is now provided for by law, and he shall have the same supervision and control over such documents as the superintendent of the state house and adjacent public grounds now has.

4. And be it enacted, That the superintendent shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, to be paid by the treasurer upon the warrant of the comptroller out of the treasury of the state in monthly installments, to be computed from the day of the appointment of said superintendent.

5. And be it enacted, That the said superintendent before entering upon the execution of the duties of his said office, shall take and subscribe the following oath, to wit: I, A. B., being appointed superintendent of the state house and adjacent public grounds, do solemnly promise and swear that I will justly and honestly keep the books, papers and writings to me committed, and to be committed by virtue of my said office, and that I will faithfully and honestly perform all the duties of the said office according to the best of my ability and understanding, so help me God.

6. And be it enacted, That this oath, required by the preceding section of this act shall be administered by a judge or justice of any court of record of this state.

7. And be it enacted, That the said superintendent, before entering upon the performance of the duties of his said office, shall enter into a bond to the state of New Jersey, with at least two sufficient sureties, being freeholders of this state, in the sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful and honest performance of the duties of said office, the said bond to be approved by a judge or justice of any court of record of this state, and when so executed and approved, together with the oath or affirmation of office duly taken and subscribed, shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state and filed in the same, to be by the secretary of state safely kept among the public papers of his office.

8. And be it enacted, That the act entitled "An act in relation to the state house and adjacent public grounds," approved February eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

9. And be it enacted, That this act shall be a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 21, 1893.

CHAPTER XIII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act in relation to the appointment of sergeant-at-arms and criers to the several courts of the counties and fixing the salaries for the same," approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the above entitled act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the justice of the supreme court, to whom a judicial district has been or may be assigned, and which judicial district comprises counties of the first class, is authorized to appoint for their respective judicial district a suitable person as sergeant-at-arms and also a suitable person as crier of the circuit court of said judicial district, to hold office during the pleasure of said justice, whose duties it shall be to attend daily upon the said courts in the county wherein appointed during the several terms thereof, for which services the said sergeant-at-arms and said crier, in all counties of the first class having a population within their territorial limits exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants shall each receive and be paid an annual compensation or salary of nine hundred dollars in lieu of any per diem compensation, such annual compensation or salary to be paid monthly by the county collector upon the certificate of the county clerk of such county; provided, however, that whenever it shall appear to be proper and advisable, under all the circumstances, to do so, the said justice of the supreme court may be and hereby is authorized to order and fix, in lieu of the annual compensation herein provided for, for said sergeant-at-arms, such per diem allowance to him, not exceeding five dollars per day, as shall appear to said justice in the exercise of his discretion to be fair and reasonable to allow, but said per diem allowance shall be made and taken in lieu of all fees, perquisites and allowances whatever [illegible] be paid on [illegible] after a claim for the service [illegible] to be rendered by the claimant, verified by his oath, shall have been presented to [illegible] clerk.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February [illegible], 1893.

CHAPTER XIV.

An Act providing for the appointment of county collectors in the several counties of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That at the annual stated meetings of the board of chosen freeholders of the several counties of the first and second class of this state, the said board shall appoint some fit person, being a freeholder and resident in such county, and not a member of such board, to the office of county collector, who shall hold his office for a term of three years and until his successor shall be appointed and shall have given bond as required by law; provided, that the term of office of any person now holding the office of county collector of such county, shall continue until the expiration of the time for which such person was elected or appointed and no longer.

2. And be it enacted, That in case any vacancy shall occur in the office of county collector, by death, removal, resignation, failure to give satisfactory bond or otherwise, the said board of chosen freeholders shall appoint a fit person as aforesaid to be such county collector, who shall hold said office until the next annual meeting of said board, and the appointment and giving bond by his successor.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 21, 1893.

CHAPTER XVI.

An Act concerning the maintaining of race courses in this state, and to provide for the licensing and regulating of the same.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of chosen freeholders of any county in this state, or the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or other body having general charge of the affairs of any city, township or municipal division of this state in which there is situated and maintained a race course for the racing, running, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing to be run, paced or trotted for by such horses, mares or geldings, shall have power and is hereby authorized to license the owners of such race course to maintain and use the same for any running, racing, pacing or trotting of any horses, mares or geldings for any purse or stake, plate or other thing; such license shall be for a period of not more than five years, and no license shall be granted for the maintenance or use of a race course within the corporate limits of any city having a population of more than one hundred thousand people, according to the census last taken.

2. And be it enacted, That the licenses provided for in this act shall be granted only upon the expressed condition that the owners and managers of the race course so licensed shall allow all owners, jockeys and trainers of horses, mares and geldings all the privileges of entering, racing and training horses, mares and geldings which shall be allowed to any other owners, jockeys or trainers, unless such owners, jockeys or trainers, or such horses, mares or geldings shall have been ruled off another race course within this state for fraudulent practices, or under some rule or regulation adopted by the owners of a majority of the licensed race courses in this state.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall be unlawful for any person or incorporated body or association to maintain or use a race course in this state for the racing, running or trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, or to permit such running, racing, trotting or pacing upon any grounds owned or leased or controlled by such person or incorporated body or association unless a license for that purpose shall have been granted as in this act provided; any license granted under this act shall become void upon any breach of any condition upon which it shall be granted.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or incorporated body or association to maintain or use in this state for the running, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing to be run, paced or trotted for by such horses, mares or geldings any race course which was not used for such running, trotting or pacing prior to the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, unless such person or incorporated body or association shall first file with the secretary of state a certified copy of a resolution adopted by three-fourths of the members of the board of chosen freeholders of the county in which such race course is proposed to be maintained, which resolution shall declare that the maintaining of such race course is a public necessity.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XVII.

An Act to provide that betting and the practice and betting, commonly known as book-making, upon horse races within the enclosed grounds of any incorporate association or body in this state, or the keeping of a place or places within such grounds to which persons may resort for such betting, shall not constitute any misdemeanor or criminal offence when such association or incorporated body is not indictable for the carrying on of said races therein.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the practice, habitual or otherwise, of betting upon horse races, commonly known as book-making or any of the acts of either betting or book-making upon horse races, or the keeping of a place or places to which persons may resort for such betting, shall not constitute a nuisance or the keeping of a disorderly house or a conspiracy or any other misdemeanor or criminal offence whatever, or the persons engaged therein be indictable when such betting or book-making is carried on or done within the exterior enclosure of the grounds of any race course of any agricultural society or other incorporated body of this state, and wherein for the running, racing, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, the said society or incorporated body is not indictable; and provided, further, that such betting or book-making is carried on or done only on the days of the races of said society or body, and upon the races within said enclosure.

2. And be it enacted, That all laws and parts of laws, both statutory and common, inconsistent with this statute, are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That if any person or persons or corporation or association shall within the exterior enclosure of the grounds of any race course of any licensed agricultural society or other licensed incorporated body of this state wherein, for the running, racing, trotting or pacing of horses, mares or geldings for a purse, plate or other thing, the said society or other incorporated body is not indictable, shall in an indictable manner practice, habitually or otherwise, the betting upon horse races commonly known as book-making or any of the acts of either betting or book-making upon horse races within such enclosure or in an indictable manner keep a place or places within such enclosure to which persons may resort for such betting or book-making, such person or persons or corporation or association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars, but such person or persons, corporation or association shall not, for such practice, habitual or otherwise, of betting or book-making, or of keeping a place or places within such enclosure to which persons may resort for such book-making or betting, or for authorizing or permitting such book-making or betting within such enclosure, be deemed guilty of maintaining a disorderly house, or maintaining a nuisance, or of conspiracy or of any criminal offence whatever, except as in this section provided.

2. And be it enacted, That all parts of the act to which this is a supplement, and all laws and parts of laws, both statutory and common, inconsistent with the provisions of this statute are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act authorizing the establishment of hospitals in the cities of this state," approved February twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, the management and control of all hospitals established under the authority of the act to which this is a supplement, and all thereafter established, shall pass to and be vested in the board of health of the city or cities wherein any such hospital has been or may be established, and the term or terms of the present board of control or direction shall thereafter cease and determine.

2. And be it enacted, That all the power and authority given by the said act, or any act supplementary thereto, to such board of control or direction, shall thereafter pass to and be vested in such board of health, and such board of health shall be charged with all the duties by the said act or acts imposed upon such board of control or direction.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate elections,'" approved April eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, which supplement was approved May 28th, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any township or borough in this state where the election districts have been renumbered, or the boundary lines of the same have been changed, or wherein new election district or districts have been formed by the township committee of any such township, or the governing body of any such borough, it shall be the duty of the county board of registry to immediately appoint, in the manner provided in section two of the act of which this is a supplement, a registry board for each election district in such township or borough, and said registry board so appointed shall hold office until the first day of June next ensuing, when their successors shall be appointed; and said board of registry, so appointed in each election district, shall proceed in the manner prescribed in the act to which this is a supplement, except that when the next election shall be an election for township or borough officers, then such board shall proceed to make a new register in the same manner as provided in the act to which this is a supplement, for the making a register of the voters at the election held for the members of the general assembly, which registry, when made, shall be used at a township or borough election.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1893.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the secretary of the board of inspectors of the New Jersey state prison shall receive an annual salary of five hundred dollars for his services as secretary of said board, to be paid to him by the treasurer of this state, by warrant of the comptroller.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XXII.

An Act regulating the fees and compensation of the clerks of the several counties of this state, and repealing all acts providing for the payment of a fixed salary in lieu of fees.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That hereafter the clerks of the several counties of this state, and the clerks of the civil and criminal courts therein, shall be entitled to demand and receive such fees and compensation as are now established by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall only apply to those clerks of the several counties of this state and the clerks of the civil and criminal courts therein whose term of office shall hereafter commence, or to those now in office who may file their assent in writing, under their hands to the provisions of this act, in the office of the clerk of the county in which he is such clerk.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts which requires or permits the payment of a fixed and stated salary to any of such clerks in lieu of fees, whether such acts be general, special or local, or which are in conflict with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning the government of certain cities in this state and constituting a municipal board of public works and other officers therein and defining the powers and duties of such boards and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities placed under the control and management of such board and providing for the maintenance of said board," approved March twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section three of the act to which this is a supplement be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

3. And be it enacted that the board of public works of any city herein authorized shall have power by ordinance to lay out, open, grade, pave, repave, improve and vacate the streets and alleys within the corporate limits of any such city in like manner as the same are now laid out, opened, graded, paved, repaved, improved and vacated in any such city by existing laws, and to make all sewer constructions, connections, alterations, repairs and improvements in like manner as the same now are constructed, connected, altered, repaired and improved in any such city by existing laws, and to construct, repair, maintain, control and operate all public works, and to control the public water supply and the distribution, sale and use of the water, and of the collection of water rents and charges of such city in like manner as the same now are constructed, repaired, maintained, controlled and operated, and said board shall have the power to make, alter and amend rules, regulations and ordinances to regulate, prevent and remove obstructions and encumbrances in and upon the streets and sidewalks; to enforce the removal of snow and ice from the sidewalks and gutters thereof by the owners and occupants of the premises fronting thereon; to regulate and prevent the throwing and depositing of ashes, offal, dirt, garbage and other refuse and material in the streets; to regulate and prevent the erection and construction of any stoop, step, platform, cellar, area, sign, post or any obstruction or projection in, over and upon any street or avenue, and to remove the same at the expense of the owner or occupant of the premises; to provide for and regulate street improvements, crosswalks, curbstones, gutters and sidewalks; to regulate and prevent the tearing up of streets for the purpose of laying water, gas and sewer pipes, and making house connections therewith, and the laying of conduits for electric wires; to regulate the speed of vehicles; to grant franchises and licenses relating to the use of streets; and said board shall and may enforce obedience to all such ordinances relating to the above enumerated powers by the imposition of fines not exceeding fifty dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both; any ordinance of the city now in force relating to any of the above enumerated objects shall continue in force and operation until repealed or modified by said board.

2. And be it enacted, That section seven of the act to which this is a supplement be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

7. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body or board having charge of the finances of the cities subject to the provisions of this act, each and every year hereafter, to levy a tax of two and one-eighth mills on each dollar on all the taxable property in such city, such tax to be levied and collected as and with the general taxes of the city, and to be known as the fund for the board of public works, and shall be used by said board of public works for the purpose of repairing, cleaning and improving streets, the repairing and cleaning of sewers, the repairing and building of receiving basins, for drains and sewers for sanitary purposes; and all repairing and cleaning of such other property entrusted to the care and custody of said board under this act and the supplements thereto, and said fund shall be in lieu of all other appropriations for the purposes aforesaid, to be made by such body or board, except that in case the public water supply for the city is leased or obtained from a private corporation, then a sum equal to the amount paid for such supply for the last fiscal year shall also be inserted in the annual tax ordinance, and shall with the said fund be placed to the credit of said board of public works, and expended by them as provided in this act.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIV.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act for suppressing vice and immorality" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be unlawful for any person or corporation, on the christian Sabbath, or first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, to print, publish and sell newspapers, to sell and deliver milk, or to walk, ride or drive for recreation, and to hire horses and carriages or other conveyances for riding or driving; provided, however, that the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or other governing body of municipalities or incorporated camp meeting associations of this state shall have the power to adopt such ordinances and rules as they may deem necessary and proper to regulate or prohibit the acts hereby made lawful, and may prescribe fines and penalties for the violation of the same, which shall be enforced and collected in the same manner as is now provided by law for the violation of other ordinances and rules of such municipalities or associations.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXV.

An Act to Amend an act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate fishing with seines in Barnegat Bay,'" passed February seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-two, passed April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate fishing with seines in Barnegat Bay,'" passed February seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-two, which said supplement was passed April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows, to wit:

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to set or use any net or nets, or stationary device whatever, for the purpose of taking fish from the aforesaid waters of Barnegat Bay, and its tributaries below a line across said tributaries two hundred and fifty yards from the mouths thereof.

2. And be it enacted, That section three of said act shall read as follows, to wit:

3. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to haul any seine, or other moving net or device for the purpose of taking fish from the aforesaid waters of Barnegat Bay, and its tributaries below a line across said tributaries two hundred and fifty yards from the mouths thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXVI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for sewerage in and from certain towns in this state," approved April twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section five of an act entitled "An act providing for sewerage in and from certain towns in this state," approved April twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, be amended so as to read as follows:

5. And be it enacted, That after the filing of said report and map or maps, said town council or other governing body shall cause a notice of the filing of said plans, maps, estimates and report to be given by publication in one or more daily or weekly newspapers circulating in the neighborhood of the lands in the said drainage area, for at least three weeks, once in each week, and posting a like notice in ten conspicuous places in the said drainage area for the same period; and that the owners of the lands in said town lying within said drainage area may or can within thirty days after the date of said notice, file with the clerk of said town their written dissent to said proposed sewer or sewers, laterals and appurtenances, and unless the owners of a majority of the lands in said town lying within said drainage area shall dissent thereto as aforesaid within said thirty days, the said town council or other governing body of said town shall have the right, if deemed for the best interests of said town or any portion or portions thereof, and all the necessary power and authority is hereby granted to make and enter into a contract or agreement in the name of said town, either with said land owner or owners, or jointly with the said land owner or owners, with any other person or persons for the construction, by said land owner or owners or such other person or persons, of such sewer or sewers and necessary laterals and appurtenances, upon such conditions, in such manner and of such style, size, dimensions and details as set forth in said plans and maps, mutually determined upon as aforesaid and at such cost as may be agreed upon, and for the payment by the said town to said land owner or owners or such other person or persons of such proportionate part of the cost thereof as may also be agreed upon; provided, however, that the amount agreed to be paid by said town shall not exceed the proportion of the estimated cost which should be borne and paid by said town, as set forth in the aforesaid report made by said commissioners; and provided, further, that if in the progress of said work a change in the line of said sewer, as originally set and laid on the map and plans filed as aforesaid, be considered advisable by the unanimous consent of all parties in interest, who shall have executed and delivered the said contract or agreement for the construction of the sewer or sewers therein specified, the town council or other governing body of said town shall have the necessary power and authority to agree to the change in the line of said sewer and in the terms and condition of the contract or agreement aforesaid theretofore entered into, and shall have power and authority to enter into such further or additional contract or contracts, agreement or agreements, for the additional expense incurred by such change in the line of the sewer, as set out on said maps and plans so filed, and in the name of the town to enter into such additional contract or agreement, either with the land owner or owners, or jointly with the said land owner or owners, with any other person or persons, for the completion of said sewer, originally contracted for on a line different from that originally proposed and set out in the plans theretofore filed, and upon such terms and conditions and in such manner and of such style, size, dimensions and details, as to the work and material additionally to be contracted for and such costs as may be mutually agreed upon between the parties to said original contract or agreement, and for the payment to said land owner or owners or other person or persons contracted with, of such proportionate share thereof as shall have theretofore been fixed by the commissioners aforesaid; and provided that said additional work and material shall not increase the proportionate share of the expense thereof to be borne by said town beyond thirty per centum of the amount agreed to be paid by the original contract or agreement; and provided further, that a map and plans of such intended change and the terms, conditions, details and price intended to be paid for such additional work and material, be filed in the office of the clerk of said town, there to remain at least thirty days, and that public notice of the filing of the map and plans, showing such intended change, and of the details, conditions, price and terms for which such additional contract or agreement is to be entered into, be given in one or more daily or weekly papers circulating in the neighborhood of the lands in the said drainage area, and for at least three weeks, once in each week, and that the owners of the lands in the said town within the drainage area may or can, within thirty days after the date of said notice, file with the clerk of said town their written dissent to said proposed change in the plans and contract, and unless the owners of a majority of the lands lying within said drainage area shall so dissent thereto within said thirty days, the said town shall have the right to enter into such contract or agreement for such additional labor and materials upon the terms, conditions, details and at the prices specified in said plans and specifications so filed as aforesaid as it may deem advisable, and may agree thereto jointly with the said land owner or owners, or other person or persons, jointly with them, anything in any law contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and provided, that the expense of preparing the plans and specifications and other necessary expenses attending the said additional contract or agreement and change therein, be borne and paid by all parties interested, in the same proportion as payments are made to the contractor or contractors under said original contract or agreement aforesaid; and provided further, that any such sewer shall not be constructed so as to at any time empty into or discharge any of its contents into any creek, stream, lake, pond or water-course, the waters of which are used for or connect with the waters of any river, creek, stream, lake, pond or water course used for the supply of water to any aqueduct, watermain or reservoir of any city, town, township or municipality in this state.

2. And be it enacted, That section six of said act be amended so as to read as follows:

6. And be it enacted, That no contract, as provided for in section five of this act, shall be made and entered into between said town and said land owner or owners, jointly of the one part, and any other person or persons of the other part, excepting upon advertisements in one or more newspapers printed and published in the county wherein said town is located, for proposals for furnishing all the materials and doing all the required work, but said town and said land owner or owners shall be under no obligation to award the said contract to the lowest bidder, and may, if deemed for their best interests, reject all bids; and provided further however, that no advertisement for proposals for furnishing such additional labor and material, caused by said change to the lines of the sewer, and in the plans and specifications for said sewer, as provided for in the preceding section, shall be necessary, but that the filing of said plans and specifications under said additional contract intended to be made, and the notice provided for by publication in the preceding section, shall be sufficient to authorize and hereby does authorize said town to enter into such additional contract for said additional work and material according to said change and plans and the specifications filed.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that the provisions of this act shall apply to contracts or agreements made before this act takes effect, under which work has been partially performed.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXVII.

An Act for the protection of certain kinds of birds, animals and fish, and to provide a procedure to recover penalties for the violation thereof.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful to pursue, take, kill or have unlawfully in possession any buck, doe, fawn or wild deer, except only between the fourteenth day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of one hundred dollars for each buck, doe, fawn or wild deer so killed, pursued or had unlawfully in possession.

2. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any gray, black or fox squirrel, except only between the fourteenth day of September and sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each gray, black or fox squirrel so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

3. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any quail or any hare (commonly called rabbit) except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each quail or rabbit so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

4. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any ruffed grouse (commonly called partridge), except only between the last day of September and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each ruffed grouse so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

5. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any woodcock, except only during the month of July and between the last day of September and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each woodcock so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

6. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any Wilson snipe (commonly called English or gray snipe), except only during the months of March and April and also between the twenty-fifth day of August and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each Wilson snipe so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

7. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed any reed bird, rail bird or any marsh hen, except only between the twenty-fifth day of August and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each and every bird so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

8. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any upland or grass plover, except only between the last day of July and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each upland or grass plover so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

9. And be it enacted, That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any pinnated grouse (commonly called prairie chickens) or any wild turkey, except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each pinnated grouse (commonly called prairie chickens) or wild turkeys so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

10. And be it enacted, that hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any hen European partridge, hen European grouse or hen European pheasant, within five years after the passage of this act, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each hen European partridge, grouse or pheasant so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

11. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, any male English pheasant, European partridge or grouse, except only between the last day of October and the sixteenth day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each male bird aforesaid so taken, killed or had unlawfully in possession.

12. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to capture, kill, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been taken or killed, or to trap or to expose for sale, any night hawk, whip-poor-will, thrush, meadow lark, finch, martin, barn swallow, wood-pecker, robin, oriole, red or cardinal bird, cedar bird, tanger or any other insectivorous bird, under a penalty of twenty dollars for every bird so killed, trapped, exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prevent individuals from taking or killing English sparrows, cranes, hawks, crows, ravens, crow-black birds or king fishers; and this section shall not apply to persons killing birds for scientific purposes; provided they shall first have obtained a permit as hereinafter provided.

13. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time, either on his own property or on the property of another, to kill, take or capture any doe, buck, fawn or other sort of deer whatsoever, or any partridge, quail, pheasant or grouse of any kind whatsoever, or any snipe, reed bird or rail bird by means of any blind, trap, snare, net or device whatever, or to set the same for the purpose herein mentioned, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every animal or bird so trapped, snared or taken or for any trap, snare or net so set; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent incorporated associations from gathering alive with nets or traps any animal or animals, bird or birds for the purpose of propagating or preserving them alive during the winter, providing that they be released again in this state the following spring, not later than the fifteenth day of April.

14. And be it enacted, That no person or persons shall kill, shoot or hunt any of the birds or animals mentioned in this act on his own property or the property of any other person, except during the season and at such times and in such manner as provided in this act, and any person or persons so doing shall be liable to the penalties provided for by said act for violation thereof.

15. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to have in possession, sell or have for sale any hare, rabbit, squirrel, quail, pheasant, woodcock, reed bird, rail bird, plover or duck, after the same has been caught or trapped by means of any snare, snoods, trap or device of any amount or description whatsoever, under the penalty of twenty dollars for every animal or bird had in possession, sold or exposed for sale.

16. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to hunt for rabbits with ferrets, or to capture or kill any rabbit or hare by means of any ferret or ferrets, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each hare or rabbit so hunted or killed.

17. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, to hunt with a gun, or with a dog and gun, or with any fire arms, or weapons, or to fish with hook and line, or in any manner whatsoever on the Sabbath day (commonly called Sunday), except those who observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, hunting upon their own property, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

18. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to rob or destroy the eggs or nest of any wild bird whatever, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

19. And be it enacted, That the fish and game commission of this state may issue permits to any properly accredited person of eighteen years or upwards, permitting the holder thereof to collect birds, their nests or eggs for strictly scientific purposes only; such permits shall be in force for one year from the date of issue and shall not be transferable.

20. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons hunting or gunning after geese, duck or brant, to place the boat or sink box or other floating vessel in which he lies in wait to kill said geese, duck or brant at a distance of more than one hundred feet from ice, or from marsh, or meadow, or heaped seaweed, or sand bank not covered with water at high tide; neither shall it be lawful for any person with intent to capture or kill geese or ducks to hunt after or pursue them with a light at night, and every person so offending against the provisions of this section shall for each and every offence forfeit and pay the sum of twenty dollars.

21. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to sail for, to shoot or shoot at any goose, brant or duck from any boat or boats, vessel or vessels, propelled by steam or sail, or from any boat or boats, vessel or vessels or similar structure or structures anchored or staked upon the waters of this state under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

22. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to kill any goose, brant or duck with any device or instrument known as a swivel or punt-gun, or with any other gun than such guns as are held at arms' length and fired from the shoulder without other rests, or to use or set any net, device, instrument or gun other than such gun as aforesaid, with intent to capture or kill any goose, brant or duck, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence.

23. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take, kill, shoot at, or expose for sale or have unlawfully in possession any goose, duck, brant or other web-footed wild fowl, except only between the first day of August and the first day of May in each and every year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for every goose, duck, brant or other web-footed wild fowl so taken, killed, shot at, exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession.

24. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to catch, kill, take or have unlawfully in possession any black bass, or Oswego bass, except only between and including the thirtieth day of May and the first day of December in any year, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, taken or had unlawfully in possession.

25. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to catch, kill or have unlawfully in possession any brook trout, except only between the first day of March and the fifteenth day of July in any year, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, taken or had unlawfully in possession.

26. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time to catch, kill, sell, expose for sale, or have in possession, any black bass measuring less than nine inches in length, or any trout measuring less than six inches in length, except for the use of stocking waters of this state therewith, and on license in writing first obtained for that purpose under the hand of one of the fish and game commissioners of this state, under the penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught, killed, sold, or exposed for sale or had unlawfully in possession.

27. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, either on his own land or the land of any other person, at any time whatsoever, either by day or by night, to put, place or haul any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets, or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any other contrivance whatever for the taking or catching fish in any of the waters of this state above tide water, or to keep any gill, drift, fyke or other net or nets, or any eel pot or pots, basket or baskets, or any contrivance whatever for the taking or catching of fish in any of the said waters mentioned, or to catch or assist in taking or catching any fish in manner aforesaid, or to put, place, haul or keep, or assist in putting, placing, hauling or keeping in any of said waters any of the aforementioned contrivances therefor, or to spear any game fish in any of the aforesaid mentioned waters, or sell or expose for sale, or have unlawfully in possession after the same has been killed, any fish caught by any contrivance prohibited by this section, or to place, keep or use any set line or lines in waters inhabited by bass, pickerel, pike or trout, under a penalty of not less than twenty dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom said conviction is had; provided, that said penalty shall not apply to the legitimate catching of fish commonly called minnows for bait with a sein not over sixteen feet in length, if the young of bass, pickerel, perch, trout and other species of fish known as game fish be not destroyed thereby, or to the catching of fish at any time by or under the orders in writing of the fish and game commissioners of this state; or to the legitimate catching of minnows for bait with a net over sixteen feet in length, provided a special permit in writing be first obtained from the fish and game commissioners; and provided further, that this penalty shall not apply to the owners or lessees of private ponds which are in no manner runways for migratory fish; and provided further, that this section shall not apply to the river Delaware.

28. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall be found making use of any boat or boats, vessel or vessels, or of any seine, gill, drift or anchor or sink nets, fixed nets, trap, pot, pound, set line, fyke, weirs or other apparatus for the unlawful taking of fish in any waters within the jurisdiction of this state contrary to the intent and meaning of this act, he, she or they shall in addition to the penalties prescribed, forfeit the boat or boats, vessel or vessels, seine or seines, net or nets, gill or gills, drift or drifts, draw net or nets, fyke or fykes, trap or traps, pot or pots, pound or pounds, weir or weirs, set line or lines or other apparatus so unlawfully used; and it shall be the duty of any constable, sheriff, fish and game protector, deputy fish and game protector or fish warden, or it may be lawful for any other person or persons to seize and secure any of the aforesaid apparatus unlawfully had, and immediately thereafter to give to some justice of the peace, district court or other magistrate of the county where said seizure shall have been made, and said justice of the peace, district court or other magistrate is hereby required and authorized at such time and place as he shall appoint, to hear and determine in a summary manner whether the same was so unlawfully used, and if it shall appear to his satisfaction that the same was used unlawfully, to make an order directing that the same be declared condemned and forfeited to the use of the game and fish commissioners of this state, who may destroy the same or sell the same at public outcry; the proceeds of such sale, after deducting all legal costs and charges, shall be paid one-third to the fish and game commissioners, one-third to the person making the complaint, and one-third to the person furnishing the necessary evidence.

29. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take or catch with hook, line and rod or with spoon or scroll in the manner usually known as trolling, or in any other manner, from any lake, pond or stream, any fish of the kind with which such lake, pond or stream of this state is or may hereafter be stocked by the fish and game commissioners of this state or by private individuals, for three years from the time such stock fish are introduced into such lake, pond or stream, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each fish so caught or taken.

30. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to place in any pond, lake, river, stream or in any of the waters of this state any dynamite, giant or electric powder or any explosive substance whatever or any drug or medicated bait for the purpose of taking or killing fish, under a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom said conviction is had.

31. And be it enacted, That no person or persons, company, corporation or association shall allow any dye stuff, coal tar, saw dust, shavings, tan bark, lime, refuse from gas houses or other deleterious or poisonous substance to be turned or allowed to run into any of the waters of the state, either private or public, in quantities destructive of the life of or disturbing the habits of fish inhabiting the same, under a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars or more than five hundred dollars for each and every offence at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom such conviction is had.

32. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful to shut off or draw off the water of any pond, stream or lake in this state for the purpose of taking, capturing or killing the fish therein, under the penalty of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offence, at the discretion of the justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court before whom such conviction is had.

33. And be it enacted, That nothing in this act shall prevent any licensed or established dealer in game to dispose of such game or fish mentioned in this act for ten days after the expiration of the periods in which the same may be killed or caught; provided, that said game or fish shall not have been killed or caught in this state within the periods prohibited in this act, or shall have been purchased outside the limits of this state.

34. And be it enacted, That in all prosecutions of game carriers under this act it shall be competent for them to show that the prohibited article came in possession in another state or from beyond the United States at some place where this act did not apply.

35. And be it enacted, That hereafter justices of the peace, district courts and police magistrates in any city shall have jurisdiction to try and punish all persons or persons guilty of violating any of the provisions of this act, and all the different penalties in this act prescribed for violation thereof may be enforced and recovered before any justice of the peace, district court or police magistrate, either in the county where the offence is committed, or where the offender is first apprehended or where he may reside.

36. And be it enacted, That such justice of the peace, district court or police magistrate in any city, upon receiving proof by affidavit or affidavits of one or more persons of the violation of any of the provisions of this act, is hereby authorized and required, unless the accused is then before him, to issue a warrant under the hand and seal of said justice or police magistrate, or under the seal of such district court, as the case may be, directed to any constable, police officer, fish warden of the county, the fish and game protector of the state, or deputy fish and game protector, to cause such person or persons to be arrested and brought before such justice, district court or police magistrate, and shall thereupon in a summary way hear and determine the guilt or innocence of the person or persons so charged, and upon conviction of any such person or persons upon such hearing, the said justice, district court or police magistrate is hereby authorized and required to impose upon the offender and offenders so convicted, the penalty or penalties prescribed together with the costs of prosecution for such offence, and if any person or persons shall fail to pay the penalty or penalties so imposed, together with the costs of prosecution, the said justice, district court or police magistrate is hereby authorized and required to commit such offender to the common jail of the county for a period of not less than ten or more than thirty days, or until said penalty and costs are paid.

37. And be it enacted, That for the violation of any of the sections of this act done in the view of any constable, police officer, fish warden, game and fish protector, or deputy fish and game protector, such officer is hereby authorized, without warrant, to arrest the offender or offenders and to carry him or them before a justice of the peace, police magistrate or district court of the county wherein such arrest is made; and the justice, district court or police magistrate before whom such offender shall be taken shall have jurisdiction of the case, and is hereby authorized and required summarily to hear and determine the same, after receiving from the said officer an affidavit in writing of the commission of the offence for which the person or persons was or were arrested.

38. And be it enacted, That all actions commenced for violation of this act shall be entitled and run in the name of the person making the complaint, and the prevailing party shall recover costs against the other; the same fees and costs shall be allowed therein as in trial before justice of the peace holding court for the trial of small causes.

39. And be it enacted, That any case begun under this act may be for good cause shown adjourned by the justice, district court or police magistrate not exceeding thirty days from the date of arrest of the defendant, but in such case it shall be the duty of the justice, district court or police magistrate to retain the defendant in custody unless he shall enter into bond unto the person making the complaint with at least one sufficient surety in double the amount of the penalty prescribed for the offence complained of, conditioned for his appearance at the adjourned day of trial, and thence from day to day until the case is disposed of, and then to abide by the judgment of the justice, district court or police magistrate or otherwise to demand and perfect an appeal to the court of common pleas of the county within ten days after rendering final judgment and such bond if forfeited may be prosecuted in the name of the person making the complaint in any court of competent jurisdiction; all sums of money recovered for the violation of this act or the forfeiture of such bonds shall be paid, one-third to the person making the complaint, one-third to the game and fish commissioners and one-third to the person or persons furnishing the evidence necessary to secure conviction.

40. And be it enacted, That any party to any proceeding instituted under this act may appeal from the judgment or sentence of the justice, district court or police magistrate to the court of common pleas of the county in which the said trial shall take place; provided, that the party appealing shall within ten days from the rendering of judgment serve a written notice of appeal upon the person making the complaint and pay the costs adjudged against him, and deliver to the justice, district court or police magistrate a bond to the opposite party in double the amount of the penalty imposed, with at least one sufficient surety, conditioned to prosecute the appeal and to stand to and abide by such order or judgment of the court as may be made against him in the premises.

41. And be it enacted, That whenever an appeal shall be taken as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the justice, district court or police magistrate to send all the papers in the case to the next court of common pleas of the said county, which court shall receive and try and determine all such appeals in the same way and manner, that appeals from the courts for the trial of small causes are now tried and determined in that court, except that on the trial of such appeals no notice of the production of any new evidence on behalf of either party shall be required.

42. And be it enacted, That in cases under this act no state of demand or other pleading shall be required, but the preliminary affidavit shall specify among other things the section of this act claimed to have been violated.

43. And be it enacted, That the duly appointed fish and game protector, deputy fish and game protector and fish wardens of this state shall have the same powers and be entitled to the same fees for the service or process in cases instituted under this act that constables have and are entitled to receive in the courts for the trial of small causes.

44. And be it enacted, That no person shall be excused from giving evidence in any action or proceedings taken or had under this act on the ground that the evidence might tend to convict such witness or to establish the liability of such witness under any provisions thereof, but such evidence shall not be received against such witness to recover any of the penalties mentioned in this act.

45. And be it enacted, That an act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the several acts relating to game and game fish," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the several supplements or further supplements thereto, approved respectively March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; March sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six; April fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six; March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven; April 20th, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight; March third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; March tenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five; March first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; March twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; February twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act to authorize the boards of chosen freeholders of the respective counties of this state to issue bonds to raise money for state or county purposes, in anticipation of the arrearages of state or county taxation" [Supplement to Revision], approved March eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first section of the act to which this is a supplement, and which section reads as follows (vide Supplement to Revision page ninety-two) shall be amended so that the same shall read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That if in any county of this state there shall now exist, or hereafter shall exist, arrearages of state and county taxes, owing and unpaid to the county collector, by the different cities, town or townships in said county, by reason of any appropriation and levy of taxes for state or county purposes or for errors in the apportionment or assessment of state school tax, heretofore made or hereafter to be made, that it shall be lawful at any time, or from time to time, for the board of chosen freeholders of any county of this state to borrow such sum or sums of money as they may deem necessary for the payment of any floating debt of such county, or for the payment of any temporary loans based upon such arrearages or for the payment of any state or state school tax which may be due from such county to this state, and to cause, by resolution, the bonds of such county, in the name of the board of chosen freeholders of such county, to be issued for the same in such sums each as they may deem proper; provided, that said board of chosen freeholders of such county shall not, in all, borrow to an amount exceeding the amount of arrearages of taxes owing to the county collector by the different cities, towns and townships in such counties, and such loans shall be made and such bonds issued only in anticipation of the collection of such arrearages of taxation; provided also, that the first moneys realized from such bonds shall be paid into the state treasury in payment of such state taxes as may be then due.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to enable counties which have no county hospital to assist in maintaining hospitals located in such county," approved April twenty-sixth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the act to which this is a supplement be amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for the board of chosen freeholders of any county of this state which has no hospital located therein maintained by such county, other than the hospital or sick ward of the county poorhouse, to make an appropriation of a sum of money not exceeding five thousand dollars each year in the same manner that appropriations for other county purposes are made, which sum so appropriated shall be included in the annual tax levy of such county, and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other county taxes, and shall be applied to the purpose of supporting and maintaining such patients as may be sent to any hospital or hospitals supported by private charity and located in such county; provided, the sum so appropriated be used and applied for the benefit, comfort and maintenance of such patients, inmates of such hospital, as are residents of said county at the time of being sent to said hospital; provided, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to counties of the first class.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act concerning legacies" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section eight of the act above mentioned, to which this act is amendatory, be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

8. And be it enacted, That whenever personal property is bequeathed to any person for life, or for a term of years, or for any other limited period, or upon a condition, or any contingency, the executor or administrator cum testamento annexo shall not be compelled to pay or deliver the property so bequeathed to the person having any such life interest, or other interest as aforesaid, until security shall be given to the orphan's court having jurisdiction of such executor's or administrator's accounts, in such sum and form as in the judgment of the said court shall sufficiently secure the interest of the person or persons entitled in remainder, whenever the same shall accrue or vest in possession; but where the person or persons next immediately in remainder shall be the lineal descendant of any such life tenant, or person having any limited estate as aforesaid, and such executor or administrator shall not have filed any security, such life tenant or other person having such limited interest or estate as aforesaid shall not be required to give security in a greater sum than fifty thousand dollars; provided, however, in every case where the executor or administrator is the person to whom any such life interest, or other interest as aforesaid, is bequeathed, then such executor or administrator before receiving into his possession such personal property, notwithstanding that by the will it is or may be provided that no security shall be required of the executor, shall file with the surrogate of the county in which the will shall be or has been proved, or letters granted, a bond to the ordinary of this state in double the amount of the money or the value of the property to be received, with two sufficient sureties, to be approved by the orphans' court, conditioned for the faithful conservation of said property, and until such a bond shall be filed it shall not be lawful for such executor or administrator to receive such money or personal property, but the orphans' court may, upon petition presented by any person in interest, and upon ten days' notice in writing to such executor or administrator, appoint some other fit person to receive and administer such property as trustee upon such security being given for the faithful discharge of his duties as to the said court shall seem proper.

2. And be it enacted, That the aforesaid provisions of this act shall be held to apply as well to all cases where any will has already been proved as to where it shall be proved; provided, however, that any such executor has not already received such personal property into his possession.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts, general, special or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXI.

An Act authorizing the payment to the Heins Printing Company of the sum of two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for work done for the state.

Whereas, the House of Assembly, on the first day of March, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That the Heins Printing Company be authorized to print the following reports in the German language for the use of the members of this House: One thousand copies of the report of the bureau of statistics, one thousand copies of the report of the board of agriculture, one thousand copies of the report of the state geologist, all for the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, to be paid at the same rate as the preceding year;" and whereas, the Heins Printing Company, in compliance with the aforesaid resolution, proceeded with the aforesaid work, and expended thereon the sum of four thousand dollars for the purchase of maps, drawings and printing; and, also, delivered a portion of said work to the state, when the said company discovered that the resolution was not such an authorization to do the work as required by law in order to make the state responsible for the payment of said work, and has received no pay for said work; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the treasurer of the state, upon the warrant of the comptroller, is hereby authorized and required to pay to the Heins Printing Company the sum of two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for such work and disbursements.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation and government of boroughs," approved April second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a majority of legal voters of any borough incorporated under the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement, voting at a special election held for the purpose pursuant to the provisions of any law of this state, shall or may hereafter have established the issue of "improvement bonds" for the construction of a system of water works and a sewage system, or any other public improvement of said borough, it shall and may be lawful for the mayor and council of said borough to issue bonds of the said borough, under the signature of the mayor and borough clerk, with the corporate seal affixed, to be styled "improvement bonds."

2. And be it enacted, That the aggregate amount of the "improvement bonds" authorized by section one of this supplementary act, shall not at any time exceed ten per centum of the amount of the assessed valuation of the property in the said borough, as shown by the assessor's duplicate for the preceding year; and the said bonds shall be issued in such sums, payable at such time or times, but not longer than twenty years, and bear interest, payable semi-annually, at a rate not exceeding six per centum, as the mayor and council of said borough shall by ordinance direct.

3. And be it enacted, That the said bonds hereby authorized shall be negotiated or sold at public or private sale, at not less than the par or face value thereof, and the proceeds of said bonds shall be appropriated, by the mayor and council of said borough, only to the payment and cancellation of such indebtedness as shall or may be incurred for and in the erection and construction of the said system of water works and sewage system of said borough, and for such other necessary public improvements as shall be within the powers of the mayor and council of said borough, by virtue of the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement, or such other and further acts applicable thereto as may be now or hereafter enacted.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the creation of a police department in cities of the second class in this state whose population now exceeds, or may hereafter exceed, fifty thousand, and vesting in such police department certain powers of management and appointment vested in other departments or officers in said cities," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section second of the act to which this is an amendment, which section reads as follows:

"2. And be it enacted, That the commissioners of police appointed under this act shall be and they are hereby invested with and shall possess all the powers heretofore given to and perform all the duties now required of or imposed upon any board of aldermen or common council or other governing body, by whatever name called, in any such city of the second class in this state, concerning and appertaining to the appointment, powers, government and other matters relating to the police of such cities; they shall also adopt such rules and regulations as to the appointment, control, duties and dismissals of the members of the police force as to them shall seem expedient, and may alter the same at pleasure; provided, however, that no member of the said police force shall be removed except for cause and after trial therefor before said commissioners of police; the police force of such city shall not exceed one for each one thousand of population of such city, unless said commissioners by unanimous vote shall determine that a greater number is required," shall be amended so that said section shall read as follows:

2. And be it enacted, That the commissioners of police appointed under this act, together with the police justices of said cities, who shall be a full member of said board ex officio, and entitled to a full vote on all proceedings therein, shall be and they are hereby invested with and shall possess all the powers heretofore given to and perform all the duties now required of or imposed upon any board of aldermen or common council or other governing body, by whatever name called, in any such city of the second class in this state, concerning and appertaining to the appointment, powers, government and other matters relating to the police of such cities; they shall also adopt such rules and regulations as to the appointment, control, duties and dismissals of the members of the police force as to them shall seem expedient, and may alter the same at pleasure; provided, however, that no member of the said police force shall be removed except for cause, and after trial therefor before said commissioners of police; the police force of such city shall not exceed one for each thousand of population of such city, unless said commissioners by unanimous vote shall determine that a greater number is required; provided further, that said police justice shall not receive any additional compensation for his service as such commissioner.

3. And be it enacted, That section four of the act to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby repealed.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall be a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 28, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

An Act concerning public roads and parks, and creating boards for the control and management of the same.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the township committee in the respective townships of this state, or a majority of said committee, may, at their first regular meeting or at a special meeting, after this act shall have become a law, divide their respective townships, into convenient road districts, cause maps thereof to be made and filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which said township is located, with the clerk of such township, and with the clerk of the road board to be organized as hereinafter provided, with a copy of their resolution making such division.

2. And be it enacted, That the said committees shall, by resolution adopted at said meeting so held as aforesaid, submit the question of the acceptance or rejection of this act to the voters of such township at any general or special election to be held therein, whereof at least ten days' notice shall be given, in the manner now directed for the giving of notice of the annual township elections or town meetings; and if a majority of those who shall vote for the acceptance or rejection thereof shall be in favor of the acceptance of this act, then this act shall go into effect immediately, and the grant of power herein made to any such township shall be deemed accepted by such township, and such township shall be bound by the terms of this act; persons entitled to vote at any township election or town meeting where this question is submitted to them shall express their assent or rejection of this act by depositing ballots at such election in the election district of any such township; and those who are in favor of the acceptance of this act and the grants and powers therein contained, shall deposit a ballot containing the words "road act of 1893 (with chapter number of same) accepted," written or printed thereon, and those who are opposed, shall each deposit a ballot with the words "road act of 1893 (with chapter number of same) rejected," written or printed thereon; and this acceptance or rejection may be expressed upon the ballot on which are the names of the township officers, and no separate ballots shall be required for the purpose of this vote, if had at the general election; there shall be a canvass on the return of the votes upon this question of such acceptance or rejection made by the election officers, in the same way and manner as for officers voted for at such election; and if a majority of the ballots on which there shall be either the word "road act of 1893 (with chapter number of same) accepted," or "road act of 1893 (with chapter number of same) rejected," shall be found to be for the acceptance of this act, it shall then, but not otherwise, go into effect and be binding upon such township wherein such vote shall have been taken; if a special election be held under the provisions of this act, the same shall be conducted in every respect as is now provided for the conduct of the general township election or town meeting.

3. And be it enacted, That the said township committee in each of said townships in which said act shall have been accepted in manner aforesaid, shall thereupon call an assembly in each of said districts into which said township has been divided as aforesaid, of the freeholders of said district, at such convenient place in said district, and within three weeks after the acceptance of this act as aforesaid, at four o'clock in the afternoon, as the said committee shall deem expedient, upon ten days' notice, by printed hand bill or hand bill partly printed and partly written, to be posted conspicuously in at least ten public places in said district, and published in a newspaper printed and published in the said township, or where there is no such newspaper then in one printed and published in the county and circulating in said township, at which assembly, after being duly organized, the said freeholders so assembled shall elect by ballot a suitable person, who shall also be a legal voter in the township and a freeholder and resident in the district for which he is nominated, as a road commissioner for said district for the term of three years; and the said freeholders so assembled shall also have the same powers and authority in relation to the voting and raising of money for the making, maintaining and repairing the public highways within such district as the inhabitants of the said township now have or had in relation to the roads and highways thereof when assembled in town meeting; and in addition thereto they shall also have the power of appropriating such sum of money as they may deem proper for keeping in repair or improving any public parks in said township now acquired or that may hereafter be acquired under any of the laws of the state, and also to appropriate moneys for the laying and constructing of sidewalks and keeping the same in repair, the said voters having the option of designating where said money so appropriated for sidewalks shall be expended; and they and their property, both real and personal, shall be in all respects liable for the same, in like manner as the inhabitants of the said township and their said property are now liable in respect to the roads therein; provided, that in making assessments for the purposes mentioned in this act, no deductions shall be made for debts owing by the owners of the real estate assessed, or for any mortgage thereon; and provided, that each of the said districts respectively shall make, maintain and keep in repair, under the direction of the board to be composed as hereinafter provided, the public highways within their respective limits, in the same manner, to the extent of each district respectively as the said township now is authorized and required to make, maintain and keep in repair the highways within its limits; and provided further, that all moneys so voted and raised by any district shall be applied by the said board to the use of the public highways and sidewalks in such district, and not in any other district; that no decision, vote or appropriation shall be valid unless at least twelve freeholders of said district shall be present and take part therein; and if twelve freeholders of said district are not present on the day appointed as aforesaid, the said meeting shall be adjourned from day to day until said number of freeholders are present, and a majority of those present shall be necessary to give validity to a decision, vote or appropriation; that a minute of the proceedings of said meeting shall be made by the secretary of said meeting, to be entered in the book of minutes of said district, which minute shall specify the names of at least twelve freeholders present at the assembly.

4. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners when so elected as aforesaid, and their successors to be thereafter elected, are hereby constituted a board of commissioners to be known as the "public road board" of the respective townships in which the same may be elected; that the said commissioners or a majority of them shall within ten days after their election, at two o'clock in the afternoon, assemble at such place as may be designated by said township committee by a resolution adopted for that purpose and of which written notice shall be given to each of said commissioners, and proceed to the organization of said board by the election of a president and such other officers as they shall see fit, who shall hold their offices for one year or until their successors are elected, and annually thereafter, on the first Monday in May, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon, said commissioners shall meet for such organization as aforesaid, and the said officers when so elected shall hold their offices for the period of one year, or until their successors are elected as hereinbefore provided.

5. And be it enacted, That the term of each commissioner elected after the expiration of the term of office of the commissioners hereinbefore provided for shall be three years; and that he shall be a legal voter of the township and a freeholder and resident of the district for which he is nominated and elected and shall be elected as hereinafter provided; that all vacancies in said board arising from death, resignation, removal from the township, or any cause other than the expiration of the term of office, shall be filled by the said board, within thirty days from the occurrence of the same, with a person who is a legal voter of the township and a freeholder and resident of the district for which he is named; that when any vacancy shall arise from other cause than the expiration of the term of office, then the remaining members of the board shall discharge the duties of the retiring member or members until his or their successor or successors shall have been appointed; and each commissioner shall, before he enters upon the performance of the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation before any officer of this state authorized to take the same, faithfully, fairly and impartially to exercise and perform the duties of said office, which oath or affirmation shall, within five days after taking the same, be filed with the clerk of said township.

6. And be it enacted, That the commissioners herein provided for shall within the limits of the district for which each shall from time to time be assigned, have the same duties, and be subject to the same penalties as overseers of the highways in the said township now have or heretofore had, perform or performed or are or were subject to within and for the said township; and that the board hereby created shall in addition to the other powers and duties conferred and enjoined by this act, have the same powers, perform the same duties, and be subject to the same obligations and penalties as the township committee now have had, perform or performed or are or were subject to, in relation to the public highways; and in addition thereto shall have a general and exclusive supervision, control and management of the public highways and sidewalks in said township and of their repair or regulation, and of all parks or other lands in such township which have been or may be dedicated to the public or which may be acquired as now provided by law, and shall from time to time [illegible] the vote of the majority of said board [illegible] manner in which the public highways shall be worked, repaired, kept in order, regulated and named, and the time when the same shall be worked and repaired; and if any person shall desire to dedicate to public use, as a highway, any portion of his or her land, and twelve freeholders of the district in which said lands so proposed to be dedicated are situated, shall petition the said board to accept the same for public use, then upon grading the same and putting it in good condition as a highway and the execution of a deed of the same to the inhabitants of the said township with an acceptance in writing signed by a majority of the said board, endorsed thereon and recorded with the same in the office of the clerk of the county wherein said township is located, the land so dedicated and accepted shall be a public highway from the time of so recording said deed, with like effect as if the same had been opened under the provisions of an existing law.

7. And be it enacted, That the said board shall once in every year call an assembly in each of said districts of the freeholders in said district in the manner provided for in section three of this act; that at said assembly the commissioner of said district shall preside, and the said freeholders so assembled shall have the same powers and authority particularly enumerated and set out in said last named section, and they and their property shall be subject to the like liability therein particularly stated; that the enactment in this section shall be subject to the three provisos to said last named section particularly set out, and that no vote or appropriation shall be valid unless under circumstances detailed in said section, and that a minute of said meeting shall be kept and entered as therein provided.

8. And be it enacted, That the said assembly shall be conducted according to such general rules as the said board may from time to time prescribe, and shall decide, vote and appropriate such sum or sums as they shall deem necessary and proper for the use of the public highways, sidewalks and parks in the district, and the tax so voted shall be assessed by the township assessor and collected by the township collector in the manner provided by law for the assessment and collection of taxes in the said township, and shall be paid by the officer or officers receiving the same to the president of said board, to be by the said board applied to the purposes prescribed by this act.

9. And be it enacted, That the said board may appoint, employ and discharge from time to time such surveyors, superintendents, engineers and laborers as they may deem necessary in order more effectually to carry out the intentions of this act, and pay them with compensation or wages as they may deem fair and reasonable; also to purchase or hire and to use for the said township teams, horses, carts, implements and materials as they may deem proper.

10. And be it enacted, That the said board shall (subject only to the right of appeal and review hereinafter provided) have the full and exclusive power and authority to lay out, open, widen, alter, straighten, grade and vacate public highways in such township; that whenever the said board, upon the written application of twelve freeholders in any of the said districts, shall deem it expedient to lay out, open, alter, widen, straighten, grade or vacate any public highway, or any number of connecting public highways in any such township, the said board shall cause a map of such proposed measure to be made and filed in their office, which map shall be open to inspection at all reasonable times by any person desiring to inspect the same; and shall thereupon cause notice to be given, as provided in section three of this act, and by printed hand bills or hand bills partly printed and partly written, posted conspicuously in ten or more public places in such district, stating that such map is open for inspection and requiring all persons interested therein to appear before said board at a convenient time and place, to be specified in said notice, when and where the said board shall hear and weigh all arguments for or against said improvements; and if, at said time any one or more parties interested desire an adjournment of the said hearing, and give notice in writing to said board of such desire, said hearing shall be adjourned to such other time as may be determined upon by said board; that after said hearing the commissioners shall appoint a committee of their number to examine the route of the proposed road and to report upon the feasibility and advisability of the same, and what changes, if any, should be made therein, and thereupon the said board shall decide and determine upon the necessity of such proposed improvement, and if the said board shall decide and determine in favor thereof they shall make their decision in writing and shall award such damages as they may deem just to each and every person affected thereby, and assess such lands as may be benefited in proportion to the benefit received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that within five days after making such assessment as aforesaid, a printed or written or partly printed and partly written notice shall be addressed and mailed to each individual or party so assessed, directed to him or her at his or her post office address, if the same can be ascertained, stating the amount of said assessment against said individual or party for said improvement, and that said assessment will remain open at the office of said board for examination and inspection by all persons interested therein, at all reasonable times during the fifteen days next succeeding the mailing of said notices as aforesaid, and that said board will attend at their office on a day subsequent to the expiration of said fifteen days, and also on one or more evenings, not exceeding three evenings in all, if so required by any party or parties interested, to hear and weigh all objections thereto; that said board shall thereafter reconsider said assessment and make any alterations therein they may deem just, and thereupon they shall confirm said assessment, and within ten days after such confirmation file a map of the said improvement as finally determined on by them, with their aforesaid written decision and said assessment so confirmed and award so made, in the office of the clerk of the county in which such township is located; that the said board shall give notice of such filing by publication in a newspaper printed and published in the said township, and where there is none published in said township then in one printed in the county in which said township is located and circulating in said township, once a week for four weeks, and the determination of the said board shall be final and conclusive in the premises, unless an appeal is taken, to the court of common pleas in and for such county, within the time and manner provided for in this act, or in case of a proposed new road, a petition against the making of the same shall be presented to the board within twenty days from their determination in the matter, signed by the owners of a majority of lineal feet fronting on the proposed new road.

11. And be it enacted, That all property taken under any provisions of this act shall be deemed taken for public use, and in estimating any award or assessment hereunder the said board shall estimate for benefits as well as for damages as aforesaid.

12. And be it enacted, That the said board shall (subject only to the right of appeal and review hereinafter provided) have the full and exclusive power and authority to construct sidewalks and gutters of such material as they shall deem proper along any public highway in said township, upon the application in writing of the owners of a majority of the lineal feet of lands fronting upon both sides of the highway whereon such improvement is to be made; that whenever the said board, upon receiving such written application as aforesaid, shall deem it expedient to construct such sidewalks and gutters as aforesaid, they shall proceed to a determination of said question in the same formal manner particularly enumerated and set out in section ten of this act; and if the said board shall decide and determine that said improvement is necessary, and shall decide in favor thereof, they shall make their decision in writing, and shall assess such land as may be benefited in proportion to the benefit received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that thereupon the said board shall give notice of said assessment in manner provided in said section ten of this act, and shall proceed in all things to the final determination thereof as is particularly provided in said last-named section; that upon such final determination the same shall be final and conclusive unless an appeal be taken or provided for in this act.

13. And be it enacted, That said public road board shall have full power and authority, upon the application in writing of twelve freeholders of any such township for that purpose, to excavate, build and construct in any road, street or avenue, and with the consent of the owner in any private lands, such sewer or sewers as they may deem requisite or proper for purposes of drainage, and for the preservation of the public health; that whenever said board shall deem it advisable to construct such sewer or sewers, they shall proceed to a determination of said question in the same formal manner particularly prescribed and laid down by section ten of this act; and if the said board shall decide and determine that said improvements is necessary, they shall make their decision in writing and shall assess such lands as may be benefited in proportion to the benefits received by the owners thereof, but in no case exceeding the same; that thereupon the said board shall give notice of said assessment in manner provided in said section ten of this act; and shall proceed in all things to the final determination thereof as is particularly provided in said last-named section; that upon such final determination the same shall be final and conclusive unless an appeal be taken as provided in this act.

14. And be it enacted, That any person feeling himself or herself aggrieved by the action of said board under the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth sections of this act may, within twenty days from the filing of the decision of the board in the office of the clerk of the county in which said township is located, appeal to the court of common pleas of such county by serving a notice in writing upon any member of the said board, and the said court shall have full power to hear, determine and review the proceedings of the board in the premises, and to confirm, alter, modify, set aside or reverse in whole or in part for errors, either of fact or law, and the said court shall have power to hear and try the same in a summary way, and may summon a jury to determine any question of fact, and the said court may proceed in due course according to the power of the court in other cases, and the determination of the said court shall be final and conclusive in the premises and not subject to appeal or review, and the said court or any judge thereof may, until such determination, stay all proceedings in the matter, in reference to which the appeal may be taken until such final determination, and the like fees and costs shall be paid to the judges, jury, officers of the court and parties as are allowed in other causes of which the court has or may have jurisdiction, and the said court shall have power to make and prescribe all necessary forms, rules and regulations to the conduct of any proceeding to be taken under this act.

15. And be it enacted, That if no appeal shall be taken within the time and in the manner prescribed herein the action of the said board shall take effect, and the said board may proceed to carry out the same under this act, and any assessment laid by virtue thereof shall be a lien on the lands on which it is laid, and the said commissioners shall procure a certified copy of their award and the judgment of the said court of common pleas, if any appeal shall have been taken, to be placed in the hands of the collector of taxes for the time being of any such township, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the collector to collect the said assessment within sixty days from the time of placing such copy in his hands, and to pay the same over to the president of the said board; and the said collector shall, in the collection of the assessment, be liable to the same pains and penalties and entitled to the same fees as in the collection of the annual township taxes, the said fees being reserved by him out of the amount so collected; provided, that the said collector, in each and every year before proceeding under this act, shall enter into bonds to the said board with such sureties and in such sums as the said board shall approve, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties under this act; and the said president, before receiving any money from said collector, shall enter into bonds to the inhabitants of such township in their corporate name, with such sureties and in such sum as the said board shall approve, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as such president.

16. And be it enacted, That in case any owner or owners of lands assessed for any of the purposes as aforesaid shall fail to pay the assessment laid thereon, within three months from the time of placing the certified copy of the award in the hands of the collector, then the lands upon which the said assessment is a lien shall be sold in the same manner as land is now authorized by law to be sold for unpaid taxes in any such township upon a warrant issued by said board of like character and form as that issued for the collection of said taxes, so as to raise a sufficient sum to pay the said assessment and interest, at the rate of twelve per centum per annum, from the expiration of sixty days from the time of placing such copy in the hands of the collector, and the lawful costs and fees of collection and sale.

17. And be it enacted, That notwithstanding any mistake in the name or names of the owner or owners of any lands, tenements and real estate, in the said township in making awards or assessments, or in giving or addressing notice of the same, in pursuance of the tenth section of this act, such awards and assessments shall be valid and effectual in law against such lands, tenements and real estate, and the same may be proceeded against and sold in the manner prescribed in the sixteenth section of this act.

18. And be it enacted, That the said board is hereby authorized to borrow money in anticipation of the same to be raised annually by tax for road purposes, in the several districts of said township, and thereupon if the commissioner of any district shall in writing require the said board of his township to advance the sum voted in such district, such board shall proceed to raise the same within thirty days after such requisition; the money so advanced to be repaid by the president of said board when he shall receive the amount levied by tax from the township collector.

19. And be it enacted, That this act shall be construed so as to give the commissioners a general and exclusive supervision, control and management of all sidewalks and gutters along the public highways within their respective road districts, and to pay for their repair and regulation out of the moneys voted by the annual assemblies and raised by tax, as in this act provided.

20. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners shall receive two dollars a day for each and every day's attendance upon and about the duties imposed upon them by this act, which shall be paid to them by the township collector upon the order of the president of the board, and there shall be levied and collected in each and every year, at the time and in the manner provided for the collection of taxes in such township, a sum sufficient to defray such fees, advertising expenses and such other general expenses, costs and charges as the said board may become liable for in performing their duties under this act, the amount of which shall be annually determined by said board and certified under seal to the assessor of said township; and that whenever the word "board" is used in this act it shall be considered as meaning a majority thereof.

21. And be it enacted, That at each annual meeting or assembly, held as provided in this act, the commissioner presiding shall present his accounts, which shall give in separate items a statement of work done, the location of it and the amount paid therefor and to whom paid, and also in separate items a statement of all other expenditures for the past year, which accounts shall be read to the meeting and be examined by it or by a committee of three persons appointed by said meeting, and within two weeks thereafter the commissioner presiding shall cause the said accounts to be published in full in a newspaper printed and published in the township, if there be one, and if not, then in a newspaper printed and published in the county in which such township is located.

22. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall apply to or affect any street, avenue or highway under the charge or control of any county public road board in this State.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXV.

An Act concerning bailments.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful in cities, towns or other municipalities of this state where there is located any corporation expressly authorized to receive on deposit for safe-keeping valuable property, for the officers or directors of any incorporated bank, savings bank, trust company, life or fire insurance company (not so expressly authorized) to take or accept for safe-keeping, stocks, bonds, jewelry, plate, money or other valuable property of any kind, unless such officers or directors shall have been specially authorized to take the same on such deposits by a vote of the majority in interest of all the stockholders of such bank or corporation, at a meeting of the stockholders of such bank or corporation called for the purpose of vesting such authority in such officers or directors.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section sixty-eight of the act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, which now reads:

"68. And be it enacted, That all murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or by lying in wait, or by any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any arson, rape, sodomy, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder of the first degree, and all other kinds of murder shall be deemed murder of the second degree, and the jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, designate by their verdict whether it be murder of the first or second degree, but if such person shall be convicted on confession in open court, the court shall proceed by examination of witnesses to determine the degree of the crime and give sentence accordingly," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

68. And be it enacted, That all murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or by lying in wait, or by any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any arson, rape, sodomy, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder of the first degree, and all other kinds of murder shall be deemed murder of the second degree, and the jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, designate by their verdict whether it be murder of the first degree or second degree; and in no case shall the plea of guilty be received upon any indictment for murder, and if, upon arraignment, such plea of guilty should be offered it shall be disregarded and a plea of not guilty entered, and a jury, duly impanneled, shall try the case in manner aforesaid; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the accused from pleading non vult or nolo contendere to such indictment; the sentence to be imposed, if such plea be accepted, shall be the same as that imposed upon a conviction of murder of the second degree.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

An Act concerning assessments for benefits and awards for damages in the opening of streets in cities of this state, and providing for a new assessment and award.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cases where writs of certiorari may be brought to remove assessments for the costs and expenses of laying out or opening any street in any city of this state, it shall be lawful for the supreme court or one of the justices thereof, in term or vacation, on the application of the city, to appoint three commissioners to make a new assessment of the costs and expenses thereof, and a new award of damages for the land taken in such improvement, and the commissioners so appointed shall proceed to make a new assessment and award upon the same principle and in the same manner as if they had been the original commissioners, and shall give such notice of a hearing before them, and of the time when they will present their report to such court or justice, when objections may be presented to such report, as the court or justice may direct, and said commissioners shall present their report in writing, signed by a majority of them, to such court or justice, and such court or justice, after hearing the parties to such certiorari, if they appear, and such other parties in interest as shall appear at the time fixed for the presentation of said report and hearing thereon, may modify and conform such report as to the court or justice shall seem just, and such report, when so conformed, shall be final, both as to the assessments for benefits and awards for damages therein contained, and shall be in lieu of the original report; and all such assessments shall be collected and awards for damages paid in the manner provided in the statutes for collecting such assessments and payments of awards for such improvements, and such assessments shall be due from the date of the confirmation of such report, which shall be filed, together with the other papers, with the person charged with the duty of the collection of such assessments in the respective cities.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cases where awards for damages are made for land taken in the opening of any street in any city of this state, there shall be, at the time of the making of such awards, unpaid taxes and assessments due to such city on the lands so taken, the amount so due for such unpaid taxes and assessments, with all interest, shall be deducted from the award at the time of payment or tender thereof by the officer charged with the payment thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That such commissioners shall receive such compensation for their services as such court or justice shall order, to be paid by such city.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An Act concerning evidence," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the printed statute books and pamphlet session laws or other laws of any foreign country or of any province or subdivision thereof, printed and published by the direction or authority of such foreign country, province or subdivision thereof shall be received as evidence of the public statutes or laws of such foreign country, province, or subdivision thereof in any and all courts of this state, and the court may determine whether any such book or pamphlet offered in evidence was so printed or published either from the inspection of such book, or the knowledge of the court, or from testimony in support thereof, and no error shall be assigned for the rejection of any such book or pamphlet so offered, unless it be proven on error that such book or pamphlet offered as such in evidence is what it purports to be; nor shall any error assigned for the admission of such book or pamphlet be sustained unless it be shown to support thereof that the statute or law offered in evidence or some material part thereof was not in force in such foreign country, province, or subdivision thereof at the time of the transaction or matter to which it was offered as pertinent or material.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

An Act to enable villages in this State to acquire lands and erect buildings for municipal uses and purposes.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the governing body of any village having a population of three thousand or over to purchase a suitable lot or tract of land within such village, and to erect thereon a building for a public hall for the use of the people thereof, to hold their public meetings and have their public offices located therein, and for such other purposes as the said governing body may deem for the interests of said village, the cost of which said lot and building shall not exceed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the governing body of such village to raise money for the purposes aforesaid by the issuing of the bonds of such village, which bonds shall be denominated "public building bonds," and shall state upon their face the purpose for which they were issued; and the term for which said bonds shall run shall not be longer than thirty years, and they shall be redeemable any time after the expiration of five years, at the option of the said village; and shall be of denomination of not less than five hundred dollars, and shall bear not exceeding the legal rate of interest, and shall not be sold at less than par.

3. And be it enacted, That for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of said bonds as the same shall become due, and for the further purpose of maintaining such building and for the general improvement of the same, said village is hereby authorized to lease, rent or hire, for any specified time, any part of said building not necessary for public uses exclusively, as in the judgment of the governing body thereof may seem proper, for such sum or sums of money as they may deem for the best interests of such village; that the money received from such lease shall first be applied in payment for such necessary improvements and repairs as the governing body of such village shall have made from time to time, and the balance shall be applied to the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds as the same shall become due.

4. And be it enacted, That at least one-twentieth of the principal sum of said bonds shall be raised each year by tax on all the taxable property in said village, and shall be applied in payment of the principal and interest of said bonds as the same shall fall due, and for no other purpose; that should no bonds or interest be due on which to apply said money as the same shall be raised, then in that case the governing body of such village shall appoint three responsible persons as sinking fund commissioners, who shall give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties; that such commissioners shall have power and authority to invest said money in such manner and for such time as they shall deem for the best interests of such village, subject however, to the approval of the governing body of such village.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XL.

An Act in relation to assessments of taxes in cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all incorporated cities of this state that now have or may hereafter have block maps, it shall be the duty of the taxing officer or officers in all cases, in making their assessments for taxes upon real estate, to describe the same by block and lot numbers as shown upon the assessment maps of the city.

2. And be it enacted, That when any change occurs in the ownership of property in any such city, it shall be the duty of the new owner to present his deed, or other evidence of title, to the officer, officers or department having charge of the assessment of taxes therein, that the change of ownership may be properly noted on the books or maps kept by the said taxing officer or officers.

3. And be it enacted, That no register of deeds, county clerk or other officer whose duty it shall be to record deeds, shall record any deed which conveys any property in cities of this state that now have or may hereafter have block maps, unless it shall be duly certified thereon that the same has been presented at the office of the officer, officers, or other department having charge of the assessment of taxes, for the purpose of recording or noting such changes as may have been made thereby in the property lines and ownership of the property; provided, that nothing in this act shall prevent the recording of such deed in case a fee of twenty cents is paid at the time any such deed is deposited for record to the register of deeds, county clerk, or other officer whose duty it is to record the same, upon which payment having been made it shall be the duty of said register of deeds, county clerk or other officer, within five days thereafter to present such deed or an abstract thereof to the officer, officers or department having in charge the assessment of taxes, for the purpose of having such changes in lines of ownership as may be made thereby, recorded or noted.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLI.

An Act to provide for the regulation and licensing of keepers of employment agencies and intelligence offices.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the common council or the legislative body in any city of this State be and is hereby authorized and empowered to make, establish, publish, modify, amend and repeal ordinances, rules and regulations to license and regulate keepers of employment agencies or intelligence offices; to fix the rates of compensation to be allowed to them; to require them to furnish bonds to such city for the faithful observance by them of all the requirements and provisions of such ordinances, rules and regulations of such city; to prohibit unlicensed persons from keeping or maintaining any such employment agency or intelligence office; and to provide for the proper inspection and supervision of the said agencies or offices.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLII.

An Act to provide an efficient fire alarm in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities of the first class in this state the board of fire commissioners or board having charge of the department or branch of the city government to whose custody is committed all apparatus for the extinguishment of fire shall have power and it is hereby made its duty to provide and maintain a perfect system of alarm in case of fire.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cities wherein the present fire alarm system is uncertain or inadequate and the ordinary appropriation for this purpose is insufficient to meet any extraordinary expenditure in changing the present system or substituting the latest improved system the said board having charge as aforesaid may, with the concurrence of the board of finance or board having charge of the finances of any such city, expend for the purpose of this act such sum not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars as said board may determine.

3. And be it enacted, That for the purpose of this act the said board of finance or board having charge and control of finance as aforesaid shall be authorized to borrow the amount necessary for the purpose aforesaid and to issue bonds of the city therefor.

4. And be it enacted, That the bonds to be issued under the provisions of this act shall be made payable in not exceeding thirty years from the date of issuing the same, and shall draw such rate of interest not exceeding five per centum per annum, and be in such sums as the board having charge and control of the finances of said city shall determine, which bond shall be executed under the corporate seal of said city and the signatures of the mayor, comptroller or other proper financial officer thereof, and may be either registered or coupon bonds as said board may direct; provided, that said board may dispose of the bonds hereby authorized at public sale for the best price that can be obtained for the same but not less than par; and provided further, that in order to redeem the bonds issued under the provisions of this act at maturity it shall be the duty of the board having charge of the finances as aforesaid to establish a sinking fund, which shall be created by a special tax of not less than three per centum on the issue bonds provided for to be raised in such annual tax levy.

5. And be it enacted, That the interest on the bonds hereby authorized to be issued shall be raised and paid by a special appropriation to be annually levied and collected, as other taxes in such city are now or may hereafter be levied and collected, and the whole of such year's interest shall be so raised, levied, collected and paid within such year.

6. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of associations for the erection and maintenance of hospitals, infirmaries, orphanages, asylums and other charitable institutions," approved March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any training school organized or to be organized under the act to which this is a supplement or any supplement thereto, may confer the degree of medical and surgical nurse upon any of its graduates, under such rules and regulations as such training school may prescribe; provided, that instruction be given in anatomy, physiology, hygiene, dietetics and medical, surgical, obstetrical and gynecological nursing.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIV.

An Act to amend a supplement to an act entitled "An act for the preservation of clams and oysters" [Revision], approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, which supplement was approved March twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, chapter CCXXV.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the supplement to an act entitled "An act for the preservation of clams and oysters" (Revision), approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, which supplement was approved March twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, be amended to read as follows, to wit:

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLV.

An Act to authorize the acquisition by the United States of a tract of land in the township of Middletown, in the county of Monmouth and state of New Jersey, to be used for the purpose of erecting and maintaining thereon fortifications and accessories for the defence of the southern entrance to New York harbor.

Whereas, the United States has acquired, by purchase, a tract or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the township of Middletown, in the county of Monmouth and state of New Jersey, and which is more particularly described as follows: Beginning at the government stone monument in southwest corner of the United States light-house reservation for Bayside beacon, on the south shore of Raritan bay and southeast of Point Comfort; running thence north eleven degrees and forty-nine minutes west (N. 11° 49′ W.) in a straight line, passing through a monument two hundred and two and eight-tenths (202.8) feet from the point of beginning, a distance of three hundred and sixty-seven and sixty-two hundredths (367.62) feet; thence, south nineteen degrees and fifty-three minutes west (S. 19° 53′ W.), three hundred and eighty-five and five-tenths (385.5) feet; thence, north sixty-six degrees and forty-five minutes west (N. 66° 45′ W.), thirteen hundred and seventy-six (1376) feet; thence, south eleven degrees and fifty minutes east (S. 11° 50′ E.), fourteen hundred (1400) feet; thence, north seventy-eight degrees and ten minutes east (N. 78° 10′ E.), seven hundred and forty-three and three-tenths (743.3) feet; and thence, north thirty-three degrees and fifty-nine minutes east (N. 33° 59′ E.), eight hundred and sixteen and five tenths (816.5) feet to the point or place of beginning, containing twenty-five and seven hundred and thirty-four thousandths (25 734-1000) acres; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the consent of the state of New Jersey is hereby given to the acquisition by the United States of the tract or parcel of land above described, and the same is hereby ceded to the United States of America; upon the said land so acquired the United States may erect fortifications, barracks, and other public buildings, for the defence of the southern or main entrance to New York harbor, and the United States shall have, hold, occupy and own said land thus acquired, and exercise jurisdiction and control over the same and every part thereof subject to the restrictions hereafter mentioned; the same, however, not to be used for quarantine purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That the jurisdiction hereby ceded shall vest when a plat and description of the land thus acquired shall have been filed in the office of the secretary of state of the state of New Jersey; such jurisdiction shall continue no longer than the United States shall own such land, and such consent is given and jurisdiction ceded upon the express condition that the state of New Jersey shall retain concurrent jurisdiction with the United States in and over such land so far as that all civil processes in all such cases, and such criminal and other processes as may issue under the laws or authority of the state of New Jersey against any person or persons charged with crimes, misdemeanor or criminal offences committed within the state may be executed thereon, in the same way and manner as if such consent had not been given or jurisdiction ceded, except as far as such process may affect the real or personal property of the United States.

3. And be it enacted, That so long as such land thus acquired shall remain the property of the United States, and no longer, the same shall be and continue exonerated from all taxes, assessments and other charges which may be levied or imposed under the authority of the state.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act incorporating the inhabitants of townships, designating their powers and regulating their meetings," approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the overseers of poor and town clerks of the respective townships of this State elected after the passage of this act shall hold their office for the term of three years.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVII.

An Act concerning the constitution of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of certain cities in this State.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities in this State that now have, or hereafter may have, a population of fifty thousand inhabitants or over, the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body thereof, shall consist of two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities.

2. And be it enacted, That in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where there now are or hereafter may be three or more members of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, the office, as well as the term of office, of every member of such common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of such wards or aldermanic districts, saving and excepting the oldest and next oldest members thereof, in point of service, having regard to the service of the now or then present term only of all the members, shall immediately cease, determine and end, and then and from thenceforth the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of such cities shall consist of but two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities.

3. And be it enacted, That in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where there are now or hereafter may be one member of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, a second member thereof from each of such wards or aldermanic districts shall be chosen in like manner as though a vacancy existed in the office of members of the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body from each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities; or, if there be no provision for an election to fill a vacancy in such an office in any of such cities, then at the next succeeding annual city election in such cities.

4. And be it enacted, That hereafter in all cities subject to the provisions of this act, where the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body thereof, now or hereafter shall consist of two members in and for each of the wards or aldermanic districts of such cities, all members of such common council, board of aldermen or other governing body shall be elected for a term of two years each, [illegible] ward of any city subject to the provisions of this act, where there is or may be more than one vacancy, one member of council or board of aldermen thereof shall be elected for one year only.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special, public or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning mortgages," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That every mortgage, bill of conditional sale or conveyance hereafter made upon, or for any household goods and furniture in the use and possession of any family in this state, not given to secure the purchase money for such goods and chattels then in use and in possession, shall be absolutely void and of no effect or validity, unless such mortgage, bill of conditional sale, conveyance or instrument in writing intended to affect such household goods and furniture, shall be first duly signed, sealed, executed and acknowledged according to law, by the husband and wife of the family, and be duly recorded as provided by law, in the county where such household goods and furniture may be situated at the time of the execution of any such instrument intended as a lien or conveyance of or upon such goods and chattels as herein above specified.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER XLIX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section fifty-five of the act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That section fifty-five a. of said act be and the same is hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That section fifty-seven of said act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

57. And be it enacted, That each county shall be entitled to at least six times as many pupils in the school as it has representatives in the Legislature; and in case any county is not fully represented, additional candidates may be admitted from other localities on sustaining the requisite examination; the applicants shall give on admission a written declaration signed with their own hands, that their object in seeking admission to the school is to qualify themselves for the employment of public school teachers, and that it is their intention to engage in that employment in this State for at least two years, or refund to the State the cost of their tuition.

4. And be it enacted, That section sixty of said act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

60. And be it enacted, That for the support of the normal school and to carry out the purpose and designs of this act, there is appropriated hereby the annual sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars, to be paid out of the income of the school fund upon the warrant of the comptroller.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER L.

An Act authorizing the state board of education to erect a suitable building on the grounds of the state normal school, for providing additional class-rooms, etc.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the state board of education be and they are hereby authorized to erect upon the grounds of the state normal school a suitable building, of such size as the said board may deem proper, for providing additional class-rooms, rooms for instruction in manual training and for such other purposes as in the opinion of the said board may be necessary to increase the accommodations and facilities of the school; and the said board are hereby authorized to procure for the said building such furniture and apparatus as in their judgment may be necessary and requisite for the above-named purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That the erection and furnishing of the said building shall be done by contract or otherwise, as the board shall deem for the best interest of the state, and the said board shall have power to employ architects, superintendents and mechanics, to advertise for proposals, to make a contract or contracts for the whole or any part of said work, and to incur all necessary expenses to carry out the provisions of this act, and for these purposes the sum of twelve thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated from the income of the state school fund, the same to be paid by the treasurer of the state, on a warrant of the comptroller, from time to time, as payments shall become due, said payments to be made upon proper vouchers approved and duly certified by the said board or such officers thereof as they may designate for that purpose.

3. And be it enacted, That the said board shall make to the legislature, at its next session, and at each succeeding session until the said building is completed, a full and detailed report of their proceedings and expenditures under this act.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LI.

An Act providing for a chief clerk or secretary to the board of tax commissioners or board of assessment and revision of taxes in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities of the first class the board of tax commissioners or board of assessment and revision of taxes shall have power to appoint a chief clerk or secretary for a term of three years from the date of his appointment, at a salary to be fixed by such board at the time of such appointment, not less than eighteen hundred dollars, nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, payable monthly.

2. And be it enacted, That such chief clerk or secretary shall, in addition to such other duties as may be imposed upon him by said board, have charge of the records, books and papers of said department, subject, however, to the direction of said board.

3. And be it enacted, That should there be no appropriation or fund for the payment of such salary, then and in such case the board or other authority having the charge and control of the finances in any such city shall make provision therefor in such manner as they may deem proper, and if money is borrowed for such purpose, the amount so borrowed shall be placed in the next tax levy of such city.

Passed March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

Whereas, doubts have arisen whether the legal voters, residents of boroughs formed under and by virtue of the act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the several supplements thereto, are entitled to vote in the township out of which or from which the several boroughs were formed, or in the borough of which they are residents; now, therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the legal voters of all boroughs existing within any of the townships of this State, and incorporated under the provisions of the act of which this is a supplement, shall hereafter in all elections vote within their several boroughs.

2. And be it enacted, That at the annual elections for borough officers which are held on the same day that the town meetings are held in the various townships of this State, the legal voters of said boroughs shall not only be entitled to vote for such officers or appropriations as are authorized by the act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments" approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the several supplements thereto, but shall also be entitled to vote for a chosen freeholder for any township within which such borough is situated, and of which it forms a part.

3. And be it enacted, That the several county boards of registration shall appoint boards of registry and election, and registry or poll clerks, for the said boroughs of their respective counties, and that all elections held within the said boroughs shall be conducted under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate elections," approved April eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and the several supplements thereto and amendments thereof.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LIII.

An Act relating to cities of the third class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be lawful in cities of the third class of this state, having a mayor and council, for said mayor and council of said cities, to elect a clerk, to fix his compensation and his term of office, and by resolution define the duties to be performed by said clerk.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—Four wholesale beer bottlers at Bound Brook have been indicted for selling at retail.

—The liquor licenses of Frank Licke and Gustav Sutterlein in North Plainfield, and that of James H. Force at Bound Brook, have been renewed.

—Pearson & Gale have been awarded the contract for carpenter work on Geo W. Cole's new building, corner of West Second street and Exchange alley.

—The New York Sun says: "Plainfield, N. J., will be frequently mentioned during the baseball season, for the magnates of that city's club are making active preparations for a splurge."

—Branch 167, I. O. M., which has been meeting in Odd Fellows' hall for some time past, will soon occupy the rooms of the Red Men. This change was agreed on at the last meeting of the order.

—Mague & Babcock, lately employes of the Potter Press works, will open the store at 35 Somerset street, Thorn's block, to sell and repair bicycles and work on general machinery. They are competent men.

—The contracts have all been signed for the new engine-house, and the work of construction will now proceed. The house will cost $7,709. The lot cost $3,000. The old engine-house property on West Front street was sold for $8,000.

—A silk dress, and a valuable one, too, was confiscated from a house at Netherwood on Sunday. Special officer Meyer was called in and the house where the dress was supposed to be was searched, and the missing garment found. No warrant has yet been issued for the arrest of the thief.

—Three hundred feet of the track on the Somerset street extension of the Plainfield street railway was laid before Thursday. The weather has been bad, and the force of men at work small. All of the necessary material is on the ground and the work will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

—THE PRESS is in receipt of a neatly bound copy of Trap Shooting Rules of the American Shooting Association, revised by C. W. Dimick, of the U. S. Cartridge Co., Lowell, Mass. Mr. Dimick is a thorough sportsman, and has done a favor for the trap shooting fraternity by issuing the little book before us.

—Arthur L. Titsworth of this city, who succeeded to the long-established business of his father, the late Rudolph M Titsworth, has removed to a better equipped and more convenient place of business at 415 Broadway, New York, where he is displaying an extensive line of foreign and domestic fabrics for fine custom clothes for men.

—Three horses, six milch cows, one 2-year Jersey bull, seventy-five head poultry, threshing machine, reaper, mower, farm wagons, two-seat carriage, lot farm machines in general will be sold at public auction on Saturday at 1 o'clock, by auctioneer Hope, on the farm formerly owned by John Jennings, between Bound Brook and Weston. Read the advertisement in this issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

—Col. John T. VanCleef, of New Brunswick, has been appointed an Aide-de-Camp on Governor Werts's staff. He served with Governors Green and Abbett and will now have a term of three years with the Colonels on Governor Werts's staff. Colonel VanCleef was given his title of Colonel on August 14, 1888. He served as a private in Company G., Seventh Regiment, National Guard, New York.

—Marshal Pangborn has his eye on several young rascals who have stolen blooming plants from the dooryards of borough residences, and if they are caught they will land in the lock-up. It will be the only way to break up this reprehensible practice, and North Plainfield hopes that the marshal will be successful in catching them. One family on Duer street lost several blooming pansy plants on Saturday night.

—The postmaster-general has designated the Trenton post-office as a depository to which reports of money order business transacted and surplus money order funds shall be periodically returned by a large number of offices in this portion of the State which had heretofore made their returns to Philadelphia, as did also Trenton. This change has no effect upon the salary of the postmaster, which is now $3,300 a year.

A Bicycle Race Through Plainfield.

A 100-mile handicap race will be ridden under the auspices of the Atalanta Wheelmen, of Newark, July 15. The course will be from Newark through South Orange, Milburn, Plainfield, Bound Brook and New Brunswick, to Princeton and return. A time limit of twelve hours has been set upon the race. Entries will close July 8.

This Year's Century Run.

The century run between Newark and Philadelphia will be under the management of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, this year, and will take place Saturday, June 3. Last year the run was superintended by the Captains' Association of Philadelphia, but that organization is defunct. Captains Calkins, Elizabeth Wheelmen; Kerr, Hudson County Wheelmen; and Edge, Atalanta Wheelmen, have been appointed a committee to arrange for the event.

The Central's New Ferry-Boat.

The new ferry-boat Mauch Chunk, belonging to the Central railroad of New Jersey, will to-day leave Wilmington, Del., where she was built and equipped by the Harlan & Hollingsworth company. The Mauch Chunk is a sister boat to the Easton, which arrived a few days ago. Both boats are of the double-deck, twin-screw type. They have steam-heat, electric light, and all the improved apparatus. The two boats will run between Whitehall street, New York, and the Central's Jersey City terminal.

Men Don't Understand.

"No man ever suffered a single pang like unto woman.

"Women, therefore, gladly turn to a woman for sympathy, counsel, and help in their peculiar troubles.

"Lydia E. Pinkham deserves the confidences showered upon her by thousands. Her Vegetable Compound has done more for women than any other remedy.

"The great cause of woman's misery is in her womb. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound goes direct to the source of trouble, drives out disease, and cures backache, fainting, despondency, bloating, ovarian troubles, and leucorrhœa.

"I would have been in my grave if I had not taken Mrs. Pinkham's medicine."—Mrs. Hannah Hyde, Bethel, Ind.

PERSONALIA.

Michael McMahon Bingham is ill with lumbago.

Peter Staats has been appointed postmaster of Dunellen.

Mrs. Charles D. Wadsworth is at Washington, Litchfield county, Conn.

Mrs. Charles Ochsfeld of Crescent avenue, is home from a southern trip.

False reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Paderewski is not coming to Plainfield.

Miss Margaret S. Thompson, of this city, is the guest of Mrs. Goyn T. Hodge of Finderne.

Townsend Fellows, Albany's popular tenor, is visiting his mother and sister on Duer street.

Miss Moore of New York is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Cruikshank, of Broadway and Belvidere avenue.

W. J. Hamilton of Dunellen contributes to the Agent and Operator an interesting article on the courtesy of telegraphers.

The family of W. A. Lord of Netherwood have returned from their winter home, 251 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

The residences of Isaac L. Miller and Albert Beers of Broadway, are being much improved by the addition of roomy piazzas.

The last bowling game in the series between the Park club and the Union County Country club will be rolled Friday night.

Philip Green died in Bellevue Hospital, New York, Saturday, from consumption. He was buried in St. Mary's cemetery, this city, Tuesday.

Henry D Brewster, manager of Brokaw Bros., the clothiers, has leased Charles Sandford's elegant home on Washington avenue for the summer months.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Lizzie, daughter of E. O. Mulford, to Fred S Cutter, at the residence of the bride's father, 65 East Fifth street, May 3.

David Bodine, of Grandview avenue, who had so improved as to be out Sunday after a week's illness with the grip, has had a relapse and is again confined to his bed.

Mrs. James Alfred Demarest, wife of the managing editor of THE PRESS, has been appointed a member of the auxiliary committee of the New York Press club fair.

By actual count 156 bicycles passed a given point on South avenue near Netherwood, Sunday, between the hours of 3 and 4 in the afternoon. Many of them were ridden by women.

Miss Lillien Clickener, of Manasquan, daughter of George Clickener, engineer of the Long Branch express, Central railroad, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. Van-Middlesworth, of Elmwood place.

Miss Katie, the oldest daughter of Gustave Sutterlin of Greenbrook road, who was recently stricken with scarlet fever, has now fully recovered, and the quarantine has been removed from the house.

Civil Engineer Dunham of this city has found it necessary to start a new office; this time in the commodious "Central" telephone building in Pittsburg. THE PRESS is glad to note this evidence of his increasing business.

George Wharton Edwards is on the hanging committee for the great Press club fair. This is a deserved compliment to the famous Plainfield artist, and a most excellent selection by the appreciative newspaper men.

Work is in progress on the courts of the Hillside Tennis club, and if the weather holds good they will be in a condition for use by Thursday. As many New York business men will be home that day, the grounds will probably be crowded.

Messrs Huff Bros. are putting up a new frame house on Park avenue, below Ninth street. The building is 30 x 44 feet in dimensions; it will be two stories and attic and contain all the modern improvements. The cost will be about $5,000.

Chief engineer T. O. Doane has received from the Paterson Exempt Firemen's association a letter thanking him as a member of the executive committee of the State Firemen's association, for his aid in securing the passage of Assembly bill 266.

Joel D. Manning, of Middlesex county, just over the Plainfield border, has been appointed a member of the Advisory Council of the World's Congress Auxiliary on Farm Culture and General Industry, and a member of the World's Agricultural Congress.

Annie M., wife of James H. Searing, passed away at 12:30 Thursday night, at her home, 30 Madison avenue. She had been suffering from heart trouble, for several days, but her end was peaceful. She was in her 49th year. Mrs. Searing was a woman of most estimable qualities, a devoted wife and mother, and a devout Christian. She was fully prepared for the end, and was ready to go. She will be sadly missed in the large circle of bereaved ones. Deceased was sister of John M. C. Marsh of Westfield, and half-sister of Charles and William Marsh of Elizabeth. She leaves an only son, Edward C. Searing, a valued employe of THE PRESS, and two daughters.

AT REST.

The funeral of the late Mrs. James H. Searing, held in Trinity church Monday afternoon, was largely attended. The casket was strewn with lilies and other choice flowers, tributes of affection from friends and relatives. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the deceased, officiated, and commended her Christian life as a worthy model for others to live by. He gave touching words of comfort to the bereaved father, son and daughters. The body was laid to rest beside that of a daughter who had gone before, in Evergreen cemetery.

THE TROLLEY RUNS INTO HIS HOME.

Supt. Passmore of the Street Railway company has improved his already attractive home on Duer street by a complete system of electric lighting. He taps the street railway circuit direct, and gets the current from the trolley wire.

A FAITHFUL OFFICIAL RESIGNS.

Andrew E. Kenney has resigned his office of cashier at the freight-house, to take effect May 1, and will travel in the interests of the Catholic Benevolent Legion. He will be succeeded by J. J. Hibbits. Mr. Kenney has made a most valuable employe of the railroad company.

THE BRIDEGROOM WAS TOO BASHFUL TO WRITE HER.

Thos Kelley and wife arrived at Hotel Grenada Thursday in the pouring rain. They were evidently bride and groom, as they arrived in a coach and in holiday finery, and were the centre of attraction of an admiring crowd, who went into raptures over the bride's lavender bonnet and white slippers. Mr. Kelley was so bashful that he registered only for himself. The newly made Benedick did not like to be stared at, and the bride looked sweet and drooped her eyes. They left town to-day.

ENJOY THEMSELVES AND HELP THE BOYS.

Mrs. J. P. Mason, Mrs. W. L. Saunders, and Messrs. Cook, Pelletier and Runyon, will act in two plays, "Barbara" and "Second Thoughts", at the Casino, May 11, for the benefit of the manual training fund of the Boys' club. Between the plays, Messrs. Hicks, Wendell and Daly will contribute their talents. Since Mr. Ham's lecture on manual training, great interest has been aroused in the project of establishing next fall, a course for the boys. So those who attend the entertainment will, besides thoroughly enjoying themselves, materially aid a good purpose.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT TO A PLAINFIELD WOMAN.

Charles Pryer and wife, at Kearney, opposite Newark. On Friday while crossing the bridge over the Passaic river, Mrs. VanEmburgh was so unfortunate as to trip over the stringpiece on the bridge and crush the ligaments at the knee of the left leg. Dr. Goldberg was called, and the sufferer is doing as well as can be expected under his care and the best of nursing by Mrs. Pryer.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

Romulus Alonzo Hill, the favorite tonsorial artist, was greatly rejoiced a short time ago to receive tidings from a very dear cousin whom he had feared to be dead. She is Miss Rachel V. Yarboro, a most esteemed woman of Louisburg, N. C. She and Mr. Hill were playmates in childhood. By letter Mr. Hill learns that she is well and prosperous. He had not seen her since the war, and is eager to have her visit his family in Plainfield and see what a lovely city he lives in. Mr. Hill prizes very highly a bunch of violets she sent him, plucked in her dooryard the day before Easter.

DIED IN HER CHAIR WHILE DRESSING.

Miss Nellie Randolph, who boarded with George Randolph of 96 Duer street, died Thursday, of heart trouble and Bright's disease. Her age was about 70 years. She was a sister of Henry Clay Randolph and Mrs. Eden Boice. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 11, at Runyon's undertaking parlors. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery. Plainfield avenue. Miss Randolph was found dead in a chair in her bedroom yesterday morning. Mrs. Randolph heard her about her room between 8 and 9 o'clock, evidently dressing herself. Not putting in an appearance at the breakfast hour, her room was entered and Miss Randolph was found dead sitting in a chair. She had partly dressed herself and was suddenly stricken with heart failure.

ANDERSON-BURKE.

One of the largest and most fashionable weddings ever witnessed in St. Mary's church was the marriage of Miss Rose Burke, daughter of Mrs James Burke, of 104 West Fourth street, to James Anderson, at 5:30 Wednesday. The most elaborate preparations have been made for the charming event. The best man is to be M. Regan; the bridesmaid Miss Julia Burke, sister of the bride; and the maid of honor Miss Josie Shaffer. The bride will be given away by her uncle, Frank Burke. Her dress is of white bengaline silk, trimmed with rare lace. She will be crowned with a wreath of white roses. Organist Lee will play the wedding marches at the church, and pastor Smyth will officiate. After the wedding ceremony a reception will be given at the home of the bride's mother, with music by O'Reilly. The happy couple will go to Connecticut for two weeks. They have received a bountiful supply of valuable gifts, including a building lot 50x157, presented by the bride's mother.

HYMENEAL.

Milliken—Plummer.

Miss Alice Plummer, daughter of John F. Plummer, formerly of Netherwood, was married on Tuesday at the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, to Charles Stuart Milliken of Tacoma.

Long before the hour for the ceremony the guests began to arrive at the church and before the edifice was crowded to its utmost extent. The bridal party consisted of the bride and groom, the best man, David Milliken, maid of honor Miss Josie Kalbfleische, six ushers and six bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Plummer, sister of the bride, Miss Adele Spaulding, niece of the groom, Miss Lilian Stokes, Miss Josie Many, Miss Carrie Ewell and Miss Annie Lamont. The ushers were Franklin A. Plummer and John F. Plummer, jr., brothers of the bride, Syrell Conard, and Henry Milliken.

The bride wore a waist of point-lace and white satin skirt, and a veil of tulle. She carried white lilacs. The bridesmaids wore white silk and chiffon, with Neapolitan hats trimmed with daisies. The flowers carried by the bridesmaids were marguerites, and lilies of the valley. Mrs. John F. Plummer, mother of the bride, wore a very handsome gown of white and green brocade, with bonnet to match.

The bride was given away by her father and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Saunders, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Faunce. The floral decorations of the church were by Thorley—the prevailing colors being white and green. Mosenthal presided at the organ. After the ceremony the intimate friends were invited to the reception at the home of the bride, where a collation was served by Pinard, and Lander's orchestra discoursed sweet strains from behind a screen of palms.

The gifts were numerous and extremely beautiful, the bride's present from her parents being 12 dozen small pieces of silver. The happy couple will leave immediately for the West, but it is hoped that it will be but a bridal trip for their many friends will look forward with pleasure to their return to New York. Quite a large party of friends and relatives left Plainfield this afternoon to witness the ceremony.

SNEEDEN ALREADY SECURED.

And Another Yet to be Signed to Pitch for This Year's Crescents.

The ball team that the Plainfield Amusement company will put in the field this season to represent this city, is now about complete and it is, as it stands, in many particulars superior to that of last year.

"Chic" Hofford will captain the team and steady the young pitchers behind the bat, but in addition that crack catcher Fritz will be out in right field from where he can be called in to relieve Hofford if necessary. Sneeden, whose arm is better than ever, will be the leading pitcher but on May 12 a clever left-handed twirler, who can also play anywhere else, will join the team as a change pitcher.

Jones will cover first; Hurrah! Every krank in the city will join in a cheer, so no more can be said about that position. Lee Smith at short is going to make himself popular with the people from start to finish. He's one of the best and with a better head than most of the others. Romer and Hackmen, too, will prove satisfactory in the infield.

And then, how about Leidy and McIndoe at center and left? Can't they play a little bit! And ain't you glad McIndoe is brought back to you! Sure, Mike! Oh, this season will be the greatest of all in Plainfield. And the team will always be at home Saturdays and holidays.

YOUNG PITTIS GETS HIS SKULL.

But His Name Requested to Keep the Knowledge from His Family.

The human skull that has been waiting for someone to claim it at the United States express office on North avenue has at last found a home. William Bethel, of East Front street, whose name adorned the outside of the package, refused to have anything to do with it. He did not care to receive anyone's remains, so sent it back to the office. On examination a card was found in the box bearing the name of Pittis. That well-known family was accordingly notified, and the death's head now ornaments the house of Pittis. It transpired that one of the sons has become infatuated with the study of surgery, and the skull will be an addition to his anatomical [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] his family to know he was getting it, so he had it [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MR. NEAL'S SENSATION.

He Causes an Investigation to Be Made of Borough Accounts.

Something of a sensation was caused at Friday night's session of the North Plainfield borough council, when councilman Neal arose to a question of privilege and ripped local gossips up the back.

Mr. Neal said that irresponsible persons had put in circulation a story that he had never turned into the borough treasury certain money for the sale of dirt from the roads. The accusation, he reported, was that of $69.65 received by him only $12.40 had ever been transferred to the clerk's hands. In refutation of the charge he produced check and receipts for the full amount, showing that it had all been paid by him into the hands of the late clerk, H. H Brokaw.

Mr. Neal further said that Mr. Brokaw had promised to explain why the payments did n't appear on his books, but that no explanation had as yet been made. The council unanimously ordered the auditing committee to investigate the accounts and report to the council.

Mr. Brokaw's friends believe that careless book keeping alone is to blame, and that the payments are included in other entries.

Mr. Neal acknowledged that in one other matter he had been neglectful—the payment of $9.50 for use of the roller. He handed the clerk his check to settle that account.

Where One Sunday-School's Offerings Go.

The offerings of the Crescent Avenue school for 1892-1893 were used for the following purposes:

Board of Foreign Missions, $50; Native Helpers—India and Africa, $99; Board of Home Missions, $50; Occidental Board of Foreign Missions, $75; Hampton Institute, two scholarships, $140; Tucson Indian School—scholarship, $75; Hot Springs Mission School, $60; Bankok, Siam—school, $60; Young man in India, $25; Student for ministry, $100; D. B. Mason, missionary, $100; Foreign Sunday-school association, $50; State Sunday-school association, $13; Children's Day offering, $45; Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, $65; Children's Home, Plainfield, $50; Warren Mission, Plainfield, $100; Kitchen Garden, W. C. T. U., Plainfield, $25.

He Will Always Be Lame.

W. A. Apgar, the Somerville man who was hurt so badly not long since by falling from a Garwood building, is still in Muhlenberg hospital, but is doing nicely. He is in a fair way to recovery, though it is feared that he will always be lame to some extent. He will not be removed for some weeks yet.

Borough Property Changes Hands.

Recent North Plainfield real estate transfers include the following:

Sarah E. Squier to Serafino Trotano, $85.

Lauretta C. DeCamp to Annie M. Hanigan, $4,000.

Ada M. Grant to St. Joseph's Catholic church, $4,500.

Newton B. Smalley and others to Benjamin and Christiana Durr, $2,500.

The Anti-Shade-Tree Craze.

(New York Recorder.)

The residents along upper Central avenue, Plainfield, are indignant over the removal of a large number of fine elm trees that have for years aided in making the avenue one of the beauty spots of the city during warm weather. The cause of their removal is a frivolous one. The owner of some land, having erected a brick row, concluded that the large trees did not look well in front of brick houses, and had them removed. The trees were the finest in the city, and will be greatly missed by the children who have been wont to play under them in the summer months.

A Household Remedy.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the only reliable plasters ever produced. Fragrant, clean, inexpensive and never failing; they fully meet all the requirements of a household remedy, and should always be kept on hand. IMPROVED HEALTHFULNESS.

That's the Report of the Health Boards of this District.

In that everavailable official document, the bulky annual report of the State board of health, just completed for 1892, the following reports from this locality are to be found:

NORTH PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP.

NAMES AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS OF MEMBERS AND HEALTH INSPECTOR.

Rev. Wm. E. Honeyman, President; Rev. T. Logan Murphy, F. M. French, B. B. Brokaw; J. H. Carman, M. D., Secretary.

The past year has been a very healthy one to the inhabitants of North Plainfield. Aside from la grippe, which prevailed during the winter and early spring, and the usual spring crop of measles, no epidemics have occurred. Have had a few sporadic cases of malarial fever, and one case of small-pox appeared in the borough in May, but was prevented from spreading by rigid quarantine. The board of health advised the vaccination of all school children who had not been vaccinated within five years, and, with very few exceptions, found parents willing and anxious to take such advice.

J. H. CARMAN, M. D., Secretary.

PLAINFIELD CITY.

NAMES AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS OF MEMBERS AND HEALTH INSPECTOR.

George W. Rockfellow, President; Lemuel W. Serrell, Henry R. Newhall, G. W. Endicott, M. D.; Oliver B. Leonard, Secretary; M. Marvin Dunham, Health Inspector; Post office address of all, Plainfield.

The board holds monthly meetings to transact regular business and consider questions relating to the sanitary condition of the city. They have been especially careful to urge frequent and thorough inspections of back yards and outhouses. Fumigation and disinfectants have been vigorously applied in all cases where they were required. The health inspector has been daily on the alert to prevent the accumulation of deleterious substances. Four hundred and eighty personal inspections were made by him within twelve months, ending Oct. 1, 1892. There have been cleaned out 309 privy vaults and 253 cesspools emptied.

The question of sewerage in Plainfield has received renewed and intelligent attention the past year. A representative committee, composed of practical men from the common council, board of health and city at large, has been considering the problem, a solution of which is soon expected to be reached.

The public water-works are increasing in favor with the citizens, as is evinced from the growing number of house-takers.

The streets in the more thickly settled parts are well sprinkled and kept clean. Many thousand feet of macadamized roadways have been laid and all repairs are made with crushed trap-rock.

Our public school-houses are five in number, of brick, spacious, well-heated and ventilated, and accommodate a large percentage of the children of school age.

An unusual degree of healthfulness has characterized the city since last statement. There has been no epidemic of any disease. Probably the increased activity exercised in the house-to-house inspections, prompted by the presence of cholera in New York, has averted many preventable cases of sickness. During the year only one hundred instances have been reported of contagious diseases, and these mostly measles and light forms of scarlet fever among the children. Vital statistics are regularly collected and a careful registration made.

OLIVER B. LEONARD, Secretary.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

NAMES AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS OF MEMBERS AND HEALTH INSPECTOR.

Hon. George Kyte, Fanwood; L. W. Miller, Scotch Plains; Wm. Terry, Plainfield; John Maddison, Scotch Plains; F. W. Westcott, M. D., Scotch Plains.

We have nothing new to report. This has been another healthy year. The work of the board of health has been light; all cases of complaint being promptly attended to and the cause of complaint promptly removed. Our board desire to express their appreciation of Circular No. 4 (cholera). On receipt of same we had our cesspools, etc., thoroughly examined, and, where needed, cleaned. Think we are in good sanitary condition. We have no hospital for contagious diseases, but, if needed, have no doubt but same would be provided and the unfortunates properly cared for.

F. W. WESTCOTT, M. D.

PLAINFIELD'S PURE WATER.

State Officials Have Made an Analysis, and Say It Is O. K.

The State health authorities have been examining Plainfield's water supply, and report:

"Population, 16,000. Supply was introduced in 1891. The engineer is C. B. Brush. Owned by the Plainfield Water company. Supply is obtained from 20 six-inch bored wells. Water is pumped to a stand-pipe. Water is delivered on top and drawn from bottom. Wells are 45 feet deep. There are 28 miles of pipe running from twenty-inch to six-inch. There are 261 hydrants. The pressure is 44 pounds. The capacity is 5,000,000 gallons. Average consumption is 300,000 gallons. There are 500 houses supplied. Mains are of cast iron. The supply is pure, analysis having been made. The temperature of the water is 55°."

Reviews of Plainfield's Find.

President Murnane, of the New England league, who so ably edits the baseball columns of the Boston Globe, says, "Leo Smith preferred signing with a small club in Plainfield, N. J., to going back to Providence at a reduced salary."

The article of base-ball put up by the New Jersey league, last season, was something better than minor league ball, and if some of brother Murnane's New Englanders had run foul of Plainfield they would probably have thought they had been struck by a full-grown club.

THE HOTTENTOTS.

Sketch of an Ancient and Peculiar African Tribe.

How They Were Saved from Extermination—Cruelty of the Boers—Extraordinary Toilet Secrets—What the Race Is Like Now.

[Special South African Letter.]

The Hottentots of southern Africa are not only distinct from all the other African races, but from the best data available are believed to be the most ancient race inhabiting the continent. When first known by Europeans they occupied the entire territory from the Ganduri river southward to the sea, and the earliest records describe them as existing under a patriarchal system of government, subsisting upon the products of their herds of cattle, adverse to war, indolent in their habits, good natured, hospitable and fond of music, feasting and dancing.

LANDING OF VON RIEBEEK IN 1625.

This was the condition in which the Portuguese navigator, Vasco da Gama, who was probably the first European to hold personal intercourse with the Hottentots, found them when, in 1497, he landed at a place where Mossel bay now stands, and spent several days amongst the natives, studying their customs and habits, and bartering brass trinkets for their fat cattle and other fresh provisions. In his journal da Gama describes them as "negroes with frizzly hair," and adds: "We were much entertained by these natives, as they are a pleasure-loving people, given to playing on musical instruments and dancing. They value their flocks of cattle very highly, and some of them we saw were very fat and sleek, and were ridden upon by women on pack-saddles of reed."

To this incident the Portuguese poet, Camoens, was doubtless indebted for the inspiration of that part of his great national epic, the "Lusiad," wherein he says:

"The tenants of the coast, a festive band,
With dances did meet us on the yellow sand:
The brides on slow-paced oxen rode behind,
The spreading horns with flowing garlands twined
Bespoke the dew-lapped beeves their proudest boast,
Of all the bestial stores they valued most."

During the century and a half succeeding da Gama's visit little or no intercourse was held with those people by Europeans except through the crews of ships of Portugal, England and Holland, which occasionally touched at Table bay, while engaged in the eastern trade. These periodical visits of the big canoes of the pale-faced stranger were always welcomed with demonstrations of great joy by the simple Hottentots, who eagerly exchanged their best cattle and sheep and other chattels for the white man's brass beads, tobacco and brandy. And it is creditable to the race to know that not a single instance is recorded during these many years of periodical barter wherein an act of treachery or lack of good faith was alleged against the Hottentots.

But a cloud was gathering over the heads of these happy, simple-minded people. When the Dutch governor, Von Reibeek, with three ship-loads of soldiers and colonists, took possession of Table bay and the surrounding country, he was received by the guileless natives with their usual overtures of friendship and hospitality. But these friendly overtures were rejected. Von Reibeek had come as a conqueror, and at once began despoiling the natives of their possessions; and not satisfied with that, he soon caused large numbers of them to be impressed into hopeless slavery. To this the Hottentots made an attempt at resistance, with the inevitable consequence of conflict between Christianity and barbarism. The natives, unaccustomed, as they were unprepared, for war, were driven from the coast and took refuge in the mountains or in the deserts. Border warfare waged for many years—ever to the discomfiture of the Hottentot. And finally, as if an angry fate had decreed the utter destruction of those inoffensive people, the fierce, warlike Kafir tribes which had from time immemorial occupied the north country surrounding the great lakes, began moving south, and, discovering the defenseless condition of the Hottentots, swooped down upon them and, for the mere pleasure of killing, began a war of extermination. Thus they were hunted between the fires of the two relentless foes—one savage, the other Christian—at the beginning of the present century, when from millions of happy, contented people they were reduced to a mere remnant of subdued, suppliant refugees.

At this period the Cape of Good Hope became a portion of the British empire, and the protection, freedom and security afforded the Hottentots by that great nation alone saved the race from utter extermination. Their number at this time did not exceed 15,000, all told, their tribal relations had been destroyed and they were reduced to the lowest depths of destitution. Under the fostering care of the British government, however, their number has gradually increased and is now estimated at about 100,000 souls, distributed throughout Cape Colony and neighboring territories.

The long years of destitution and suffering, fear and persecution, extending over many generations, which the Hottentots have endured from the Dutch Boer on the one hand and the bloodthirsty Kafir on the other, have done much to destroy their primitive character. From the generous, confiding, light-hearted, good-natured disposition of his ancestors, the Hottentot of to-day is selfish, suspicious, morose and cross-natured. Family ties find no place in his affections, and he finds more pleasure in being alone than in the society of his kind. In point of indolence and filthiness, however, he has lost nothing of his primitive nature, but has, in these particulars, fully maintained the reputation of his early ancestors.

In personal appearance the Hottentots are of medium height, of slender build and of a leathery brown color. Their woolly hair grows in thick, curly tufts, and the beard of the men is scanty. The eyes are black and wide apart, nose broad and flat, large mouth, pointed chin, very high cheek bones, and altogether the Hottentot more nearly resembles the Mongolian than the negro. They retain the ancient custom of besmearing their bodies with an ointment composed of sheeps' fat, soot and powdered bucha leaves, which imparts to their persons an odor by no means pleasant to Christian olfactories. [illegible] [illegible] as house servants among the European colonists. They find employment, however, on farms as cattle and sheep herds and as "minders" about ostrich camps. Owing to the solitary nature of this sort of employment it seems congenial to them, and in such they are usually efficient and trustworthy. They are fond of tobacco and spirits, and most of their meager earnings go for these luxuries. For food they are partial to melons and pumpkins, and where they live in families a pumpkin and melon garden is always to be seen near the family hut.

There is one striking peculiarity about the Hottentots which no stranger can fail to observe, which is that all adults look old. It is not unusual to see amongst them men and women not exceeding twenty-five years of age whose faces, necks and bodies are seamed and corrugated with wrinkles, only met with elsewhere among octogenarians. This peculiarity is believed to be due to the effects of the ointment before referred to, which it is said tends to destroy the elasticity of the skin, and the consequence is when a Hottentot becomes fat and portly, which he generally manages to do at least once in his lifetime, his skin expands to the occasion and he looks sleek, and at his best. But when he gets thin again which he is sure to do, and which is his normal condition, the skin, for want of elasticity, refuses to contract smoothly with the shrinking flesh, but collapses, as it were, in furrows and seams.

An Excited Officeseeker.

Contiguity to greatness is sometimes embarrassing, as an officeseeker from Arkansas found when he was ushered into Mr. Cleveland's presence the other day. "Mr. President," he said, "I am a plain American citizen who had no influence beyond the respect and esteem of the people of two states, and I would like to be consul general at Rome, Egypt." "Rome, Egypt, did you say?" asked the president. "Yes, sir; and I know that I could fill the office with satisfaction to the government. I came to leave my papers. Here they are. Good day." "Good Lord!" he said, a half hour after, when the sense of his error flashed over him. "Here I am, a thousand miles from home; came all the way to get the office, and the president thinks I don't know that Rome is in Italy. I am going back to-night."—N. Y. World.

CRIBB JOHNSON.

How He Got His Start as a Bookmaker.

He Unknowingly Answers a Call for a Detective and Reaps a Rich Reward —Luck Had Been Against Him for Many a Day.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

The sun had been shining for some time in a dismal sort of way through the dirty skylight that formed the only means of lighting the little trunk room, partitioned off from the hall on the top floor of the cheap boarding house in which Cribb Johnson slept since he had been "broke" and couldn't pay his room rent.

"I hain't had no luck sence I went blind of dat razer-backed quitter, Mohammed. Yer see, it was er good ting an' come straight from der stable. Dey played him all over town, an' er 'nuff good money went in on him ter buy out der city. I had er pretty good roll at der time an' when I went inter der poolroom in der mornin' an' saw der right kind er money goin' down in big lumps, I knew dey was countin' on er big hog killin', an' I tought I'd go in along wid 'em an' win out er little 'chunk' mesel'. Der 'odds' began ter drop an' I jest sailed in an' went my pile at der best money I could git, an' den I got all der fellows I know'd onter him an' pretty soon everybody 'tumbled', and dey slung der 'stuff' at him till dey backed him down from six ter four ter five, an' b'fore two o'clock he stood 'favorite' on der boards.

"Well, dat jest made me sick, 'cause I know'd he' win quicker at six dan he would as 'favorite,' an' I russeled 'round, tryin' ter raise some 'dust' ter hedge, but no go; I couldn't find er cent, so I had ter let it slide, an' everyting come out jest as I tought.

"Well, when der flag dropped he got off in der lead and made der runnin' clean 'round ter der tree quarters. Den Dundee come up wid er rush alongside, an' dey come inter der stretch neck an' neck, an' bo't jocks was ridin' fer all dey was wor't, but b'fore dey got half way ter der wire, der ole hoss quit an' der odder one beat him out by half er length. Yes, sir," he would end up with: "It looked good at first, but he couldn't beat Dundee in er hundard years wid der 'odds' against him."

On this particular morning, as the landlady pushed open the thin board door that he had locked upon retiring by setting a chair against it, to call him, he did not respond with his usual cheeriness, but simply turned himself over, grumbling something about being "stiff as er pair er wooden saw horses."

Giving his hair a brush or two, he remarked, as he surveyed portions of himself by the aid of a three-cornered piece of looking glass tacked upon the wall, that he reminded himself of an outsider upon a wet track. Then he slid quietly down the stairs and out of the door, because he didn't like to see anybody in his present state. Then he went around to one of the poolrooms, and this was the way it happened, told in his own fashion.

"Yer see, it was dis way. I'd jest dropped inter der White Elephant ter look at der 'odds,' when er messenger came up ter me and as't if I was Mr.

"THIS IS FOR YOU," HE SAID.

Johnson. I said I was, an' he said: 'Dis is for you.' I signed, an' he took er sneak b'fore I opened it. Yer see I tought it was er tip from one of der boys, but when I read what was in it I jest went up in [illegible] [illegible] couldn't [illegible] but [illegible] dey kinder looked like mine, an' I wasn't takin' no chances. Dis is what it was: 'Mr. Johnson, please call at der —— house at der earliest possible moment; most important. As't for Mr. Snell.' Well, I didn't like ter go der way I was lookin', but I wasn't goin' ter lose er good ting by any squeamishness, so I went off at er run ter meet der 'bloke' an' find out what he wanted. On der way I met er 'bout' I know'd an' 'hit' him for er quarter, an' went in an' took er big drink ter kinder brace me up. I felt er little bit skittish when I went inter der place, 'cause I didn't know jest what I was goin' ter 'strike,' but I made a big bluff an' walked up ter der desk an' as't for Mr. Snell. Der clerk looked at me like he owned 'bout all her runnin' stock in der country an' as't me if I wanted ter send up my card.

"'Well, I hain't got no card, 'cept er losin' ticket on Powder Face,' says I, 'but yer can tell him Johnson is down here waitin' for him.'

"'Yes, of course, certing,' said he, wid his face growin' red like, 's he hit er big bell, an' when er nigger come runnin' up, said: 'Show dis gentleman ter No. 24.'

"Dere was tree gentlemen settin' at der table eatin', an' when I went in dey all got up outer dere feet an' went tru' der same kind of er circus dat der clerk had done downstairs.

"'Well, I never would er know'd yer. How yer have changed. How can yer possibly do it? Ain't it wonderful?'

"'Well, gents,' says I, when I had got tired of der row dey was makin', 'I'm sorry I don't look so much like mesel' as I us' ter an' der fact is I've been away from home so long dat I couldn't tell mesel' from der shoulder of er yaller dog an' er brick wall, an' it cost me er hundard 'plunks' der odder day fer tryin' to shake hands wid mesel' tru' er lookin' glass.' Yer see, I tought I'd try der stringin' game mesel'.

"Well, dem chaps jest set down and laffed an' slapped dere hands an' said it was er good joke.

"'Well, gents,' says I, after a little while, 'what's der little game, eh?' An' dey all looked from one ter der odder an' begun ter look ser'ous.

"'Git Mr. Johnson er plate,' says one, an' den dey all as't me ter set down an' join dem at der 'chuck.'

"Dey didn't have ter as't me but jest dat one time. Yer see, I hadn't had nothin' ter eat for 'bout tree weeks

SOMEBODY WAS TALKING.

'cept free lunches an' crullers, an' I guess dey tought so by der way dey looked at me, an' I did put down an awful lot o' dat stuff, an' all der time I was er eatin' one of dem kept er talkin', but I didn't pay much 'tention ter him till I got over bein' hungry, an' den der champagne kinder got inter me head an' I couldn't hear much but dat some one's safe had got cracked an' dat der burglars had got away wid an awful pile er 'bood' an' dat it 'ud be wor't a good pile ter some one ter git um. 'I'd like ter be dat party,' says I, an' dey laffed.

"But I didn't care much, as it want no opera of mine, and so I jest smoked an' drank champagne and let dem talk. What I was wonderin' at was how dey come ter as't me ter dinner, but I didn't worry myself much, 'cause I reckoned I'd find out some time.

"After while dey all got up, an', holy smoke, I had a lovely load.

"One of dem said he had engaged a room for me at der hotel, an' I told him I tought I'd better get inter it. When der party broke up, dey all looked at each odder an' grinned, an' one of dem said: 'O, Johnson's all right.'

"'Is dere anyone dat doubts it?' says I.

"'Not a bit of it,' dey says, an' begun ter laff an' shook hands an' went off; and den dere coon come along and took me to er room, an' I laid down an' went ter sleep.

"When I woke up me head felt like a great big punkin, an' I tought I'd like ter have er drink an' I started ter go down an' git it, but when I got a little ways down der hall I felt sick an' went back to der room. When I got inside it didn't look like der same room fer er cent, but I felt so sick dat I didn't care for nothin' an' jest crawled in behind some curtains an' went ter sleep.

"I don't know how long I was er sleepin' dere, but when I woke up somebody was talkin' an' dey seemed ter be wimmen, an' one of dem was cryin', but der odder one told her ter 'shut up her sniveling an' give her er hand at sumthin'.' Den dey begun ter talk 'bout bank notes an' diamonds an' money an' how dey was er goin' ter sew dem inter der linin' of dere dresses an' so on. An' how der detectives was arter dem, an' den one of dem says: 'I don't care a darn for der whole lot of dem but Johnson. I hear he is on der case an' we'll have ter fight shy ter git by him.'

"Den I begun ter tumble ter der whole ting. Dey tought I was Johnson, der detective, an' dat was der reason day had as't me ter dinner. Den I begun ter wonder what I would do ter git out of it at all. Why couldn't I go ahead an' git der 'stuff' jest as well as der odder Johnson? Dere it was, an' I had der whole ting in me fist.

"Der wimmen kep' on talkin' an' talkin' an' I kep' on lis'nin', an' dey jest picked up an' went ter bed. I stayed dere till I tought dey was er sleep, den got up and sneaked out of der room an' went down ter der office.

"'Tell Mr. Snell dat Mr. Johnson wants ter see him to on'et,' says I.

"In a few minutes he came down an I said: 'Mr. Snell, der people yer lookin' for are in room 38. Two wimmen up dere have a big part of der boodle wid dem. I'll have ter trouble yer for dat little amount jest as soon as yer can, 'cause I'm in er hurry,' says I.

"I was afraid der odder Johnson would come along an' claim der 'boodle.' See! Well, dey jest went out an' got some coppers an' went up ter der room, an' dere was de wimmen an' der whole swag jest as I said.

"Mr. Snell was jest clean tickled out er his boots, an' began ter pile it onter me dat I was der greatest man in der country, but I kep' close up wid him till he handed me over der 'boodle,' an' den I jest skipped out too quick.

"Next day der whole ting come out in der papers, an' Johnson was called der king er detectives, an' so on, but he didn't git rich on it, yer can bet yer heart on dat.

"Dat's how I came ter be makin' book, an' dat's how I got der 'stuff' ter do it wid. I don't know much about detective business, but it appears ter me ter be a dead open and shut 'cinch.'

"I don't know whether Snell ever found it out or not, but he hain't said nothin', an' I don't reckon it's any use for me ter kick."

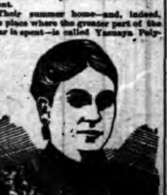
COUNTESS TOLSTOY.

The Clever Wife of the Famous Russian Novelist.

She Sympathizes with the Philosophical Views of Her Husband, But Is Too Practical to Live Up to His Doctrines.

In 1860 Count Lyeff Nikolaevitch Tolstoy, then thirty-two years of age, resolved never to marry, and as an earnest of his resolution, sold the manor-house of his estate. Its purchaser removed the body of the house, leaving what had formerly been its wings standing as detached buildings, and in one of these the hermit count took up his abode. To this place, two years later, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal, he brought his bride, Sophia, the young daughter of a German physician resident in Moscow, and within its bare walls for seventeen years they made their home. No one who has not experienced the loneliness and retirement which such a residence entails can appreciate how absolutely within herself and her home the wife's interest must have been. And yet, in spite of this, Countess Tolstoy (this is the spelling of the name used by the family upon their French visiting-cards and in writing in English) has a breadth of character and an aptitude for the larger interests of life which has certainly not been developed from her environment.

Their summer home—and, indeed, the place where the greater part of the year is spent—is called Yasnaya Poly-



COUNTESS TOLSTOY.

ana (Clearfield), and is in the province of Tula. The grounds are extensive and beautiful, more from their rugged and wild picturesqueness than from cultivation or care. The house stands at a distance of a mile from the highway, from which it is barely visible through the trees. Within and without everything is of the simplest. The park, with its stately avenues of trees, the lawns, forests and ponds of the [illegible] [illegible] occupied and her children, [illegible] has been enlarged to meet the requirements of the novelist and his family.

The daily routine of life at this Russian "Clearfield" is a simple one. In the morning, tea and coffee, with bread and butter, are served in the large hall, after which a stroll is taken through the woods to a small river, a mile distant, where a bath is indulged in. A twelve-o'clock breakfast is served under the trees, at which meal informality reigns, and where, for the first time in the day, the entire family assembles. After breakfast there is riding and driving, when the weather will permit, until late in the afternoon. Dinner is served out-of-doors.

The countess is an extremely clever woman intellectually, and one who is more than a match for her husband in his arguments. She transcribes his books as they are written, as frequently as they are altered and revised, and in the case of the "Kreutzer Sonata" copied it four times before the book was finally completed.

The countess, who is of necessity the financial manager of the family, has taken possession of the estate, which she administers for the good of her husband and children. She it was who issued, a few years ago, the cheap edition of Count Tolstoy's novels, on the royalties of which the household has been supported. To her firmness and determination the credit for the home in which the family reside, as well as the blame—if such it be called —for her husband's failure to practice the doctrine of a community of goods, which he so earnestly advocates, must be given; and her realization that a home must be provided for the nine children who have lived of the sixteen born to them, must be her excuse.

Rose Elizabeth Cleveland.

Very little has been heard of Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, the first mistress of the white house under the Cleveland administration, who was an interested spectator of the inauguration eight years ago. Since her retirement from the white house she has spent years that have been very happy ones to her. Two of them she divided up between the north and the south, giving the winters to Florida in her own cozy home. There she met with friends who were greatly attracted toward her and she toward them. They were persons of means, and she has been traveling in Europe with them the last two years. Last summer, while Col. and Mrs. Lamont were driving in Switzerland, they saw a woman walking alone a little in advance of them. To their great astonishment it turned out to be Miss Cleveland, and the meeting was a happy surprise on both sides.

Finger Nail Statistics.

The average person trims off the thirty-second part of an inch from each finger nail a week, or about an inch and a half every year. The average of human life all over the world is 40 years. There are 1,300,000,000 people in the world who, therefore, shed on an average 26,400 miles of finger nail in a generation.

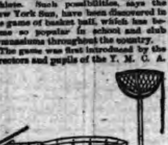
Basket Ball as Played in Y. M. C. A. Gymnasiums.

A Game for Both Sexes—It Is Something Like Football, But Has No Rough Features and Is Full of Fun.

For a long time gymnasium instructors were confronted by the necessity for a game which could be played indoors by old and young, male and female. They wanted a game devoid of rough features, yet one which should be thoroughly scientific, and which should afford plenty of opportunity for good healthy exercise for the scholar or business man, and training for the athlete. Such possibilities, says the New York Sun, have been discovered in the game of basket ball, which has become so popular in school and club gymnasiums throughout the country.

The game was first introduced by the directors and pupils of the Y. M. C. A.



GOALS.

training school at Springfield, Mass. Its advantages were soon perceived, and the sport spread to the gymnasiums controlled by the Young Men's Christian association, and was further introduced in scholastic institutions and club gymnasiums. At the training school the game was developed, and a strong team was drilled in the simple workings of it by James Naismith, one of the Springfield instructors, and an earnest worker in the field of all-around sport and recreation. In New York and Brooklyn are several good teams, and these play the game from time to time.

The game can readily be played in almost the smallest gymnasium. As the sizes of the exercising rooms vary, the game played by each team is slightly different. All the match games are played under regular rules, however, and the peculiar disadvantage which a "gym" may have for the visiting team is remedied so far as possible. The game can be played out of doors on a large field quite as well as in a small gymnasium. The goals pictured in this column are used, the upright one for the field, on which it can be placed at any point, and the other for indoor play. The latter is attached to the gallery or the wall of the room. The string is used to turn the goal so that the ball may readily be regained. These goals are the improved article. The first goals, from which the game got its name, were only peach baskets nailed to the wall or running track.

The game can be played by a number of men at once. In a small gymnasium, however, five a side is the most convenient number. In larger rooms nine men can play on a side. This is considered the regular number, and they are placed as shown in the accompanying illustration. The game itself is strictly one of passing the ball from man to man. It can neither be kicked nor batted with the fist. The object is to get the ball into the basket or goal. A large person is useful, but one of the best players at the Twenty-third street Y. M. C. A. gymnasium is a little chap not much over four feet tall. To get an uncovered position is of the utmost importance, as the player can thus easily get the ball and as easily pass it to one of his side near the goal. It requires a great deal of practice to put the ball in the goal which is placed at some distance above the players' heads. Not alone must a player be skillful, he must also be very lively. A player must throw the ball from the spot where he catches it, but he can turn around to throw it. No interference is allowed, and tackling and pushing are strictly prohibited. A player may only obstruct the passage of the ball after it is thrown.

When the game is played on a field the player may run with the ball if he continually throws it above his head and catches it again. The ball may also be dribbled along the ground with the hand.

Team play counts for everything in basket play. The two forwards and the home man should always work together to get the ball into the goal. The backs guard the goal, and the center men are supposed to get the ball and pass it forward toward the home man.

The game is usually played in two halves of fifteen minutes each, with a slight intermission. When a goal is made the game goes right on. It is perhaps the "fastest" game played to-day, and is played with a snap which football players in lining up may well envy.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.
"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.

It Never Occurred to Him.

A very clever but slightly eccentric painter named Barrett had a fondness for cats. He kept two of them. One was but a kitten at the time when this incident occurred, the other was advanced in years and of considerable size. One afternoon a caller at Barrett's studio noticed two holes in the bottom of the studio door, and he asked the painter what they were for.

"For the cats to go in and out," said Barrett.

"Why do you have two of them?" asked the caller. "Would not one have been sufficient?"

"Why, how absurd!" answered Barrett. "Can't you see that they are needed? How could the big cat pass in and out through the little hole?"

"But," persisted his friend, "why could not the little cat have used the big hole?"

"Bless me!" ejaculated Barrett. "She could; but really, now, it never occurred to me before."—Harper's Young People.

Only One Cause Left.

Consumer—My goodness! Coal up again. What's the cause this time? Another combine?

Dealer—Oh, no, sir, no combine, I assure you.

"Railroad blockade?"

"No. Everything is running."

"No strike?"

"Not that I've heard of."

"Excessive demand, perhaps?"

"No, nothing extra."

"Failure of supply, possibly?"

"Haven't heard of any."

"Humph! If coal has gone up again, there must be some cause. What keeps prices rising now?"

"I really don't know, sir. Guess it must be just habit, that's all."—N. Y. Weekly.

A Slight Misunderstanding.

"Do you ever commit your verses?" asked the managing editor of a poet with a manuscript.

"Oh, yes, indeed; I can recite one of them which—"

"Oh, I beg pardon. I did not mean do you commit them to memory, but do you ever commit them to the flames?"

And he went out with a hunted look in his eyes.—Chicago Mail.

Bound to Beat Her Neighbor.

"Do divorces come high?" inquired the timid little thing of the Chicago legal light.

"Oh, no, ma'am," he replied.

"What did Mrs. Highflyer pay for hers last week?"

"One hundred and fifty dollars."

"Well, you may get me one for two hundred. I'm no slouch."—Judge.

The First Stage.

"So his mother intends to make a pianist of him?"

"Yes."

"Whom has she selected as his teacher?"

"She hasn't got that far yet; at present she is just letting his hair grow."—N. Y. Press.

Where It Would Have Looked Well.

"Gentlemen," said the candidate for office, as he squirted a stream of tobacco juice on the pavement below, "my character is spotless."

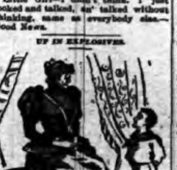
"Then it's a pity," said some one in the crowd, "that you can't wear it for a shirt."—Texas Siftings.

All Alike.

Visitor—And so you went to the church to see the wedding? What did you think of it?

Little Girl—I didn't think. I just looked and talked, an' talked without thinking, same as everybody else.—Good News.

UP IN EXPLOSIVES.



Tommy—Aunt Jane, I should think that you would be afraid to bang your hair.

Aunt Jane (an antique)—Why, dear?

Tommy—Why, you might ignite the powder on your face.

(And Tommy wonders why Aunt Jane doesn't send him a birthday present).—Judge.

Across the Dinner Table.

Fendlesworth—What's the matter, duke? You look put out!

[illegible]

True to Her Calling.

"O, James!" moaned the wife, wringing her hands, as the flames from the burning dwelling rose higher and higher, "isn't it dreadful to stand here and see everything we have in the world going to destruction like this!"

"You are unnecessarily alarmed, Mary Jane," replied her husband. "A careful and conservative estimate at the proper time will undoubtedly show that our loss is merely nominal."

And her husband, local agent for the Neversettle Insurance company, stepped a little further back as the roof fell in, and said he didn't think it was going to be much of a fire.—Chicago Tribune.

Prescribing a Short Rest.

The fair patient had described her symptoms with much volubility and minuteness, but paused a moment for breath.

"Madam," gasped the doctor, "please let me see your tongue. Thanks. Oblige me by holding it in that position while I write a prescription."—Chicago Tribune.

Interesting Information.

Botherby — Have you seen Lord Noodleby's American Notes?

Wipley—No. Anything in 'em?

Botherby—Yes. He's got the statistics Waggles gave him at the club that night about the number of bottles of tooth wash Philadelphians use on their marble door steps every year.—Harper's Bazar.

Cut Off with a Shilling.

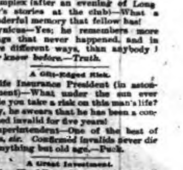
"Young Waitley seems low spirited I wonder what troubles him."

"His uncle is dead."

"But his uncle has been dead several days, and he has seemed cheerful enough until now."

"Yes, but the will was read last night."—Elmira Echoes.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.



The married man who comes home at two o'clock in the morning.—Texas Siftings.

Happened in New York.

Clerk (writing)—And what is your name, sir?

Exile (from Erin)—My name is it, sor?

"Yes, I wish to know your name. What is it?"

"Sure, an' can't yez find it in the directory?"—Texas Siftings.

A Marvel.

Simplex (after an evening of Longbow's stories at the club)—What a wonderful memory that fellow has!

Cynicus—Yes; he remembers more things that never happened, and in more different ways, than anybody I ever knew before.—Truth.

A Gilt-Edged Risk.

Life Insurance President (in astonishment)—What under the sun ever made you take a risk on this man's life? Why, he swears that he has been a confirmed invalid for five years!

Superintendent—One of the best of risks, sir. Confirmed invalids never die of anything but old age.—Puck.

A Great Investment.

Miss Wouldbee—It seems to me all you typewriter men charge awful prices for your machines.

Dealer—There is more in one of those machines than you imagine. We sold one a week ago to a girl not half as pretty as you, and she's got a diamond ring on now.—Judge.

She Never Scolds.

Watts—Does your wife ever scold when you have been out late at night with the boys?

Potts—O, no, she never says a word. She just gets up the next morning about four o'clock and practices on the piano, and I daren't say a word.—Indianapolis Journal.

Overcome.

"It was awfully sad, your servant blowing out the gas in her room," said the caller. "Were you not dreadfully upset?"

WASHINGTON PARK.

Its Delights and Advantages as a Place of Choice Homes.

Washington Park is situated in the center of the borough of North Plainfield, and occupies an area of nearly one square mile. The Park lies adjacent to the city of Plainfield, from which it is approached by three prominent avenues, Grove street, Washington avenue, and Giraud avenue, and is about 10 minutes' walk from the main station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Plainfield.

Washington Park is pre-eminently the garden-spot of Plainfield, of commanding location, with macadamized roads, stone sidewalks and delightful drives. It is convenient to churches and schools, has pure water, and an excellent system of lighting and drainage; all these make it in every way a most desirable place of residence, where one can enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of the city with the health and pleasures of the country.

There are situated within the area of Washington Park some of the most beautiful homes and costliest residences in the borough, and the residences are occupied by some of the best families, the heads of which are business men of New York and Brooklyn.

The flourishing Park club, with its handsome club-house and delightful grounds, has its home within the borders of Washington Park, and the favored members of this prosperous organization delight in the excellent facilities afforded all the members of the family to indulge in wholesome sport and social intercourse. The club's tennis courts, bowling alleys, billiard room, and spacious reception rooms, will compare favorably with those of any country club.

Washington Park should be seen to be appreciated, and is well worth a visit by anyone seeking a home, and special attention is called to the building sites now offered for sale. These are as desirably situated as any that have been sold in the Park, and can be bought on very easy terms. For further particulars call on or address L. E. BARKALEW,

FEAST AT THE CAMP-FIRE.

Justice Nash Recruited, and a Host of Comrades and Guests Entertained.

The members of James A. Garfield Post, No. 4, of the Grand Army of the Republic, from Newark, were the guests Tuesday night of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city. After the secret meeting and initiation of Justice Nash as a recruit, the comrades spent a pleasant half hour in the meeting room and remarks were made by the various officers of the two posts.

The company then adjourned to sit about the camp-fire and satisfy the inner man. But their camp-fire last night was not in the wilderness as it was 30 years ago, nor were the comrades' ears strained to hear the shots of the enemy in the distance. In place of the tin cups of coffee and small allowance of bacon of war times, there was a generous board laden with all the good things one could imagine, and the comrades appreciated the difference.

After the repast had been discussed for some time, and all were satisfied, Commander Morris, of Newark thanked the Plainfield post in a most graceful speech; and especially did he compliment the ladies of Relief Corps, No. 10, on the excellent repast they had provided. James M. Atwood, of Trenton, then spoke and said "If I remember correctly Artemus Ward once said 'The dog always wags his tail; the tail never wags the dog'; I think in our case the tail most certainly does wag the dog, as our auxiliary league does seem to run the post and we could not do much without them". Mr. Atwood sat down amid great applause.

Music was then played by the fife and drum corps, and the comrades listened for a time to the martial strains they knew so well. The company broke up about half-past eleven, having passed a most enjoyable evening.

FORCED AT A GUN'S MUZZLE.

Mr. Moore, of Westfield Retreats at Mrs. Francisco's Command.

A masterly retreat probably saved the life of Robert P. Moore, a prominent resident of Westfield, Monday night. Moore resides in a pretty cottage on North avenue. His next door neighbor is J. F. Francisco. Moore has a son about 15 years old, who frequently calls at the Francisco cottage. Moore, sr., is opposed to these visits.

Monday night Moore was exercised because his son was not at home. He was sure that the lad was at the Francisco residence. He called at the house and was told by Mrs. Francisco that the lad was not there. Moore insisted that his boy was within the portals of the Francisco house, and he demanded that he be sent home forthwith. Mrs. Francisco reiterated her statement that the boy was not in her house.

Moore then proceeded to kick the door down. He entered the house and there found Mr. Francisco. A battle resulted, in which Francisco was badly used.

Mrs. Francisco seized a loaded gun that was kept in the house, and threatened to shoot Moore if he did not leave. Moore begged her not to shoot, and he courteously withdrew, with "his face toward the enemy".

Moore then sought justice of the peace Collins and demanded a search warrant so that he could get his boy. Justice Collins went to the Francisco house and was convinced that Moore, jr., was not there. A search in the village found the lad playing billiards.

But the end is not yet, for the Franciscos threaten the vengeance of the law upon Moore for trespass.

An Appeal of the Relief Association.

It has been a hard winter, as everybody knows, even for those having comfortable homes. How much harder has it been for the poor.

The friends of the Plainfield Relief association have realized the situation and have up to this time contributed generously. But the association's funds are now exhausted, while a few persons are still needing help and will need it until more settled weather. Anyone willing to aid in the work of this charity may send contributions to the treasurer,

MRS. H. P. REYNOLDS,
71 Washington avenue,
April 26. North Plainfield.

Poor Kind of Economy.

Augustus Utsinger thought to save the expense of carting his cesspool contents away, and spread the offensive stuff on a manure heap in his yard. The borough health inspector had chief marshal Fangborn arrest him, and magistrate Crosby fined him $10 and costs. Then he had to pay for carting the stuff away.

CLEMENCY FOR WALLACE.

His Counselor and His Mother's Presence Plead Successfully for Mercy.

John J. Cook, the Scotch Plains stone crusher whose buildings were burned to ashes early Wednesday morning, incurring a loss of several thousand dollars, had his face blistered by the flames.

Lawrence Wallace, who was arrested on suspicion of being the incendiary, while at the fire was drunk; and, though a member of the local fire department, he is alleged to have refused to work himself, and interfered with the other firemen.

He took the hose away from one of the men, and his conduct induced some of the villagers to make complaint against him. Constable Hand arrested Wallace, taking him before Justice Nash as stated yesterday.

On the way to the justice's office Wallace resisted the constable and threatened his life. He demanded a hearing, and Justice Nash held him under $100 bail for an examination of the charges, which was set for this morning.

The foreman of the company of which Wallace is a member took the badge off him after his arrest, and he will be formally dismissed from the department.

Since January first there have been six incendiary fires in Scotch Plains, and thousands of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed.

Wednesday Wallace had his hearing before justice Nash. His counsel, Craig A. Marsh, and his mother's presence, pleaded so eloquently for him that the court let him off with a fine of $5 and some very wholesome advice. The only charge pressed was that of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Constable Hand forgivingly declined to press the demand for a peace warrant. All evidence held against Wallace for alleged incendiarism is to be presented to the grand jury.

Wallace's mother has given bonds for $1,000 on the previous charges of incendiarism. This is the limit of her capability the county refusing to accept bail for any further amount on the property she owns. She has staked all she possesses, and spent all her ready cash, in her son's defense.

Everything You Want to Know, Is There.

F. M. Hulett has taken the local agency for a most valuable volume which should be in every home. It is entitled "Everybody's Law Book", and states very clearly one's legal rights and legal remedies, besides giving all needful business forms and much valuable information. It contains a clear description of American law, its sources, principles and maxims, the national and State courts and their jurisdiction, also actions, proceedings and defences. It is a complete guide to the law affecting persons, property and business transactions for men of affairs, students, married women and others, and is adapted to every State in the Union. It contains full instructions for preparing contracts, deeds, mortgages, leases and wills; also for searching titles, organizing corporations, securing patents, copyrights, playrights, pensions, homestead rights and mining claims, as well as the registration of trade marks. Separate chapters are devoted to commercial travelers, stock and grain brokers, promoters and promoters' agreements; hotels, farm, horse, theater and newspaper law, advertisements and advertising agencies; the law of ships, custom-house regulations, importation of goods, postal laws, taxes, etc.; to which is added summaries of State statutes, a collection of forms, a miscellany of useful information, and a dictionary of legal terms and phrases. The author is J. Alexander Koones, LL. B., member of the New York bar. The book will be found most useful to men in every walk of life, merchants, mechanics and professional men. Call at Hulett's and examine a copy.

Plainfield's Fame Abroad.

(From the Jersey Homes.)

There are few handsomer sub-metropolitan cities than Plainfield. Its growth has been very rapid for the last year or two and arises from two causes—the legitimate spreading out of its industries and the no less legitimate influx of New Yorkers who have discovered its beauties of air and scenery, the advantages it possesses in social and educational lines and what is fully as important, the fact that the business portion of New York may be reached as quickly and far more agreeably over the splendid tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey as from "up town" in New York over the elevated railroad. To such considerable proportions has the "New York population" of Plainfield grown that the Central railroad has put on an elaborate club train service, of which Jersey Homes will have more to say at some future time. A notable feature of the growth of the city has been the erection of handsome residences—residences which will bear favorable comparison with those of any other suburban section. Within the past few months a very fine system of electric railways has been introduced. They are double tracked through a large part of the city, and plans have been made for the extension of the line to North Plainfield. A franchise has been duly granted and the work of carting the rails has been begun, though there is likely to be some delay because of an injunction that has been sued out. In the matter of street improvements, electric lighting, etc., Plainfield is not behind, and the business portion of the city is improving to a degree fully commensurate with the improvements in the residence portion.

Bishop Vincent's Endorsement.

(Contributed by the Local Superintendent of W. C. T. U. Press Work.)

Bishop John H. Vincent, than whom none is better known in religious and literary circles, has the following to say of our far-reaching organization and its leader in a recent letter:

"I am a hearty believer in the W. C. T. U. I do not indorse every move it has made nor everything said by all its representatives, but there are spots on the sun. Possibly where I differ from some of the leaders of the W. C. T. U., they are right and I am wrong. As for work as a whole accomplished by the Union, it is beyond praise. I believe in it and advocate it. As for its president, Miss Willard, I regard her as the best illustration of the famous thirteenth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians I ever knew. I am a total abstainer and a prohibitionist, and have been both for years."

We are glad to publish the above from this noted leader and Christian worker, because honest praise from such a source has its attendant inspiration.—The Union Signal.

GATHERED IN HOLY CROSS.

Episcopalians of New Jersey Hold Their Annual Meeting in Plainfield.

The Women's Auxiliary Society of the Diocese of New Jersey held their annual meeting in the Church of the Holy Cross Wednesday. Delegates from all parts of the diocese were present, about two hundred in number. The celebration of the Holy Communion took place at 10:30 a. m. Bishop Scarborough was present, assisted by the rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, and the Rev. E. M. Rodman of Grace P. E. church, and Dr. Langford, secretary of the board of missions. The Rev Mr. Murphy made an address of welcome.

Addresses were made by the Bishop, Dr. Langford and the Rev. Mr Potts, missionary to China. Mr. Potts' remarks were very interesting. He gave a description of the manners and customs of the Chinese. Luncheon was served in the beautiful and spacious rooms of the parish building adjoining the church. The parish of Grace church and the Holy Cross provided for the entertainment of the guests. After luncheon the delegates re-assembled in the church and elected officers for the ensuing year and transacted other business pertaining to the society. The meeting was an exceedingly pleasant one, and a complete success in every way.

A JOYOUS SURPRISE.

The Good Women of the German Church Handsomely Treat Their Beloved Pastor.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the German Reformed church, Thursday night was a very pleasant one. Everything was well arranged, and in spite of the doubtful weather a good many friends had turned out and the room was well filled.

The programme consisted of music furnished by Messrs W. Chamberlin and F. Bach, recitations by John Carney, and a dialogue by Miss Zeiss, Miss Mohl and Miss Boisterle, all of which were excellently performed. After the performance refreshments were served.

Without doubt everybody enjoyed it greatly, but most of all the Rev. F. Koechli, the pastor, notwithstanding a headache with which he was troubled the whole evening. For during the evening Mrs. Schiereth handed to him a package in the name of the Ladies' Aid society, the members and friends of the church, which contained a present of $55. He had been puzzled about the nature and purpose of this entertainment, and was kept in the dark all the time till the mystery was solved by this real and happy surprise.

BLUE LAWS IN ELIZABETH.

Mayor Rankin Orders that Candy and Cigar Stores Be Closed Sunday.

Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, has issued an order that hereafter Sundays all candy and cigar stores shall be kept closed. He has not a word to say about the saloons, which, with few exceptions, are open Sundays.

This is a revival of the old crusade which the Republican mayor began a long time ago against the candy and cigar stores and barber shops when he had the senatorial bee in his bonnet. It is hinted that next fall he may have another one.

PLAINFIELDERS TAKE STOCK IN IT.

Mr. Howard and His Son-in-Law Have $114,000 in a Big Electric Light Company.

Articles of incorporation of a new electric light company were filed at the office of county clerk Gerber in Elizabeth, Tuesday. The company's capital is $1,000,000, all of the stock being taken. Senator Fred. C. Marsh has $10,000 worth of stock; G. Harry Squires, of Plainfield, $50,000, and Louis E. Howard, of Plainfield, $64,000. The name of the company is the Royal Arc Electric company of the United States of America, and its objects are to carry on a general electrical machinery and electric business, and make and sell apparatus for producing and transmitting electric light.

North Plainfield Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of real estate in North Plainfield have been recently recorded:

Joseph H. T. Martin to Louisa Hunt Martin, $1.

William H. Gilchrist to Ruthetta Drake, $150.

Administrator of John H. Sebring, deceased, to John H. Sebring, $1,800.

John H. Sebring to Edward H. Sebring, $645.

Heirs of Mary L. Crawford, deceased, to John D. Kinch, $2,800.

William G. Brett to Nellie P. Lyman, $2,800.

TOWNSEND'S GRANITE WORKS.

Springer Wins.

For the third time within a month, the suit of a Pennsylvania landlord against W. H. Springer the star shoe man, for alleged violation of a lease, was tried in Plainfield Thursday. On each of the two previous trials the jury stood 11 to 1 for "no cause for action". To-day the entire 12 were of that opinion, after two minutes' deliberation. Judge William A. Coddington successfully conducted the case for Springer. Counselor Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff filed notice of appeal.

The Decorations Were of Spring's Fair Blooms.

A flower social was held Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard, 27 North avenue, for the benefit of the Emmanuel Baptist church. There was a large gathering, and all greatly enjoyed the games, singing and other entertainment. The affair was a complete success, socially and financially. A nice sum was realized.

He's Doing Good Work.

Street Commissioner Gavin of the borough has started in at the right spot, that is the scraping of Somerset street. It was in a horrible condition. THE PRESS would advise him to look after all the streets that have been macadamized. Park place, between Grove and Duer streets, is becoming very rutty and needs a little crushed stone.

Thanks the Firemen.

John G. Cook wishes to express through THE PRESS his thanks to the Fanwood fire department for the able and efficient work done at his place at Tuesday night's fire; also to his neighbors and friends for valuable assistance.

HYMENEAL.

Sullivan-Connors.

At 6 Thursday night a pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's church, the bride being Miss Sadie E. Connors and the groom William Sullivan. The bridesmaid was Miss Maggie Dowd and the best man John Sullivan, brother of the groom. The Rev. Father Smyth officiated.

The bride looked charming in a dress of cora-colored bengaline henrietta cloth, with hat and slippers to match.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents on West Third street, at which a large number of relatives and friends from Brooklyn, New York, Elizabeth, Boston, Bound Brook and Plainfield were present.

Many handsome and useful gifts were received, among them being a very valuable one from the bride's father.

A bountiful wedding supper was partaken of, after which all present were pleasantly entertained with choice selections by the Eclipse quartette and others.

The groom is a prominent saloon-keeper of West Third street.

About 3 a. m., the various friends prepared to depart for their homes, all wishing the happy couple a prosperous journey through life.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan will reside on West Third street.

HYMEN ON BOTH SIDES OF THE STREET.

The Rev. Mr. Schenck Made Four People Happy Last Evening.

At the home of the bride's parents, 204 West Front street, Wednesday, Franklin P. Storr and Miss Frances Schomp, both of this city, were married by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck. The occasion was a most auspicious one and the congratulations of all present were hearty and sincere. Mr. and Mrs. Storr have gone to Williamsport for a wedding trip.

The same evening, just across the street at 203, the home of the bride's mother, by the same clergyman, Miss Minnie Rickert was married to Dr. Alfred Percy Roberts, at one time a prominent dentist of this city and now one of Elizabeth's prosperous professional men. They are spending a few days' honeymoon in Washington, and will reside in Elizabeth on their return.

Miss Sadie Fisher and Charles Hunter were also married last evening, as told in Wednesday's PRESS. The happy groom left to-day on a honeymoon trip but whether he took the bride or not, he did not say.

An Honored Dunellen Vestryman Dead.

H. P. Bradley passed away the first of last week, says the Dunellen Call. His funeral took place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon at 3, the Rev. A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church, reading the Episcopal burial service in the absence of the Episcopal rector, the Rev. A. S. Phelps, who had not received the word in time to be present. Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

Mr. Bradley was born in the State of Connecticut seventy-eight years ago. At the beginning of his business career he removed to Bennington, Vt., where for over forty years he carried on the jewelry business. Early in the eighties he lost his first wife and shortly after he sold out his business and property, removing to this place, where he has since resided in a home of his own, having married again.

Mr. Bradley was a man of sterling worth, standing high in the communities where he made his home. He was a member of the Episcopal church, having been for over thirty years a vestryman. He was frequently called upon to represent his church in the higher judicatories of the Episcopal denomination. Three times he was a delegate to the Episcopal convention which met in Vermont.

Beautiful Girls Help Entertain.

One of the best groups ever seen at the Eden Musee, 22 West Twenty-third street, New York, has just been placed on exhibition. It represents President Cleveland, Mrs. Cleveland and Baby Ruth. The famous National Baby is sitting in her cradle with her father and mother fondly gazing at her. The high-class Vaudeville entertainment given in the concert hall of afternoon and evening of the Musee has been enriched by the addition of Delpracto, an extraordinarily skillful illusionist from Paris. His illusions are extremely pretty and mystifying, and an additional interest is lent to his performance by his assistants, two very pretty girls, called Sarah and Harrietta. Guibal and Miss Greville, whose hypnotic seance has become the talk of the town during their nine months' engagement, have been re-engaged for another period of two months. The rest of the Vaudeville bill includes the Barrison Sisters, Ando and Omne, and Lottie Mortimer, the serpentine dancer. Danko Gabor's Gypsy Band plays at the performances from 2 to 5 and from 8 to 11 p. m.

Popular Abroad as Well as at Home.

The son of manager Schermerhorn of the Plainfield Western Union office is spoken of as follows by the Austin (Texas) Daily Statesman, of Friday, April 21:

"HE SOUGHT ANOTHER HOME.

"C. H. Schermerhorn, who came to Austin some months ago with the proprietors of the Austin Sewerage company, and who has since been the engineer in charge of the work, left last night for Newberne, N. C., where he will at once begin to put in a system of water works. Since his arrival in Austin he has made many warm friends who, while they regret his departure, wish him the greatest success in his new home."

Traced to Plainfield.

F. S. Taylor, of Elizabeth, was in town Friday tracing a Warwick bicycle stolen from him a few days ago. At F. L. C. Martin's he learned that such a wheel (number the same, so far as Mr. Martin remembers) was offered for sale there only one hour before. The youth who claimed to own it could produce no receipt for it, and Mr. Martin declined to buy. Mr. Taylor made a tour of the other bicycle dealers in search of his wheel.

His Mother's Pleading Saved Him.

One day last week a Dunellen boy was caught robbing the till at Taylor's Hotel. His mother promised to make good the losses and he was allowed to go unpunished. The boy's mother offered Mr. Taylor a certain portion of the amount on the following day which was refused as the family are poor and the mother a hard working colored woman. Mr. Taylor thinks he has been systematically robbed of amounts which will aggregate to nearly $100.

All Is Excitement Among the Natives.

The Weekly Call of Dunellen says: "Will Kitchen, of Plainfield, was in town Sunday. One of our belles saw him."

HOW IT' DIDN'T OCCUR.

Here Are Shining Examples of What Papers Not to Read.

As was to be expected, there was but one paper in Plainfield Thursday that told the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, about the great Naval Review. The readers of the News and Courier were once more gulled with a lot of stuff evidently written from imagination in the local offices and palmed off as facts by telegraph despite the postponement of the Review until 1 p. m., and its occurrence then precisely as told in these columns exclusively. Here's how the Review did n't take place:

[From The News.]

HOW THE DAY BEGAN.

At sunrise this morning there was more banging of cannons and more martial music which woke the echoes that the Palisades always keep in stock and sent them bounding over into the city. That was the beginning of the big naval review. From sunrise on until sunset there was to be a continual burning of powder and no one seemed disposed to be economical of noise or ammunition.

The city soon began to take on a holiday appearance.

Broadway and the avenues had been decked out in bunting the night before, and the morning breeze snapped out flags of all nations from a hundred thousand flagstaffs. From the big stores on Sixth avenue especially bunting was thrown lavishly to the breeze.

The first official act of the day was when the Dolphin steamed down the river and took up her position off the foot of West Twenty-third street. She went there to receive the reviewing party.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, President Cleveland and his party, having finished breakfast at the Victoria hotel, got into carriages and were driven down to the river. There were the members of the cabinet, the justices of the supreme court and the committee having this part of the programme in charge. It was quite a procession which wheeled out of Broadway toward the wharf off which the Dolphin, with Secretary Herbert on board, was lying.

ON BOARD THE DOLPHIN.

The moment that the president reached the deck of the Dolphin the big blue flag with the spread eagle on it was run up to the masthead, and the officers on the warships farther up the river knew that the review was soon to commence.

The official notification came, however, when a single gun boomed out from the Dolphin just as she tripped her anchor. This signal was repeated by the Miantonomah. Then came the one eventful moment of the day. The big review was about to begin.

(From The Courier.)

NEW YORK, April 27—The marine monsters presented a beautiful sight this morning as they lay at anchor in two columns extending from Thirty-fourth street up the North river, the foreign ships on the New York side. The sight was still more beautiful when, at eight o'clock, the squadrons simultaneously dressed ship and hoisted colors.

At precisely 10:30 the president and members of his cabinet were received on board the Dolphin off Twenty-third street, North river. The Dolphin then, followed by the coast survey steamer Blake and the steamer Monmouth, proceeded up the river between the columns of the United States and foreign men-of-war. The Blake carried the members of the diplomatic corps, and the Monmouth the judges of the supreme court, senators and representatives of the United States and governors of States, accompanied by one staff officer.

The cheers of the multitude assembled on the docks, on the buildings along West street and on boats of all descriptions that lined the river were re-echoed again and again as the Dolphin, the Blake and the Monmouth proceeded up the river between the two columns of gayly-decked warships. When the Dolphin's bow was opposite each ship's stern there was a "present arms", four flourishes (or ruffles), officers and crew saluted, and the band played the national air. At the last flourish there was a salute of twenty-one guns.

It was THE PRESS which told the facts, in part as follows:

According to the programme President Cleveland and his Cabinet were to embark on the despatch boat Dolphin at West Twenty-third street at 10:30, but a few minutes before that hour word was received that in consequence of the rain the review would be postponed until 1 o'clock.

Although this order was not supposed to interfere in any way with the general plan except by way of delay, nevertheless it caused no little upsetting of official and private arrangements, besides causing hundreds of officials, committeemen, and others to waste nearly three hours, was the means of inconveniencing many thousands of persons who were already afloat and were not made aware of the cause of delay until some time after it was known to those more immediately concerned.

Table Talk.

"Red Letter" by name and nature, in appearance and in contents—such is Table Talk admitted to be by all who have tested its value, and the May issue, just out, is no exception to the rule. It is full of hints and helps to experienced and inexperienced progressive housewives, and contains an almost inexhaustible stock of information to tempt the appetite, in the way of recipes and menus, including dishes fit to "set before the king". To young housekeepers the article on "Food in season" will be of much value and to those who delight in entertaining their friends the "Decorative Meal" in the "New Bill of Fare" will be unusually attractive, for from an artistic standpoint, it is a gem. The women who yet struggle along, bearing the burdens of culinary worriments and enigmas, without the aid of this magazine, are indeed to be pitied, so much could they lighten their cares simply by sending the subscription price of $1 to Table Talk Publishing company, 1113 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

They Can All Tell Time Now.

Miss Lena Maier, of Dunellen, was the recipient of a handsome present from her mother Wednesday, the occasion being her 18th birthday. The rest of the family had all received handsome gold watches, some at the age of 21, and one by legacy; and as Lena was the only one who did not possess a gold watch, her mother wished to present it to her before anything might happen to prevent. The watch presented is a very handsome one and an excellent timekeeper. The cases are of a beautiful design of gold and enamel and are heavily set with diamonds.—Dunellen Call.

Editor Lewris Illuminated by North Plainfield's Genial Ex-Councilman

[From The Dunellen Call.]

The office of the Call has been fitted out with a set of electric lights—one for each of the desks. Plenty of light of a certain kind thereby is assured the editor and his associate. The wiring of the office was done under the direction of the careful and skillful electrician, Wm. J. Hamilton, jr., and the connection to the supply was made by men in the employ of the North Plainfield Electric Light company, under the direction of our genial friend Mr. Sebring. The lighting of the Call office together with the new coat of paint which has been given to the building in which it is located, makes it to have a very cheerful appearance.

Fatal Hurt by an Oyster Shell.

James H. McCollum, of Bernardsville, cut his finger recently while opening an oyster. A piece of the shell gashed the flesh. The wound grew rapidly worse and blood poisoning set in. His hand and arm are now fearfully swollen, and his physician has little hope of his recovery.

THEIR IDEALS TRAVESTIED.

American Artists the Butt of a Plainfield Girl's Students.

The annual exhibition of the Society of American Fakirs opened with great distinction Friday. The pictures were hung in one of the rooms of the Art Students' League in New York, of which Miss Virginia F. Randolph of this city is corresponding secretary and member of the board of control. A member of the Society of American Artists said the Society of American Fakirs ought to be hung under the pictures, but he was feeling peevish over the way his elaborate picture had been caricatured. The S. A. F., which is composed of members of the league, busies itself once a year, during the exhibition of the American artists, to show the public how that exhibition might have been improved if the artists had known the first rules of art. These students know all the rules of art. Among the students and exhibitors is Ray Huntsman of this city.

The Committee on Selection consisted —so, at least, the catalogue said—of J. Carrots Buckwheat, Willie MacDuff Kase, Johnny Alderman Weary, Harriet Sidney Mulberries, Gaudy Saint August, Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Brush, Johnny Twacht, and Frank Vincy de Monk. The artists say that these are burlesques upon their names. The students deny this and say the names are straight.

Yesterday morning the students ate sandwiches, drank beer, lighted pipes, and waited for the spectators to come. Presently two young women students of the league came in and saw the pictures for the first time. They burst into laughter.

"Here you are", cried one of the exhibitors. "Step up and see the great 'Fireflies' picture at work. It only works once an hour, and when it does you want to see it".

This young man stood behind a box, on the front of which was painted a burlesque of one of the notable pictures of the artists' exhibition. The picture, that is the burlesque, represented a farm-house, with a fence on one side and shrubbery on the other. On the fence stood two cats, with humped backs, ready for war. At one of the windows of the farm-house stood a young couple whose lips were glued together. The scene was in the dead of night and every thing was shrouded in darkness. The young man lit a candle inside the box and a host of fireflies appeared in the shrubbery. Then a pendulum began to work, cutting off the light as it passed before the little holes in the picture and making the fireflies twinkle. At the same time the young man in the window raised his head and brought it down again, and one of the cats raised its paw. This was repeated several times, and then the candle was extinguished and darkness set in again. By this time a dozen people had come into the room.

Two of the exhibits will probably get prizes. One of them represents a Madonna holding two children by the hands. In the original picture by Mr. Abbott Thayer the Madonna is a saintly looking woman, and the children are of angelic appearance. In this picture the trio are coming to the footlights to do a song and dance. The coloring is fine, particularly in the wooden leg of the child.

The other represents a Venetian scene of the school of F. Hopkinson Smith. A barber shop pole is prominent, sticking in the Grand Canal. Mr. Smith, as everybody knows, writes as well as paints. The students therefore honored his picture with a bit of verse, which ran:

For these charming bits of Venice,
Which were made upon the spot,
I must charge two hundred dollars,
For the paper cost a lot.

A well-known artist who is honest about the source of his inspiration has signed some of his pictures "K. C., after photo". The fakirs have a picture "of K. C." after one of those photographs that come in cigarette packages. "K. C." is running at full speed.

A charming bit of color work, representing a Chinaman hung upon a cherry tree, is called "Ta-ra-ra Bum-de-aye". This Chinaman, the fakirs say, is a better cherry blossom than any that adorns the original painting.

There are also pictures by A. Mugg, Bunyon Socks, and many others. The exhibition closed Saturday, with an auction sale. There was a band, just as the real artists have at their exhibition only this is a great fake orchestra. Mr. Huntsman played the bass drum.

DROWNED WHILE FISHING.

Harry Baldwin Forced to Let His Brother Die to Save Himself.

Charles W. Baldwin, 19 years old, and Fred D. Volkmar, 20 years old, were drowned about 10 Thursday morning just below the dam in the Raritan river, a mile from Bound Brook. The two young men, in company with Harry Baldwin, Charles's younger brother, 16 years old, were fishing in a small boat just above the dam. They wanted to make a landing on top of the dam. Harry Baldwin leaped out with the boat's painter in his hand. He gained the dam, but as the river was high he was unable to hold the boat and its heavy load. The painter was jerked from his hand and the skiff and its occupants went whirling over the dam, which is from 12 to 15 feet high. When young Baldwin saw his brother and Volkmar in the water he threw off his coat and leaped from the top of the dam after them. They both caught hold of him and prevented his saving them. After struggling for a time he was compelled to break his brother's hold on his throat and save himself. The others then sank and rose no more. Harry was rescued by Charles Fisher, son of the lock man. In the afternoon Volkmar's body was found a few feet from the dam. It was removed to B. B. Field's house, where county physician Reed viewed it and gave a burial permit. The body of Baldwin was not found although a large party of searchers have gone over the ground. All of the young men could swim, and it seems strange that they should have been unable to help themselves. The only solution is that they struck a rock and were stunned, although the fact of their catching hold of Harry seems to contradict that.

—The bad condition of Race street, in North Plainfield, has frequently been mentioned. The street in its present condition is a disgrace, and should be fixed. It is almost impassable at present, and the property-owners along the line from Somerset street east are loud in their denunciation of the state of affairs.

—The placing of a board walk over the area-way that has so long taken up considerable of the sidewalk space alongside the City Hotel is a decided improvement, and one for which the public should be grateful. It is hoped that it but precedes flagging or iron grating. The rickety iron fence that served as a partial protection against falls into the area-way has been positively dangerous.

PROFIT SHARING.

From a journal devoted to the interests of labor we extract the following:

"A successful profit sharing experiment has been tried by T. S. Simms & Co., brush and broom makers, of St. John, N. B. The usual method was employed. From the earnings of the business was deducted interest on capital, salaries of managers, allowance for depreciation of plant and for a sinking fund to offset bad debts, and 1 per cent. for an invalid or pension fund for the benefit of disabled employees. The remainder of the earnings is divided between capital and labor in the proportion which the wages paid during the year and the capital employed bear to each other. The men received a dividend of about 2 per cent. of their wages, and would have had more, save for the unusually heavy losses of the firm from delinquent debtors. The contract has been renewed on the same terms for another year. Both employers and men express satisfaction with the workings of the plan. The employers are reported to say that the men have more than earned the dividend they received by extra care, faithfulness and devotion to the interests of the firm."

That is the right way to treat employees. It is a just recognition of the mutual relationship between capital and labor.

Twist the question as crooked as you please, the fact will still remain uppermost that wage earners are wealth producers.

But, as a general rule, they are not fair sharers.

If, instead of pressing with iron-hand the working classes down to the lowest possible rate of compensation, in order that sordid gain may unduly thrive, as is the course pursued by monopolistic employers, corporate, combined and individual, a measure of liberal encouragement was extended to those who toil, after the manner above recited, labor troubles would end, capital and enterprise be actually benefited, and above all, the great law of equal and exact justice between man and man be thereby nobly and practically vindicated.

MACHINE POLITICS.

There was a special Congressional election held in Massachusetts last week to fill a vacancy caused by the elevation of Mr. Lodge to the United States Senate.

The District is heavily Republican, usually so by a majority of 2,500.

The result of the special election was the choice of Doctor Everett, Democrat.

What brought about such a strange verdict?

It was popular indignation.

The Republican candidate being one of these unprincipled machine politicians who never hesitate to employ disreputable means to secure desired success, and feeling confident that a party nomination was equivalent to an election, through snap trickery so manipulated the delegate primaries as to become the formal nominee, against the wishes and protests of the better Republican element.

The best laid schemes may go astray.

When election day arrived hundreds of disgusted Republicans refused to support such a man, and either absented themselves from the polls or openly voted for the Democrat, who was known to be clean-handed.

The intriguing politician was defeated and the moral effect is wholesome.

The mode of redress ought to be followed everywhere and by all parties.

It is time to clear the political atmosphere of foul influences and rank odors.

If a party candidate becomes such honestly and honorably acknowledge him.

But, if through fraud or finesse he forces his own nomination, teach him to know that even in politics there is a point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

Political honesty is as much a necessity as any other kind.

MR. JENNINGS'S RIGHTS SUSTAINED.

The Supreme Court Says He Has a Right to Present to It His Case Against the Bishop.

TRENTON, May 1.—The Rev. J. B. Jennings, the Westfield clergyman whose persistent and so far successful fighting against the Bishop and standing committee of the Diocese of New Jersey, has caused so much newspaper comment throughout the country, has scored another victory in the Supreme court. To-day judges VanSyckel and Reed filed their decision on the Bishop's motion to dismiss the writ of certiorari obtained by Jennings last March. The judges refuse to dismiss the writ, and hold that Mr. Jennings has a right to present for the decision of the Supreme court the questions he has raised. Mr Jennings is represented by Craig A. Marsh of Plainfield, and the Bishop, the standing committee and the Westfield church authorities are represented by B. F. H. Shreve of Camden.

It's a Great Order, and the Coat Is Its Mascot.

The editor has been approached on several occasions for information concerning the cause which prolongs the bi-weekly sessions of the Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, to a rather late hour. He cannot answer positively, of course, but he is rather under the impression that the "goat" is in prime condition, causing more or less hilarity as a feature of the evenings. He is influenced in this belief by the increased attendance of members, who seem to realize they have a good thing, and are wise enough to hold fast to it.

SCORING THE COUNCIL.

The City Fathers Didn't Return This to Its Authors, as They Did Mt. Olive's Letter.

The council last Monday night listened to the reading of the following memorial from the Plainfield pastors, and ordered it filed by the clerk:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

WHEREAS, The common council of the city of Plainfield has refused to grant licenses to applicants who desired to open new saloons in our city this year;

Therefore, We desire to express our grateful approval of such action to your honorable body; and we earnestly petition that you will maintain this position in regard to the application of Mr. Lee now pending before you, and will refuse to grant such license. But

WHEREAS, The common council, regardless of petition and protest, has legalized a saloon within one hundred feet of the door of the Mt. Olive Baptist church in this city, and

WHEREAS, In connection with the licensing of the Elkwood saloon two years ago it was made manifest that the public sentiment of this city considers a drinking place so near either a church or a school, a nuisance.

Therefore, We feel compelled to place on record our deep regret at this disregard of the petitioners and this seeming affront to one of our sister churches.

$50,000 FOR HIS HEALTH.

Ex-Freeholder Pierson Demands that Amount of the Railroad Company.

Wednesday a struck jury was drawn at Elizabeth for an important suit for damages against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. The suit is brought by ex-freeholder James T. Pierson, of Westfield, who last spring was crippled for life in a railroad collision at Rockaway, on the High Bridge branch of the Central railroad, and who claims $50,000 damages from the company for his injuries. Mr. Pierson has lost the entire use of his lower limbs, and his physicians say he will never walk again. His general health has so suffered from the shock that it is doubtful, they say, if he will live more than a year or two. He was a passenger on the car that was run into and smashed to pieces, and it was little short of a miracle that he was not killed outright. His lawyers demanded that the case should be tried by a struck jury, and Judge Van Syckel granted their request.

A GREAT GAME, SATURDAY.

Plainfield Crescents to Meet Their Strongest Adversary.

The Star Athletics of Newark, that open the base-ball season in Plainfield against the Crescents, Saturday, have al*ways been the strongest team that visits* this city. The last three games they played here resulted as follows:

A NEGRO GIANT'S MANIA.

John Nelson Fancies Himself a Millionaire, and Is Going to the Asylum.

John Nelson, colored, the good-natured Westfield giant whom everybody knows and respects, and who has a number of sons in this city, including "Gamey" Nelson, the base-ball krank, has become hopelessly insane, and will be taken to the asylum Friday.

Mr. Nelson imagines himself a millionaire, and thinks he has bought out Dr. Ripley. He told carpenters to tear down Dr. Ripley's house and put him up a fine stone mansion in its place.

Three for the Indian, and Three for the Negro.

A debate to take place in the Y. M. C. A. rooms has been arranged for Thursday evening. The subject will be:

Resolved, That the Indian has suffered more at the hands of the white man in America than has the Negro.

For the affirmative—Oscar Campbell, Norman Probasco and Arthur Crane will argue; and for the negative—Charles Fernald, Clarence Smith and Clinton Crane.

The admission will be free.

It's Doing a Noble Work.

The Pond Tool Works Beneficial association has elected the following officers:

President—James D. Anderson.
Vice-President—Alfred H. Leivers.
Secretary—R. Gow.
Trustee—M. Strumberg.
Relief Committee—C. F. Hanson, Robert Skinner, Arthur Wyckoff, James Marston.

There was some contention over the election of a president, the vote being 13 to 9 in favor of Mr. Anderson.

During the past four months, about $300 has been paid out in benefits by this society.

THE LAST THE BEST.

An Enthusiastic Audience Enjoys the Final Melopeia.

The third and last of the private concerts of the Melopeia society was given Tuesday night at the Casino. The program was long and varied, and the soloists were particularly pleasing. They were Miss Carlotta Maconda, soprano, and Dr. Carl E. Dufft, basso cantante. The society was also assisted by the Diller quartette of French horns. The Casino was crowded as usual, and the audience much more enthusiastic than they generally are. The first number was by the club, and was vociferously encored, the enthusiasm of the audience keeping up until the end of the concert. A great improvement was noticed in the chorus work of the club, and they sang with much more delicacy and taste than usual. The first number on the programme was the "Song of the Tritons", by Molloy, which was well sung and received an encore. The selection by the Diller quartette was not all that could be desired. Four French horns make a good deal of noise, and the Casino is rather small for such instruments. Mr. Dufft's baritone solos were charming. He sang first "'Mid the Flowers I Wander", by Von Hammond, and for an encore gave one of Plunkett Greene's Irish songs. For his second number he sang two songs of Rubinstein's, and was encored. Miss Maconda delighted the audience with her pure soprano voice and excellent method. For her first number she sang an aria and variations by Proch. For her second she sang "Marriage de Jeannette" by Masse, and for an encore gave a Slumber Song. The Song of Thanksgiving by Cowen was the best thing given by the club. It was done in a most excellent manner, and was applauded enthusiastically. The double quartette of men's voices were also excellent, four of the singers coming from New York. Taken altogether, this was the most satisfactory of all the concerts the Melopeia has ever given, and they look forward to another successful season next year under Mr. Chapman's able leadership.

A NEW C. E. SOCIETY.

Miss Spangenberg Will Give Its Inspiration.

The executive committee of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church held a very interesting conference Tuesday at the home of the president, Robert Lowe, Duer street.

Those present were Irving Brady, chairman of the devotional committee; John McLaughlin, chairman of the invitation and reception committee; W. G. Dobbins, chairman of the social committee; and Clarence S. Johnson, secretary and treasurer.

Miss Ida Yerkes, of the visitation committee and Norman Probasco of the lookout committee were absent.

Methods were discussed in regard to advancement in the league's work. The reports from the chairman showed the work of the committees to be in good condition.

It was also decided to take active steps towards the foundation of a Christian Endeavor society, and an invitation will be extended to Miss Alice Spangenberg of Netherwood to address a meeting of the league to be held Friday, May 26, on Christian Endeavor work and organization, with the idea of forming a society.

It was decided to hold the monthly social May 9.

WESTFIELD LIGHTS UP.

She Gets Electric Street Lamps for Less Money Than Plainfield Pays—Don't Ride Without Lantern and Bell.

The Westfield township committee held a long and important meeting Monday evening. A letter from J. L. Henry was read in which he agreed to act on the citizens' water committee, and a petition signed by W. G. Peckham and his neighbors was read, asking that more road money be expended in their part of the town. The petition was put on file.

J. H. Vail appeared before the committee and argued in favor of electric street lighting, presenting specifications from the Suburban Electric Light company, and a map showing suggested location of lights for lighting the town.

On motion of Mr. Wells it was resolved to take seventy-five fifteen-candle power lights, at $14 each per year, according to the specifications offered, and continue using fifty of the oil lamps now in use. The superintendency of the road work for the coming year was allotted. Gardiner and Conant take the same districts that they had last year, and Wells takes Clark's.

The clerk was ordered to post notices calling attention to the existing ordinances concerning riding bicycles without lights after dark, and riding bicycles on the sidewalks, declaring it to be their intention to have the ordinances enforced. After approving several bills the committee adjourned to next Friday, the twelfth.

HOW TO SAVE LIFE.

Plainfield Physicians to Inform Everyone What To Do Until the Doctor Comes.

A course of four emergency lectures under this heading is to be given in the Irving school-house, corner of Fourth street and Monroe avenue, by Drs. W. H. Murray and E. W. Hedges, Tuesday evenings, May 9 and 16, and Thursday evenings, May 11 and 18, at 7:30.

The object of these lectures is to tell in plain language, and to show by sim*ple illustration, what to do until the* doctor comes; for the relief of those who have been hurt or wounded.

The subjects are as follows:

The human body, the use and care of its various parts.

What to do in case of wounds. How to stop the flow of blood, etc.

What to do in case of apparent drowning, or suffocation, burns, scalds, frozen limbs, bites of animals, etc.

What to do for those who have been stunned; the apoplectic, inebriated or fainting, and in cases of poisoning.

Especially valuable will these lectures be to the workmen of the local machine shops.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Herring.

The death occurred early yesterday morning at the home of her son Walter, 55 Cornelia street, Brooklyn, of Mrs. Sarah Herring, wife of the late Walter Herring. The funeral services will be held at her late home to-night, and her remains brought to this city to-morrow morning on the train leaving New York at 10, and interred beside those of her husband, in the North Plainfield cemetery.

The deceased was a resident of Plainfield for many years and has quite a large circle of friends here. She was a patient sufferer, and never a murmur passed her lips at the dispensation of her Heavenly Father, in whom she had been trusting for many years. Five children survive her, who are all comforted in their grief by the fact that she is "Not dead, but sleepeth".

—The two big feed bins in the Metropolitan stables on North avenue are being torn out to make more room for horses and carriages. Frank Day is the capable manager of the establishment.

NO RIOT.

But Marshal Pangborn Does Some Hustling, and Preserves the Borough Peace.

The report on the streets this morning was that a small riot had occurred among the street railway Italians in the borough Tuesday night; that in the darkness (the street lamps being out) the marshal wasn't able to cope with the belligerents; and that the citizens had to be called out to suppress the row. Investigation revealed the absurdity of all this. Marshal Pangborn says the Italians are all a peaceable lot, and that Plainfield citizens give him more trouble. He himself, unaided, arrested all of the prisoners captured last night. There were five, and four of them were Plainfielders. Seven men had been concerned in a drunken row on Somerset street. Four of these were caught, and the others are in hiding. Thomas Roddy seems to have precipitated the fight. He Ly in ambush and cut a man's head open with a buckle at the end of a strap. He was fined $3 and costs by justice Crosley this morning. The other culprits arrested were: John Larry, fined $3 without costs; John Welch, $3 and costs; John James, $3 without costs. "John Doe", helplessly drunk, was also arrested and fined $2.

A Pleasant Evening.

The junior department of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school held its annual entertainment Tuesday night in Vincent chapel.

It has been the custom of giving, in addition to the annual excursion, an entertainment to the several departments in the Sunday-school.

The programme consisted of music, an address by the Rev. C. R. Barnes, pastor of the church, and an illustrated lecture by Mr. Taft, with views of the old country. The Misses Carroll sang and Raymond McGee played the cornet. Refreshments were then served abundance. There was a good-sized audience present that thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment provided.

Send Good Books to the County Prisoners.

At the meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid association, held in Elizabeth last Monday evening, the committee on jails and almshouses reported that some shelves had been purchased and put up in the county jail at Elizabeth to hold such books as might be contributed for the prisoners to read. The secretary was instructed to ask each member of the branch to give one work of real merit suitable for this purpose. Contributions from outside friends, especially in the departments of travel and biography, will also be gladly received. They should be addressed to Mrs. Nelson Trimble, 31 Rahway avenue, Elizabeth.

Preserved Sea-Weed Takes a Fresh Start.

Uncle Isaac Brown, of Broadway, this city, tells the following story which came under his own observation. It proves what hermetical sealing will do. In the year 1839, his sister, Sarah F. Brown, returned from India, where she had been a missionary for two years. In crossing the Gulf of Mexico, she got a sailor to secure her some floating weed. This she placed in a jar and sealed the cork on top with wax. Forty-nine years later Uncle John opened the jar, and the weed continued to grow in size and color as though it was but of a day's age.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD—All work, plowing and planting, delayed on account of cold weather and excessive rain; grass looking well; wheat and rye in good condition; a good outlook for all kinds of fruit; peas, radishes and beets up, but slow of growth. F. C. JOHNSON.

A Popular Preacher on the Wheel.

"A great apostle of energy"—says the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham—"is the bicycle—the preacher's aid to actions" It stimulates and rewards his own physical exertions, to his higher help and happiness, and helps him preach of spiritual energy to others, in the impressive bicycle lesson. If you do not keep up your action you will not go ahead; and more, you are sure to fall."

Issued the Permit Later.

*It is a novelty, and not exactly in con*formity to the board of health ordinance, to ship a body out of town without the regular burial permit. Yet a body went to a place in Vermont, a few days ago, which was neither way-billed nor given permit. The body was put on the train before it was way-billed, and went through all right. The way-bill and death certificate arrived later by mail.

A Notable Gathering.

Plainfield will be favored June 6, with the convention of the young people's societies of the M. E. churches in the Elizabeth district of the Newark Conference. Three sessions will be held, forenoon, afternoon and evening. The Rev. Edwin A. Schell of Chicago, general secretary of the Epworth League, will be present through the day and deliver the principal address.

Free Wheeling Lessons.

The Plainfield Lady Cyclists have begun to give free lessons on the wheel. They have provided a competent teacher, and a mechanical "tutor" by which falls are rendered impossible. The "tutor" may be seen at F. L. C. Martin's, where all information may be obtained. The lessons may be had in the Boys' Club hall, or on the road, as preferred.

He'll Stop His Fast Driving.

Two of the city's finest, captain Grant and policeman Lynch, called on a German, whose only known name is "Albert", in a West Front street bakery, and threatened him with arrest unless he used more caution driving through the streets. He promised to do better and was let off.

That Celebrated Case.

(From The Journal Messenger.)

A Philadelphian sued a Plainfield man for rent, and the case was tried before a Plainfield justice and a jury, last week. After the evidence had been heard, the justice overruled the defense—declared, in fact, that there was no defense—and ordered the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff. It took that jury just 10 minutes to return with a verdict of no cause of action. Plainfielders always were clannish, and it takes a good man to beat one of them on his own dunghill.

The Musical Journal for May.

Lauter's Musical Journal for May has just arrived, and contains the following choice selections of vocal and instrumental music: "Queen of My Heart", by Alfred Cellier; "Katie Connor", by John S. Baker; "Ferryman John", by Paul Rodney; "Flowers of St. Petersburg", by Johann Resch; "Fond Heart Must Part", by Gustav Lang; Op. 237. The Journal may be had free on application by mail or in person to the piano and organ warerooms of S. D. Lauter Co., 657 and 659 Broad street, Newark.

She's Still Laid Up With Her Eye.

The case of the city of Plainfield against James Treacy for beating his wife was heard in judge Coddington's office yesterday afternoon. Several witnesses were examined, but the most important of all, Mrs. Treacy, was unable to be present, as she was confined to bed with a black eye. Evidence was secured with difficulty as Barney the son did not want to testify. The case was postponed until Saturday morning, when Mrs. Treacy [illegible]

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work; and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY

CHAPTER LIV.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation and government of boroughs," approved April Second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

Whereas, Boroughs incorporated under the above-mentioned act are empowered by said act to provide for the sewerage and drainage of such borough, but said act does not sufficiently set forth and define a manner of procedure for the exercise of the power so conferred by said act; now, therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a petition in writing of any owner or owners of property interested shall be presented to the council of any borough asking for the construction of a sewer or sewers, drain or drains in such borough, the council of such borough may pass a resolution declaring its intention to cause such sewer or sewers, drain or drains, to be constructed, and the said council shall cause public notice of such intention to be given by publishing the said notice of intention in a newspaper printed in the county for the space of two weeks, at least once in each week, briefly describing the character and location of the proposed work, and requesting such persons as may object thereto to present objections in writing to the clerk of the borough at or before the expiration of ten days from the date of such notice of intention, and if persons owning or representing more than one-half of the lineal feet of the land in front of which said proposed sewer or sewers, drain or drains, is or are to be constructed shall so present their objections in writing, then such proceedings shall cease; but otherwise, and after the expiration of said ten days, it shall be lawful for said council to pass an ordinance for the construction of such sewer or sewers, drain or drains, or such part or parts thereof covered by the notice of intention, as the council may deem advisable, and said ordinance so passed and approved by the mayor shall be published for the space of two weeks, at least once in each week, in a newspaper printed in the county in which said borough lies.

2. And be it enacted, That the council shall have power to treat with the owner or owners of any lands across which any proposed sewer or drain is to be constructed for the purchase of the land necessary for the construction of said sewer or drain, or for the right to construct such sewer or drain across said land, and the price paid for such land or paid for the right of way across said lands necessary for the construction of the sewer or drain shall form a part of the whole cost and expenses of said sewer or drain; and if the council cannot agree with the owner or owners as to the price to be paid, the council shall have the right to apply to the courts for the appointment of commissioners to condemn said land or right of way, and the proceedings in such case shall be those usually provided for by law in proceedings for condemnation.

3. And be it enacted, That after the passage of the ordinance and its approval by the mayor, the council shall advertise for bids for constructing the work and upon the basis of the bids received shall cause a preliminary assessment of the entire estimated cost of the work to be made upon the property fronting on said work covered by the ordinance, and when said preliminary assessment has been approved by the council, each property owner so assessed shall be notified by the clerk of the borough and be requested to make an advance payment to the treasurer of the borough of the whole or any part of the amount assessed against said property owner on the above preliminary assessment, and said property owner shall receive from the treasurer a certificate or receipt of the amount so paid in as an advance payment on his sewer assessment, and when fifty-five per centum of the entire cost of the work is thus paid to the treasurer of the borough the council may award the contract and order the mayor to execute the same, and the work may proceed, and if fifty-five per centum of the entire cost be not received by the treasurer of the borough before the expiration of sixty days after the approval by the council of the preliminary assessment, the council shall rescind the ordinance, and the treasurer shall forthwith return to the several property owners the amounts respectively paid in, and all expenses for engineering, advertising and all other incidental expenses properly chargeable to the proposed work shall in that case be borne by the borough at large and included in the tax levy.

4. And be it enacted, That if upon the completion of the work the treasurer has not sufficient money on hand from the advance payments made by the property owners interested to pay the entire cost and expenses of the work, or during the progress of the work to pay for any current estimate, he shall report the amount of the deficiency to the council; and it shall then be lawful for the borough to borrow the money necessary therefor, temporarily, upon promissory notes of the borough, or the borough may issue temporary improvement certificates, and said notes or certificates shall bear a rate of interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, and shall not be issued for a term exceeding three years.

5. And be it enacted, That upon completion of the entire work authorized by the ordinance, and its acceptance by the council, the council shall appoint three commissioners who shall be disinterested freeholders, not owning or interested in any lands along the line of the improvement, residing in the county in which such borough lies, to revise the preliminary assessment on the basis of the whole cost and expenses of the work duly ascertained (said whole cost and expense of the work to include the expense of engineering, superintendence and assessment, and all other incidental expenses properly chargeable to the work), and the council shall have power to fill any vacancy in the office of the commissioner occurring from any cause, and said commissioners shall take and subscribe before some person duly authorized to administer the same, an oath or affirmation that they will make such assessment required of them fairly, impartially and legally, according to their best skill and understanding, which oath or affirmation shall be attached to the report that they are hereinafter required to make; and said commissioners having thus qualified, shall proceed to revise said preliminary assessment on the basis of the whole cost and expenses of the work duly ascertained, assessing upon the various plots and parcels of land and real estate which they deem benefited by the construction of said sewer or drain amounts proportionate to the benefits that have actually accrued to the various plots and parcels of land and real estate by reason of the construction of said sewer or drain, and in case the whole cost and expense of such work shall exceed the amount of the benefits so assessed upon the land and real estate, then the excess thereof shall be assessed upon and be paid by the borough at large, and be raised by general tax, and before signing the report of the assessment so made, the commissioners shall give public notice of the time and place when and where they will meet for the purpose of giving all persons interested in the same an opportunity to examine said assessment, and hearing any objections to the same that may be made, which notice is to be published in a newspaper printed in the county in which such borough lies for the space of two weeks, at least once in each week, and after such meeting the commissioners, having given due consideration to all objections that may be made, may amend the assessment in any manner they may deem just and equitable, and then shall proceed to complete such report of assessment by signing the same and transmitting such report of assessment to the council, together with a map showing the various lots and parcels of land so assessed, and the names of the owners of the various lots and parcels of land as far as they can be ascertained, with the amounts assessed against the same, and no error or omission in stating the name or names of the owner or owners of such lands shall invalidate the assessment; and the council shall then ratify the assessment so made without delay, and the same shall be final and conclusive as well upon the borough as upon the owners of land affected thereby; and such assessment shall be and remain a first lien upon the lands so assessed to the same extent as taxes and assessments are now a lien under the general laws of this State, and shall bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum; and the council shall immediately give public notice that such assessment has been ratified.

6. And be it enacted, That no certiorari shall be allowed by any court to review any of the proceedings in relation to such work, nor to affect in any way any assessments made by such commissioners, after the lapse of thirty days from the ratification of the council of the borough of such assessments; and such writ of certiorari shall not be allowed unless the party applying for the same shall enter into bond to such borough in the sum of two hundred dollars, with good and sufficient sureties, conditioned that such applicant shall prosecute the said certiorari; and shall pay to the said borough the cost and charges incurred by said borough necessary under the proceedings of the certiorari, with interest, if the assessment shall stand; and said bond to be approved by the court to which the application is made.

7. And be it enacted, That after the ratification of the said assessment, the treasurer of the borough shall credit upon each lot or parcel of land and real estate assessed the amount of the advance payment that may have been made by the owner thereof, under section three of this act, and the balance remaining unpaid upon the assessment shall then be collected as hereinafter provided; and if the owner of land has paid to the treasurer on his advance payment an amount greater than the amount of the assessment against his property, as shown upon such ratified assessment, then the difference shall be refunded to said owner by the treasurer of the borough.

8. And be it enacted, That if any assessment upon any plot or parcel of land remains unpaid after the expiration of two years from the ratification of the assessment, then the collector of the borough shall proceed to enforce the collection thereof as now required of township collectors in this State; provided, however, that when any lands shall be sold against which an unpaid assessment for benefits for construction of a sewer has been returned, the same shall be sold free and clear of all incumbrances, and the title thereto shall become an absolute title in fee simple to any purchaser after the expiration of two years from the date of the certificate of such sale, issued by the collector of said borough, in the same manner that certificates of sale are now issued where lands are sold to raise and pay taxes assessed and levied under the general laws of this state, and all proceedings under this act to sell lands to pay such assessments shall be carried on in the same manner and subject to the same rules observed and provided in this state for making the general taxes a first lien upon real estate and providing for the sale of the same, except as herein otherwise provided.

9. And be it enacted, That the council of any borough, in which part of the costs and expenses for building any sewer or sewers, drains or drains has been assessed upon the borough at large, shall have the power to order the assessor of the borough to include the whole amount so assessed upon the borough in the tax levy next following the ratification of the assessment; or such council can, in its discretion, order the amount so assessed against the borough to be assessed and collected in not more than three yearly tax levies next following the ratification of the assessments.

10. And be it enacted, That if any borough which is incorporated under the act to which this act is a supplement shall have already begun proceedings for the purpose of constructing sewers or drains, as they are empowered by said act to do, all such proceedings shall have as full legal effect as if they had been taken after the passage of this act; provided, they have been taken in a manner set forth in this act, and they are hereby confirmed.

11. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LV.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing municipalities governed by commissioners to pave and improve streets and avenues and provide for the payment thereof," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of said act be, and the same hereby is, amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the governing body of any municipality, by whatever name the same may be known, and however created, governed by commissioners, shall be desirous of causing any street or streets, avenue or avenues, or portions thereof, lying within the limits of such municipality to be paved, macadamized or otherwise improved, it shall be lawful for such body, after the consent of a majority of the owners of real estate on the street or streets to be improved has been obtained in favor of such improvements by a majority vote of all the members thereof, at any regular meeting thereof, to call an election of such voters of such municipality, by a resolution of such body, stating the time of holding such election; that the object is to obtain the consent of voters to the paving, macadamizing or improving of a street or streets, avenue or avenues which shall be named in the resolution or some portion thereof (which shall be described in the resolution) and to the assessment and collection of a portion of the cost of such improvement upon all the property adjoining and abutting on such improvement, and also the amount of money proposed to be expended for such improvement; and if it is proposed to issue the bonds mentioned in section eighteen of the act hereby amended, said resolution shall also state that it is proposed to issue bonds of said municipality, pledging the faith, credit and property thereof, for the payment, with interest, by the said municipality of the proportion (not exceeding three-fifths) of the cost of such improvement not assessed upon the property fronting thereon.

2. And be it enacted, That any and all contracts executed by any such municipality for paving, macadamizing or otherwise improving streets or avenues or parts of them are hereby legalized and confirmed, notwithstanding any informality in the proceedings.

3. And be it enacted, That no suit or proceedings in any court of record shall be defeated or affected by this amendment.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1893.

CHAPTER LVI.

An Act to release the title and interest of the state of New Jersey in and to certain real estate of which William Brown (colored) died seized, in the town of Mount Holly.

Whereas, one William Brown (colored) late of the town of Mount Holly, Burlington county, New Jersey, departed this life in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty, seized of a certain lot of land at Mount Holly, which was conveyed to him by Joseph Estill and wife by deed recorded in the clerk's office at Mount Holly, in book Z four of deeds, page five hundred and sixty-one, without having made any will and leaving no wife, children or other known kindred; and that prior to his death he gave to one Sarah E. Tilghyman (colored) the said lot of land, without making any deed of conveyance for the same to her, however, but by passing over to her, with the possession of said lot of land, the original deed which he had received from Joseph Estill, supposing that that made a complete transfer of the title to her; and that the said Sarah E. Tilghyman departed this life on the twenty-seventh day of March, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, without having made any will, but leaving her surviving as her heirs-at-law Henry Tilghyman, her son, and Ella Summer, her granddaughter; and that undisputed possession of the said premises since the death of said William Brown has been had by the said Sarah E. Tilghyman in her lifetime, and since her death by the said Henry Tilghyman and Ella Summer; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all the estate, right, title and interest of the people of the state of New Jersey in, to and upon all the above recited lot or tract of land whereof the said William Brown died seized, with the appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining, is hereby released unto and vested in the said Henry Tilghyman and Ellen Summer, the heirs-at-law of the said Sarah E. Tilghyman, and their heirs and assigns forever.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Passed March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LVII.

A further supplement to an act entitled "An act relative to sales of lands under a public statute or by virtue of any judicial proceedings," approved March twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the twelfth section of the act entitled "An act relative to sales of lands under a public statute or by virtue of any judicial proceedings," approved March twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, be and the same are hereby amended so as to read as follows:

12. And be it enacted, That if any master in chancery or the sheriff of any county who hath made or shall make sale of any lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate by virtue of an execution against the same shall abscond or depart from the State or be disqualified by law or shall die or have died or in any way become incapable of making a deed or conveyance for the same, it shall be lawful for the court out of which the said execution issued, upon satisfactory proof that such sale has been fairly and legally made, to appoint another master in chancery or the then sheriff of the county, who shall have full power on tender of the purchase money, or if the purchase money or any part of it has been paid, then on proof of such payment and on tender of the residue if any there be, to sign, seal and deliver to the said purchaser or his legal representative a deed or conveyance of the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate so sold, which deed shall be as good and valid and have the same force and effect as if the master or sheriff who made such sale had signed, sealed, and delivered a deed or conveyance for the same in due form of law, and the moneys received on such conveyance shall be paid to the person entitled thereto by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LVIII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the preservation of clams and oysters," approved April fourteenth, anno domini one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in order to better carry out and enforce the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement, and the acts supplementary thereto, it shall be lawful for the directors of any association of oystermen duly incorporated under the laws of this state to appoint special officers, not exceeding three in number, who shall be citizens of this state, and who shall be and hereby are empowered at all times while holding the office or position of such special officer, upon their own view, to arrest any person or persons who may be found violating or infringing any of the provisions of the act to which this act is a supplement or of any of the acts supplementary thereto, and to bring him or them before a magistrate for examination.

2. And be it enacted, That such special officers shall be paid for their services under this act by the association appointing them and not otherwise.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LIX.

An Act extending the time for completion of certain railroads.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the time limited for the completion of any railroad authorized to be constructed within this state under any special or general act has expired or shall expire before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, such time shall be and the same is hereby extended for a further period of two years from the passage of this act; provided, however, that this act shall not apply unless money has actually been expended in surveys or location of route, or in acquisition of right of way or in construction since January first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; provided, further, that this act shall not apply to any corporation unless such corporation shall first, and as a condition precedent to the exercise of any power granted by this act, file in the office of the secretary of state an agreement, to be approved by the governor and attorney general, waiving all right of exemption from taxation, and from privileges and advantages arising from any law or contract, if any there be, establishing any special mode of taxation of any such corporation, and the further agreement to be bound by any general law of this state now in existence or that may be hereafter passed, taxing such corporations as are now authorized to be taxed by the legislature of the state under any general law, and further agreeing that the exercise of any power granted by this act shall not in any way affect the rights of this state, if any there exist, to take the property of such corporations under any existing law of this state, and agreeing further, that all laws affecting such corporations shall be subject to alteration or repeal by the legislature.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the auditor or other officer appointed by the board of chosen freeholders in any county of this State for the purpose of exercising supervision over the expenditure and receipt of moneys by the collector of said county shall hereafter be appointed, and shall hold his office for the term of three years, or until his successor shall have been elected and shall have qualified, unless he shall have been sooner removed in the manner provided by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXII.

An Act enabling cities to construct connecting pipe lines or mains.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for the municipal board of any city having charge and control of the water works for the supply of the inhabitants thereof, whenever in its judgment it shall be expedient so to do, to cause to be constructed an additional suitable cast-iron pipe line or main to connect any reservoir or water supply of such city located outside of the limits of such city, with any distributing reservoir within such city, or with the supply pipes or mains at any point within such city; provided, such pipe line shall be constructed by contract, after public bidding therefor in the manner prescribed in the laws now governing such city.

2. And be it enacted, That in order to supply the funds required for such construction, it shall be the duty of the board having charge and control of the finances of such city, upon the request of the board having charge and control of the water supply therein, to issue the water bonds of the city to the amount so required, which bonds shall be sold at public sale for not less than par and accrued interest.

3. And be it enacted, That the bonds to be issued under the provisions of this act shall be payable in not more than thirty years from the date thereof; they shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, and be in such sums as said financial board shall determine; they shall be executed under the corporate seal of such city, and the signature of the mayor, comptroller or other financial officer, and may be either registered or coupon bonds, as said financial board may direct; said financial board may, from time to time, at the request of the holders thereof, exchange coupon bonds for registered bonds, provided, however, that the total cost of such works and the bonds to be issued therefor shall not exceed in any city a sum equal to four dollars for each inhabitant thereof, as ascertained by the latest census, taken by the state or federal authorities, as the case may be.

4. And be it enacted, That in order to redeem said bonds at maturity, there shall be established in such city a sinking fund, into which it shall be the duty of said water board to pay annually, in the month of July in each year, out of the income derived from such water supply, a sum equal to two per centum of the bonds issued under the provisions of this act, which sinking fund shall be under the charge and control of the sinking fund commissioners of such city, by whatsoever name they may be called.

5. And be it enacted, That the interest on said bonds shall be paid semi-annually, out of the collections for water rents in such city.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXIII.

An Act concerning the compensation of the city collector of any city of the first-class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the compensation of the city collector of any city of the first-class in this state shall be fixed at such sum not exceeding five thousand dollars as the board of finance or board having control or custody of the finances of any such city shall determine.

2. And be it enacted, That any deficiency in appropriation necessary to comply with the provisions of this act shall be provided by the board of finance or board having control and custody of the finances of any such city as aforesaid, who are hereby authorized to borrow the necessary amount and to pledge the faith of the city for payment thereof to be met by an appropriation in the tax levy next succeeding, and annually thereafter an appropriation shall be inserted in the tax levy sufficient to cover said expenditure.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXIV.

A supplement to an act entitled "An act authorizing the inhabitants of townships to purchase or erect a building for township purposes," approved March 1st, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any township in this state in which the inhabitants thereof have authorized or may hereafter authorize the purchase or erection of a building for township purposes, in accordance with the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, it shall be lawful for the township committee or other governing body of such township to purchase a lot and erect thereon a building, or to purchase a lot and building, taking title thereto in the corporate name of the inhabitants of said township; provided, that the total cost of such building, with the lot whereon the same shall stand, shall not exceed one per centum of the assessed valuation of property in such township for the year next preceding the election at which the purchase of such lot and the erection of such building may have been authorized.

2. And be it enacted, That the provisions of this supplement and the powers herein conferred are hereby extended to and conferred on the township committees of the various townships of this state where they have heretofore entered into contracts, or may hereafter enter into contracts, for the purchase of a lot and the erection of a building under the authority of the act to which this is a supplement, or by virtue of authority granted for the erection of a building by the inhabitants of such township at an annual election or town meeting; and all acts done in connection therewith are hereby declared to be legal and valid and binding on such township or townships and the inhabitants thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed in so far as their operation may affect this act.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXV.

An Act to provide for the appointment of a collector of arrears of personal taxes in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for the board having charge and control of the finances and the confirmation of the annual tax levy in any city of the first class in this state to appoint an officer to be known as "the collector of arrears of personal taxes" for such city; each appointment shall be for the term of three years from the date thereof, and said said officer shall receive for his services a salary to be fixed by such board, not to exceed the sum of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, payable monthly.

2. And be it enacted, That all warrants and other processes for the collection of personal taxes in such city shall be directed to and executed by such collector, who shall have all the powers in relation thereto now vested by law in any constable of the state of New Jersey

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXVI.

An Act concerning the designation of official newspapers in cities of the first class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the proper municipal authorities of any city of the first class in this state to designate as an official newspaper, in addition to the official newspapers authorized to be designated by the charter of such city, one daily newspaper which shall have been published in such city for a less period than one year.

2. And be it enacted, That should there be no appropriation or fund applicable for the payment of any advertising or publishing done by any such city in such paper so designated as an official newspaper hereunder, that then and in such case the board or other authority having the charge and control of the finances in any such city shall make provision therefor in such manner as they may deem proper, and if money is borrowed for such purpose the amount so borrowed shall be placed in the next tax levy of such city.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXVII.

An act to authorize corporations incorporated under the laws of this State to merge and consolidate their corporate franchises and other property.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any two or more corporations organized or to be organized under any law or laws of this state for the purpose of carrying on any kind of business of the same or a similar nature, may merge or consolidate such corporations into a single corporation, which may be either one of said merging or consolidating corporations, or a new corporation to be formed by means of such merger and consolidation.

2. And be it enacted, That the said consolidation or merger shall be made under the conditions, provisions, restrictions and with the powers hereafter in this act mentioned and contained, that is to say:

I. The directors of the several corporations proposing to merge or consolidate may enter into a joint agreement under the corporate seals of the respective corporations, for the merger or consolidation of said corporations, and prescribing the terms and conditions thereof, the mode of carrying the same into effect, the name of the new corporation (if one shall be so formed or created), or of the consolidated corporation as the case may be; the number, names and place of residence of the first directors and officers of such new or consolidated corporation (who shall hold their offices until their successors shall be chosen or appointed, either according to law, or according to the by-laws of the said corporation); the number of shares of the capital stock, whether common or preferred, and the amount of par value of each share of such new or consolidated corporation; and the manner of converting the capital stock of each of said merging or consolidating corporations into the stock or corporations into the stock or obligations of such new or consolidated corporation, and in case of the creation of a new corporation, how and when the directors and officers shall be chosen or appointed; together with all such other provisions and details as such first mentioned directors shall deem necessary to perfect the merger or consolidation of said corporation.

II. The said agreement shall be submitted to the stockholders of each of said merging or consolidating corporations, separately, at a meeting thereof, to be called for the purpose of taking the same into consideration; and twenty days' notice of the time, place and object of such meeting shall be mailed to the last known postoffice address of each of such stockholders respectively; and, at the said meetings of stockholders the said agreement of such directors shall be considered, and a vote of the stockholders of each corporation by ballot shall be taken separately, for the adoption or rejection of the same, each share of stock entitling the holder thereof to one vote, and said ballots shall be cast in person or by proxy; and if the votes of the holders of two-thirds of all the capital stock of each of the said merging or consolidating corporations shall be for the adoption of said agreement, then that fact shall be certified thereon by the secretary of each of the respective corporations, under the seal thereof, and the agreement, so adopted, and so certified, shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and shall from thence be deemed and taken to be the agreement and act of merger or consolidation of the said corporations, and a copy of said agreement and act of merger or consolidation, duly certified by the secretary of state under the seal thereof, shall be evidence of such new or consolidated corporation.

3. And be it enacted, That upon the making and perfecting the said agreement and act of merger or consolidation, as provided in the preceding section, and filing the same in the office of the secretary of state, as aforesaid, the several corporations, parties thereto, shall be deemed and taken to be one corporation, by the name provided in said agreement (in case a new corporation shall be created thereby), or by the name of the consolidated corporation into which said other contracting corporation or corporations shall be so merged or consolidated, as the case may be, and possessing all the rights, privileges, powers and franchises, as well of a public as of a private nature, and being subject to all the restrictions, disabilities and duties of each of such corporations so merged or consolidated, except as altered by the provisions of this act.

4. And be it enacted, That upon the consummation of said act of merger or consolidation, as aforesaid, all and singular the rights, privileges, powers and franchises of each of said corporations, parties to the same, and all property, real, personal and mixed, and all debts due on whatever account, as well for stock subscriptions as all other things in action or belonging to each of such corporations, shall be deemed and taken without further act or deed to be transferred to and vested in the corporation into which such merger or consolidation shall have been made; and all property rights, privileges, powers and franchises, and all and every other interest shall be thereafter as effectually the property of the said new or consolidated corporation as they were of the several and respective former corporations, parties to said agreement; and the title to any real estate whether by deed or otherwise, under the laws of this state, vested in either of such corporations, shall not be deemed to revert or be in any way impaired by reason of this act; provided, however, that all rights of creditors and all liens upon the property of either of said former corporations shall be preserved unimpaired, and the respective former corporations may be deemed to continue in existence, in order to preserve the same; and all debts, liabilities and duties of either of said former corporations shall thenceforth attach to said new or consolidated corporation, and may be enforced against it to the same extent as if said debts, liabilities and duties had been incurred or contracted by it.

5. And be it enacted, That where the corporation or corporations authorized to merge or consolidate by the first section of this act, shall have the right to exercise any franchise, for public use, then if any stockholder of any corporation hereby authorized to be merged or consolidated with any other or others, not voting in favor of said agreement, shall dissent therefrom and shall refuse or neglect to convert his or her stock into the stock of such new or consolidated corporation, or to dispose thereof in the manner and on the terms specified in such agreement, such dissenting stockholder or such new or consolidated corporation may, at any time within thirty days after the adoption and filing of the said agreement of consolidation by the stockholders as in this act provided, apply by petition to the court of common pleas of the county in which the chief office of the corporation whose stockholders shall so dissent or neglect, was or is located, or to a judge of said court in vacation (if no such court sits within said period), on reasonable notice to be prescribed by said court or judge to said new or consolidated corporation, or to such dissenting stockholder, as the case may be, for the appointment of three disinterested appraisers to appraise the full market value of his or her stock, without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the said merger or consolidation, and whose award (or that of a majority of them), when confirmed by the said court, shall be final and conclusive on all parties, and said new or consolidated corporation shall pay to such stockholder the value of his or her stock as aforesaid; and on receiving such payment, or on a tender of such value, or in case of any legal disability or absence from the state, on the payment of such value into said court, said stockholder shall transfer his or her said stock to the said new or consolidated corporation, to be disposed of by the directors thereof, or to be retained for the benefit of the remaining stockholders thereof; and in case the value of said stock as aforesaid is not so paid or tendered within thirty days from the filing of said award and confirmation by said court, and notice thereof to be given in manner aforesaid, unto said stockholder or said new or consolidated corporation, the amount of the value of said stock, so found and confirmed, shall be a judgment against said corporation and may be collected as other judgments in said court are by law recoverable.

6. And be it enacted, That in all cases of merger or consolidation of two or more corporations under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, the said new or consolidated corporation shall have power and authority to issue bonds or other obligations, negotiable or otherwise, and with or without coupons of interest certificates thereto attached, to an amount sufficient with its capital stock to provide for all the payments it will be required to make or obligations it will be required to assume, in order to effect such merger or consolidation; to secure the payment of which bonds or obligations it shall be lawful to mortgage its corporate franchises, rights, privileges and property, real, personal and mixed; provided such bonds shall not bear a greater rate of interest than six per centum per annum; and that it shall also be lawful for said new or consolidated corporation to purchase, acquire hold and dispose of the stocks of other corporations of this state or elsewhere, and to exercise in respect thereto all the powers of stockholders thereof; and that it shall also be lawful for said new or consolidated corporation to issue capital stock, either common, or preferred or both, to such an amount as may be necessary, to the stockholders of such merging or consolidating corporations in exchange of payment for their original shares, in the manner and on the terms specified in said agreement of merger or consolidation; which agreement may also provide for the issue of preferred stock based on the property or stock of the merging or consolidating corporations conveyed to the new or consolidated corporation, as well as upon money capital paid in and may fix the amount of such preferred stock.

7. And be it enacted, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to any railroad company, insurance company (except companies for the insurance of guaranty of the title to lands or any estates or interests in lands), banking company, savings bank or other corporation intended to derive profit from the loan and use of money, turnpike company or canal company.

8. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

An Act to authorize street railway companies, or companies owning railroads operated as street railways to lease their property and franchises to any other street railway company, or railroad company operated as a street railway, and to authorize the lessees to provide for the financial and other management of the property and franchises so leased.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for any company owning any street railway or railways, or any company owning any railroad operated as a street railway, whether such lessor company or companies are incorporated under any general or special act of this state, to lease their property and franchises to any other street railway company or railroad operated as a street railway created under the laws of this state and such other company or companies are hereby authorized to take such lease for such term or terms, upon such condition or conditions as to the use and operation of the property of the lessor corporation, the enjoyment of privileges of such lessor corporation according to the provisions and restrictions contained in any general act, or in the acts under which said lessor company was incorporated; and the amount of rent to be paid therefor, and the manner of making payment of said rent, and such other conditions limitations and restrictions as said lessor and lessee corporations may agree upon; provided that no greater tolls or charges shall be made or demanded by any lessee corporation than were or are authorized to be charged and collected for the same service by the corporation or corporations, lessor or lessors in said lease.

2. And be it enacted, That any stockholder of any company or companies whose property and franchises shall be leased under the provisions of this act who shall not assent to such lease, or who shall resist or object to the making thereof, may at any time within thirty days after the making of such lease as in this act provided apply by petition to the circuit court of the county in which the chief office of the lessor corporation may be kept, or to a judge of said court in vacation, if no such court sits within such period, on reasonable notice to said company, to appoint three disinterested persons to estimate the damage, if any, done to such stockholder by said proposed lease; and whose award or that of a majority of them, when confirmed by said court, shall be final and conclusive; and the persons so appointed shall appraise said stock of such stockholder at the full market value thereof without regard to any depreciation or appreciation in consequence of the said lease; and the said lessor company may, at its election, either pay to the said stockholder the amount of damages so found and awarded, if any, or the value of the stock so ascertained and determined, and upon the payment of the value of the stock as aforesaid the said stockholder shall transfer the stock so held by him to said lessor company to be disposed of by the directors of said company or to be retained for the benefit of the remaining stockholders; and in case the value of said stock as aforesaid is not so paid within thirty days from the filing of the said award and confirmation by said court, and notice to said lessor company, the damages so found and confirmed shall be a judgment against said company and collected as other judgments in said court are, by law, recoverable.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for any corporation or corporations which shall become lessee of any such railroad or railway, under the provisions of this act, to purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of the shares of the capital stock, securities or other evidences of debt issued or created by any other corporation or corporations organized under the law of this state, and to exercise, while owners of such stock, securities, or other evidences of debt, all the rights, powers and privileges, including the right to vote on such stock, with natural persons, being the owners of such stock, securities or other evidences of debt, might, could or would exercise.

4. And be it enacted, That any corporation, so becoming a lessee corporation under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, may increase its capital stock to such amount as may be determined by its board of directors; provided, that such corporation shall, previous to issuing of any such stock, file in the office of the secretary of state a certificate, signed by its president and under its corporate seal attested by its secretary, setting forth the amount of the proposed increase of capital stock and the number of shares into which the same is to be divided, and also the assent in writing of stockholders owning at at least two-thirds in value of the existing capital stock, to said increase of capital stock.

5. And be it enacted, That any corporation so becoming a lessee corporation under and by virtue of the provisions of this act shall have the right to borrow from time to time such sum or sums of money as may be necessary for the financial and other management of the property, not exceeding at any one time the total amount of authorized capital stock of such lessee corporation, and for the repayment thereof may issue bonds registered or with coupons or interest certificates thereto attached or both, secured by a mortgage or mortgages, covering all the corporate franchises, rights, privileges, assets, real and personal, of such mortgagor corporation, including stock and securities of such corporation or in any other corporation whose stock of securities it owns, which mortgage may be recorded as mortgages of real estate are or hereafter may be by law required to be recorded, in the office of the clerk or register of deeds of the county or counties in which the railway or railways described in said mortgage may be located, and in the office of the clerk or register of deeds of the county in which the principal office of such corporation is situate, and such record or the lodgment of such mortgage in such clerk's or register's office for record shall have the same force, operation and effect as to all judgment creditors, purchasers or mortgagees in good faith, as the record or lodgment for that purpose of mortgages of real estate now have, although such mortgage may not have been executed, proved or recorded as a chattel mortgage.

6. And be it enacted, That no corporation or corporations issuing bonds under the provisions of this act shall plead any statute or statutes against usury in any court of law or equity in any suit instituted to enforce the payment of such bonds or mortgages.

7. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, to the extent of such inconsistency, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXIX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize street railway companies incorporated by or under the laws of this state to merge and consolidate their corporate franchise and other property," approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the said act be amended to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any horse or other street railway company or companies or any company or companies owning or operating a railroad operated as a street railway incorporated by or under the laws of this state, to merge and consolidate its corporate franchises and other property with the corporate franchises and other property of any other horse or other street railway company incorporated by or under the laws of this state, which merger and consolidation may be effected in the same manner provided by the statutes of this state for the merger and consolidation of horse railroad companies.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with or repugnant to this act, to the extent of such inconsistency or repugnancy, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to increase the powers of township committees," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the township committee of the several townships of this state shall hereafter have the following powers, in addition to the powers now vested by law in township committees; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall apply to or affect any street, avenue or highway under the charge or control of any county public road board in this state.

I. To order and cause to be constructed any sewer or drain, whether opened or covered, for the drainage of any street, highway or public place; to order and cause any street, highway or alley already laid out or which may hereafter be laid out, or any part or parts thereof, to be straightened, altered or widened, and to take and appropriate for any such purposes any lands and real estate upon making compensation to the owner or owners thereof by the payment of damages;

II. To order and cause any street, highway or alley, or any part or parts thereof, to be graded, graveled, paved, macadamized or otherwise improved, as to them may seem advisable;

III. To alter the grade of any sidewalks, street or highway, or of any part or parts thereof, and to ascertain and establish the boundaries of all streets, highways and alleys in said township, and to prevent and remove all obstructions and encroachments that may have been or may be made thereon;

IV. To regulate, clean, and keep in repair all sidewalks, streets, highways and alleys in said township; to direct and regulate the planting, rearing, trimming and preserving the shade trees in the same, and to authorize or to prohibit the removal or destruction of said trees; to enforce the removal of snow, ice, or dirt from the sidewalks and gutters of said streets, highways or alleys by the owner or occupant of the premises fronting thereon, and also to prevent and forbid the removal of earth, gravel or any other road making materials from the highways by any person or persons not acting under the authority of the township committee, and also to abate and remove nuisances of every kind in any of the highways or public places of the township;

V. To prevent and punish immoderate driving or riding in any street or highway, driving over or upon any sidewalk, and any cruelty to animals, and to authorize the detaining without warrant, and the arrest of any person who may be guilty thereof;

VI. To lay and regulate, or prohibit the laying of water or gas or sewer pipes in or under the streets and roads or any part thereof, in said township, and to provide street lamps for, and to light the streets either with gas or other material;

VII. To improve the streets, public roads and highways of the township by macadamizing, grading and paving the same, or otherwise, under the direction and control of the township committee, and also for the purpose of improving the sidewalks in said township, under the like direction and control, by curbing the same, or otherwise, and to determine in what manner any street, road or highway, or any part or parts thereof, shall be so improved;

VIII. To regulate or prohibit the erection of signs or awnings over the streets or sidewalks.

2. And be it enacted, That for the enforcement of the foregoing provisions of this act, the township committees of the several townships of this state shall have power to pass, alter and repeal, from time to time, any and all such ordinances as they shall think proper, to carry into effect the powers conferred by any or all the foregoing purposes; and shall have authority to prescribe a penalty or penalties for the violation of any ordinance or ordinances, passed for any purpose under the fifth subdivision above, by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars; and may, in the name of the clerk of the township, prosecute offenders against the said provisions or of the said ordinances, before any justice of the peace elected in the township; and that the book of records of the ordinances of the said township shall be taken and received in all courts or elsewhere, as evidence of the due passage of all the ordinances recorded therein.

3. And be it enacted, That when at any meeting of the township committee any ordinance shall be offered at said meeting by any member of said township committee, for any of the powers conferred on them by the first, second and third subdivisions hereof, such ordinance shall not be passed until the township committee shall have caused notice to be served upon the owners of lots or lands fronting or bordering upon the street affected by such ordinance, if such owners are known; such notice to contain a copy of the proposed ordinance, and stating the time and place when such ordinance will come before said township committee for final passage, which notice shall be served on such owner or owners, if known, at least five days prior to said time, by giving to each of them a copy thereof personally or left at their usual place of abode with a member of the family over the age of fourteen years, at which time and place all persons interested in said ordinance may appear and be heard by themselves, or their counsel, for or against the passage of such ordinance.

4. And be it enacted, That all ordinances that shall hereafter be passed by any township committee shall be engrossed by the township clerk in a book to be provided for that purpose with a proper index, which book shall be deemed a public record of such ordinances, and shall be and remain in the custody of the township clerk, and that every such ordinance hereafter passed shall be signed in the said book of the record of ordinances by the chairman of the township committee and the township clerk.

5. And be it enacted, That every ordinance hereafter passed as aforesaid shall be published one issue in a newspaper printed and circulating in such township, or if none be printed in such township, then in a newspaper printed in the county and circulating in such township, and until such ordinance shall have been so published as aforesaid, the same shall be of no effect.

6. And be it enacted, That the said book of the record of ordinances shall be taken and received in all courts as evidence of said ordinances, and that copies of said ordinances, certified by the township clerk, under the corporate seal of the township, shall likewise be taken and received in all courts as evidence of said ordinances, and that the publication of said ordinances in a newspaper, as herein required, shall, in all cases, be presumed to have been made, until the contrary shall be proved.

7. And be it enacted, That this act be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXI.

An Act approving of the union, consolidation and merger of the New York and New Jersey underground railway company and the New York, New Jersey and Eastern railroad company.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the scheme of union, consolidation and merger of the New York and New Jersey underground railway company and the New York, New Jersey and Eastern railroad company, submitted to the legislature of this state for its consideration (a copy of which is attached hereto and made a part hereof), is hereby approved by this act passed for that purpose.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 8, 1893.

SCHEME OF CONSOLIDATION AND MERGER.

This Indenture made and entered into this day of in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, by and between the directors of the New York, New Jersey and Eastern Railroad Company, and the directors of the New York and New Jersey Underground Railway Company. Witnesseth:

Whereas, The New York, New Jersey and Eastern Railway Company is a corporation organized and existing under and pursuant to the laws of the state of New York to build, maintain and operate a line of railroad from some point in the city of Brooklyn, in the county of Kings, and state of New York, at or near the junction of Flatbush and Atlantic avenues in said city, and running from thence by the most convenient and eligible route under ground to and under the waters of the East river, to and under the city of New York, in the county of New York, and the waters of the Hudson river to some convenient and eligible point in the State of New York at the boundary line between the state of New York and the state of New Jersey under the waters of the Hudson river at some point in said boundary line lying opposite the city of Jersey City, in the State of New Jersey, which two points shall be the termini with a branch or branches running from the boundary line aforesaid to some convenient and eligible point at or near the Battery in said city and county of New York; the said New York, New Jersey and Eastern Railroad Company has authorized capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars, divided into one thousand shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and its line and route has been located, but not yet constructed; and,

Whereas, The New York and New Jersey Underground Railway Company is a corporation organized and existing under and pursuant to the laws of the State of New Jersey for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a railroad for the public use from some convenient and eligible point within or near Jersey City or Hoboken, in the county of Hudson and the state of New Jersey, and to run thence by the most direct and feasible route under the bed of the Hudson river and the bay of New York to a convenient and eligible point in that part of the boundary line between the states of New Jersey and New York lying between said Jersey City or Hoboken, in the said state of New Jersey, and the city of New York; the said New York and New Jersey Underground Railway Company has an authorized capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars, divided into one thousand shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and its line of route has been located but not yet constructed; and

Whereas, The railroads of the said company above named, or the lines and routes of said railroad as adopted form a continuous or connected line of railroad with each other, and do not run on parallel or competing lines, and such line of railroad being less than five miles in length; and

Whereas, The said corporation and the directors thereof have agreed to merge, unite and consolidate their capital stock, franchises, roads and property, forming one company, under the terms, conditions, provisions and restrictions and with the powers mentioned and contained in the laws of the state of New York and the state of New Jersey in such case made and provided;

Now therefore this Agreement Witnesseth:

For and in consideration of the premises and of the sum of one dollar by each of the said companies paid to the other, the said parties hereto have united, merged and consolidated and do hereby unite, merge and consolidate their capital stock, franchises, roads and property, forming one company, and the said directors have prescribed and do hereby prescribe the terms and conditions thereof, and the mode of carrying the same into effect, as follows, that is to say:

First. The name of the new corporation shall be The Brooklyn, New York and Jersey City Terminal Railway Company.

Second. The board of directors of the new corporation shall be composed of nine members, who shall be elected and possess such qualifications as shall be prescribed by law, and in and by the by-laws of the new corporation hereby adopted and such other by-laws as shall be adopted from time to time; the officers of the new corporation shall be a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer and such other subordinate officers as the board of directors may see fit to appoint; the said officers shall be elected at the time and in the manner provided in the by-laws, and perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the by-laws and the resolutions and orders of the board of directors; the following named persons shall be the first directors and officers of the new company, viz:

1. William J. Hohre, New York city, N. Y.;
2. Everett R. Reynolds, New York city, N. Y.;
3. E. B. Gaddis, Newark, N. J.;
4. C. B. Thurston, Jersey City, N. J.;
5. B. M. Shanley, Newark, N. J.;
6. W. A. Patton, Radnor, Pa.;
7. O. J. DeRousse, Philadelphia, Pa.;
8. Arthur E. Sandford, Newark, N. J.;
9. Thomas F. Brice, Newark, N. J.

OFFICERS: RESIDENCES:
C. B. Thurston, President, Jersey City, N. J.;
B. M. Shanley, Vice Pres't, Newark, N. J.;
W. A. Patton, Sec. and Treas., Radnor, Pa.

Which said directors and officers shall hold their respective offices until their successors are elected and qualified in accordance with the by-laws.

Third. The capital stock of the new corporation is hereby fixed and limited at two thousand shares at the par value of one hundred dollars each being the sum of the capital stock of the two constituent corporations amounting to two hundred thousand dollars; provided, however, that the said new corporation shall possess all the powers to increase or diminish its capital stock granted to corporations in and by the statutes in such case made and provided.

Fourth. To the end that the different values of the stock property, road and franchises of the said constituent companies shall be fairly and equitably adjusted, the said two thousand shares of capital stock of the new consolidated company shall be issued and distributed amongst the holders of the stock of the constituent companies share for share, that is to say, holders of stock in either of said constituent companies shall be entitled on surrender of their stock to the new consolidated company, to receive a similar number of shares in the said new company; the shares so surrendered, and all treasury stock unissued in either of the constituent companies shall be forthwith cancelled by the consolidated company.

Fifth. The capital stock of the constituent companies shall become convertible into the capital stock of the new consolidated company, at and immediately upon the adoption of this agreement by the stockholders of the constituent companies, and thereupon the holders of all the said stock shall be entitled to surrender the certificates representing the shares held by them respectively, and to receive therefor the proportion of the new capital stock to which they are entitled under the fourth paragraph of this agreement, and the new consolidated company shall cause such new certificates to be issued upon the presentation and surrender of the certificates representing the said shares in the said constituent company.

Sixth. The meetings for the election of directors shall be held in the office of the company on the second Tuesday in December, 1892, and annually thereafter, until the time for holding such meetings shall be changed by the by-laws and they shall be elected by ballot. Officers shall be elected and chosen by the directors at their first or some subsequent meeting after their election.

Seventh. The board of directors shall have power from time to time to adopt by-laws for the government of the business and the management of the affairs of the consolidated company not inconsistent with law or the provisions hereof, and to add to, alter or amend the same, and until suitable by-laws shall be adopted the present existing by-laws of The New York and New Jersey Underground Railway Company shall, when applicable, be taken and observed as the by-laws of the new consolidated company.

Eighth. This agreemen shall take effect at and immediately upon its adoption by the stockholders of the said constituent companies and the filing hereof in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided, and thereupon the directors and officers herein named shall assume absolute control and direction of the property and franchises of the said constituent corporations, as the property and franchises of the new consolidated company; and as soon as may be after the execution hereof by the directors of the said constituent companies, the said boards of directors shall cause this agreement to be submitted to the stockholders of the said companies in accordance with the provisions of the statutes in such case made and provided.

In witness whereof, the directors of the said corporations have subscribed this joint agreement under the corporate seal of each of the said companies the day and year first above written.

CHAPTER LXXII.

An Act concerning the collection of arrears of taxes in cities of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any city of this state in which the collection of arrears of taxes is now performed by deputy collectors of arrears of taxes, it shall and may be lawful for the receiver of taxes of such city, or other officer who has heretofore appointed the said deputy collectors in said city, to appoint, with the sanction and consent of the finance committee or board of finance of said city, such additional deputy collectors as may from time to time be necessary for the prompt and efficient collection of the arrears of taxes in said city; and said additional deputies shall have the same powers, perform the same duties and be subject to the same requirements as the said deputy collectors of arrears of taxes are now subject to in said city.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for sewage and drainage in incorporated townships in which there is a public water supply, approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever in strict conformity with the provisions of section eight of the act to which this a further supplement, commissioners of assessment so appointed by the circuit court shall determine that the sewage district or drainage area extends so as to include lands lying in adjacent cities, towns or townships, and that the drainage from such cities, towns or townships does or may discharge through the sewer or sewers which may have been constructed under the provisions of the act of which this is a further supplement that the said commissioners shall assess both for direct and prospective benefit all such lands benefitted or to be benefitted within the said entire drainage area, and that said assessments for benefit so assessed shall be a lien upon the lots, plots or parcels of land lying in the said adjacent cities, towns or townships respectively assessed.

2. And be it enacted, That upon the confirmation of the assessment made in conformity with the act to which this is a further supplement the clerk of the township through which the said sewer or sewers have been constructed shall file with each of the clerks of the adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are included in the aforesaid assessment a copy of the report of the said commissioners; that it shall be the duty of each of the collectors in said adjacent cities, towns or townships to enter the said assessments, so far as it applies to his municipality, into a book to be kept in his office for the purpose, and he shall give notice for four weeks in some newspaper circulating in the said municipality that the said assessment report is on file and requiring payment of the several sums assessed against any owner of lands and real estate for such improvement within thirty days from and after the confirmation of said report by the circuit court of the said county; and in case said assessment shall remain unpaid at the expiration of the thirty days from and after the first publication of said notice, the said assessment shall draw interest thereupon from and after that time at a rate of one per centum per month, except the assessments for prospective benefits, which shall be governed as provided for in section two of the supplement of the act of which this is a further supplement, approved March twenty-fifth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one; and the governing bodies of said adjacent cities, towns or townships affected by said assessment shall have the same powers and rights to enforce the payments of said assessments as they have to enforce the collection of taxes or assessments by like payments.

3. And be it enacted, That all moneys collected on account of the aforesaid assessment by the respective adjacent cities, towns or townships shall be kept in a separate fund, which fund shall be applied to reimbursing the town through which the said sewer or sewers may have been constructed for such expenses as said town may have incurred in the carrying out of said improvement; and it shall be the duty of the governing bodies of the said adjacent cities, towns or townships to pay over to the authorities of the aforesaid town, on demand, such sums of money as may have been collected whenever demand is made therefore.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts whether general, public, local or special, inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

An Act to provide for the widening and constructing of roads or streets lying along or adjacent to the boundary lines of municipal corporations.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any incorporated town or township in this state in which there exists a public road or street having a width of thirty (30) feet or less and lying wholly within the corporate boundary of such towns or township, it shall be lawful for the council or other governing body of said town or township, upon the presentation of a petition signed by property owners representing one-third of the total frontage on said road or street, to cause such road or street to be widened and improved, as hereinafter provided for.

2. And be it enacted, That upon the receipt and adoption of the said petition by the council or other governing body of said town or township, it shall be lawful to cause to be made surveys, maps, profiles and grades by a competent civil engineer, sufficient to establish new lines for the widening of said road or street, and upon the adoption of said maps, profiles and grades the said council or other governing body shall pass an ordinance defining the limit of the said improvement, which shall be advertised for two weeks in at least one newspaper circulating in said town or township and also in any adjacent or neighboring municipalities affected by the said improvement.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the circuit court of the county in which any lands or real estate which may be benefited by said improvement are situated, on application in writing made on behalf of said council or other governing body of said town or township, to appoint three disinterested commissioners, who shall make an estimate and assessment of the damages any owner or owners will sustain as well as for the taking of his, her or their lands or real estate with the appurtenances, as for the injury to the owner or owners by reason of the intended improvement; the said commissioners shall be sworn to make just and impartial awards and assessments of the costs, and shall present without delay to the said court a report in writing and accompanied by a map of such award and assessment, which shall be sufficient if signed by the majority of said commissioners; and that the said commissioners in making assessments for benefits for such widening shall take into careful consideration and shall assess all the lands benefited by the said improvement, both in the town or township through which the said road or street may be constructed, and also all lands lying in neighboring or adjacent municipalities; but no assessment shall be made against any land greater than the benefit received from such widening, and that said assessment for benefits so assessed shall be a lien upon the lots or plots or parcels of land lying in the said adjacent cities, towns or townships respectively assessed; that the said circuit court shall direct notice to be given by advertising in some newspaper circulating in said county for at least ten days, stating the time and place at which said court shall proceed to consider said report and any objections that may be made in writing thereto; and shall have power to consider the said report and objections thereto in a summary manner, and to revise and to confirm said report and accompanying map with or without alterations; said report, when confirmed by the court, and duly certified by the county clerk, shall at all times be plenary evidence of the right of the said council or other governing body of said town or township to enter upon, take and use the said land and real estate with the appurtenances for the purpose of such road or street, and said council or other governing body of said town or township first sending to the owner or owners thereof, if resident of this state, the amount so awarded to them, and that if any owner is not a resident of this state or on due inquiry can not be found therein, or is a lunatic or idiot or under age, or is for any other cause incapacitated to receive the amount awarded, or will not receive the same, and sign a proper voucher or receipt therefor when tendered an affidavit shall be made of the facts and filed in the office of the county clerk, and the amount of the award to any such owner shall be deposited in said circuit court before said council or other governing body of said town or township shall have the right to take or use said lands and real estate for the purposes herein stipulated; the court shall settle and determine the compensation to be paid said commissioners and the cost and expenses of the application and report, which shall be paid by the council or other governing body of said town or township on behalf of which the application is made; and in case any commissioner shall die or refuse to act as such, the court shall immediately make appointment of a proper person to fill any vacancy so created.

4. And be it enacted, That upon the confirmation of the assessment as above provided for, the clerk of the town or township through which the said road or street lies, shall file with each of the clerks of the adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are included in the aforesaid assessment a copy of the report of the aforesaid commissioners; that it shall be the duty of each collector in said adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are assessed to enter the said assessment, so far as it applies to his municipality, into a book to be kept in his office for the purpose, and he shall give notice for two weeks in some newspaper circulating in his municipality, that the said assessment report is on file and requiring payment of the several sums assessed against any owner of lands and real estate for such improvement within thirty days from and after the confirmation of said report by the circuit court of the said county, and in case said assessment shall remain unpaid at the expiration of thirty days from and after the first publication of said notice, the said assessment shall draw interest thereupon from and after that time at a rate of one centum per month; and the governing body of said adjacent city, town or township affected by said assessment shall have the same powers and rights to enforce the payments of said assessments as they have to enforce the collection of taxes or assessments by like proceedings.

5. And be it enacted, That all moneys collected on account of the aforesaid assessment by the respective adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are so assessed shall be kept in a separate fund, which shall be applied to reimbursing the town through which the road or street lies for such expenses as said town may have incurred in the carrying out of said improvements; and it shall be the duties of the governing bodies of the said adjacent cities, towns or townships to pay over to the governing bodies of the aforesaid town or townships in which the said road lies, on demand, such sums of money as may have been collected whenever demand is made therefor.

6. And be it enacted, That in order to meet the necessary cost of said widening of such road or street and the proceeds relating thereto as mentioned in this act, the council or other governing body of the town or township through which said road or street lies may borrow the necessary money therefor temporarily upon the promissory notes of said corporation or may issue temporary improvement certificates in such form as said council or other governing body may prescribe; said notes and certificates shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, and shall be payable at the expiration of not more than two years from the date of issue, and all receipts from assessments made against property benefitted as herein above provided shall be paid to the treasurer of said town or township, and shall be applied to the payment of such temporary indebtedness incurred by the said town or township therefor.

7. And be it enacted, That upon the confirmation of the assessment for the widening, as provided for in section three of this act, the said council or other governing body of said town or township may authorize, upon the receipt of a petition signed by property owners representing one-half the frontage on said road or street, asking for the improvement, by ordinance or ordinances passed and adopted by such council or other governing body, the construction of said road or street upon the lines, profiles and grades as described and laid down in the plans adopted as provided for in section two of the act; and shall employ a competent civil engineer to prepare specifications and details, and to supervise and direct such improvement.

8. And be it enacted, That the costs and expenses incurred for making any improvement or performing any work under and by virtue of the provisions of section seven of this act shall be assessed upon the lands and real estate specially benefited, in proportion to the benefits received thereby, but not exceeding the amount of such benefits; when such work is completed, the said common council or other governing body of such town or township shall apply to the circuit court of the county in which such township is situated; and on application, in writing, made by or on behalf of the council of said town or township or other governing body, and after notice of the time and place of making such application, published at least ten days previously in some newspaper circulating in said county, the circuit court shall appoint three disinterested commissioners, who shall make an estimate and assessment of the benefits that any lands and real estate may specially receive by the making of such improvements or public works; and if any of said commissioners die or refuse to act, the said court shall immediately make appointment of a proper person to fill any vacancy so created; the said commissioners shall be sworn to make a just and impartial estimate and assessment, and they shall assess upon the several lots or parcels of land benefited by such improvement a sum in proportion to the benefit received by each of said lots or parcels of lands, and no lot or parcel of land shall be assessed more than it is benefited; and the said commissioners shall, in making the assessment for such improvement, take into careful consideration, and shall assess all lands benefited by the said improvement, both in the town or township through which the said road or street may be constructed, and also all lands lying in neighboring or adjacent municipalities, and that said assessment for benefits so assessed shall be a lien upon the lots or plots or parcels of land lying in the said adjacent cities, towns or townships respectively assessed; that the said circuit court shall direct notice to be given, by advertising in some newspaper circulating in said county for at least ten days, stating the time and place at which said court shall proceed to consider said report and any objections that may be made in writing thereto, and shall have the power to consider the said report and objections thereto in a summary manner, and to revise and to confirm said report and accompanying map, with or without alterations; the court shall settle and determine the compensation to be paid said commissioners, and the cost and expenses of the application and report, which shall be paid by the council or other governing body of said town or township on behalf of which the application is made.

9. And be it enacted, That upon the confirmation of the assessment as above provided for by section eight of this act, the clerk of the town or township through which the said road or street lies shall file with each of the clerks of the adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are included in the aforesaid assessment, a copy of the report of the said commissioners; that it shall be the duty of each of the collectors of said adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are assessed to enter the said assessment, so far as it applies to his municipality, into a book to be kept in his office for the purpose, and he shall give notice for two weeks in some newspaper circulating in his municipality, and the said assessment report is on file and requiring payment of the several sums assessed against any owner of lands and real estate for such improvement, within thirty days from and after the confirmation of said report by the circuit court of the said county, and in case said assessment shall remain unpaid at the expiration of the thirty days from and after the first publication of said notice, the said assessment shall draw interest thereupon from and after that time at a rate of one per centum per month; and the governing body of said adjacent cities, towns or township affected by said assessment, shall have the same powers and rights to enforce the payments of said assessment as they have to enforce the collection of taxes or assessments by like proceedings.

10. And be it enacted, That all moneys collected on account of the aforesaid assessment by the respective adjacent cities, towns or townships whose lands are so assessed shall be kept in a separate fund, which fund shall be applied to reimbursing the town through which the road or street lies for such expenses as said town may have incurred in the carrying out of such improvements; and it shall be the duty of the governing bodies of the said adjacent cities, towns or townships to pay over to the governing bodies of the aforesaid town or township in which said road lies, on demand, such sums of money as may have been collected whenever demand is made therefor.

11. And be it enacted, That in order to meet the expenses for the construction of said street or road and of the proceedings in relation thereto, as mentioned in this act, the council of the said town or other governing body may borrow the money necessary therefor, temporarily, upon the promissory notes of such corporation, or may issue temporary improvement certificates from time to time as the work progresses in such form as the said council of said town or other governing body may prescribe; said notes and certificates shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, and shall be payable at the expiration of not more than two years from the date of issue; all receipts from assessments made against property benefited by such improvements shall be paid to the treasurer of the said town or township, and shall be applied to the payment for such improvements or to the payment of any temporary indebtedness incurred by the said town or township therefor.

12. And be it enacted, That in order to provide for so much of the cost of such improvements as may be required to be paid by any city, town or township, or for any notes or certificates of indebtedness issued therefor, which may remain unpaid, it shall and may be lawful for such city or town or township to issue bonds to run for a period not to exceed ten years and to bear interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, which said bonds shall be styled improvement bonds, shall be issued in such denomination as the governing bodies of the several municipalities may determine, and be executed under the corporate seal of the said municipality, signed by the proper official; coupons for every half year's interest shall be attached to each bond and numbered to correspond thereto, or the said bonds may be registered, at the option of the holder; they shall be sold for not less than their par value, and the proceeds thereof shall be used to pay the portion of the costs, damages and expenses of said improvements and public works required to be paid by such municipality as aforesaid, and to take up and pay off such temporary notes or certificates as have been given in payment of such costs and expenses that may be outstanding; provided that in order to meet the interest on said bonds and redeem the same at maturity, it shall be the duty of the council or other governing bodies of such municipalities to order the interest thereon, together with a sinking fund of not less than five per centum of the total amount of said issue, to be raised in the annual tax levy.

13. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, whether general, public, local or special, inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXV.

An Act to prohibit the laying or construction of any street or horse railroad along the streets of any municipality of this state without the consent of the governing body having the control of the streets in such municipality.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That hereafter it shall be unlawful for any street or horse railroad company, organized under the act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of horse or street railway companies, and to regulate the same," approved April sixth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; or any special or local act authorizing or incorporating any street or horse railroad company, to lay or construct any railroad track, or any extension of the same through or along any street of any municipality of this state without first obtaining the consent of the common council, board of aldermen, board of public works, or other governing body having the control of the public streets, avenues or roads of said municipality, or along the streets of which municipality said railroad company desires or intends to construct its said railroad.

2. And be it enacted, That if any street or horse railroad company, incorporated under any general or special act, shall construct or attempt to construct any railroad through or upon any street, avenue or road of any municipality of this state without first obtaining the consent of the city council, board of aldermen, board of public works, or other governing body having the control of the streets, avenues or roads of said municipality, it shall be the duty of the attorney-general, upon the application of five residents of any municipality wherein said street or horse railroad company shall construct or attempt to construct said railroad, to apply to the court of chancery for an order to forfeit the charter of said street or horse railroad company, which said court of chancery may upon the application make an order declaring void and of no effect the charter or authority of said railroad company to construct, maintain and operate said railroad, and upon the making and filing of such order the rights of said street or horse railroad company shall be thereupon forfeited and of no force.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXVI.

An Act to enable towns and townships in this state to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the inhabitants of any town or township in this state, wherein it is desired to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, may request the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township to call a special election for the purpose of obtaining the consent of a majority of the legal voters in said town or township to construct such water works in the manner hereinafter mentioned and that such request shall be in the form of a petition in writing to the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, signed by the owners of the majority of the real estate in such town or township, according to its assessed value in the year preceding the year at which such petition is presented to the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, and shall be verified by the oath of the assessor of such town or township of the amount of the assessed value of the real estate owned by the signers to such petition, and that such amount is, at least, a majority of the real estate in such town or township, according to its assessed value in the year preceding.

2. And be it enacted, That upon the filing of such petition with the common council, township committee or other governing body of such or town or township, the said common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, be and they are hereby authorized and required, within thirty days from the filing of such petition, to call a special election to be held in said town or township, at any time to be fixed by the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, not less than thirty days from the filing of such petition, of which election the clerk of said town or township shall cause notice of the time and place or places of holding the same, to be given by advertisement signed by himself and set up in at least ten public places in said town or township, for at least ten days previous to the day of such election, and also published in one or more weekly newspapers printed therein, at least one issue before such election; and said clerk shall provide two printed ballots, one containing the words "for the adoption for this town (or township) of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to enable towns and townships in this state to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires, and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water;'" the other containing the words "against the adoption for this town (or township) of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to enable towns and townships of this state to construct water works for the extinguishment of fires, and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water;'" and that each and every polling place in such town or township shall be provided by said clerk with a quantity of ballots of each kind above mentioned, equal to double the number of votes cast at such polling place at the last election prior to the special election heretofore mentioned; that the polls of such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual town or township election in said town or township, and shall be opened at six o'clock in the morning and closed at seven o'clock in the evening, and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said town or township for the time then being, and such officers shall return to common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the minutes of said town or township by the clerk of such town or township.

3. And be it enacted, That if at such election a majority of the votes cast at such election shall be in favor of the adoption of the provisions of said act, the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, shall be and hereby are authorized in the manner hereinafter provided, in the corporate name of such town or township, to take and convey from such source or sources as may be practical, into and through such town or township, such quantity of pure and wholesome water as may be required for the extinguishment of fires and supplying the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, and other purposes, and to this end the said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township is hereby authorized and empowered in the corporate name of said town or township, to purchase, take, hold and enjoy, and convey and dispose of all real and personal estate, land and water rights, as may be necessary for the purposes of this act, and may construct and maintain canals, aqueducts, reservoirs, basins, stand pipes, buildings, machinery, and appurtenances, of every kind, that may be necessary and useful for such purposes, with full power and authority to lay and relay water pipes under any avenue, road, railroad, highway, street, or alley, within the said town or township, and to use the streets and roads of such town or township, to lay pipes in, and to put up fire hydrants, and to make alterations and additions to its said water works, and supply pumps, machinery, and lay pipes, in any place, and to construct and acquire the necessary works, pumps, engines, boilers and other requisite machinery, to be located in or out of the town or township, and to lay down mains and supply pipes, running in such directions throughout the town or township, as may be expedient, and as many fire hydrants as may be expedient, and that all work necessary to be done, or materials to be furnished to execute these powers may be done directly by the town or township, or through contractors, who after reasonable advertisement shall be deemed to afford the best security for completing the work, on the most advantageous terms, and who shall be the lowest bidder therefor, and who shall give bond with ample security for the faithful performance of the contract; all such bonds shall be executed to the town or township in its corporate name, and before being accepted shall be examined and approved by the attorney of such town or township.

4. And be it enacted, That the said common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township shall be and hereby are invested with all the powers necessary to enable them to construct, keep up and maintain such reservoirs, aqueducts and apparatus for elevating water as they may deem necessary from time to time, with such erections, works, establishments and fixtures as may be in their opinion required to effectuate the objects of this act, and to take and use such parts of the water of any stream, lake or pond necessary for the purposes contemplated by this act, and to lay all pipes under the streets or through private property that may be needed to conduct said water to the reservoirs, and from the reservoirs to such parts of the town or township and vicinity as the common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township may from time to time deem expedient, and for these purposes said common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township may make such contracts and employ all such engineers, surveyors, officers, agents employes, workmen and laborers as they may deem necessary, subject, however, to the restrictions hereinafter provided.

5. And be it enacted, That if it should become necessary in the opinion of said common council, township committee or other governing body, to lay pipes through any private lands, or if any private lands shall be required for erecting reservoirs or other works thereon, or from which they may desire to take and use the water of any spring or springs, stream or streams of water, or water rights, and no agreement can be made with the owner or owners thereof, as to the amount of compensation to be paid for the laying of said pipes through said lands, or the price of such lands or water rights as the case may be, by reason of the unwillingness of said owners, or any of them, to accept such compensation or price as said common council, township committee or other governing body may deem reasonable, or by reason of the absence or legal incapacity of said owners, or any of them, it shall be the duty of the justice of the supreme court of this state holding the circuit court in and for the county wherein said town or township is situated, upon application to him by said common council, township committee or other governing body, in the corporate name of such town or township, and after ten days previous notice in writing of such application to the persons interested, if known and in this state, or if unknown or out of the state, after publication thereof for any time, not less than two weeks in a newspaper published in such town or township; to appoint three disinterested appraisers, from the county wherein such town or township is situate, to determine the compensation to be paid for the laying of said pipes through said lands or the price to be paid for said lands or water rights as the case may be; and it shall be the duty of the said appraisers after having taken an oath or affirmation faithfully and impartially to discharge the trusts herein reposed in them, and after having carefully viewed the premises within twenty days after their appointment, to deliver to said common council, township committee or other governing body, a written appraisement under the hands and seals of them or a majority of them, of the award they have made, containing a full description of the lands or water rights, required as aforesaid, which appraisement the said common council, township committee or other governing body shall cause to be recorded in the registry of deeds for the said county; and upon payment or tender by the said common council, township committee or other body, to such owner or owners as aforesaid, or some one of them, of the sum awarded in such appraisement, if any, then the said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township shall have power to enter upon and take possession of the said lands or water rights as the case may be, for the purposes aforesaid, and the said town or township shall be deemed seised in fee simple of the lands or water rights, required for the erection of the said reservoirs or other works as aforesaid, and the water supply aforesaid; and in case any owner or owners of such lands shall be femme covert, under age, non compos mentis, or out of the state, then and in that case it shall be sufficient for said common council, township committee or other governing body, to pay the amount which may have been appraised as aforesaid into court to the clerk thereof, subject to the order of said court, for the use of the party or parties entitled to the same; the costs of all which proceedings shall be taxed by the said justice of the supreme court, and paid by the common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township.

6. And be it enacted, That in case the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, or the owner or owners of the said land or water rights, shall be dissatisfied with the award of the appraisers named in the preceding section and shall apply to a justice of the supreme court of this state, holding the circuit court in and for the county wherein said town or township is situated, at the next term after filing of the said award; the court shall have power, upon good cause shown, to set the same aside, and thereupon to direct a proper issue for the trial of the said controversy, to be formed between the said parties, and to order a jury to be struck and a view of the premises to be had, and the said issue to be tried at the next circuit court to be holden in said county, upon the like notice and in the same manner as other issues in the said court are tried; and it shall be the duty of the said jury to assess the value of the said land, water rights or damages sustained, and if they shall find a greater sum than the said appraisers shall have awarded in favor of the said owner or owners, then judgment therefor, with costs, shall be entered against said town or township and execution awarded therefor; but if the said jury shall be applied for by the said owner or owners, and shall find the same or a less sum than the common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township shall have offered or the said appraisers awarded, then the said costs to be paid by said applicant or applicants, and either deducted out of the said sum found by the said jury or execution awarded therefor as the court shall direct; but such application shall not prevent the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township from taking or laying pipes through said lands upon the award of the appraisers, the value or damages being first paid, or upon a refusal to receive the same upon a tender thereof, the owner or owners thereof being under any legal disability, the same being first paid into said court to the clerk thereof.

7. And be it enacted, That whenever it shall become necessary to make any repairs or alterations in any pipes which may have been laid through any private lands either by virtue of the preceding section or by agreement with the owner or owners thereof, it shall be lawful for the said common council, township committee or other governing body with their workmen and agents and with necessary vehicles, tools and implements to enter upon said lands and make the necessary repairs and alterations, doing no unnecessary damage; provided always that nothing in this section contained shall be so construed as to protect the said common council, township committee or other governing body, or their workmen or agents from any action that may be brought against them individually by the owner or owners of said lands for any damage which they may have wilfully or unnecessarily done.

8. And be it enacted, That when said works shall have been sufficiently completed the said common council, township committee or other governing body shall have authority to furnish water to individuals and to establish such general rates of price and time of payment thereof as they may deem proper, and to prescribe such rules, regulations, conditions and restrictions as to the use of water as may, in their opinion, be necessary to prevent abuse; the said common council, township committee or other governing body shall have power, and it shall be their duty, to stop off the water from any premises, the owner or occupants of which shall have neglected to pay such price at the time specified for the payment thereof, or shall have violated or permitted the violation of any of said rules, regulations, conditions or restrictions, and whenever the said common council, township committee or other governing body shall have caused the water to be stopped off from any premises for either of the causes aforesaid, they shall not permit the same to be restored until the applicant for such restoration shall have paid all arrearages of water rent, together with the expenses incurred in stopping off the water; or in case said water shall have been stopped off by reason of any violation of the rules aforesaid, then they shall not permit the same to be restored until the expense of stopping off the same shall have been paid by the applicant for such restoration, and such applicant shall have given satisfactory security or assurance that such violation shall not again occur.

9. And be it enacted, That the rents for the use of the water which said town or township may supply, as aforesaid, shall, from the time they become due and [illegible] and remain, until paid, a lien upon the premises to which the same may be conducted and supplied; and said common council, township committee or other governing body shall have full power, in the corporate name of such town or township, to bring any suit or suits against any person or persons, corporation or corporations, for the collection of said water rents, with interest and costs in any of the courts of this state, and it shall be the duty of said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township to enforce the collection in all cases where the water rents shall be in arrear.

10. And be it enacted, That the said common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township shall have power to employ proper persons in the management of the works aforesaid and in the collection of the said water rents upon such terms as they may deem reasonable.

11. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of said common council, township committee or other governing body, to erect hydrants in the public streets of said town or township, through which pipes for the supply of water shall have been laid, in such number and locations as the common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township, may from time to time direct, and supply the same with water from the aforesaid works.

12. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall wilfully do, or cause to be done, any act whatsoever whereby the said works, or any pipes, conduit, canal, plug, hydrant, cock, tank, cistern, reservoir, or any other thing appertaining to the same, shall be stopped, obstructed or injured, or who shall tap or make connection with any water pipe or main, for the purpose of obtaining a supply therefrom, without the knowledge or consent of the common council, township committee or other governing body of such town or township, the person or persons so offending shall, upon conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars, with cost to be recovered by and in the name of the treasurer of said town or township, in an action of trespass in any court in this state having cognizance of the same, which sum shall be paid into the treasury of said town or township.

13. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall wilfully pollute or adulterate the waters in any reservoir, erected under the provisions of this act, any person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding three years, or both, at the discretion of the court before whom such conviction shall be had.

14. And be it enacted, That the said common council, township committee or other governing body are hereby authorized by and in the corporate name of such town or township to borrow any sum not exceeding seventy-five thousand dollars, for the purpose of defraying all the expenses and the cost of the purchase of real estate, water rights, works and appurtenances and of maintaining and extending the same, and for the purpose of defraying all the expenses and the cost of such other lands, buildings or water privileges as shall be purchased or taken for the purposes of this act, and for the purchase of materials, the laying of pipes and mains in the said town or township, and constructing all works necessary to the full accomplishment thereof, and all expenses incidental thereto, and to secure the payment thereof, it shall be the duty of said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township, from time to time, to issue the bonds of said town or township for an amount not exceeding in the whole the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, which bonds shall bear a rate of interest not exceeding five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, the principal thereof to be payable at such time and in such manner as the said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township may deem expedient; provided, that a portion of said bonds shall be payable each year and that the last of said bonds shall be payable not more than thirty years from the date thereof, and it shall be the duty of the treasurer of said town or township to make public sale of the bonds so issued, as aforesaid, at not less than their par value, and to pay the proceeds of said sales into the treasury of said town or township, to be used by said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township to the discharge of the duties imposed upon them by this act; the loan hereby authorized shall be called the water loan of said town or township.

15. And be it enacted, That the bonds issued under the provisions of this act shall not be liable to any tax which may hereafter be levied by order of the said town or township.

16. And be it enacted, That such portion of the moneys received from the water rents or prices paid for the use of water, and interest on arrears of water rents as may remain after paying all expenses for constructing and maintaining the works and raising and distributing the water, and salaries, wages and incidental expenses and charges, shall be applied first to the payment of the interest upon the debt created for the construction of the works, and next to the payment of the principal of the bonds at maturity.

17. And be it enacted, That the said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township shall, on or before a certain day in each year, cause a careful estimate to be made of the interest on the water debt, and cost of managing and keeping in repair and operation of the works for ensuing year, and of the amount to be received during the same year for the use of the water and water rents, and of the deficiency if any, of such receipts for the payment of such expenditures, and deficiency said town or township shall raise by tax, as other taxes are assessed, levied and collected, and said body shall in case of any estimated deficiency, furnish a copy of such report to the board or officer who by law is required to make assessments of taxes in said town or township.

18. And be it enacted, That the treasurer of said town or township shall keep accurate accounts of the receipts and disbursements in proper books, to be provided by said town or township for the purpose, and which shall always be open for the inspection of the common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township; and which accounts shall be annually audited and a short abstracts thereof shall be published with the annual statement of the town or township finances, and at the expiration of his term of office said treasurer shall deliver to his successor, all books and papers which he may have in his possession or custody by virtue of his said office.

19. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said common council, township committee or other governing body to elect or appoint any and all engineers, surveyors, officers, agents or employes, that they may deem necessary or convenient for accomplishing the purposes contemplated by this act, to define their duties, regulate their compensation, and provide for their removal, and that the said engineers, surveyors, officers, agents, or employees so appointed or elected as aforesaid, are hereby authorized and empowered to enter upon any land or water, for the purpose of making any and all surveys and examinations necessary under this act, and at all reasonable hours to enter any dwelling or other place, where the water so furnished is taken or used and where unnecessary waste thereof, is known or suspected, and examine and inquire into the cost thereof, and the said engineers, surveyors, officers, agents or employes, shall have full power to examine all service pipes, stop cocks, and other apparatus connected with the water supply, or drainage works, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the same are of the character and dimensions and fixed in the manner directed by the rules and regulations of said town or township, and if any person or persons shall refuse to permit such examinations or oppose or obstruct any such engineers, surveyors, officers, agents or employes in performance of such duty, he, she or they so offending shall have the supply of water shut off until the required examination is made and such alterations and repairs as may be found necessary shall be completed.

20. And be it enacted, That said common council, township committee or other governing body of said town or township, shall have power and they are hereby authorized to make, ordain and establish, all such ordinances, regulations and resolutions as such body may deem necessary and proper, for the distribution, supply, use and protection of the said water, and the safety, security and protection of the buildings, machinery canals, aqueducts, reservoirs and other works and appurtenances thereto, and for fixing and collecting the water rents or prices for water, and for imposing penalties, in addition to cutting off the water for the nonpayment thereof, and that they may direct in what manner and for what purposes the public hydrants and fire plugs may be used.

21. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act and take effect immediately; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall affect or apply to any street, avenue or highway under the charge or control of any county public road board in this state.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to authorize any city of this state to enter into contracts with railroad companies whose roads enter their corporate limits, whereby said companies may re-locate, change or elevate their railroads and when necessary for that purpose, to vacate, change the grade of or alter the lines of any streets or highways therein," approved March nineteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the act to which this is a supplement be and the same is hereby amended so that the same shall read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the proper municipal authorities respectively of any city of this state be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to enter into such contracts with any of the railroad companies whose roads now or hereafter may enter or lie within their cities respectively, or whose routes have been or may be located therein, as shall secure greater safety to persons and property therein, or facilitate the construction and maintenance of other than grade crossings of streets, highways, or other railroads therein, whereby the said railroad companies, or any of them, may locate, re-locate, change, alter grades of, depress or elevate their railroads within said cities, or either of them, as in the judgment of such municipal authorities respectively may be best adapted to secure the safety of lives and property, or to provide for other than grade crossings of streets or highways or of other railroads therein, or to promote the interests of said cities respectively, and for that purpose shall have power to open, vacate, alter the lines and change the grades of any streets or highways or any part thereof, within said cities or either of them, and to do all such acts as may be necessary and proper to effectually carry out such contracts; and any such contracts made by any railroad company or companies as aforesaid, with said cities or either of them are hereby fully authorized, ratified and confirmed.

2. And be it enacted, That this shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

An Act supplemental to an act entitled "An act relative to the supreme and circuit courts," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four; and also for the appointment of three judges to hold said circuit courts and to define their powers.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That there shall be nominated by the governor and appointed by him, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, three judges, each of whom shall be empowered to hold, in the absence of a justice of the supreme court, the respective circuit courts in every county of this state; and in like manner there shall be appointed successors to said judges respectively, when said offices or any of them shall become vacant by death, expiration of the official term of the incumbents, or otherwise; that each of said judges shall hold his office for the term of seven years from the date of his commission and shall receive an annual salary of seven thousand five hundred dollars, payable monthly, in equal instalments, by the treasurer of the state.

2. And be it enacted, That the said judges so to be appointed, and each of them, shall have the same authority, power and jurisdiction, by virtue of their said offices as is now vested by the common and statute law in the several justices of the supreme court by reason of their being judges of said circuit courts.

3. And be it enacted, That the issues of the supreme court when sent down for trial, may be disposed of by consent of the parties in the manner following, to wit: a jury being waived, the justice of the supreme court may refer the matter for trial to the judge holding the county circuit court of the given county, who shall thereupon proceed to try the cause, either with or without a jury, as the said parties may agree; and the result of said trial having been reported to the said justice the same shall be received as conclusive evidence in the trial before him; and the supreme court shall be authorized to grant new trials in such procedures as in other cases.

4. And be it enacted, That the supreme court may from time to time assign and appoint any of said circuit county court judges to hold such of such circuit courts as may be deemed expedient.

5. And be it enacted, That if it shall happen that any of said circuit court judges shall be prevented from attending any of said courts at any time or times, or from continuing the business therein transacting, the same proceedings and the same results shall ensue as now obtain by law in case of a like default on the part of a justice of the supreme court.

6. And be it enacted, That each of said judges shall, before he shall enter upon the duties of his said office, take and subscribe the following oath: I do solemnly promise and swear (or affirm) that I shall administer justice without respect to persons, and faithfully and impartially perform the duties incumbent on me as a judge of the circuit courts of the counties of this state according to the best of my ability and understanding, agreeably to the constitution and laws of the state of New Jersey, so help me God.

7. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXIX.

An Act concerning railroads.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the railroad and franchises of any railroad corporation of this state or any part or parcel of the same has heretofore been or shall hereafter be sold in pursuance or by virtue of a decree, order or judgment of any court of competent jurisdiction it shall be lawful for any other railroad corporation of this state which owns, leases or operates a railroad having a physical connection therewith to purchase the said railroad and franchises so sold or to be sold, or any part or parcel of the same, either at the said sale or thereafter from the purchaser or purchasers thereof, or from his, her or their heirs or assigns; and when such sale to the said purchasing railroad corporation shall be completed, the said railroad and franchises, or the part or parcel thereof so sold and purchased shall vest in and be merged with and become a component part of the railroad and franchises of the said railroad corporation so as aforesaid purchasing the same; provided that the railroad corporation so purchasing shall file or cause to be filed a correct and accurate map and route of the railroad, or the part or parcel thereof so purchased, in the office of the secretary of state of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXX.

An Act concerning the taking of property for public use.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all reports of commissioners hereafter appointed by any court or by any justice of the supreme court to appraise the damages for the taking of lands or other property for public use shall be made or filed on or before a day to be fixed in the order of appointment, unless the court or justice shall by order extend the time, in which case the report shall be made on or before the day limited by said court or justice, and every appeal from such report shall be taken within five days after the day thus fixed.

2. And be it enacted, That whenever an appeal shall be filed from an award of damages by commissioners heretofore or hereafter appointed in any proceeding for the taking of property for public use, notice in writing of such appeal shall be given by the party appealing to the other party within ten days after the filing of the petition of appeal, by service of such notice upon each person interested personally or by leaving at his residence if he resides in the state, or by service upon his attorney, if any, who shall have appeared for him before the commissioners or any other attorney authorized to appear for him, and in case of a corporation, service may be made on such attorney or on any officer or agent upon whom a summons in an action at law against the company may be lawfully served; where it shall appear by affidavit that any person or corporation being a party to the proceedings is a non-resident of the state, or cannot be found therein to be served, in such case notice shall be given in such manner as a judge of the court to which appeal is taken may direct; the said notice of appeal shall set forth that an appeal has been taken from the award of the commissioners, and shall specify the time and place when and where the appellant will apply to the court to which such appeal is taken or any judge thereof to frame the issue and to fix a day for the striking of the jury, and a day for the trial of the appeal, which time named for said application shall be not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of service of the notice, but the court or judge may by order change the time or place on the application of either party and direct what notice of such change shall be given to the other party.

3. And be it enacted, That after an appeal to any court from the award of commissioners appointed to assess the damages for the taking of lands or other property for public use by condemnation shall have been filed, and notice thereof shall have been given as above provided, the court to which such appeal is taken or any judge thereof on application of either party shall fix a day for the trial of the appeal either during the term or vacation when such appeals shall be filed or during the following term of vacation, which day so fixed shall be not less than twenty nor more than forty days from the date of the order, and the court or judge shall also at the same time make an order framing the issue between the parties and directing a jury to be struck and a view of the premises and property to be had, and fixing a day and place for the striking of the jury for the trial of the appeal, which day shall be at least ten days before the day fixed for the trial of the appeal, and the filing of the order shall be notice to all parties of the day and place fixed thereby for the striking of the jury and of the trial, and the jury having been struck and the jurors summoned as required by law the cause shall be tried upon the day and at the place fixed unless for good cause shown the court shall adjourn the trial to another day which the court shall fix, in which case the court shall, in its discretion, either direct the same jurors to attend or order another jury to be struck and summoned in like manner, and all parties shall take notice of the day and place fixed for the adjourned trial.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts or provisions inconsistent with the provisions of this act shall be and are hereby repealed, and the practice prescribed by this act shall supersede the existing practice in all condemnation cases before commissioners or on appeal, so far as the provisions of this act shall extend, and the court shall make such further orders and take such further proceedings as may be requisite according to the practice of the court and the several statutes regulating appeals and the trials thereof in condemnation cases and may permit such amendments of the proceedings and plans as may be reasonable and proper for the fair trial of the case or for the promotion of the public purpose for which the power to condemn was conferred.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the formation and government of boroughs," approved March twelfth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no bonds heretofore issued by any borough under the act entitled "An act for the formation and government of boroughs," approved March twelfth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, for the purpose of raising money to defray the expense of laying out, grading or improving any street or streets, sidewalk or sidewalks in said borough, shall be held invalid because the borough council has not passed an ordinance providing for such improvements, but that all such bonds heretofore issued pursuant to a resolution of the council of such borough, under the common seal and the signature of the mayor of such borough, and attested by the clerk thereof, shall have the same legal effect as though the act to which this is a supplement had been complied with in every particular; provided, however, that the work, for the payment of which such bonds may have been so issued, shall have been actually done and performed in conformity with such resolution.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXII.

A supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning cities of the first class in this state and constituting municipal boards of street and water commissioners therein and defining the powers and duties of such municipal board and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities placed under the control and management of such boards, and providing for the maintenance of the same," approved March twenty-eight, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section six of the act to which this is a supplement be amended so as to read as follows, viz.:

6. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for that board of the city government having charge of the finances thereof to instruct the city treasurer and city comptroller in any city of the first class to set aside and keep apart out of the license fees received in such city for licenses to sell spirituous or malt liquors or to keep restaurants or hotels, one-half thereof for the repaving, repairing and improving of paved streets and public places in such city, whenever in the judgment of such board there shall not be sufficient funds otherwise provided for that purpose, and said moneys when so set apart shall be disbursed, applied and expended for such purposes by said board of street and water commissioners, exclusive of any other board or authority whatever and for no other purpose.

2. And be it enacted, That the provisions of this act shall apply to any moneys received from license fees in any city during the current year of the granting of such licenses, and the same shall be applied to the payment of any of said work of labor or materials furnished for such work already done or to be done, or that may be contracted for doing the current year of the granting of such licenses.

3. And be it enacted, That the said board of street and water commissioners may by a unanimous vote, at any time, out of said funds when so set aside, cause any part of a main thoroughfare in such city to be improved or paved, or both, although the same may not have theretofore been paved.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts or part of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

An Act authorizing cities of the first class to purchase land and to erect buildings thereon for fire department purposes.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities of the first class in this state, when the municipal board or authority having the control of the erection of buildings for fire department purposes shall certify to the municipal board of such city having the management and control of the finances of such city that the necessity exists for the purchase of ground and the erection thereon of a new building or buildings for fire department purposes, that it shall be lawful for such municipal financial board or authority in such city and they are hereby authorized and empowered to issue bonds, either registered or coupon, to an amount not exceeding eight thousand dollars, to raise money to pay for the purchase of such plot and the erection and construction of said building or buildings; that said bonds shall be payable in eight years from the date thereof, and shall bear interest not exceeding four and one-half per centum per annum, to be sold not less than par, and that there shall be a sufficient sum appropriated and put in the tax levy of such city each year to pay the interest on such bonds, and also there shall in each year be appropriated and put in the tax levy of such city, the further sum of one thousand dollars towards the payment of said bonds, to be properly invested and deposited in the sinking fund of such city, to meet the payment of said bonds when they shall become due and payable.

2. And be it enacted, That all work and labor done and materials furnished for the erection of said building or buildings shall be done and finished by contract, awarded upon at least one week's advertisement in the official newspapers, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders for the same.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An Act to enable cities in this state to furnish suitable accommodations for the transaction of public business" (title as amended), approved April fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no bonds shall be issued under the provisions of said act and the supplements thereto, and acts amendatory thereof, beyond the amount of four hundred thousand dollars, except in cities of the first class, where bonds may be issued for the purposes of said acts to an amount not exceeding seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars; that said bonds shall be issued at a rate of interest not exceeding five per centum per annum; they shall be sold for not less than par and accrued interest; they shall be made payable in such manner that bonds to the amount of at least ten thousand dollars shall fall due each year from and after three years from the appointment of such commissioners; there shall be included in the tax levy and raised by taxation in such city each year, a sum equal to the interest upon the outstanding bonds and the principal of the bonds falling due within the year.

2. And be it enacted, That in cities of the first class the total cost for the purchase of lands, erection of building, furnishing and equipment thereof ready for occupancy by the various departments of the city, and all expenditures connected therewith, may equal but shall not exceed the sum of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, in addition to any amount derived from the sale of buildings and grounds, as provided in the acts to which this is a further supplement.

3. And be it enacted, That said city hall commissioners shall have power, in their discretion, to acquire on behalf of such city, from time to time, such lands as in their judgment may be required for such building for a city hall and the accommodation of the different offices and departments of the city government, which lands and all additions thereto shall be acquired in the method prescribed in the acts to which this is a further supplement.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 9, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXV.

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the trustees of any seminary, institute, or school now or hereafter organized under the act to which this is a supplement, or any other act now in force in this state, may consist of either ministers or laymen, or both, in such proportion as the conference, synod, or other owners may determine, and may be classified into classes of one, two, three, or more years, as said conference or other owners may elect at the annual meeting or conference thereof, by the vote of a majority of the members present.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

An act respecting bills of costs in criminal cases.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all bills of costs which shall hereafter be taxed in the court of oyer and terminer or court of general quarter sessions of the peace, by the clerk of said courts, in any criminal case where sentence has been suspended, or a nolle prosequi or discontinuance entered, or where there has been a non-conviction for any cause whatever, shall be as valid and effectual in law and shall be paid in the same manner, as bills of cost taxed in criminal cases in said courts upon conviction and sentence.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general or special, inconsistent with this act, shall be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXVIII.

An Act concerning bills of cost in criminal cases.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all bills of costs have been taxed by the clerk of the court of oyer and terminer and the court of general quarter sessions of the peace in any criminal case in said courts of oyer and terminer or general quarter sessions of the peace, where sentence has been suspended, a nolle prosequi or discontinuance entered, or where there has been a non-conviction for any cause whatever, shall be as valid and effectual in law and shall be paid in the same manner as bills of costs taxed in criminal cases in said courts where there has been a conviction and sentence.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER LXXXIX.

An Act to regulate the runnings of steamboats upon the inland and private waters of this state for the conveying of passengers, and to provide for the inspection and licensing of steamboats and steamboat engineers.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be the duty of the governor of this state to appoint such number of properly qualified persons, not less than one and not exceeding three, as to him shall seem necessary and advisable, to be official inspectors of steamboats and steamboat boilers in this state for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, and such inspectors shall be appointed to hold their office for one year from the date of their appointment respectively, and shall be commissioned by the governor, and any vacancy occurring may be filled from time to time by a like appointment by the governor at his discretion; and such inspectors shall, before they enter upon the discharge of the duties of their office, take and subscribe an oath well, faithfully and impartially to discharge the duties of their office according to law.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of each inspector of steamboats and steamboat boilers respectively, whenever requested so to do by or in behalf of any owner or owners of any steamboat or boat propelled by steam power, navigating any of the inland or private waters of this state and upon tender of the fees fixed by law for such service, to thoroughly and carefully inspect and examine such steamboat and to thoroughly and carefully inspect and examine and test the steam boiler or boilers thereof for the purpose of ascertaining whether such steamboat is so constructed and is in such safe and seaworthy condition and state of repair that passengers can be conveyed thereon in safety and the number of persons that can be carried thereon with safety, and also for the purpose of ascertaining whether such steam boiler or boilers is or are safely constructed and in good repair and condition, and the number of pounds pressure per square inch which such boiler or boilers is or are capable of sustaining in safety, and forthwith to file in the office of the secretary of state to record such certificate in a book to be provided for that purpose, which record shall be a public record; and upon request by or in behalf of the owner or owners of such steamboat and upon payment of the fee therefore prescribed by law, in all cases where such certificate of the inspector shall show such steamboat or boat propelled by steam power to be seaworthy and safe for carrying passengers, and the number of persons who can safely be carried thereon at one time, and the boiler or boilers thereof to be in a safe and proper condition to issue to the owner or owners of such steamboat a license under the great seal of the state, which license shall continue in force for one year from the date of such inspection and shall specify the name, description of the steamboat licensed, the name of the owner or owners thereof, the numbers of passengers it can safely carry at one time, and the number of pounds steam pressure per square inch the boiler or boilers thereof can safely carry and the date of such inspection and test and the name of the inspector and the fact that such steamboat and the boiler or boilers thereof were by such inspector at such date inspected and tested and found to be sea-worthy and safe to the capacities stated.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful to carry passengers upon boats propelled by steam power upon any of the inland or private waters of this state, except such boats have been licensed so to do according to law, and which license shall be publicly and conspicuously posted up upon such boat, and any person or corporation violating the provisions of this section of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to pay a fine of not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars, at the discretion of the court, for each day they shall so offend.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful to carry at one time a greater number of persons upon any steamboat or boat propelled by steam, navigating the inland or private waters of this state, than the number specified in the license for such boat as the number of persons it can carry at one time in safety, and any person or corporation violating the provisions of this section of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to pay a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or more than five hundred dollars, at the discretion of the court, for such offense.

5. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful to carry any greater number of pounds steam pressure per square inch in the boiler or boilers of any steamboat while carrying passengers over the inland or private waters of this state than the number of pounds steam pressure per square inch specified in such license as the limit of safety, and any person or corporation offending against this section of this act shall upon conviction thereof be liable to pay a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or more than five hundred dollars for each offense, at the discretion of the court.

6. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of each one of the persons appointed state inspector of steamboats and steamboat boilers to examine all such persons as shall apply to them for that purpose and as shall pay the examination fee established by law as to their scientific and mechanical knowledge, fitness and qualifications to follow the business or occupation of engineer upon boats propelled by steam power, and to issue to all persons so examined and found to be fit and qualified to follow such business or occupation a certificate of that fact under the signature of such inspector and stating the date of such examination, which certificate the person therein named and certified may file in the office of secretary of state, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to issue to such person a license reciting the fact that such person has been duly examined by such inspector and found duly qualified to follow the business or occupation of steamboat engineer, and a public record shall be kept of all such licenses issued in the secretary of state's office.

7. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons or corporation to run or navigate or cause or procure to be run or navigated upon any kind of the inland or private waters of this state any boat propelled by steam power for the purpose of carrying or conveying passengers, except the engine and boilers of such boat be under the charge, care and control of a licensed engineer within the meaning of this act, and any person or corporation violating this section of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to pay a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or more than two hundred dollars, in the discretion of the court, for each day they shall so offend.

8. And be it enacted, That for each inspection of a steamboat and its boiler or boilers under the provisions of this act the inspector performing such service shall be entitled to charge and receive the sum of fifteen dollars, and that for each examination of an applicant for license as an engineer under the provisions of this act the inspector who performs such service shall be entitled to charge and receive the sum of five dollars, and that for filing the certificate of inspection and issuing and recording a license to any steamboat under the provisions of this act the secretary of state shall be entitled to charge and receive a fee of three dollars, and that for filing a certificate of examination and issuing and recording a license to a steamboat engineer hereunder the secretary of state shall be entitled to charge and receive a fee of two dollars.

9. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect on the first day of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-three.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XC.

An act concerning railroad corporations.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all railroad corporations of this state, whether created by a special law or incorporated under a general law, shall have full power and authority to lay out, construct, maintain and operate a branch line or branch lines of railroad extending from the main line of their respective railroads, or from any branch line thereof now existing or hereafter to be constructed, to any mill, factory or other manufacturing establishment, or clay bed, whenever in the judgment of the board of directors of such corporations it shall be for the interest of such corporations to construct, maintain and operate such branch line or lines; and said corporations are hereby, for this purpose, again invested with all the powers, privileges and franchises given in their respective acts of incorporation, and in the various supplements thereto, for taking and acquiring title to lands required for their use; provided, however, that no such branch line shall be more than two miles in length; and provided further, that any railroad corporation which shall hereafter construct any branch line or lines in pursuance of the power and authority hereby conferred shall, before commencing the construction thereof, file or cause to be filed a correct and accurate map and route of the same in the office of the secretary of state of this state; and also shall deposit with the treasurer of this state a sum of money amounting to at least two thousand dollars for every mile of road proposed to be constructed, which said sum shall be repaid to said corporation by said treasurer in sums of two thousand dollars for each mile of said road, upon the construction of which it shall be proved to his satisfaction that the said corporation have expended at least the sum of two thousand dollars; and provided further, that no railroad corporation shall construct any branch line within the limits of any city or town of this state until it shall first obtain the consent of the municipal authorities of such city or town thereto.

2. And be it enacted, That any railroad corporation of this state which has heretofore constructed any branch line or lines to any clay bed, mine or manufacturing establishment without authority of law, shall have as full power and authority to maintain and operate the same as if such branch line or lines had been constructed in pursuance of legislative authority conferred upon such corporation for that purpose; provided, however, that such corporation shall, within sixty days after the passage of this act, file or cause to be filed a correct and accurate map and route of such branch line or lines in the office of the secretary of state of this state.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCI.

An Act to fix the term of office of assessors of taxes in townships of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That every assessor of taxes hereafter elected in any township in counties of the first class in this state shall hold his office for a term of three years, and until the qualification of his successor.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCII.

An Act concerning overseers of the poor in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities of the first class in this state it shall be lawful for the overseer of the poor to appoint and employ an assistant, by and with the consent of the Board of Aldermen, who shall receive a compensation of not exceeding one thousand dollars per annum, to be determined by the board having charge and control of the finances of such city.

2. And be it enacted, That the money necessary for the purposes of this act shall be provided by the said board having charge and control of the finances as aforesaid, and shall be included in the tax levy of such year.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCIII.

An Act fixing the term of office of mayors in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That every mayor hereafter elected in any city of the first class shall hold his office for a term of two years and until the qualification of his successor.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCIV.

An Act concerning the tenure of office of city collectors in cities of the third class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the term of office of the city collector or other officer charged with the collection of taxes and assessments in any city of the third class shall be three years.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general or special, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCV.

An Act to regulate the pay of officers and employees of paid fire departments in cities of the second class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any city of the second class in this state having a paid fire department, the pay or salaries per annum of the following named officers and employees shall be as hereinafter specified, namely: to the chief engineer, the sum of two thousand dollars; to captain of companies, the sum of one thousand two hundred dollars each; to engineers of steamers, one thousand one hundred dollars each; to the privates, the sum of one thousand dollars each; to the superintendent of electric fire alarm, one thousand dollars; to the veterinary surgeon, the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars; in lieu of all other compensation whatsoever.

2. And be it enacted, That the provisions of this act shall remain inoperative in any such city until the same shall, by a resolution therefor of the board having control of the fire department of such city, be submitted to a vote of the legal voters of such city, and be assented to by a majority of the legal votes cast for or against the acceptance or rejection of this act at any regular charter or general election to be hereafter held in such city or municipality next after the passage of such resolution; such submission shall not be made until notice of the adoption of said resolution by said board shall have been published every day for at least ten days next preceding the time when the official ballots must be ready for distribution for such election in such city, in the official daily newspaper in such city, by the clerk of such city; persons voting at any election at which this act shall be submitted as aforesaid, shall express their assent to or rejection of this act by depositing their ballots in the box provided for depositing ballots at such election in the election precincts, districts or wards of any such city; and those who are in favor of the acceptance of this act shall each deposit a ballot containing the words "for increase of pay of fire department," written or printed thereon, and those who are opposed thereto shall each deposit a ballot with the words "against increase of pay of fire department," written or printed thereon; but this acceptance or rejection may not be expressed upon the ballot, on which are the names of the candidates for ward, city, county or state offices, but must be expressed upon a separate ballot, and the election officers in the several precincts, wards and districts of such city, and the board of canvassers of such city, shall, in the canvassing, determining and returning the votes cast at such election, canvass, determine and return the votes, and the result of the votes at such election, upon the question of the acceptance or rejection of this act, in the same manner as for officers voted for at such election; and if a majority of the ballots on which there shall be the words "for increase of pay of fire department," or the words "against increase of pay of fire department," are in favor of the acceptance of this act, then this act shall take effect immediately.

3. And be it enacted, That the increase of pay of officers, provided by this act, shall go into effect on the first day of the next calendar month after this act shall take effect as aforesaid, and the board or authority having control of the finances of such city shall make due provision for the payment of such additional expense and shall put such additional sum in the next and annual tax levy of such city thereafter as may be necessary for that purpose.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCVI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the prerogative court and the power and authority of the ordinary," approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the register of the prerogative court shall be entitled to charge and receive on all moneys and securities that are now or may hereafter be deposited with him under any law of this state or the rules of the prerogative court, the same commissions as are now allowed by law to the clerk in chancery for commissions on deposits.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 11, 1893.

CHAPTER XCVII.

An Act to regulate the practice of courts of Law.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cases in which a capias ad respondendum may issue against the defendant or defendants in any action upon contract, the court, or a judge thereof, or a supreme court commissioner, may, at the request of the plaintiff, upon filing the affidavit required as a foundation for an order for bail, by an order made for that purpose, award a writ or writs of attachment against the lands and tenements, goods and chattels, rights and credits, moneys and effects of the defendant or defendants, in this state, whether such defendant or defendants, or either of them, be a resident of this state or not, and that the practice and procedure in relation to the issue, the levy, and the return of the said writ or writs, and the vacation thereof when improperly issued, shall be the same as in cases of attachment against non-resident debtors.

2. And be it enacted, That every such writ of attachment shall bind the property of the defendant or defendants against whom the same shall be issued, from the time that such writ shall be delivered to the sheriff, under-sheriff, coroner, or other officer, to be executed; and for the better manifestation of the said time, such officer shall upon the receipt of any such writ, endorse thereon, without fee for so doing, the day of the month and year when he received the same, and if two or more writs of attachment shall be delivered against the property of the same person on the same day, that which was first delivered shall be first executed; and the court out of which such attachment or attachments may issue shall have full power and authority to make inquiry and determine the priority of the said several writs.

3. And be it enacted, That the issuing of such writ of attachment shall be deemed the beginning of an action of law, and that no summons or other mesne process shall be necessary to bring the defendant into court, and that the plaintiff shall file his declaration within thirty days after the return day of the said writ, and shall rule the defendant or defendants to plead thereto, which rule shall be served or published as the court may direct, and that the practice and procedure in the action shall be the same as if the action had been begun by summons, except as herein otherwise provided.

4. And be it enacted, That the property of the defendant or defendants attached shall remain during the pendency of the suit as security for any judgment which the plaintiff therein may ultimately recover, and upon the recovery of final judgment in the action, special execution shall issue against such of the attached property as may be liable to be levied upon and sold under the execution laws of this state, and the proceedings thereon shall be in conformity therewith; but in case the property attached, or any part thereof, shall be such as is not liable to be levied upon and sold under the execution laws of this state, then and in such case the sheriff or other officer to whom the said writ of execution shall have been issued, shall have authority, and it shall be his duty, in his own name as such sheriff or other officer, to realize upon the said property and choses in action, by sale, collection, or otherwise, and to that end he shall have authority to bring suit in his name as such sheriff or other officer, for the recovery of any moneys due thereon, and he shall account therefor to the court out of which the said execution issued.

5. And be it enacted, That the property so attached may, by rule of court, be released from the lien of the said writ upon the defendant or defendants giving bond, with sufficient surety or sureties, to be approved by the court, or judge, or by the supreme court commissioner who awarded the said writ, and filed with the clerk, in double the amount of the plaintiff's claim or cause of action, or in double the value of the property so attached, conditioned for the payment of any judgment which may be ultimately recovered by the plaintiff or plaintiffs in that action.

6. And be it enacted, That the supreme court shall have power to make such rules and regulations concerning the practice to be had hereunder as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, and that this act shall be construed in all courts of judicature in the most liberal manner for the detection of fraud, the advancement of justice, and the benefit of creditors.

7. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER XCIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to authorize the formation of railroad corporations and to regulate the same," approved April second, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for any railroad corporation in this state authorized to use steam as a motive power, or authorized to use steam or other motive power, to use, on any part of its railway, any motive power which shall in its judgment be best adapted to the economical operation of its railway; and to erect, construct, maintain, and use such machinery, engines, devices and appliances, and such poles, wires, conduits, or other methods for conducting and distributing power as may be required; and for this purpose said railway corporations are hereby reinvested with all the powers originally conferred upon them and each of them by the acts under which they were created for the condemnation of lands; provided, that steam power shall not be used on any part of the road originally chartered as a horse car railroad.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately and that all acts and parts of acts, inconsistent with this act, to the extent of such inconsistency, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER CI.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the orphans' court and relating to the powers and duties of the ordinary, and the orphan's court and surrogate," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That an exemplified copy of any will or the record of any will, admitted to probate in any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in any foreign state or kingdom, and of the certificate of probate thereof, and of the letters testamentary, or of the administration with the will annexed issued thereon, exemplified and authenticated according to the act of congress, heretofore or hereafter filed and recorded in the office of the surrogate of any county in this state, shall have the same force and effect in respect to all lands and real estate whereof the testator died seized as if said will had been admitted to probate and letters testamentary or of administration with the will annexed thereon had been issued in this state; and all conveyances of such real estate, heretofore or hereafter made by any executor or executors, or administrator or administrators with the will annexed, or the survivor or survivors of them, or by any devisee or devisees, shall be as valid as if said will had been admitted to probate and letters testamentary or of administration with the will annexed had been issued in this state; and such record or certified copies of said will, certificate and letters, or of the record thereof, shall be received in evidence in all courts of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER CII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, that if any consignee, factor, bailee, clerk, employee, agent or servant entrusted with the care or sale of any personal property or entrusted with the collection of care of any moneys, shall fraudulently take and convert the same, or the proceeds of the sale of the same, or any part thereof, to his own use, or to the use of any person or persons whatsoever excepting the rightful owner thereof, he shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding a term of two years or both, at the discretion of the court before whom such conviction shall be had.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

CHAPTER CIII.

An Act to further provide for the formation of a quorum in the boards of trustees of incorporated hospitals.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the board of trustees of any incorporated hospital in this state to determine by their by-laws from time to time what number of persons shall constitute a quorum, which shall not be less than seven persons, for the transaction of the business of said board.

2. And be it enacted, That so much of any act as is inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same is hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1893.

—James Frisbie has been appointed to assist the tax-assessor in locating the ownership of dogs to be taxed. He will get 5 cents a dog. The city's tax is $1.

—A horse owned by a resident of Fanwood fell in the roadway on East Fifth street, Thursday afternoon. The animal got up with a little coaxing and went on.

—On account of the fair of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein which opens on the 20th instant, the annual May walk of the society has been postponed to May 28.

—A. M. Griffen's staff of bicycle-mounted employes has become so large that he will have to build a frame shed 10x10 at the rear of his store to accommodate the wheels.

—The next regular examination for teachers' certificates will be held at Westfield on Friday and Saturday of this week. Examination for third grade on Friday; for second and third on Saturday.

—Prof Albert C. Bausch will give a "Character Lecture" in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday, the 11th inst., at 8 p. m., for the benefit of the Y. P. S. C. E. of that church.

—The commuters and other patrons of the Jersey Central railroad from the Elizabeth avenue station have petitioned the company for a new station building. The shanty structure now used is considered a disgrace.

—It was reported around Monday that all the bakers in a West Front street bakery went on strike Saturday night. The result of the investigation proved that one left and another was going to Germany in June.

—R. W. Rice & Co. are contemplating great changes with their property on the corner of Duer and Emily streets. They are talking of erecting two large stores with flats above, on each side of their present place of business.

—The superintendent of the Boys' club would be glad to receive donations of "Harper's Young People", "St. Nicholas", "Youths' Companion" and other books which will interest the boys. Club room open from 10 to 12 a. m., every day.

—The semi-annual musical service of St. Michael's vested choir of Naugatuck, Conn., and Holy Cross choir of North Plainfield, will be held here on Decoration Day, the 30th, at Holy Cross church, under the direction of W. H. Miner.

—Harry Smith, son of R. B. Smith, formerly an employe of Carney Bros., but now of White Lake, N. Y., walked to the post-office there, last Thursday, through three feet of snow, and before he got home froze his feet. So he writes home.

—On Thursday evening, the Plainfield Choral society will render the "Creation" Oratorio, with Miss Jennie Patrick Walker, soprano, James H. Ricketson, tenor, Ericsson Bushnell, basso, and an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic society.

—The family of George Van Nest of East Fifth street, who have been quarantined for the past ten days, are about to be released from their confinement. The attendant physician has pronounced all danger over, and the yellow card will soon be removed.

—The Trinity church scene, with its sweet chime of bells and the beautiful palm service in "The Old Homestead", is one of the most realistic and impressive stage pictures ever presented. Its absolute truth to nature can be highly appreciated by Plainfielders.

—Flower thieves have been in houses and dooryards on East Fifth street, during the past few nights. In some places they have lifted bodily flowers and plants, and in other instances the stalk and the flower have been cut off. The police have a clue, which may establish their identity.

—One young colored man who lives in Fairchild's alley was out late Tuesday evening, and in order to alleviate his wife's fears, he took her home a well-cooked beefsteak. This kind act only aggravated her and she refused to eat it, but the steak was used for breakfast the next morning.

—The almost phenomenal business done by "The Old Homestead" on its last visit here has not been forgotten by the Music Hall patrons. If a good seat was desired it was necessary to speak days in advance, and the Standing Room Only, sign was taken from its resting place and hung on the outer walls.

—George S. Wheelwright and Fred A. Allen, two Elizabeth wheelmen, have proved themselves the soul of honor. The other night when stopped by the police for riding without lights, they promised if permitted to go home over night they would return next day for judgment. They kept their word and paid their fine of $1 apiece manfully.

—The spring season for killing Wilson snipe (commonly called English or gray) in this State, expired April 30, and it is now illegal to kill them under a penalty of $20 for each one killed. These migratory birds were extremely late in their flight this year and but few have been killed. Indeed, it may be said that the main flight is just about passing. They should have been in this section in great number by April 1 at least.

—The lack of proof-reading in the columns of the local Republican organs becomes every day more painful. While the News inserts an l into the word homes, and commits other like depredations, the Courier takes strange liberties with good Plainfield people's names, and speaks of J. Perley Pate, instead of Page, and Martin I. Chooley, instead of Cooley. The Courier further says Joseph Masten for Martin, Robert Siarrett for Schleroth, and Elisha Southers for Elias Southard.

—Tom Melcher, a driver for the Plainfield Beef company, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon. He was sitting on the rear end of a buckboard, riding along East Front street, when the vehicle struck the car tracks and Melcher was thrown off, striking on his head. His face was badly cut and he was bruised about the body. To-day big strips of court plaster adorn his face. It was nearly an hour afterward that the driver of the buckboard noticed his disappearance, and went back to look for him.

PERSONALIA.

J. P. Munn and family, of LaGrande avenue, have gone South.

Mrs. J. H. Buckley has removed from 15 East Front street to 82 North avenue.

The engagement is announced of Miss Annie Anderson of Kentucky, to William A. Underhill of Third place.

Joel Manning has received a handsomely engrossed certificate of his appointment as a member of the Advisory Council of the World's Fair Congress Auxiliary on Farm Culture and Cereals and Agricultural Congress.

Mrs. Harriet N. Case, of 17 Church street, died at noon Friday of erysipelas, resulting from the grip. She was 78 years old, and had been ill about two weeks. Joseph D., at whose home she lived, is her only son.

H. J. Smith, of Washingtonville, general superintendent of the Edison electric light system in New York, sailed Friday for Europe. He will study the electric systems of all the great European cities, and will be gone two months.

"The Old Homestead" choir's singing is a pleasant feature of the interesting performance, but in no part is it more impressive and beautiful than it is during the Trinity church scene in the Third act, the music of which is redemanded nightly.

Friday night's progressive euchre party among the guests of the City Hotel, was another of those enjoyable affairs, which are weekly looked forward to by the participants. On this occasion Mrs. W. L. Force entertained. The prizes, as usual, were pretty and appreciated by the winners.

Among the 100 graduates turned out at the 63rd annual commencement of the College of Pharmacy in New York, last evening, was the coming-man at Reynolds's pharmacy—John Powers, son of M. Powers of Somerset street. Berthold Schreiser, another Plainfielder, was also graduated.

The funeral of Mrs. James Perley Page took place place at the Crescent avenue church, last Saturday at 3:15. The vocal music was by Mrs. J. K. Myers, Miss Eleanor Demarest and Elmer and William Runyon. The body will be placed in the Hillside cemetery receiving vault here, for a while, previous to interment in Chicago.

ANOTHER YOUNG MAN TAKES GREELEY'S ADVICE.

Charles Griffen, brother of A. M. Griffen the hardware merchant, will leave town the latter part of the month for a visit to the World's Fair. After that he will go to Canton, Missouri, to join his brother Edward in business.

WILBURTHA ON THE DELAWARE.

One of the most charming places in this country is the home of Mrs. Fisk, mother of Charles and Pliny Fisk of this city, on the Delaware river opposite Yardley. The name of the place is Wilburtha, so named from Mrs. Fisk's son William and her daughter Bertha. Woolston & Buckle, the well-known painters and decorators of this city, have several men at present engaged in redecorating the house in most elaborate and costly fashion.

HE'S A GRANDPA BY THIS MARRIAGE.

L. A. Rheaume, the esteemed agent for Dr. Rushmore in the coal and lumber business on Broadway, was married several nights ago to a charming Brooklyn widow, who has an interesting family of a son, three daughters and grandchildren. The bride stayed in New York [illegible] the Naval Review, while the [illegible] concluded some business in the city. This is Mr. Rheaume's second happy matrimonial venture.

A PRIVATE WEDDING.

The marriage will take place on Monday evening, May 8, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Pease, 109 Park place, of Miss Mary A. Pease and William O. Worth. The Rev. Dr. Yerkes will officiate. A reception will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pease—where the bride and groom will reside in the future—on June 1.

CELEBRATING HER 75TH B'RTHDAY

Mrs. Esther Johnson, who, up to a short time ago, lived all her life on Somerset street, North Plainfield, celebrated the 75th anniversary of her birthday at the home of her son, Russell C. Johnson, 167 West 51st street, New York, Wednesday, the 12th ult. Among those present were her nephew Charles, her nieces Sarah and Grace, her son Andrew, wife and son of North Plainfield, and her cousin, ex-councilman William H. Voorhees and wife.

FAREWELL RECEPTION TO A PLAINFIELD CLERGYMAN.

The Rev. William J. Leonard of this city, who has for some time been preaching in Boston, has accepted a call to the Unitarian pulpit in Bolton, Mass., a delightful town outside of Boston. Friday evening the members of the Plainfield Unitarian church gave him and his wife a farewell reception, in the parlors of All Souls' church. It was a very pleasant occasion. Mr. Leonard and family have the best wishes of a host of friends in their departure.

INSPECTOR CARNEY'S GOOD WORK.

David J. Carney, the wily Tammany chieftain of North Plainfield, has had his services to his party recognized at last, though but in a slight degree when those services are considered. He has been appointed by mayor Saunders and the street committee, superintendent of construction of the street railway. He has already proved his efficiency and faithfulness. Every bit of stone taken up from the road bed has been put back again properly under his eye.

Mrs. Depew has removed from 14 Crescent avenue to 22 Franklin place.

Fred Stillman, of Westerly, R. I., is the guest of his brother, Howard, at the Albion.

Mrs. C. P. Herr has removed from Hotel Grenada to her residence 15 Westervelt avenue.

Fred. H. Cook, of Bound Brook, the popular lawyer well-known in this city, is very ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. H. B. Nichols and family, formerly of this city, are now residing at West Park and Bernard streets, Dorchester Heights, Mass.

George G. Mahon and family are at home from Asbury Park and have again taken possession of their home on West Seventh street.

J. H. Passmore, superintendent of the Plainfield street railway, and wife, have removed from 20 Craig place to Mrs. Martin's, 11 Grove street.

While their handsome new residence on Central avenue is being prepared, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Andrews, of Broadway, are staying at the Albion.

James McGee interested and edified the congregation of St. Paul's M. E. church in Newark Sunday by an address on "The Attitude of the Worshiper".

Lindsay Woolley has accepted a position as clerk in F. W. Crouch's grocery store at Westfield, after serving five years as compositor on Plainfield papers.

Joseph W. Sandford, of West Seventh street, is ill. He had partially recovered from an attack of the grip, when he was attacked with nervous prostration.

Halsey Moore, of Newark, will deliver an illustrated lecture on Missions, Sunday evening, in the First Baptist church, under the auspices of the Temple Builders.

Mrs. D. W. Pond was detained from attending the Unitarian conference at Washington, this week, but the valuable paper she had prepared was read by an appreciative friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Storr, who were married last Wednesday evening, returned from their wedding trip Saturday. In a few days they will begin house-keeping in a cosy little home on Oxford place.

The Rev. Father Cushing, late of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's parishes, left New York on the 8:30 train Thursday, and passed through Plainfield on his way to Washington, where he will study preparatory to going to his new station, Denver.

Nearly a dozen of the friends of Henry Haurand of Steiner place, North Plainfield, paid him and his brother Joseph a visit Monday. They were most agreeably entertained, and it was with regret that they left for home on an evening train.

The kindergarten class of the Misses Scribner & Newton's school will give an exhibition one-half hour before the lecture of Mrs. A. N. Chadwick on "The Kindergarten" in All Souls' church, May 9, at 4 p. m. Tickets for the lecture will admit to the exhibition.

Wm. H. Wilcox, for several years bookkeeper of the First National bank, is about to leave for Saranac Lake, Franklin county, N. Y., where he will be clerk of Hotel del Monte after June 1. He will be pleased to welcome his Plainfield friends to that famous resort.

Frank M. Hallock, who has been studying with his brother-in-law, O. L. Jenkins, M. D., of this city, for eight years past, was graduated last week from the New York Homoeopathic college. He desires to begin his professional career in New York, but he is just the young man for an associate of Dr. O. L. Jenkins of Plainfield.

Miss Kenyon has been disappointed in her efforts to secure Thomas Nelson Page for her Seminary lecture course, and Miss Helen N. Clarkson will take his place in the course. Miss Clarkson is to read a paper on "Sunday Observance" before the League of Unitarian and Other Christian Women, at Yonkers, Friday. The session will begin at 2:30. Mrs. N. D. C. Hodges, formerly of this city, has also been invited to speak on the subject. The round trip between Yonkers and the Grand Central station is 50 cents.

THE TWO ALVAHS.

Alvah Apgar, of Califon, Hunterdon county, is visiting his friend Alvah Hoffman of West Front street, and will stay one week.

RARE STOCK IN THE JOHNSON STABLES.

J. W. Johnson of LaGrande avenue is the happy owner of three blooded colts foaled Friday night. The colts are offspring of some of the most valuable trotters in the country.

A POST OF HONOR FOR A PLAINFIELD VETERAN.

Past Commander Asa Collier, of Major Anderson post, 109, G. A. R., has received from Department Commander H. L. Hartshorn certificate of appointment as aide-de-camp on the staff of the Commander.

TOO MODEST TO GIVE HIS NAME.

One of the most charitable men in town is a gentleman living on Broadway. He is never so happy as when he is helping the church or the poor. When he passes away to a higher life, there'll be a long procession of mourners, people who have been helped by his bounty.

TO HOLD THE SCALES OF JUSTICE.

Christopher M. Fine, Peter Flynn, jr., Fred. H. Martin, Calvin Neighbor and Martin Roth are the Plainfielders on the panel of jurors drawn to try cases in the Union county courts this term. Hezekiah Hand, Wm. E. Terry and Robert Walpole represent Fanwood.

PLAINFIELD'S VOICE TO BE HEARD.

A concert by the Princeton Quartette, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission circle of the M. E. church, will be given in Vincent chapel, Friday evening, May 12, at 8. P. P. Bliss's son is the leader of Princeton Quartette. Alfred Holmes, of East Fifth street, another young gentleman well-known in Plainfield, is also a member. The other singers are Messrs. Fisk and Hartzler.

THE DOCTOR GETS OUT A PAPER.

The Rev. Dr. Charles R. Barnes, new pastor of the Plainfield M. E. church, has already issued a number of The Visitor, that model church paper. He modestly puts all the credit on his associates Dr. Hurlbut and J. R. Joy, but they can tell you that he did no small portion of the work himself, and is entitled to credit. Dr. Barnes has quickly won a place in the hearts of his people, and they will appreciate the evidences of improvement in their church paper as well as in their church work.

HE'LL SPEND HIS VACATION PREACHING HERE.

The Rev. Herbert Munson of Monroe Avenue chapel is from Windham, Greene county, New York. He is an alumnus of the school at Hackettstown, and of Wesleyan University, and is just completing his first year at Drew. Until the close of the present term at the seminary he will be in Plainfield from Friday to Monday, making his home at 10 Willow avenue, North Plainfield. During the summer vacation he will give his whole time to the chapel work.

CHANGES IN THE LOCAL DRUG BUSINESS.

The important change at the Central pharmacy that was predicted in these columns, took place Monday, Mr. Reynolds retiring from ownership, and J. H. Leggett taking entire charge. Mr. Leggett as manager has made the Central pharmacy what it is, and he will as owner make the establishment even more popular and flourishing than now. He deserves the fullest public confidence and patronage. He has a most capable, courteous and efficient staff. Mr. Reynolds will devo'e his time to his old-established pharmacy at Park and North avenues, headed by that prince of managers, Thomas Armstrong.

QUICK RECOVERY OF A STOLE WHEEL.

The Thief on the Bike Was Swift, But Capt. Martin's Face Was Better.

On Saturday night Frank L. C. Martin, the well-known bicycle dealer, had a wheel stolen from him, but such were the efforts of Mr. Martin and his friends that the wheel was recovered within an hour. It was 8:30 Saturday night when Alec Flack, the grocer, came into the shop to hire a wheel. The shop was filled with people selecting wheels for over Sunday, as Mr. Martin does not keep his establishment open on that day. Mr. Flack selected a Century Columbia and wheeled it out in front of the shop. He went inside for a moment to get a lantern and when he came out the wheel had disappeared. There were many volunteers around the shop who were ready to follow up the thief, and men were despatched on all the principal roads to stop any rider without a lantern. Flack started on the county road toward Netherwood, and when he came opposite the Netherwood station he saw a man riding a Century Columbia without a lamp. He stopped the rider who first said that the wheel belonged to him, but afterward acknowledged that he had taken it from Martin's. Flack examined the number of the wheel and found that it was the one he had hired. The rider's name was Chas. Richardson of Fanwood. He said that he only wanted to ride the wheel home, and gave it up to Flack, who brought it to Plainfield. Meanwhile Mr. Martin had been writing telegrams to the various bicycle dealers in the vicinity to look out for the wheel, but the machine was returned so quickly that he had time to countermand the messages. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Richardson, and he will be taken to-day if possible. Richardson is a well-known contractor of Fanwood, and is said to have been in trouble before. Not long ago, it is alleged, he passed a check in Westfield and the confiding tradesman who was the victim found himself out of pocket something over $40. Capt. Martin also holds a check of his, for a small amount, which he hasn't been able to get cashed.

Mr. Flack may obtain the reward for catching the thief of a Columbia wheel that is offered by the Pope Manufacturing company. Had it not been for Mr. Martin's prompt action and excellent detective work, Richardson would undoubtedly have succeeded in getting away with the wheel.

BOLDLY THEY RODE, AND WELL.

Everyone Admired Plainfield's Display of Horsemanship Led by the Graceful Miss Honegar.

The formal opening of the Crescent riding academy took place Monday night; in spite of the bad weather a large number of people turned out in the ring, while about 100 were there as spectators. The riding began about 8:30, and the various figures continued until after 10.

Charles D. Bernheimer, of New York, led the riders with Miss Flo Honegar, of Carleton avenue. The effect of Saturday night's drilling was noticeable, as the riders went through their complicated figures with ease under the able leadership of Mr. Bernheimer. After the figures had been performed the young people tried some jumping with varied success.

The Crescent rink has been entirely transformed, and presents a very horsey appearance. Sloping sides have been built around the floor to a height of about 4 feet, and the ring is filled with shavings, sawdust and sand that made an excellent footing for the horses. About 40 horses were in the ring and it was not at all crowded.

The various waiting rooms opening in the main hall of the rink are to be painted, carpeted and furnished so that they will be thoroughly comfortable and attractive.

Several gentlemen have spoken of getting up a riding club, similar in plan to the riding club in Fifty-eighth street, New York. Quite a number of names have been secured for membership. Should the idea of this club be carried out and a sufficient membership be secured for next winter, it certainly would become a feature of the season, and form a delightful rendezvous for the riding set in the afternoons and evenings that can be spared from the other social functions.

The saddles and bridles furnished by the proprietors are of the best, and ample facilities have been provided for boarding horses and taking all possible care of them. Mr. Von Haemerly is a thoroughly competent riding master, and those who wish to learn will have an opportunity this summer. Those who are desirous of joining the club may send their names to the academy, where they will be given to the proper persons.

Among those riding last night were: Charles D. Bernheimer of New York, Miss Flo Honegar, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Kathryn Yates, Miss Lila Cruikshank, Miss May Holly, Miss Southard, Miss Martine, S. A. Cruikshank, Mr. VanBoskerck, Mr. Tracy, Wm. Pentz of Troop A, New York, Lawrence Buttmann, Daniel Ginna, E. D. McCarthy, Henry Lowe, L. Waring, Wesley Johnson and F. D. Streull.

Easily Whipped the New Yorkers.

The bowling team of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city rolled a game Saturday night on their own alleys against the Holy Cross Lyceum of New York. The game resulted in the defeat of the New Yorkers by the score of 1332 to 1246 pins.

Knows Where to Get Good Meat.

Frank Hedden has a quadruped named "Duke". The dog is great at rat catching, also at other things. On Tuesday he clandestinely eloped with a ten-pound chunk of smoked beef from Davis & Atkinson's store on Park avenue, and was making way with it when discovered.

Fine Old Comedy.

A more wholly delightful revival of old English comedy has not been seen in many years than that of "She Stoops to Conquer", as presented by Stuart Robson and his company of excellent players at the Fifth avenue theater, last evening. It will be continued two weeks or more, and is something not to be missed.

The Change of Life.

Women nearing this critical period require strength, health, and cheerful spirits.

The sole aim of this time should be to keep well.

The invaluable aid always is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The girl about to enter womanhood can find the same assistance from the same source.

Mrs. W. W. Culner, Palatka, Fla., writes:—

"I was in ill health from change of life. I took your compound and am now well. I recommend it as the best remedy for all weakness through the many changes which all women have to pass from early life to the grave."

All druggists sell it. Address in confidence, Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass. [illegible]

CLARKSON'S BAD AIM.

Lucky for Him, Mrs. Henry's Injury Is Not Fatal.

Monday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock, after THE PRESS was out for the day, Thomas T. Clarkson, of Orchard place, janitor of the High school, while shooting off a revolver in his back yard, accidentally shot Mrs. Henry, wife of John Henry of 90 West Second street.

Clarkson bought the revolver about a week ago and started to put away the weapon yesterday afternoon, but his wife told him not to put it away loaded, so he adjourned to the back yard and proceeded to empty the chambers. He shot twice in the air, and then for diversion aimed at a post in the direction of John Henry's house.

Of course he missed the post, and the bullet continued on its way, passing through a window in the Henry house and striking Mrs. Henry, who was sitting in a chair sewing, in the back of the neck. The bullet passed entirely through the muscular part of the neck, and lodged in the window casing on the opposite side of the room. Dr. Frank R. Searles, the skillful young physician of Front street and Bank place, was called in and dressed the wound. He pronounced Mrs. Henry in no danger.

Had the bullet passed one inch nearer the spine, the shot would have been fatal.

A Poet in Our Midst.

The following by James Andrews, a widely recognized poet in the higher literary circles of the country, was published some time since, but it is worthy of reproduction in THE PRESS and just now appropriately so as he is a guest at Hotel Albion:

THE BROOKS AT EVENTIDE.

Scared little scurrying brooks,
Wand'rers from mountain-side springs,
Flowing in darkness, with crooks
And eddies and parlous and rings;
Babbling and frightened, and bruised
By the boulders' hard breast into foam,
You whisper like children confused,
Who tearfully ask the way home.

—Charles VanWinkle will erect a corrugated iron storehouse 18x10 at 3 Central avenue.

—Monday, June 5, is the date set for the hearing on the proposed Madison avenue extension.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

IN HIS NAME.

Spring Meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters.

The spring meeting of the Plainfield city union of the King's Daughters, was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church parlors Thursday afternoon. After interesting and encouraging reports of the work of the union during the winter, the following officers were re-elected for the coming year:

Chairman—Mrs. Frederick G. Mead.
Vice-chairman—Mrs. Walter Haviland.
Treasurer—Miss Louise E. Green.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Fannie G. Foster.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. H. Augusta Schuyler.

Reports were made by the chairmen of the relief, hospital, children's home, and W. C. T. U. committees; and from eleven of the circles represented at the meeting. The fund formed last fall for the endowment of the King's Daughters bed at the Muhlenberg Hospital has received $185 of the $210 already pledged.

It is earnestly hoped that all circles and individual members of the order, not already enrolled, will as soon as possible send their names, addresses and lines of work, to the corresponding secretary of the city union, so that all the King's daughters in Plainfield may through their organization work more and more effectively.

The re-election of officers was unanimous, all proposed opponents withdrawing from contest.

CHARLEY SMITH'S HONORS.

He Is in Great Standing Among the Marksmen of the Country.

Charley Smith returned from his trip to the Wilmington, Delaware, shooting tournament on Friday, loaded down with honors, he having captured a number of first and second monies in the sweepstakes at blue rocks, against some renowned shooters. He now contemplates entering the lists at the Knoxville, Tenn., shooting tournament in May. Among which was the 50 bird race where, in breaking 46 out of a possible 50 he won the first money from among 23 competitors.

The Clifton Gun club of Staten Island, have issued a challenge to the Newark Gun club of Newark, N. J., to shoot them a race at live birds eight men a side for a purse of $100 a side. The Newark Gun club is composed of some of the best known live bird shots in the State. Of course they have accepted the challenge, and the match will come off shortly. Jacob Pentz, president of the Newark Gun club has notified Charley Smith, "Dutchy" that he desires him to be one of the team when the contest comes off. Charley immediately accepted the invitation, and there is no question but what his score will be as good as any of them when the Newarks come off victorious.

PLAY BALL!

Newark's Crack Semi-Professionals to Open Plainfield's Season Against the Crescents.

The base-ball season in Plainfield will be opened Saturday on the grounds of the Plainfield Amusement company, Somerset street, with a game between the Crescents and the Star Athletics of Newark. The following are the games booked to June, all to be played at home:

May 6—Star Athletics, Newark.
May 13—Young Americas, Philadelphia.
May 20—Murray Hills, New York.
May 27—Actives, New York.
May 30—Morning, Cuban Giants.
" Afternoon, Flushings.
June 3—Olympics, Paterson.
June 24—Westfields.

A Street That Should Surely Be Macadamized.

A petition was presented to the borough council at its last session by property owners of Chatham street, asking for the macadamizing of that thoroughfare. It was referred to the street committee and will probably be reported on Friday evening next. While the amount subscribed by the property owners is not as large as it should be ($180), still the street should be macadamized, as it is the main thoroughfare to the North Plainfield cemetery, and also the one on which the Warren Mission chapel is situated.

Oh Dear, that Short Shore Route Is Nipped.

It is now asserted that the only foundation for the rumor that the Central Railroad company intended to build a branch from Perth Amboy to Bound Brook, via New Brunswick, is that the Pennsylvania and Central railroads agreed to build a switch into a brick yard near Perth Amboy, for the purpose of facilitating the transportation of the output of the yard.

Three Lucky Squirrels.

A trio of red squirrels in a large cage on the stoop of William Pangborn's, Chatham street, North Plainfield, attract the attention of all who pass that gentleman's home. A nest containing four fell from one of the high trees on Mr. Pangborn's place recently. A cat made a meal off of one before the other three were rescued by kind hands.

They Too Want a House of Worship.

The Emmanuel Baptist congregation will have a grand rally Sunday, May 21, to raise funds for a new church. The Rev. D. E. Robinson of Elizabeth will preach in the morning at 10:30, and the Rev. Wm. Hill in the evening at 7:45. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, will preside.

Got His Drink and Another's Change.

The story is told of a Plainfield man who went to New York on Wednesday, stopped at a certain place, called for a glass of beer, and through mistake took $1 95 from the bar, the change of a customer, who had presented a $2 in payment for a drink.

'Twas a Merry Gang.

The members of the Plainfield Bicycle club who were present at the stag racket at the club-house Saturday night had a thoroughly good time. The feature of the evening was a boxing match between the colored Janitor of the club and a friend that he had induced to stand up and be punched.

FIREMEN'S ELECTIONS.

Little Opposition, and Everything Harmonious.

At the annual election of the Zephyr Hook and Ladder company Monday the following officers were elected:

Foreman—George Mehl, jr.
First Assistant—J. Erwin Waters.
Second Assistant—Wm. H. Blimm.
Recording Secretary—Joseph C. Blimm.
Financial Secretary—Samuel L. Miller.
Treasurer—Jacob Blimm.
Auditing Committee—Geo. Studer, Charles McGinley, Charles F. C. Glaentzer.
Representatives to Relief Association—Chas. McGinley, Jacob Blimm.

The competition for the position of financial secretary was very close, as Mr. Miller was elected by a majority of only two over Charles F. Glaentzer.

The elections of Gazelle Engine company resulted in the following officers being elected unanimously:

Foreman—W. T. Newman.
First Assistant—L. M. Dunavan.
Second Assistant—Charles C. Graves.
Secretary—D. S. Dunavan.
Assistant Secretary—James L. Love.
Financial Secretary—Frank Putnam.
Treasurer—V. L. Frasse.
Engineer—W. B. Grannatt.
First Assistant—John Albert.
Second Assistant—D. S. Dunavan.
Third Assistant—Frasse Putnam.
Representatives to Firemen's Relief Association—J. A. Hubbard, and either L. J. Spicer or James L. Love, as these latter two received a tie vote. This tie will be decided at the next meeting.

At the election of the Alert Hose Company, Monday night, the following officers were elected: Charles Burnett, foreman; C. P. Leggett, first assistant foreman; H. O. Demarest, second assistant foreman; R. F. Murray, treasurer; Townsend Rushmore, secretary; L. G. Timpson, steward. The contests were close, especially the one for second assistant foreman, for which there were five candidates in the field.

COMMENCEMENT JUNE 22.

The Board of Education Loses Its $80 Tenant at the Central Avenue Property.

The board of education met Monday night at the residence of Dr. Hurlbut, East Fifth street, as the doctor is not permitted to go out in the night air and a quorum was only obtainable by adjourning to his house. Dr. Hurlbut was elected chairman, president G. H. Babcock being absent. The only other member of the board absent was F. C. Lounsbury.

The bills of the board were read and ordered paid. A communication from John Johnson, collector of taxes, was received, reporting the school moneys for April to be $524.18. The amount was ordered deposited in the bank to the credit of the board.

The committee on buildings reported on grading, flagging and curbing around the Washington school of Fifth street. Bids were opened and read, and the matter was left with Dr. J. B. Probasco with power.

The secretary gave a check to the board for $80 from Chas. D. Wadsworth for rent of the property corner of Central avenue and Sixth street. This is the last $80 the board will get out of the property, as Mr. Wadsworth has moved out. The matter of appointing some suitable person to take care of the property was referred to Dr. Probasco with power. He was also appointed to engage Music Hall for the Commencement exercises this spring, to take place June 22. Mr. Finch was instructed to arrange for the music on that occasion, which will be by Sousa's Seventh Regiment band.

A communication was read from Mr. Harris, superintendent of schools at Washington, recommending a uniform system of grading for all schools in the United States, the plan being to have nine grades below the high school, the grades to be numbered according to the number of years the pupil has been in the school. Thus the lowest grade would be the first.

The board then adjourned.

THEY VALUE HER WORTH.

And Nothing Could Induce Them to Withdraw Her Name from the Presidency.

The annual election of officers of the Ladies' Christian Work society of Trinity Reformed church was held in the lecture room of the church Monday afternoon. Mrs. Chas. P. Leggett, the efficient president of the society, was re-elected for the fourth term. She did all that was possible to induce the society to elect some one else as her successor, but the society knew her worth as leader, and unanimously chose her to serve, another year. The other officers elected were: Mrs. C. Schenck, first vice-president; Mrs. J. K. Arnold, second vice-president; Mrs. B. D. Newell, secretary; and Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, treasurer.

The society is a most valuable auxiliary to the church, and closes its year's work with a good balance in the treasury.

WATTER'S GREAT SCORE.

The Dunellens Would Have Won Without It, However.

The North Plainfield Turn Vereis bowling team went to Dunellen Monday and were defeated by the Dunellenites, who rolled up a good score for a nine-men team. Watters was in especially fine shape, and made the great record of 214.

The score:

Rector Jennings Does Believe in a Hereafter.

The report of a sermon delivered in the Westfield Episcopal church, Sunday, wherein the Rev. Mr. Jennings is quoted as saying that "he did not believe in any hereafter for a man's soul, and that when a person died his soul, like his body, turned to ashes, and that was the end of him"; and that he "admonished his handful of followers to be sober and righteous, but to get all the pleasure out of this life they could, for eternity would be a blank", is a malicious falsehood.

The writer heard the sermon, and it was as powerful a one on the immortality of the soul as a man could preach.

The Sheriff Throws 600 Out of Work.

The silk mills at Stirling were to have resumed operations on Monday after being closed all winter, but sheriff Lindsley, of Morris county, put a stop to the proceedings by levying on the buildings, at the instance of one of the owners, of whom there are three, on account of some difference between them. This act prevents the employment of some 600 operators, and caused considerable excitement in the village.

Plainfield Only Flat in Spots.

Do you know that the road bed at Grant avenue and Front street is almost 10 feet lower than the bed of Cedar brook at Broadway and Hillside avenue? And Richmond street at Front is probably 25 feet higher than Grant avenue. So, flat as Plainfield is humorously considered, she is most fortunately situated in regard to her grade and fall for sewerage purposes.

Street Laborers Want Shorter Hours.

The laborers on the city streets want to work only 9 hours a day, instead of 10 as now. The matter has been referred to the councilmanic committee on streets.

Easy Leaders.

We sell Spring Suits and Overcoats that are mistaken every hour in the day along the treet for merchant-tailored garments. With good reasons, too. Luxurious they are and shapely, and no mark of ready-made on them, except the prices—$10, $12, $13, $15, $18, $20.

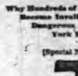
DYSPEPSIA BREEDERS

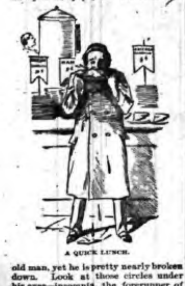
That Is What Goldbugge Calls Lunch Counters.

Why Hundreds of New York Business Men Become Invalids—Bolting Food Is a Dangerous Habit—Cozy New York Lunch Rooms.

[Special New York Letter.]



"TALK about overwork," said "Goldbugge, argumentatively. "It is not overwork, but lunch counters which break down our business men. Now, look at that man; he is prosperous, well to do, and I will guarantee that if he would only think so he has time enough to take a sit-down lunch and money enough to pay for it. Look at him now: two hard-boiled eggs, a sardine sandwich and a chicken sandwich, three crullers, a big slab of hot mince pie and two mugs of scalding coffee all fired into his stomach inside of ten minutes. Look at his pasty complexion, his hollow eyes, his flabby flesh, dyspepsia. He is not an old man, yet he is pretty nearly broken down. Look at those circles under his eyes—insomnia, the forerunner of nervous prostration. Presently he will be ordered by his physician to take a rest, to recuperate. He will have nervous prostration, and his friends will ascribe it to overwork. It will be the legitimate result of a diet of sandwiches, hard-boiled eggs and pie, eaten standing up and washed down with hot coffee. He will go back to his office now and in an hour he will feel irritable, cross and dissatisfied. He will blow up his bookkeeper, scold his typewriter and abuse the office boy [illegible] of his clerks.



A QUICK LUNCH.

"They will whisper to each other 'The old man is cranky,' and his friends will shake their heads and mutter: 'Poor fellow, he's working himself to death.' It is his stomach protesting against improper treatment. His crullers and eggs and sandwiches are in revolt. When he goes home tonight he will snarl at his wife, snap at the children and growl at the cook, and his wife will pity him because he has to work so hard. The blame will really lie with the—suffering Esculapius! He's got a Charlotte Russe and an eclair! Let us go away. I can't stand by and see a fellow creature commit suicide," and Goldie led the way to the street. "I am almost convinced that the bolted lunch is responsible for almost as much misery as the barroom," he said, solemnly.

"But what is a man to do if he is pushed for time?" I asked, laughing at his earnestness.

"Take time," he replied, emphatically. "He will have to find time to die some day, and he will be a long while dead," with which sage remark he stepped into his coupe and rattled up to the club.

For my part I gave up my original intention of lunching on sandwiches and pie, went over to the Astor house and indulged in a "sit down" lunch. I had to work harder that afternoon to make up for lost time, but I felt better for it. It is surprising to see how our business men eat. There are dozens of lunch counter restaurants down town where bankers, brokers, merchants and lawyers gather every noon and invite dyspepsia by indulging in just the sort of lunches I have described. From the Astor house rotunda where the lunchers roost on tall stools and eat from high counters, to the "nickel buffets" where sixty different kinds of sandwiches are displayed in great piles on the continuous sideboard with which the room is wainscoted and when each luncher helps himself and selects his own check, these "quick lunch" places have been on the increase during the past few years and they are patronized by the best class of citizens. So hustling and hurried have we become that it is looked upon as rather a reproach for a business man to have time to sit down to a leisurely lunch.

PIE AND PIETY.

The buffet lunch rooms are a peculiar institution and their original financial methods are eloquent testimony to the honesty of the average New Yorker. The sandwiches, which are the staple article of diet, and are in bewildering variety—are ranged in neat piles with a little tin banner over each pile announcing the kind and price—they are for the most part five cents each. Crullers, cakes, pie, farina pudding and the sweets are dished out in five cent portions. Tea, coffee, chocolate and milk are drawn from large nickel-plated tanks at one end of the room and served in thick stone-china shaving mugs. An athletic young fellow draws the beverage ordered, and he and the boy who gathers the dirty dishes constitute the visible working force of the establishment. The manager is generally also the cashier.

The hurried man of business rushes in, grabs a sandwich, bolts it, possibly another, chokes down a piece of pie, elbows his way up to the coffee counter and swallows a mug of scalding hot coffee or tea, takes a check for fifteen or twenty cents out of a rack, pays the cashier and is off, having eaten his lunch and laid the foundation for dyspepsia in a little over five minutes.

There is one man who owns several such establishments in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Boston. His places are extremely neat, the food is of good quality and is served over counters by damsels of mature years and forbidding appearance. I am told that he has made a fortune out of his lunch counters. He is an exceedingly pious person, and the walls of his restaurants are adorned with Scriptural texts and signs giving the prices of the viands:

Remember Thy Creator in THE DAYS OF THY YOUTH.

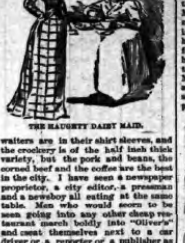
Baked Apple Dumplings
Ten Cents.

And so on. These texts cause a smile to hover round the features of the ungodly, but some people like them, and I have no doubt that they prove a source of satisfaction to the proprietor.

There are one or two places down town patronized by men of wealth and high standing which are, I think, unique. A cellar room on the corner of Beekman street and Park row is known to every newspaper man who has ever worked in New York. It is never closed except from six o'clock Sunday morning until six o'clock Sunday evening. It has a sanded floor. There are no tablecloths on the tables, the waiters are in their shirt sleeves, and the crockery is of the half inch thick variety, but the pork and beans, the corned beef and the coffee are the best in the city. I have seen a newspaper proprietor, a city editor, a pressman and a newsboy all eating at the same table. Men who would scorn to be seen going into any other cheap restaurant march boldly into "Oliver's" and seat themselves next to a car driver or a reporter or a publisher as the case may be. Oliver's beans and coffee make all men equal.



THE HAUGHTY DAIRY MAID.

Besides the buffet lunch places dairy lunchrooms are dotted all over the down-town district. The difference between the average dairy lunch and the ordinary restaurant is that in the dairy lunch prices are cheaper, things to eat are not so good and the waiters are girls. Some people like girl waiters. I don't. With the male waiter the judicious application of a dime or so will secure tolerably good service. Not so with the gentle dairy maid. She is not, as a rule, cursed with the fatal gift of beauty to any extent, but she has, usually, a truly feminine penchant for flirtation.

For my own part I'd rather risk dyspepsia at the deadly buffet than mix love and hash when the inducements for love making are so very small.
